The many burning Mountains about the Island confirm all that has been said; for at certain times they cast up Flames, and shake the Earth, producing all those Effects Pliny ascribes to the burning Mountains in Italy, that is, driving from them the neighbouring Rivers and Sea, scattering Ashes round about, and rending the Stones, about which give a report like Cannon. On the contrary there is no Soil more pleasant, or fruitful. The Grass grows, the Trees Bud, Blossom, and bear Fruit at once all the Year round, and this as well on the Mountains as in Gardens; and the old Leaves seldom fall before the new ones are come. For this reason the Tingianis, that is, Mountaineers, have no particular Place of Abode; but always live under the shelter of the Trees, which serve them instead of Houses, and furnish them with Food, and when the Fruit there is eaten up they remove to a fresh Place where there is a fresh sort. The Orange, Lemmon, and other European Trees bear twice a Year. If they plant a Sprig, within a Year it becomes a Tree, and bears Fruit; therefore without any Hyperbole I may say I never saw such a verdent Soil; nor Woods full of such old and thick Trees, nor Trees that yield more Sustainance to Man.

A Voyage round the World by Dr. John Francis Gemelli Careri. Part IV.

Containing the most Remarkable Things he saw in the PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

B O O K II.

CHAP. I.

Of the Language, Characters, and Customs of the Indians of the Philippine Islands.

Gemelli.
1697.
Writing.

THE antient Inhabitants of these Islands receiv'd their Language and Characters from the Malays, of the Continent of Malaca, whom they also resemble in shallowness of Judgment. In their Writings they make use of three Vowels, though they pronounce five, and have thirteen Consonants. They Write upwards beginning at Bottom and going up to the Top, placing the first Line on the left, and so proceeding towards the right; contrary to the Chineses and Japoneses, who Write from Top to Bottom, and from the Right to the Left. Before Paper was us'd, and now in Places where there is none, they Write on the smooth Part of Canes, or on Palm or rather Coco-Tree Leaves with the Point of a Knife. But when it is a Letter that must be folded they can only use the Leaves; and the same is still practis'd in Siam, Pegu and Camboja. In the Philippine-Islands, the Indians have almost forgot their way of Writing, making use of the Spanish.

Language.

The Languages are so numerous, that there are six in the only Island of Manila, which are the Tagalian, Pampangan, Bisayan, Cagayanian, Pangasinanian, and that of Ilocas. Tho' they all differ, yet with the help of the one the rest are soon understood, by reason of their likeness. The Tagalian and Bisayan are most generally understood. The Language of the Negrillos, Zambalos, and other Savage Nations is not understood.

Customs.

As for their Customs they Salute one another Courteously; which was formerly done by taking off their Heads a Cloth, call'd Porang, and in the Tagalian Language Manputon, which they wear wrapp'd about like a Cap; and this I saw done in my time by the common Sort of Indians among them, but when they met any Persons of greater Quality, they bow'd their Bodies low, clapping one or both Hands on their Jaws, and at the same time lifting up one Foot with the Knee bent. At present when they meet with any Spaniard, they make the Taxe, or Obeisance, taking off the aforesaid Cloth, bowing their Bodies, and stretching out their Hands clapp'd together towards him.

Making Obeisance.

The Tagulians always speak in the third Person, and say my Lord, or my Master; they sit without any Seat, upon their Legs, that is, all their Weight on their Feet, without any other part coming to the Ground, as People do to ease themselves in the Fields; and they expect to be first spoke to that they may answer; looking upon it as ill Manners to speak before their Superiors.

Formerly the Mothers gave their Children their Names, and those generally taken from some Circumstance at their Birth; as for instance Malivag, which signifies Difficult, because it was brought forth with Difficulty; Malacas, that is, Strong, because it appear'd such at first coming into the World; which Custom the Chineses still observe. Other times they gave it the Name of the first Thing that occur'd, as Daan, a Chimney; Dama the name of an Herb; and by this only Name they were known, without using any Surname, till they were Marry'd. Then the first Son or Daughter gave the Name to its Parents, as Amani-Malivag, Imanani-Malacas, that is, the Father of Malivag. The Mother of Malacas.

Civility.

Gemelli.
1697.
Ilocos. The difference between the Names of Men and Women consisted in the addition of the Syllable In, as for Instance, Ilogi is a Man's Name, and Ilogin a Woman's.

Persons. of the Indians.
The Indians are of a middle Stature, well shap'd, both Men and Women, of a purplish Colour inclining to Black. The Tagalians wear their Hair long down to their Shoulders; the Cabayani-ans longer; those of Ilocos shorter; and the Bisayans shortest of all. The Sambalians cut all close before, and wear the rest of their Hair loose. They are not so intelligent and quick as those of the East-Indies, who are excellent at any Business; but particularly in Trade and Writing. The Women of all the Islands differ but little in Colour, except the Bisayans, who in some Parts are white; but all wear their Hair without Breeding, yet handsomely ty'd. The general Colour being black, those that are not, endeavour to make themselves so, by the help of Bark of Trees, and Oyl mix'd with Musk and other Scents. The Womens chief Care and Pride is to file and order their Teeth so in their Youth that they may grow even. They cover them with a black Dye to preserve them; and the Ladies of Quality adorn them with little Plates of Gold. The Men formerly took no care of their Whiskers and Beard, but pull'd them with Nippers. Both Men and Women in some Countries delighted in wearing Pendants in their Ears; and the bigger the Hole in the Ear was, the handsomer it was counted; some of them had two in an Ear. No Man might be Clad in Red that had not kill'd another, nor in strip'd Stuff till he had been the Death of seven. The Men's Habit was a thin Doublet, that scarce reach'd the Waste, with short Sleeves; the lower Parts they wrapp'd in a Piece of Stuff, sometimes adorn'd with Gold, which wound about between their Legs; as the Indians on this side Ganges use at present. On their Arms they wore Bracelets of Gold and Ivory, or Strings of Jewels; about their Legs black Cords; on their Hands abundance of Rings. The uppermost Garment was a little Mantle, thrown up under one Arm. At present Men and Women, Young and Old smoke abundance of Tobacco all the Day. Their Head they cover with the Manputon, above describ'd, and the greatest Beaus among them let the End of it hang down on their Back. They also wear a short Garment, call'd Chinina; to which the Women add a long Piece of Stuff, call'd Faras, which serves instead of a Petticoat, and when they go Abroad a little Mantle. But their greatest Pride is in the Jewels they wear on their Fingers, at their Ears, and about their Necks, according to every ones Ability. They wear neither Shooes nor Hose, because of the Heat; but the Women of Quality who are Clad after the Spanish Fashion, wear as they do. Besides all these sorts of Garments, it is still in use among them to have their Skins wrought after several manners; first, pricking themselves till the Blood comes, and then strewing black Powder on it, that the Impression may last. For this reason the Spaniards gave the Island of Bisay the name of Pintados, those People delighting in this above the rest, as if it betoken'd Valour and Nobility. They did it not all at once, but by degrees, as they perform'd any noble Actions. Therefore the Men Painted their very Beards and Eyebrows; the Women only one Hand, and part of the other. In the Island of Manila, at present, only the People of Ilocos Paint themselves, but not so much as those of Bisay.

Habit.

They sit very low when they Eat, and accordingly their Table is low, either round, or square. There are as many Tables as Guests; and they Drink more at them than they Eat; for the common Food is Rice boyl'd in fair Water; and Flesh only upon Festivals. Their Wine or Liquor is drawn from the Palm, or Coco-Tree, cutting a Bough before it Blossoms; and thus the Moisture that should go to feed the Fruit, drops into Vessels, set for the purpose; as our Vines would do, if cut at the proper Season. This Liquor being somewhat sharp or acid, the Poor put into it some Bark of Trees which give it a Colour, and a hotter Taste, and then it is call'd Tuba. The Rich distill it before it is fower, more or less, according as they would have it stronger or weaker; and keep it as we do Brandy, which is clear, and of a very drying Nature. The Liquor call'd Chilang, is nothing but the Juice of Sugar Canes, boyl'd a little over the Fire, so that it looks like Wine, and tastes like Sugar. The Bisayans make another sort of Rice, and call it Pangati. They first put some Herbs into a Pot, with some Leaven, then cover it with Rice, till the Vessel be half full, and then pour on Water. Thus it works or ferments and the Water grows strong and thick, so that to use it they must pour Liquors.

Gemelli.
1707.

pour a great deal more Water on it, till it is thin enough to draw. When they have a mind to drink they suck it through a Trunk or hollow Cane from the Bottom of the Vessel.

Musick and Dancing.

Their Musick and Dancing are after the Chinese Fashion, that is, for Singing, one goes through and the other repeats the Stanza, to the Sound of a metal Drum. The Dancing is an imitation of Fighting, but all the Motions and Actions regular. They also have many Actions with their Hands, sometimes holding a Spear or Javelin, with which they Assault one another, Retire, grow Hot, and Cool again; Charge up close, and Fall off very Gracefully; so that the Spaniards do not think them unworthy to be admitted to their Festivals. The Compositions in their Language are pleasant and elegant enough. But their greatest Delight is Cock-fighting, whereof we have spoke before, a Sport once us'd by the Roman Emperors.

Bathing.

Bathing is so much in fashion among them, that the Children new born, and the Women just deliver'd use it, and this in cold fresh Water, before Sun rising, and after its setting. For this reason their Dwellings are all on the Banks of Rivers and Lakes; and there is a washing Trough before every House for those that go in, to wash their Feet.

Cures.

Having observ'd the extravagant Method of curing the Sick, practis'd by the Physicians in the Portuguese Conquests in India, I cannot but give an Account of those of the Philippine-Islands. Among the rest two Cures of Diseases seem'd to me wonderful. The first of these by the Indians is call'd Sutan, by the Spaniards Tabardillo, and is no other but a violent Pain in the Head and Stomach, and is certain Death unless the Patient be well beaten on the Arms, Thighs, Legs and right Breast. Then the Bruises are rub'd hard with Salt, till they grow Black; that the Blood being thus drawn to the Skin, may flow abundantly when cut with the Lancet. Then they are wash'd with Vinegar, and the Patient has nothing given him to Eat for three Days, but Rice boil'd in Water without Salt. (Tavardillo in Spain is a malignant Distemper breaking out in Spots, if Black Incurable, if Red to be Cur'd so they do not fall in, and is Cur'd another way; but this in the Philippine-Islands is another Distemper, and another Cure, tho' the Spaniards, because so dangerous, have given it the same Name)

The other Disease peculiar to the Isles of Negros, Bohol, Panay, Outon and Xolo, makes the Tongues and privy Parts both of Men and Women sink in so violently, that it endangers their Lives. They say Cold is the cause of it, and it is Cur'd by giving the Patient the Genitals of the Woman-Fish, concerning which see the Chapter of Birds and Fishes, or of a Crocodil, powdred in Wine or Water.

Religion.

Nothing has hitherto appear'd in Writing, either of these Peoples Religion, their Government, or History; but only some Traditions, deliver'd from Father to Son, and preserv'd in Songs, concerning the Genealogy and Heroick Acts of their Gods. By these it appears they had one principal God, call'd by the Tagalians, Barhala-may-capal; that is, the God Maker. They ador'd Birds and Beasts, like the Egyptians; and the Sun and Moon like the Assyrians. There was not a Rock, Stone, Promontary, or River but what they Sacrific'd to; nor any old Tree to which they did not pay divine Honours; and it was look'd upon as a Sacrilege to cut it down on any account whatsoever. This Superstition continues among them still; so that no force would prevail with the Indians, to make them cut down a certain great old Tree, call'd Balete, whose Leaves are like those of a Chestnut-Tree, and its Bark good for some Wounds, nor some ancient tall Canes, vainly believing the Souls of their Ancestors dwell in them, and that the cutting of those Trees or Canes would put them into a Fever; and that therefore an old Man, they call Nuno would appear to complain of their Cruelty. This is to be understood of such as are not Christians or not well Instructed. This vain Belief continues among them, because sometimes they fancy they see several Apparitions, call'd Tibalong, on the Tops of the Trees; and they are fully perswaded, that the same appear to Children in the shape of their Mothers, and carry them to the Mountains without doing them any harm. They say they see them vastly Tall, with long Hair, little Feet, long Wings, and their Bodies Painted, and that their coming is known by the Smell. Be it as it will, for I will not take upon me to argue the Point, 'tis certain the Spaniards do not see them, tho' the Indians tell them they are then actually present. The Tagalian Dictionary compos'd by a Franciscan, gives a large Account of these Phantomes.

In Pampanga, and particularly on the Gemeth. Mount call'd Bondo, or Kalaya, which is a League and a half high, and belong'd once to the Petty Kings, Sinoguan, and Mingan, there are Plantans, Betles, and other sorts of Fruit. These they say may be eaten upon the Spot; but if any Man attempts to carry them from the place, he certainly either falls down dead, or some way lame. Perhaps the Devil, by God's Permission may cause some such strange Accidents, to keep those People in Paganism; however it is, the Indians themselves have a good share in it, for they are notable Sorcerers, and are said often to convert themselves into Crocodils, Wild Boars, and other fierce Creatures.

They also ador'd some particular Gods, left them by their Ancestors, and call'd by the Bisayans, Davata, by the Tagalians, Anito. One of these was believ'd to keep in the Mountains and Fields to assist Travellers; another to make the Seed sprout up, and they left him things in certain places, to gain his Favour. There was also a Sea Anito for the Fishery, and another belonging to the House, to take care of the Children. Among these Anitos, were placed their Grandfathers, and Great Grandfathers; whom they call'd upon in all their Troubles; keeping little ugly Statues of Stone, Wood, Gold, and Ivory, in Memory of them, which they call'd Liche, or Laravan. They also accounted among their Gods, all those that dy'd by the Sword, or were kill'd by Lightning, or eaten by Crocodils, believing their Souls ascended to Heaven, by way of an Arch they call'd Balangao. For this reason, the Eldest among them, chuse to be bury'd in some remarkable place on the Mountains, and particularly on the Promontories that run into the Sea, that they might be ador'd by Sailers. They tell abundance of Fables, concerning the Creation of the World, and the first Men that inhabited it.

Government-

There were no Kings, or Lords of any great Note, throughout all the Archipelago; but in the continual Wars they had among themselves, the little ones join'd in Confederacy with the greater. In Manila the Uncle and Nephew, were Lords, or Chiefs, and had equal Authority. Every several Precinct, or Petty Dominion, was call'd Barangai; for as the Families came hither in a Barangai or Bark, to seek dwelling places; so they remain'd subject, either to the

Vol. IV.

Commander of the Vessel, or to the Head of the Family, and from him took their Name. Then they apply'd themselves to Tilling of so much Land, as they could defend against the Neighbouring Barangais; and tho', when they were once settled in the Place, they were in their turn assisting to the others; yet they might not upon any account mix with them, that is, one go into the Tribe of another, (especially Marry'd People) unless they paid a certain quantity of Gold, and made a Feast to all the Barangai; otherwise they would cause a War. If two Persons of different Barangais Marry'd, the Children were to be divided, as if they had been Slaves.

Nobility was not Hereditary, but acquir'd by Industry and Force; that is, by Tillage, working in Wood, Gold, or other matter, and such like Trades, so as to excell in them; and then such a one was call'd Dato, or Chief, and among the Tagalians Manguinao, and all his Kindred and Friends, follow'd his Party. If this Man afterwards lost what he had, he lost his Reputation; and his Children remain'd Origuin, or in the Tagalian Language Alipin, signifying as much as Slaves. Those were reputed the common sort, who got their living by Digging, Fishing and Hunting. Since the Spaniards rule over them, they are grown Lazy; they are good at Mechanicks, as for Instance at making small Chains, and curious Beads of Gold, and other things. In Camarines and other parts, they make Boxes, Cases, and Chests of several Colours, curiously wrought out of Indian Canes, for there are excellent ones throughout all the Islands, and so Spans in length, which twine about Trees like Ivy. The Women make Purls not inferior to those of the Low-countries, and admirable Silk Embroideries. It is their Laziness, that makes them appear less Ingenious; and they are so entirely addicted to it, that if in walking they find a Thorn run into their Foot, they will not stoop to put it out of the way, that another may not Tread on it.

The chief Indians had formerly a great number of Slaves of their own Nation, sometimes an hundred. The Cause why so many fell into Slavery, was Usury, so much us'd among them, that neither the Father would lend his Son any thing, nor one Brother the other, tho' he saw him in never such Distress, without Bargaining to restore it double. Now if the Debtor could not per-

L 11

Smelli.
1687.
perform at, the time agreed on, he became a Slave to the Creditor, till he pay'd the Debt; and in the mean while the longer it was unpay'd, the more the Interest increas'd, till it far exceeded the Principal; and so they and their Offspring remain'd Slaves, without Redemption. To this day Debtors pawn their Children of both Sexes; and in some Places sell them, especially the Bisayans; notwithstanding the King has Prohibited that Barbarous Custom, under severe Penalties. Sometimes the Masters will add to their Interest, the value of a Dish, the Slave has hapned to break, that he may have the less hope of Redemption. All Prisoners of War were also made Slaves; tho it were among People of the same Race and Dominion. Besides the great ones, Tyrannically enslav'd the common sort, either because they had hapned to break, the Mourning silence, or thrown some Dirt on them; or for passing by some place, where they were Bathing; or some such slight Occasion; and these Slaves they afterwards sold at Pleasure. These remain'd in their Houses to live upon their Labour, but the Master took from them one Harvest in the Year, or part of it, according as he was, more or less, rigorous. Another sort of Slaves serv'd their Masters, when they entertain'd any Body, Sow'd, Reap'd, or went any where by Water. These were call'd Namama Bay; by the Tagallians, Sanguigulir, and by the Bisayans, Halas. Sometimes the same Man hapned to be Slave to several Persons; or else half free, and half a Slave. This was when he came of a Father that was free, and the Mother a Slave, or the contrary, and he was the third Son; for the first follow'd his Father's Fortune, whether free or a Slave; the second the Mothers; and the 3d was half free. When the Mother was free, that Son was only a quarter free. The Sambalians pretend that the Tagallians are their Slaves.

It is us'd to this Day, when there happens an Eclipse, to make a great Noise with Drums, and other Instruments, to fright the Dragon, they imagine Swallows the Moon, and make him Vomit her up again. They us'd formerly to Swear before a Wild Beast, or a lighted Candle, wishing they might be devour'd by such a Beast, or consume like the Candle, if they broke their Promise; or be torn in pieces by a Crocodil, or swallow'd up by the Earth. It is impossible to force an Indian to Curse the Devil, and if he is press'd to do it, he will answer; he is not to Curse one that has done him no harm.

C H A P. II.

The Government, Weapons, Marriages, Sacrifices, Auguries, and Funerals of the Indians, of the Philippine Islands.

Punishment of Murderers.

THE first Law among them, was to Respect and Honour their Ancestors, and especially Father and Mother. The Head of the Barangai, with some of the Antient Men of it, Judg'd of all Causes whatsoever. Civil Controversies were decided after this manner. The Parties were Summon'd, and endeavours us'd to make them agree. If this did not take effect, they made them Swear to submit to the Sentence; and then they Examin'd the Witnesses. If the Proofs were equal, what they contended for was divided; if not Judgment was given for him that had the best Evidence. If the Party that was Cast, was dissatisfy'd, the Judge became a Party; for he took from the Person who lost the Suit, the value appointed, or adjudg'd, whereof a good Part he kept to himself; then he pay'd the Plaintiffs Witnesses, and gave him the rest, which was the least Part. In Criminal cases Sentence of Death, was never given in Form of Law, unless the Person kill'd, and the Murderer were both Poor; for when any such had no Money to satisfy the Party griev'd, then the Dato, or chief, and other Great Men of the Barangai, came with Spears, and binding the Criminal to a Post, kill'd him. If the Person kill'd was of Note, then all his Kindred made War upon the Murderer and his; till some Mediator interpos'd to declare, what quantity of Gold he promis'd to make amends for the others Death. Of this Money, the one half was given to the Poor, and the other to the Wife, Children, and Kindred of the Party kill'd.

As for Theft, if the Fact were made out, but the Person not known, all the Parties accus'd, were oblig'd to lay something under a Cloth, after which, if

Gemelli.
1697. if the thing Stolen, was not found there among the rest, they had two ways of Purgation. The first was to place them all near any deep River, with Spears in their Hands, and then make them run and cast themselves into it. He that came out first, was reputed Guilty, and therefore many for fear of the Punishment were drowned. The other was to Command them one after another to take a Stone out of a Bason of boyling Water, which whosoever refus'd to do, pay'd the Value of the thing Stolen.

Adultery. The Punishment for Adultery, was paying a Fine; and the quantity of Gold agreed on, or appointed by the Elders, once pay'd, the Adulterer was clear, and the Husband restor'd to his Honour; so that he return'd to his Wife. But the Children got in Adultery, did not Inherit their Parents Nobility, no more than those Born of Slaves, but were accounted of the common sort. The Legitimate Children Inherited Nobility, and the Eldest succeeded his Father, if he was Lord of the Barangay. The first failing, the others succeeded orderly, that is, the 2d, 3d, &c. after them the Females, and then the next of Kin. Incest us'd to be severely Punish'd.

Arms. Their Arms Offensive, were Bows and Arrows, and Lances, or Pikes with the Spears of Iron, of several Shapes, or else of Wood hardned at the Fire; broad Daggers, with two Edges, well shap'd; and Trunks with which they used to Shoot Poison'd Arrows, like those of Borneo and Sumatra. To cover their Bodies, they use a long narrow Shield.

Marriages. These Nations are much given to sensuality, so that their Women either Marry'd, or Unmarry'd, are seldom continent. When they Marry'd, the Man found the Portion, and then they contracted settling a Penalty, in case of Divorce; which when it hapned was not look'd upon as any dishonour, so the Forfeiture agreed on were Paid. But this was, during the Life of the Sureties, that is, the Parents; for when they were dead, the Children were free. At present their expences are Exorbitant, for on the Wedding day, they make the Bridegroom pay for admittance into the House, which they call Passava; for speaking to the Bride, call'd Patignog; for Eating and Drinking with her, by the Name of Passalog; and lastly for consummating the Marriage he pays to her kindred, which they Term Ghina- puang; all according to their Quality. Formerly the Portion was paid to the Father-in-law, who at his Death dispos'd of it as he pleas'd, among the Children; and if the Bride had no Father, her kindred receiv'd it, to be restor'd to the Children born of her. The Marriage was Solemniz'd by the Catalona, or Priestests, with a Sacrifice; after which the Gossips gave the Marry'd Couple to Eat and Drink, out of the same Dish; and then the Bridegroom told the Bride he took her for his Wife, and she receiv'd him. Then the Catalona gave her Blessing, after which some Beast was kill'd, and next follow'd the Entertainment, and making themselves Drunk. If there was any falling out between the Marry'd Couple, another Sacrifice was offer'd, the Bridegroom slaying the Beast so Sacrific'd, and after dancing spoke to his Anito, or Ancestor, desiring him to grant Peace according to his desire. They took care not to Marry out of their own Tribe, and always the nearest of Blood, except in the first Degree. There was no difficulty in being divorc'd; for the Wife restor'd the Portion, if it was through her Fault; and the Man lost it if it were through his, and he took another Wife. Polygamy was not us'd among the Tagalians; but if any Man had no Children by his Wife, he might with her consent, have to do with his Slaves. The chief of the Bisayans had two or more lawful Wives, and the Children born of them, all inherited as Legitimate; but those by the first Fire, had double as much, as those of the second. The Children by Slaves, had something given them out of the Moveables, at the Pleasure of the Legitimate, and the Mother was free. The Gold given in Portion was measur'd, not weigh'd. Adoption was also us'd, the Person adopted paying a certain Sum, which if he dy'd first, fell to the Person adopting; but if otherwise, he that was adopted, recover'd double the Sum out of the others Estate.

Formerly there were Men that made it their Trade, to deflour Maids that were to be Marry'd; and they were paid for it; because the Maidenhead was look'd upon as an Obstruction to the Bridegrooms Pleasure. At present (as some Missioners of the Jesuits told me) some of the Bisayans, if they find when they Marry their Brides are Maids, say they have got bad ones; because no Man has had a mind to, and debauch'd them.

Brides defloured.

Smelli.
1627.
Sacrifice.

As for, their Religion, it has been mention'd before, that there was no Temples found among them, but only certain little Idols, in Caves near their Houses, to which they offer'd Sacrifice, by means of Priests, call'd by the Tagalians Catalan; by the Bisayans Babayan. The manner of Sacrificing was thus. They all assembled in a Hut or Cottage made of Wattles for this purpose, and having danced a while caus'd a handsome young Girl to give the first stroke with a Spear to the Victim, which was always some four-footed Beast. The Sacrifice being Slain, they cut it in Pieces, and when dress'd eat it in a respectful manner. If the Sacrifice was not upon any occasion of Rejoycing, but for some sick Body; they made a new Hut of Wood, and laid the Patient in it upon a Mat on the Ground, together with the Offering. Instead of an Altar they cover'd several Tables, with variety of Meat. Then the Catalona, being the same handsome young Girl, came out Dancing to the Noise of Instruments, and having wounded the Beast, the sick Person, and some of the Standers by were anointed with the blood. Having Flead the Beast they all came again before the Patient, and the Catalona muttering some Words betwixt her Teeth, open'd, stretch'd and view'd all Parts of his Body; winding herself into Sundry shapes, and foaming at the Mouth. Then she stood a while besides her self; and at last having recover'd her Senses (as is writ of the Sibils) she Prophecy'd concerning the Parties Life or Death. If she sate down to Eat or Drink, it was a sign of Life, if not of Death; but for fear of frightening the sick Person, she us'd to say the Anitos, or their Predecessors had chosen him for their Companion. Then the Patient recommended himself to her, that she might persuade his Kindred to put him in the Number of the Anitos; and lastly the Sacrifice ended in Eating, and Drinking; but the Guests were oblig'd to leave an Offering of Gold, Cotton, Birds, or some other thing for the Priests.

Superstition.

They were so Superstitious, that if they found a Snake on their Garments, they would never wear them again, tho' they were new; and the same if an Owl sate in the Night on their House. If they found a Snake on the way; or any body sneez'd, Dog bark'd, or a Rat made a noise, they turn'd back. The Fisher-men had no benefit of Fish, they took the first time with a new Net; believing if they did, they should catch no more for the future. Nor was any body to talk in a Fisher-man's House, of new Nets; nor in a Hunts-man's of young Dogs, till they had taken a Prey, positively believing if they did, the Virtue of the Nets and value of the Dogs, would be lost. They that went by Sea, were to take nothing that belong'd to the Land, nor so much as name it; nor those that travell'd by Land, any thing of the Sea. To conclude, they undertook nothing without casting lots.

F. Xuaquin Ajin, Minister of St. Peter, of the Society of Jesus, told me, that he having serv'd as Missioner several Years among the Tagalians, observ'd, that they never eat alone, but will have one Companion at least. That when the Wife dyes, the Widdower keeps with a Mat before him, and is serv'd during three days by Widdowers, for Marry'd Men, and Batchelors would be accounted unlucky. The Wives die the same when their Husbands die.

When the Women are to be delivered, they will allow no Maids to be present, because they say it would make them have hard labour. When any Body dies, not only the Kindred and Friends, but hired People come to lament and make a dismal Song. Then the Body being Wash'd, and Perfum'd with Siorax, Benjamin, and other sweet Gums found on those Mountains, is wrapp'd up in more or less Silks, according to its Quality. Formerly they Anointed, and Embalm'd the Bodies of Persons of Note, with Aromatick Liquors, Aloes, and Eagle Wood, and put into their Mouths, the Juice of Betle, that it might sink into their Body. The Poor were bury'd in a Grave in their own House; the Rich in a Coffin made of one piece of Precious Wood, and clos'd so Artificially, that no Air could get into it. They left on the Body, Gold Bracelets, and other Rich Ornaments. Then they placed the Coffin, lifted up from the Ground, in a corner of the House, with Lettices round it, and by it a Chest, with the Dead Persons best Apparel, and his Arms, if a Man, or her necessities for work with a Woman. At certain times, they placed before them several sorts of Meat, in token of Affection, and Respect; but the greatest sign of loving the Dead, was to make much of the Slave that had been his Favourite, and then kill him to bear his Master Company. Others bury'd the Dead in the Fields, and made Fires

Femelli.
1696. Fires in the House for many Days, that the Dead Man might not come to take those that were left Alive. When the Body was bury'd, the lamentation ceas'd, but not the Gormandizing, which lasted more or less, according to the Dead Man's Quality; but the Widdow, and Children fasted, to express their Sorrow, eating, neither Fish, nor Flesh, but only Grain or Herbs. This Fast the Tagalians call Sipa.

Mourning The Tagalians Mourning is Black; the Bisayans White, but these last over and above Shave their Heads and Eyebrows. Formerly, if any Man of Note dy'd, they were to keep silence many Days, and not to Strike any place, nor go upon the Neighbouring Rivers. To this purpose they set up a certain Sign, that all Persons might know it was a time of Silence, and none should presume to pass by upon pain of Death, which was severely executed. In Honour of those that dy'd in War, they added Sacrifices and Offerings, to the usual obsequies. If the Person had been basely kill'd in War, or treacherously Murder'd in Peace the Mourning, or Silence was never laid aside, till his Kindred had made the Balata, that is, taken Revenge, killing a number, not only of the Enemies with whom they were at War, but of all Strangers, not their Friends, that came before them. In the mean while they wore a Lilt of Leather about their Neck, and spent all the Day, by Land and Water, in search of Men to Destroy, and satisfy their Rage. This done, they broke Silence with great Rejoicing, and then the Mourning was left off.

C H A P. III.

Of the Beasts, Birds, and Fishes in the Philippine Islands.

Wild Cat-
tles.

There is so great a number of Wild Buffaloes, like those of China, grazing about the Plains, that a good Hunter a Horseback with a Spear, may kill ten or twenty in a day. The Spaniards kill them for their Hides; the Wild Indians to eat them. The Woods abound in Deer, Boars, and Wild Goats, like those of Sumatra, which last are so numerous, that they have given their Name to one of the Islands, call'd de las Cabras. The Spaniards have carry'd thither out of New Spain, Japan, and China Horses and Cows, which have Multiply'd considerably; but not the Sheep, by reason of the excessive moisture of the Earth.

Monkeys.

There are also in the Mountains, innumerable Monkeys, and Baboons so monstrous big, that once at Samboangen, they say some of them defended themselves with Sticks, against a Pampango Souldier that assaulted them; so that the Souldier in a few days, dy'd with the Fright. The little Apes are diverting in the House. My Friend D. John del Poco had a white one; but so Old, that it held its Paw over its Eyes to see anything, as a Man does, when he would observe something at a distance. He told me, he once had another of Borneo, which cry'd like an Infant, and went upon two Feet, carrying a Mat under its Arm, to change its sleeping place. These Monkeys seem to be sharper in some respects than Men.

for when they can find no Fruit on the Mountains, they go down to the Seaside to catch Crabs, Oysters and the like. There is a sort of Oysters, call'd Taclovo, the Fish whereof weighs some Pounds, and it commonly lyes open on the Shore. The Monkey fearing it should close and catch its Claw in, puts in a Stone first, that it may eat the Oyster, without fear of its shutting. One sort of them, that they may take the Crabs, put their Tail into their hole, that when the Crab lays hold of it, they may draw him out.

There is in the Islands, a great Multitude of Civet-Cats; and this is chiefly Civet-Cats. to be observ'd, that if their Civet is not taken away every Month, the heat they receive from it, is so great, that they tumble about the Ground, till the Bladder break, wherein it is contain'd, and so ease themselves of that Pain.

There is another sort of Cats, as big as Hares, and of a Fox colour, call'd Ta-guan. They have Wings like Bats, but hairy on both sides, by the help of which they leap from one Tree to another, sometimes above thirty Spans, that is, seven Yards and a half distant. Flying Cats.

In the Island of Leyte, there is a peculiar sort of Creature, call'd Mago, about as a Mouse, with a Tail like it, and so the long Hairs on the Snout, but the Head is twice as big as the Body, and it eats nothing but Coals.

There

Gemelli.

1697.

Snakes.

There are Snakes of a prodigious Bigness. One sort of them call'd Ibuiin, which are very long, hang themselves by the Tail down from the Body of a Tree, expecting Deer, wild Boars, or Men to pass by, to draw them to them with their Breath, and swallow them whole; and then winds it self round a Tree to digest them. Some Spaniards told me, The only Defence against them was to break the Air between the Man and the Serpent; and this seems rational, for by that means, those Magnetick or attracting Particles spread in that distance are dispers'd. Another sort of Snake call'd Assagua eats nothing but Hens. That they call Olopong, is Venomous. The biggest are call'd Bobes, which sometimes are 20 or 30 Spans long.

Iguanas.

Another sort of four footed Creature, which is also found in America, and devours Hens, is call'd Iguana. It is like an Alligator, the Skin Purple, speckled with yellow Spots, the Tongue Cloven, but the Feet close and with Claws. Tho' a Land Creature, it passes over Rivers swiftly. The Indians and some Spaniards eat it, and say it tastes like a Tortoise.

Birds.

The Taron

Among the Birds of the Islands the Taron deserves to have special Mention made of it, as well for its Quality, as because it is not known whether there are any of the Species elsewhere. It is a Sea Fowl and Black. As to its size it is less than a Hen, but has a long Neck and Legs, and lays its Eggs in a light Sandy Ground. These Eggs are wonderful; for besides their being as large as a Gooses, when Boil'd there is very little White found in them, but all Yolk, yet not so well tasted as a Hens. The strangeness of them is, that contrary to all others, when the Chickens are hatch'd the Yolk appears whole and sweet as it was at first, with the Chickens Beak fast, and without any White. By this it appears that it is not always true, that the generative Virtue of the Seed makes the Yolk Fruitful, and that in this Case the Yolk serves for the same use as Placenta Uterina does to an Infant. The Chickens roasted before they are fledg'd, prove as good as the best Pigeons. The Spaniards very often eat the Chicken and the Yolk of the Egg together in the same Dish. The old Bird is eaten by the Indians, but is tough. The Hen lays about 40 or 50 Eggs in a Trench near the Sea and covers them with Sand. For this reason it is call'd Taron, which in the Language of the Islands signifies to cover with Earth. There the heat of the Sand hatches them, and the Chickens feed on the Yolk, till they gather Strength to break the Shell, throw up the Sand and get out. Then the Hen which keeps about the neighbouring Trees, runs about them making a Noise, and the young ones hearing her, labour the harder to get out to her. This is no less wonderful than what the Scripture says of the Ostriches Eggs, Job 39. We see the disposition of Providence, in giving this Bird that Instinct to bury its Eggs so deep, and the Chicken such long Claws, as to make its way. They make Nests in March, April and May, like the Halcions the Antients make mention of; because at that time the Sea is Calmest, and the Waves do not swell so high as to spoil them. The Sailers go in quest of them along the Shore, and where they find the Sand has been thrown up they open it with a stick, where they sometimes find Eggs and sometimes Chickens, which are equally Valuable and Nourishing.

There is also a sort of Turtle-Dove with gray Feathers on the Back, and white on the Breast, in the midst whereof is a red Spot, like a Wound with the fresh Blood upon it.

Turtle-Doves.

The Colin is a Fowl as big as a Black-Bird, Black and Ash colour'd; without any Feathers on its Head, but instead of it a Crown of Flesh. That is yet stranger which the Spaniards call Paloma-Torcas; it is of several Colours, as Gray, Green, Red and White on the Breast, with the same Spot like a Wound on the Breast; and the Beak and Feet Red. These and other sorts of Birds I saw in D. John-del-Pozo's Volery at Manila. There was also a Black-Bird brought from Suratte, as big as a Turtle-Dove, with a yellow Beak, and a List of the same Colour like a Collar. It endeavour'd to speak like a Parrot. He had also some little Birds of the Coast of Coromandel less than a Linnet, their Breast White and Red, their Wings Gray with little white Spots, and the end of their Tail Red, so that they were most Beautiful to behold. Besides a great number of white Doves with their Tails always lifted up like a graceful Semicircle, which he told me were brought out of Persia.

Colins.

Torques.

The Salangan is a strange Bird of the Islands of Calamianes, Xolo and others. It is as big as a Swallow, and builds a little Nest on the Rocks over the Sea-shore, cleaving to the Rock as the Swallows Salangen.

lows

Gemelli.

• 1697.

Herrero.

lows do to the Wall. These are the so famous Birds Nests, whereof we have spoke in the foregoing Volume.

The Herrero is a green Bird, as big as a Hen. Nature has furnish'd it with such a large and hard Beak, that it bores the Bodies of Trees to build its Nest. From the Noise it makes at this Work, which is hear'd at a great distance, the Spaniards took occasion to give it this Name of Herrero or Smith. Others think it was so call'd for its knowledge of an Herb, which lay'd upon Iron breaks it; for it is known by experience, that the Hole on the Tree being cover'd with an Iron Plate to save the Young that are in the Nest, it seeks out this Herb, and laying it on the Plate, breaks it, and so clears the way; but I will not vouch for the Truth hereof.

Coto-Coto.

There is another rare Bird call'd Coto-Coto, little less than an Eagle, Black, and half Fish half Bird, for it equally dives under Water, and flies in the Air. It overtakes any Fish and kills it with its Beak which is half a Yard long. The Feathers are so close that as soon as out of the Water it shakes them dry.

Peacocks &amp;c

In the Island of Calamianes there are abundance of Peacocks. The wild Mountain Cocks supply the want of Pheasants and Partridges, and well dress'd are excellently tasted. The Quails are half as big as ours, and have a red Beak and Feet.

In all the Islands at all times there are green Birds, call'd Volanos, and several sorts of Parrots, and white Cacathas, which have a Tuft of Feathers on their Heads.

Camboxas.

The Spaniards carry'd Turkeys out of New Spain, but they did not Thrive or Increase, by reason of the dampness of the Soil, as is believ'd. The want of them is supply'd by a Hen call'd Camboxa, because the first of them were brought out of that Kingdom, whose Legs are so short that the Wings trail on the Ground. The Cocks of another sort, call'd of Xolo, which have long Legs, are not inferior to Turkeys. Besides the common Hens like ours, there is another sort that have black Flesh and Bones, but are well tasted, Another Bird that breeds about the Lakes, especially that of Babi, has the Feet and Beak Red, and the Colours of several Colours, as big as a Hen, and would be as well tasted did it not eat Fish.

The Oydor or Judge, D. John Serra, shew'd me another dead Bird that had most beautiful Feathers, as big as a Black-Bird, brought him from the Island of Borneo, where it was taken. It had no Feet, but only great Wings to bear it up, and is therefore call'd the Bird of Paradise. F. Combes in his History of the Island of Mindanao, says there are such there.

We have spoke before of the great Bats of the Island, so that it is needless to say more in this place; only that in the Island of Mindanao, they extract a great deal of Salt-Peter from their Excrement by the means of Fire, but it is not so strong as the common sort.

Bats.

The very Fish of the Island have something singular. One of these is the Duyon, by the Spaniards call Pece-Muger, that is, Woman-Fish, because it has Breasts and Privities like a Woman, and there never was any Male seen. The Bones of it have a notable Quality of stopping Bleeding, and curing a Cough. The Flesh of it eats like Pork.

Fish.

Woman-Fish.

The Sword Fish differs not from ours, only that there are some there 20 Spans or 15 Foot long, and the Sword 9 or 10 Spans in length. We gave an Account of the fighting with the Crocodils when we spoke of the Lake of Babi. The Damage they do to small Boats will appear, if we observe that their Swords have been found broken upon great Ones.

Sword Fish.

As for the Crocodils Providence has signaliz'd it self after several manners in them. For in the first place the Females of these Monsters being extraordinary Fruitful, so as to bring sometimes 50 Crocodils, the Rivers and Lakes would have been full of them in a very short time, to the great damage of Mankind, had not Nature caus'd it to lye in wait where the young ones are to pass, and swallow them down one by one; so that only those few escape that take another way. Secondly, the Crocodils have no Passage for Excrements, but only vomit the small Matter that remains in their Stomachs after Digestion. Thus the Meat continues there a long time, and the Creature is not hungry every Day; which if they were, they could not be fed without the utter Ruin of infinite Men and Beasts. Some of them being open'd there have been found in their Bellies Mens Bones and Skuls, and Stones, which the Indians say they swallow to pave their Stomach. The Female lays her Eggs out of the Water that they may hatch. They are twice as big as a Goose Egg, whiter and as hard as a Crocodils.

Stone,

Gemelli. Stone. The Yolk in them is but small, like that of the Tortoises Egg. The Spaniards as well as the Indians, eat the little Crocodils. The same Indians affirm there are little Bladders of excellent Musk sometimes found under their Jaws. Ensebins in his History, lib. 22. cap. 3. mentions the same thing, and Experience has often verifi'd it.

Alligators. There is another Species of Crocodils found in these Lakes, call'd by the Indians Buhaya, by the Portuguese Caymanes, and are those we call Alligators. The difference between them and the Crocodils is that they have no Tongue, and have a difficulty in turning. For want of a Tongue it can make no Noise, nor swallow in the Water, but it must Tear and Devour its Prey on the Bank. The Indians say it has four Eyes, two above and two below, by help whereof it easily discovers the Fishes and Stones, which it takes from the Bottom with its Paws; but that on Land it is short-sighted. Besides that the Male can go but half out of the Water, and that only the Females go out to seek something to eat in the Fields, because it appears that all those kill'd on Land are Females. It is a most assured defence against the Caymans or Alligators, to carry about one the Bonga or Nang-kau-Vagan, a sort of Fruit growing on a Cane, which I have by me. It hinders the Alligator from coming near, as has been try'd with a Dog, and is also a Preservative against Witchcraft.

In the Sea of Mindanao and Xolo there are abundance of large Whales, and Sea Horses like those of the Land, but without Feet, and with a Tail like a Crocodils. Whales and Sea-Horses.

The Sea-shells in the same Island are so large that they serve for Holy-water Pots, and to give Water to the Buffaloes. A religious Man told me, That as he was going to the Island of Pintados, the Sailers took one so large from a Rock it was stuck to, that the Meat in it gave them all a Belly full. These Shells are every where valu'd but especially by the Chineses, who make several Curiosities of them.

There are two sorts of Tortoises found in those Seas. The great Ones are Eaten, and their Flesh tastes like Beef, but the Shell is not valu'd. The Flesh of the lesser Sort is not Eaten, but the Shell is good for several uses. Some of them are an Antidote, it being found by Experience that Rings or Beads made of them would fly in Pieces like a Glass, if they touch or come near any Poison. Tortoile

The Thornbacks are mighty large, and their Skin esteem'd by the Japoneses to make Scabbards for their Scimiters. To make short concerning this Matter, I must declare that of all the sorts of Fish mention'd by Pliny, there are very few wanting in these Seas.

CHAP. IV.

Of the Trees and Fruit of the Philippine-Islands.

Santor. THE most valuable sorts of Fruit in the Islands are of two sorts, and both of them grow in the Woods without any Improvement. The first of them is call'd Santor, in Bigness, Colour and Shape like to a ripe Peach, but somewhat flatter. When gather'd in Season the Rind is sweet, but open'd there are in it five Kernels, like the Seeds in an Orange, and as Sower and White. The Spaniards esteem it equal to a Quince, and therefore Preserve it after the same manner. It is also good pickled with Vinegar, and gives a pleasant Relish in Potage when half Ripe. The Woods being full of these Trees, and Sugar at about four Shilling and six Pence the hundred Weight, all the Friars in the Philippine-Islands Preserve a great Quantity to Eat after Dinner and Supper. Besides the Leaves are Medicinal, and the Wood excellent for Carving. The Tree is like the Walnut, but has larger Leaves.

The other sort of Fruit which they call Mabol, is somewhat bigger than the other, but downy like a Peach, and of the Colour of an Orange. The Flesh of it is ill Tasted, hard of Digestion, and contains six Kernels. The Tree is as Tall as a good Pear-Tree, has the Boughs thick, the Leaves large, long and green like the Laurel. The Wood when wrought is little Inferior to Ebony. Both of them may be seen in the following Cut.

Here

Here are also Bilimbines, which the Portuguese call Carambolas (as I observ'd in the third Volume) but as in the East-Indies they are sharp, so here they have a mixture of Sharp and Sweet. They are eaten for Sauce Raw, and Prepar'd with Vinegar and Sugar.

The Macupa, call'd by the Portuguese Giambu, is bigger than that which grows at Goa. There are also Banchilins, which the Portuguese call Bilimbines; Giacas, call'd by the Spaniards Nancas, Tanpays by the Portuguese call'd Giambus-de-Malaca; Cassius or Cagnis and others, which being describ'd in other Places are therefore here purposely omitted.

There are also Mangas of Siam, by the Portuguese call'd Mangas-de-Papagallo, brought but of late Years; and Camies, the Fruit and Tree like the Portuguese Carambolas, but without Kernels, and more sharp.

All hitherto mention'd are as it were Garden Fruit, but there are other sorts Wild, not inferior to them in Taste, if gather'd in Season. The Lumboy, by the Tagalians call'd Dobat, is a Tree in all Respects like the Pear-Tree; it puts out a pretty, but small white Blossom, the Fruit like a Cherry, only longish like an Olive. The Portuguese give it the Name of Giambulon.

Vol. IV.

The Dottoyan is a scarcer Tree, whose Fruit is in all Respects like the Giambulon, Red, and with a Kernel, the Flesh of it is White, and the Taste sweet and sower.

The Panunguan is a very large Tree, producing a Fruit, as big as a Pigeons-Egg, with a red Shell, in Shape and Hardness like our Pine Apples. Within it there are Kernels, and a transparent Flesh of good Taste and helping Digestion. Others have given this Fruit the Name of Litias, for its likeness with those of China, but they differ from them

The Carnion is good Boil'd and sharpens the Appetite. It is as large as an Apple, and has a Rind like an Onion, and the Flesh within sharp and sweet. The Tree is as big as an Apple-Tree, and

M m m

Gemelli.
1697.
cs. and thrives well on the Banks of Rivers. In some of the Islands there are the so much celebrated Duriones. The Tree is large, and the Fruit grows to the thick part of the Boughs, like our Pine-Apples. At the first tasting it sends up an ungrateful Taste of Onion to the Nose, but when grown familiar it becomes most delicious to all Strangers.

There are also Maranes like the Duriones; and Lawzones or Boasbas, which for Taste and other Qualities may be call'd Grapes.

Paxos. Instead of Olives, there grow Paxos in the Mountains of the Islands, which differ but little from Olives when gather'd young. Green they are eaten with Vinegar, and Ripe they have an exquisite Taste.

Pine Trees On the high Mountains of Illocos and Cagayan there are vast wild Pine-Trees. They do not bear Pine-Apples like ours, but Piles, not unlike them, which taste like Almonds, and serve for all uses as Almonds do among us.

Lumbon. The Lumbon produces some small Nuts, with a hard Shell, the Kernel whereof tastes like Pine-Apple Kernels. But this being hurtful to the Stomach, the general Use the Chineses make of it is to extract the Oyl, which serves instead of Tallow for Ships.

Oranges. Their Oranges are of several sorts, all differing from, and bigger than those of Europe. There are great and small Lemmons, but for the most part sweet.

Jamboas. The Jamboas are twice as big as a Mans Head, Round and Yellowish. Some of them have white, some red and some yellow Seeds. Their Taste is like a Lemon, with a mixture of Sweet to the Sour. The Tree is also like the Lemon-Tree in Bigness and Leaves.

Of the Fruits of New-Spain there are brought hither Ates, Anonas, Zapotes-pietas, Chicos Zapotes, Aguacates, Papayas, Mameyes, and Goyavas Peruleras; of which last there is such plenty in the Mountains that they are a great support to the Poor. They make Preserves of it, and Wine better than that of the Coco-Tree, or the Sider of Tirol. This Fruit eaten Green is astringent, and when very Ripe is laxative. The Leaves of it boil'd are good for swell'd Legs; and the Indians reducing them to Powder heal themselves therewith of the Disciplines they take in the holy Week. The Islanders know nothing of the European Fruit, because the Soil will not produce it; and tho' in the Castle of Cavite there are some Vines of Muska-dine Grapes, they never come to Maturity, no more than the Figs and Pomegranates in the Monastery of the Jesuits in the same Place.

All those hitherto mention'd, serve only to please the Palate; but the Trees that yield both Profit and Pleasure, and wherein for the most part the Estates of the chief Men in the Philippine-Islands consist, are the Palm-Trees. They reckon there are 40 several kinds of them; but among the best, which give daily Sustenance, that is the choicest which the Tagalians call Toro, the Pintadas Landan, and the Inhabitants of the Malucco-Islands Sagu. This, to distinguish it from the others, grows naturally without any Improvement on the Banks of Rivers. It runs not very high but is thick. All of it from Top to Bottom is a soft Substance like a Raddish, cover'd with a Bark only an Inch thick, not very hard nor smooth. They use it after this manner, they cut it in Pieces and lay it a soaking in Water, then they take only a narrow slice of the Bark, that the remaining part may contain the inward Substance, and cut the White within it extraordinary small; then they press it with their Feet in Baskets made of Cane, near the River, so that the best of the Juice may run through, by pouring on Water, into a Vessel set under full of Water. Then they take up that Substance so bruised and put it into Moulds made of Palm-Tree Leaves, like our Cheese Mats, where it hardens a little, like soft Starch, which being afterwards dry'd in the Sun, without any Oven serves instead of Bread, and is very Nourishing, and will keep.

The second Sort of Palm-Trees is that which yields their Wine and Vinegar. The Tagalians call it Sasa, the Bisayans Nipa. They do not grow big enough to deserve the Name of a Tree, for they are generally in Places that abound in Salt Water, and especially where the Waves of the Sea come. The Fruit would not be unlike the Date, but it never comes to Maturity, because the Indians, as soon as ever it Blossoms, cut off the Bough, as has been said before, that the Liquor may run into the Cane Trough placed under it. One of these Troughs will hold ten Neapolitan Carraffas or Bottles, and is often fill'd in a Night. When it is not Distill'd or Prepar'd as has been mention'd before, that is, with the Bark of Calinga, which is like Cinnamon, it grows as sour as Vinegar. The Leaves of these Palm-Trees

Gemella
1697.
Coco-Tree.

Trees interwoven with small Canes, serve to cover Houses instead of Tiles, and will last six Years.

There is also Wine, Vinegar, and Tuba made of the Coco-Tree, which besides are of great use to the Islands because of the Oyl drawn from them, which when fresh is good to Eat. From the middle of the same Coco comes a Water as sweet as Sugar, and a sort of Sugar made of the same Water condens'd. The outward Rind serves to make Ropes, Match, and to Caulk Ships. The Shell within it to make Cups, and for other Uses elsewhere spoken of.

Burias.

There is another sort of Palm-Trees call'd Burias, from which the Islands of Burias towards the Streight of S. Bernardin took their Name. The Tree is thicker than the Coco; the Fruit are perfect Dates, of the Stones whereof they make good Beads, and the Leaves are like those of the common Palm-Trees in Africk. About the beginning of the Year the Bisayans cut the Stem or Stalk, and so they gather the Liquor, as is done with the Nipag and Coco-Tree. Of this Liquor, besides Vinegar, they make over the Fire a sort of Honey, and black Sugar, which they call Pacassas, and sell in little Boxes, as a thing much valu'd among the Islanders. I tasted it and found it was somewhat Saltish and easie to dissolve. They also make Sagu, after the same manner as it is made of the other Trees; and in Times of Dearth they make a sort of Meal of the Fruit ground; but not so wholesome as that of the Sagu.

Bonga.

The other Palm-Tree, call'd Bonga, has large Leaves like the Buri, but the Tree and Fruit unlike. The Body of the Bonga is Tall, Slender, Strait and knotty all the Way. The Fruit is like a large Acorn, highly valu'd, because of it, the Leaves of Beetle and Chalk, they make a Composition as big as a small Acorn, which they and all the Indians value at a great Rate, as a thing that Comforts the Stomach, Fastens the Teeth, Causes a sweet Breath, and makes the Lips Beautiful and Red; yet immoderately us'd it turns the Lips and Teeth black, as most of the Indians find by Experience, who never cease chewing it from Morning till Night. Some of them will pass a Day or two without Eating, believing they are Nourish'd by it.

The last sort of profitable Palm-Trees (to say nothing of the rest tho' they bear Fruit) is the Tonota. It furnishes the Islanders with Wool, call'd Baroz, to make Quilts and Pillars; and with black Hemp, call'd Jonor, or Gamyto, to make Cables for Ships. Its Threads in length and thickness are like Hemp, in blackness like Horses Hairs, and they are thought to last long in Sea Water. Both the Wool and Hemp are taken from about the Trunk of the Tree. It produces some small Cocos in long Bunches or Clusters; but of no use. The Indians from the young Branches draw sweet Tuba, which when grown four makes them Drunk. The tender Tops are eaten, but are not so good and well tasted as those of the Coco, which they eat Boil'd.

The Leaves of all these Palm-Trees in general will bear Weaving, as well to make Hats or Hoods, as to cover Houses, make Mats for Rooms, Sails for Ships, and other uses; so that in them the poor People find Meat, Drink, Cloth and Houses, as Pliny in his Natural History lib. 16. cap. 4. writ above 1500 Years since.

The Tamarines or Sampalos are a wild Fruit, and grow in Cods like green Beans. They have a biting Taste, and are therefore Eaten with Salt, and Preserv'd with Sugar. The Tree is tall and thick, the Leaves small, and the Wood serves for several Works like Ebony.

The Islands produce abundance of Cassia. The Tree is not so large as the Tamarine, but much thicker of Boughs, The Leaves are of a beautiful Green, and bigger than those of the Pear-Tree, and being boil'd with the Blossoms, in the Nature of a Conserve, work the same Effect as the Fruit, and are less nauseous. So the young Fruit made into a Preserve, is Safe, and a good Laxative. The Mountains do so abound in it, that in May and June they fat the Swine with it, especially in the Island of Mindoro.

There are so many other sorts of great Trees on all the Mountains, which serve to build Ships and Houses, and are always Green; that those whom long Experience has not made well acquainted with the ways, cannot by any means go far among them, as I saw with my own Eyes going a Hunting. Among the best of them is the black Ebony, the red Balayong, the Asana or Naga of which they make Dishes to drink out of, for the Water grown blewish with standing in them is very wholesome, and not ill tasted, as I found by Experience; and cutting a slit in the Bark of the Tree there runs a Liquor from it, call'd Dra-

Gemelli. 1697. gon's Blood. There is besides the Calipak, sweet scented, and with an Aromatick Bark like Cinnamon; and many more all very useful, as well for Dying, as for their Smell, and abundance of other uses, whereof the hundredth part is not yet known to those People. Those call'd Tigas, that is, Hard, are excellent for building of Ships, and there is one Kind so hard, that it cannot be cut but with a Saw, and Water, like Marble; and therefore the Portuguese call it Ferro, that is, Iron.

Leaves
turn'd into living
Creatures. On some of the Mountains in the Island of Manila, there is abundance of Wild Nutmeg, of which no use is made. But in the Island of Mindanao, there are on the Mountains many Cinnamon Trees. The most wonderful thing of all, is that the Leaves of some Trees, when they come to a certain pitch of Ripeness, become living Creatures, with Wings, Feet, and Tail, and fly like any Bird, tho' they remain of the same colour as the other Leaves. The Body is made of the hardest Fibers, in the middle, bigger or less according to the Leaf, that part joyning to the Tree, becomes the Head; the other end the Tail; the side-Fibres the Feet, the rest the Wings. F. Joseph de Omense, a Recolet, Provincial of the Province of St. Gregory in the Philippine Islands, told me that when he was Minister in the Province of Camarines in the Village of Camilio, he was actually an Eye-witness to this, and gave it me under his hand, in form before a Notary, as I have it to show by me. D. F. Gines Barrientos, Bishop of Troy, and Coadjutor to the Archbishop of Manila, confirm'd the same. I have here inserted the following Figure of the Leaf for the satisfaction of curious Persons. But were it my business to descant upon this Subject, I should say, there was but one way to make this out, which is, the said Leaf breeding a Worm, which afterwards takes Wing, as we daily observe in Flies, Gnats, Silk-worms, and many other sorts of Worms.

1. The Head.
2. The Body.
3. The Feet.
4. The Tail.
5. The Wings.

Cacao. The Cacao Plant, has been carry'd out of New Spain into the Islands; and the increase is so great (tho' it proves not altogether so good) that in a little time, they will have no need of any from America.

Bees, Honey and Wax. Those antient Woods, which for many and many Ages have not felt the stroke of an Ax, are very beneficial and Profitable to the Islanders; because there are in them, infinite Multitudes of Bees, which furnish them with vast quantities of Honey and Wax, without their taking any Pains about it. There are sundry kinds of them. Those the Indians call Pocoytan, are bigger than ours in Europe; and make their Combs, which are full four Spans in length, and proportionably in breadth, under the Boughs of high Trees; and sometimes fix or seven in the same place, which continue whole notwithstanding the mighty Rains. Those call'd Liguan, are as big as the Europeans, and make their Combs in the hollow of Trees. Another sort of little ones no bigger, than Flies, call'd Locor, have no Sting, but make four Honey, and black Wax, and seek about for the Honey of the others. There is another sort they call Camomo, which like those call'd Pocoytan, settles upon high Trees. Besides all this, the Trunks of these Trees put out several sorts of Gums, all the Year. One kind, which is the commonest, by the Spaniards call'd Brea, is us'd instead of Pitch; of the others some are Medicinal, others odoriferous, and others for other uses. There is such vast Plenty of them, that not only the Trees, but the Ground is cover'd with them; and there are Plants that have it on their Leaves, in the Months of April, and May. Thus we see the Ancients had reason to say, the Trees

Gemelli. Trees in these Countries, distill'd Honey and other precious Liquors.

1697. We must here pass by the Tree, call'd Aimit. It is indifferent large, and so full of Moisture, that when the Hunters and Wild People want Water, they cut a hole in it, and in a very short time draw from it a hollow Cane full of Pure Water. It also bears some Fruit in Clusters, which when ripe, are not altogether unfavoury.

Twining Cane. I will here conclude this Chapter with the Indian Cane, by the Spaniards call'd, Vexuco, growing among the Trees, and running up to the tops of them, twining like the Ivy. It is all cover'd with Points, which being taken away, it remains smooth. If cut, It will yeild as much fair Water, as is enough for a draught, so that the Mountains being full of them, there is never any want of Water. The thickest part of them serves for several uses, as covering Walls, Roofs, and other things; that part which is somewhat thinner, being very strait, and not apt to be Worm-eaten, serves to make Pikes, and the Royal Armoury at Manila is altogether furnish'd with them. In the Province of Camarines, they make Pillars of them, so that all the House is made of Cane. The thinnest part serves for Captains Canes, after the Spanish fashion, and walking sticks as every body knows; and when splic, to bind, make Baskets, Boxes, Chests, Hoods for Franciscans, and many other uses the Indians put it to.

CHAP. V.

Of the Plants, and Flowers in the Philippine Islands.

Plantans. Those the Portuguese call Indian Figs, are by the Spaniards call'd, Plantans, and for quantity, are next to the Palm-trees. Their Plant withers as soon as it has bore the Fruit. It has no Branches, but Leaves so long and broad, that there is no doubt but Adam might have made himself a Cloak with a couple of them; this being thought to be the Fruit that made him fall in Paradise. There are several sorts of it, all differing in taste. One of them is call'd Obispo, or Bishop, because it is fit for a Prelates Table; another is call'd, Plantano de Pepita, and the Indians have them about their Houses, not only for the sake of the shade of the Leaves, but to make use of them, instead of Napkins and Plates, and of the Fruit for Vinegar. The choicest and most Nourishing, are the Tunduques, a Span and half long, and as thick, as a Man's Arm, which they eat roasted, with Wine and Cinnamon, and they taste like the Quinces of Europe. Those they call Venti coxol are also excellently well tasted; but those they call Dedos de Dama, or Ladies Fingers are much better. An hundred and sometimes two hundred Plantans hang by one Twig, so that it must be propp'd up. The Indians think it so wholesome, that they give it to the Sick; and tho' they be somewhat hard of Digestion, they are good for the Lungs and Reins; and Cordial, if we may believe Autenne. The Arabs call them Musa, and the Malabars Palan.

There are also abundance of Sugar Canes, Ginger, Indigo, and Tabacco. The Batatas very Nourishing to the Indians, and much valu'd by the Spaniards, are of several kinds; as are the Camotes, which look like great Radishes, and have a Pleasant taste and smell. The Glabis are like great Pine-Apple Nuts, and boil'd, serve the Indians instead of Bread, and the Spaniards instead of Turnips in the Pot, and the Leaves make Soupe. The Obis is as big as a Pompion, and the Plant like Ivy. The Xicamas taste like the Obis and Batatas, are eaten preserv'd or raw with Pepper and Vinegar, like Cardoons; for when fresh they are Juicy and Wholesome. The Wild Carots, taste like a Pear, and the Plant is like Ivy. The Wild Taylan has great Leaves, and tastes like the Batatas. There is such vast Plenty of all these Roots throughout the Islands, that many thousands of Savage Men, live on them, as has been said elsewhere.

The Pinnas, by the Portuguese call'd Ananas, have the first of these Names, from their likeness, with the Pine-Apple-Nut. They are much valu'd for their Smell, Colour, and Taste; and they are preserv'd to eat after Dinner. At that time they help Digestion; but eaten fasting, tho' they create an Appetite, they are not wholesome. A Knife stuck for half an Hour in one of these Pinnas, loses its Temper.

There are abundance of odoriferous Herbs, and Flowers in the Islands, growing

Batatas.

Camotes.

Glabis.

Obis.

Xicamas.

Carots.

Taylan.

Pinna.

ing of themselves naturally in the Fields, without any Labour of the Indians, who make their Benefit of them. It is no wonder they do not apply themselves to Improve them, since they can scarce be persuaded to Sow their Rice; and for this reason there are not such fine Gardens in Manila, as in Europe, and but few Flowers in those of the Monasteries, and belonging to the Spaniards.

Flowers.
7 impag.
&c.

The first place is due to the Flower of Zampaga. It is like the Portuguese Mogorin, that is, like a little white Rose, with the three rows of Leaves, much sweeter than the Jasemin of Europe. There is another call'd Solasos of a sweet Scent, and two sorts of it; besides a Wild one, call'd Locoloco, which Smells like Cloves. The Balanay, otherwise call'd Torongil, and Damoro has a small Seed that Smells like Baum. It is good for the Stomach, and the Richest Persons mix it with the Betle. The Daso has an Aromatick Root, swelling like Ginger, and the Fields are full of it; as also of the other kind of it, which is hotter, and stronger, call'd Langcovas. The Cabling is sweet green, but more when dry. The Tala is also an odoriferous Herb, and more fragrant than the Calaton-don; of which they make sweet Water. The Sarasa, or Oja de S. Juan is slightly, and has long Leaves, with white and green Stripes.

Medicinal Herbs.

As for Medicinal Herbs, no Island in the World abounds in them so much as the Philippines, for besides Sage, St. Mary's-wort, Baum, House-lick, and others known in Europe, they have many peculiar. The Herb call'd del Pollo, is like Purcelane, and grows every where. They have given it this Name, because in a very short time, it cures any Wounds their Game-Cocks receive. Pansipan is a taller Herb, with a white Flower like the Bean blossom. Pounded and laid on Wounds, it soon draws out any Poyson, and cleanses all Corruption. The Golondrina and Celidonia, speedily cure the Flux. There is also the Herb del Sapo, and many others of great Virtue. In the Islands of Mindanao and Xolo, there are also many Herbs peculiar to them, to heal Wounds in a short time; for drinking a Decoction of them, and applying the Herb to the Wound, it heals in 24 Hours. There is another they use after the same manner as the Turks do Opium, to put them besides themselves, before they join Battle. It takes away the right use of Reason, so that there remains no fear of any Danger; and the Enemies Swords and Spears, are made no account of. The greatest wonder is, that the Wounds of those who have taken, it will not Bleed; if the Governor of Samboangan spoke Truth, in the Account he gave of it, to him of Manila, as did several Jesuit Missioners that had been with him. They added that there were two other wonderful Herbs; one of which apply'd to the Reins, makes a Man sensible of no weariness; the other held in the Mouth, prevents fainting, and gives a Man such Vigor, that in the strength of it, a Man may travel two days without Eating.

The Islands being hot and moist, and not well cultivated, abundance of Venomous Creatures breed in all parts; and the Ground produces Herbs, Flowers, and Roots of the same vile Quality; insomuch that they not only kill those that touch or taste them, but even infect the Air about them; and for this reason it is that so many dye, at the time that such Plants and Trees Blossom. But on the other side, Providence has furnish'd those same Islands, with several sorts of excellent Antidotes, among which the Preference must be given to the Bezoar Stone, found in the Belly of Deer, and Goats. The Malungal powder'd, and given in luke warm Water, and in Oyl of Cocos, is a most powerful Remedy, against Malignant and Pestilential Fevers. The Leaves of the Alipayon, which are like those of the Plantain, Purge, or Cleanse any Sore wonderfully, making the Flesh grow up, without any other help, but now and then, changing new Leaves. The Root of the Dilao, which is like Ginger, has an admirable Virtue for healing of Wounds, and Venomous Thorns, applying it bruised and boiled with Oyl of Cocos.

Venomous Creatures and Vegetables.

Bezoar.

An Herb by the Spaniards, call'd de Culebras, or of Snakes, and by the Tagalians Tarogtong, is excellent for joining together, and knitting of parts that have been sever'd, so that the Snakes sometimes cut in two, heal themselves with it. The like Virtue is in a sort of Wood, call'd Doston. The Amuyon bears a Fruit like a Nut, of a biting taste, like Pepper, and good for any Distempers in the Belly, proceeding from Cold. The Pandacague bruised, and apply'd hot, helps Women in Labour. The Tree Camandag is so Venomous, that the Pilchards eating the Leaves that fall into the Sea, die, and kill those that eat of them. The Liquor flows from the Gemelli. the Trunk of the Tree, serves those People to Poison the points of their Arrows. The very shadow of the Tree is so Destructive, that as far as it reaches no Herb, or Grass grows, and if transplanted, it kills all the other Trees in the place, except only a small Shrub, which is an Antidote against, and always with it. A bit of a Twig of this Shrub, or a Leaf carry'd in a Man's Mouth, is a security against the Venom of the Tree, and therefore the Indians are never without it. The Earth of St. Paul, has also been found to be a Powerful Antidote.

The Maca Buhay, which signifies Giver of Life, is a sort of Ivy, which grows about any Tree, and grows as thick as a Man's Finger. It casts out some long Twigs, like Vine-branches, whereof the Indians make Bracelets, to wear against any Poison. The Juice of this Plant is very bitter. The Root of the Balet taken on the East side, and apply'd bruise'd to any Wound, heals it in 24 Hours, better than any Balsam. This Tree grows among Buildings, and does so pierce them with its Roots, that it overthrows Palaces. It also grows on the Mountains, and because it there grows to an excessive bigness, it is much honour'd by the Indians.

There are many other Trees and Plants, that have notable Virtues in the Islands, of which Brother George Carrol, a German, and Apothecary to the College of the Jesuits at Manila, has given an exact Description, in two Volumes in Folio, with the Draughts of them, so exactly to the Life, that any Man having the Book, may easily know them in the Field. He has also set down their Virtues, and the manner how they are to be prepar'd. This is the Work and Labour of fifteen years, he having gain'd the Knowledge of them, by means of the Indians, who are extraordinary Botanists; and it very well deserves to be Printed for the Publick Benefit, which I do not omit to declare to the Father, Vice-Provincial, and the Brother himself.

Among the sensitive Plants, which are a Medium between Plants, and Animals as Pliny observes, lib. 9. cap. 45, besides the Spugna and Sea Nettle, there is one in the Islands, in all Respects like a Colewort. This was found out in the Year 1642, by a Souldier of the Garrison of the Coast of Ibabao, who going to pull it up, saw it fled from his Hand, and drew back to the Rock, which was under Water in the Sea. There is another more wonderful, which grows on St. Peter's Hills, about Manila, not very Tall, and with little Leaves, which whensoever it is touch'd, tho' never so lightly, draws back, and closes all its Leaves hard together. For this reason the Spaniards call it, la Vergon cosa, that is, The Bashful.

C H A P. VI.

Of the Islands of Mindanao, and Xolo.

Mindanao
describ'd.

Mindanao, and Xolo being reckoned among the Philippine-Islands, and we having omitted before, to relate some particular Circumstances concerning them, it will be proper before we proceed any further, to give a short account of them. Mindanao is the next Island to Manila in greatness, its shape almost Triangular, ending in the three famous Promontories of Samboangan, Cape St. Augustin, and Cape Suliago. Between Suliago, and Cape St. Augustin, which lie North, and South is the Province of the Warlike Caragas. Between Suliago, which points to the North East, and Samboangan, is the Province of Illigan, the Jurisdiction of Dapitan, and the People call'd Subanos. Samboangan, and Cape St. Augustin lie East, and West, and the People of them, on the one side, and the other, Border upon the Provinces of Buhayen, and Mindanao. Its Situation is in the Latitude of six degrees, in which lies Cape St. Augustin, to ten and a half where is Cape Suliago. Its compass is about 300 Leagues, but has so many long Points running out into the Sea, and deep Bays, that a Man may go across it in a Day and a half. It lies South East of Manila, and 200 Leagues from it. About it there are many Islands; among those that are inhabited, is Xolo, thirty Leagues distant from Samboangan; Balisan divided by a Streight of 4 Leagues; Sanguil, the Peninsula of Santranguan, and others.

Mindanao being so far stretch'd out and divided, partakes of several Climates, and is encompass'd by Stormy Seas, especially on the Coast of Caragas. That part part which is subject to the Government of Samboangan is most Temperate, the Winds Pleasant, Storms Rare, and Rain Scarce. The Provinces of Mindanao and Buhayen, Subject to two Moorish Kings, are Boggy and uneasy to Live in by reason of the Gnats. There are throughout the Island about 20 Navigable Rivers, and above 200 little Ones. The most remarkable are Buhayen and Butuan, both flowing from the same Spring, but the first runs towards the Court of Mindanao; the other towards the North, and falls into the Sea in sight of Bahol and Leyre. The third River call'd Sibuguey rises near Dapitan, and with its Waters divides the Territory of Mindanao from that of Samboangan. There are also two Lakes, the one call'd of Mindanao, which in that Language signifies, a Man of a Lake, and gives its Name to all the Country. This is very large and cover'd with a sort of Herbs they call Tanson, that spread themselves in many Branches over the Water. The other, being eight Leagues in Compass, is in the opposite side of the Island, and known by the Name of Malanao. All the Country, except near the Sea is Mountainous, yet abounds in Rice, and produces very nourishing Roots, as Batatas, Ubis, Gaves, Aperes and others. There are infinite numbers of the Palm-Trees call'd Sagu, of whose Meal they make Bread and Bisket, throughout all the Island of Mindanao, but especially on the Coast of Caragos, near the River Butuan.

Its Product.
*Durion*es.

Mindanao produces all the sorts of Fruit the other Islands do, and the Durion, before spoke of, over and above. But it is to be observ'd, besides what has already been said of it, that its Rind is not very hard, and opens as it Ripens. Within it are three or four Kernels, cover'd with a soft white Substance; and a sort of Nut, like the Kernel in a Prune Stone, which is eaten roasted like Chestnuts. It is of the Nature of the Fruit of the East; viz. That it is gather'd Green, to Ripen in the House. There are abundance of them all the way from Dapitan to Samboangan, for 80 Leagues in length, more especially on the high Land of Dapitan, but above all in the Islands of Xolo and Basilan. They say the Tree stands 20 Years before it Bears.

Cinnamon

The Cinnamon is a Tree peculiar to Mindanao, grows on the Mountains without any Improvement, and has no owner but him that first finds it. For this reason every one, to prevent another's making his Advantage of it, takes off the Bark before it is Ripe; and so tho' at first it be strong like that of Ceylon, yet in a small time, and at farthest in two Years it loses all its Taste and Virtue. It is gather'd in 25 Villages, and about as many Rivers of the Coast of Samboangan, towards Dapitan on high and craggy Mountains; and in one Village of the Province of Cagayan.

The Inhabitants of Mindanao find Gold. good Gold digging deep into the Ground, as also in the Rivers making Trenches, before the Flood. There is Sulphur Sulphur. enough in the burning Mountains, the Antientest of which is Sanxil, in the Territory of Mindanao. In 1640. a high Mountain broke out, and so clouded the Air, Land and Sea with its Ashes, that it look'd like Doomsday.

In the Sea of this Island and that of Xolo there are large Pearls taken. It has Pearls. all the Birds of the other Islands, Birds and Beasts. and among the rest the Carpintera, which, as I said before, finds out the Herb that makes Iron fly. There are also Multitudes of all sorts of Beasts, as wild Boars, Goats and Rabbits; but above all in lascivious Baboons, which suffer not the Women to go far from their Habitations.

Thirty Leagues South West of Mindanao, is the famous Island of Xolo, Xolo Island Govern'd by a King of its own. All the Ships of Borneo touch there, and it may well be call'd the Mart of all the Moorish Kingdoms. The Air is wholesome and fresh by reason of the frequent Rains, which make the Land Fruitful in Rice. This only Island of all the Philippines breeds Elephants; and by reason the Islanders do not tame them, as they do in Siam and Cambaya they are mightily increas'd. There are also Goats with fine spotted Skins like Leopards. Among the Birds, that which builds a Nest like a Sparrow, call'd Salangan, is the rarest. For Fruit it produces the Durion, abundance of Pepper, which they gather Green, and a peculiar sort of Fruit call'd of Paradise, and by the Spaniards, the King's Fruit, because it is found no where but in his Garden. It is as big as a common Apple, of a purple Colour, and has little white Kernels like Cloves of Garlick, enclos'd in a thick Shell like a piece of Sole-leather. and is of a delicious Taste. As for Herbs either Wholesome or Venomous, it produces all that have been describ'd above; but the Natives make special Use Elephants;

Fruit.

Gemelli.
1697.

Use of one call'd Uboabamban to sharpen the Appetite. Choice Pearls are taken here, and the Divers before they sink to the Bottom anoint their Eyes with the Blood of a white Cock. The Sea throws up abundance of Amber on the Shore, whilst the Winds call'd Vendavales, which are South and South-west do not prevail, that is, from May till September. Some say the Whale vomits it up, others that it is the Excrement of a greater Fish, call'd Gadianina, others that it is the Root of a large Odoriferous Tree.

The Island of Basilan is three Leagues from Mindanao, and twelve Leagues in Compass. Being opposite to Samboangan, it may be call'd the Garden that furnishes it with Plantans, Sugar-Canes, Gaves and Lamzones. The Fruit in the Island de-los-Pintados call'd Roaba, is no bigger than a Nut, and within its Shell has three or four very sweet Kernels, so delicious that a Man may eat a prodigious Quantity without being cloy'd. The Durion or Dulian, as the Islanders call it, is here found in great Plenty. The Maron in the Island of Leyte call'd Tugup, has a downy Rind; when Ripe it is as big as a Melon, and within contains small Kernels, like the Aras and the Cirimajas of New Spain; the Flesh is soft and savory. The Balono without is like a Quince, and within it is a Kernel with the thickness of a Finger of Flesh about it. When Green it is pickled in Vinegar. The Island abounds in Rice, differing in Colour, Smell and Quality; thanks to the Rivers, which are great and troublesome to cross, tho' the Island be small. In the Woods there is no want of wild Boars and Deer, nor of good Timber for Building. The Sea, besides some Fishes known in Europe, has others peculiar to it; good Tortoises of the 2d sort, that is, such as are valuable for their Shell, and two sorts of Jett.

The Inhabitants.

There are four principal Nations in Mindanao, which are the Mindanaos, Caragas, Lutaos and Subanos. The Caragas are Brave both by Sea and Land. The Mindanaos Faithless, as being Mahometans. The Lutaos, a new Nation in all the three Islands of Mindanao, Xolo and Basilan, live in Houses built on the Tops of Trees, on the Banks of Rivers, which at Flood cannot be cross'd a-foot; for Luto in their Language signifies a Man that swims on the Water. These Men are such Enemies to the Land, that they take no Pains for Sowing, but live the best they can upon Fishing, wandering about the Sea of Mindanao, Xolo and Basilan. Yet they are cunning Traders, and wear Turbants, and use the same Weapons the Moors do, as Trafficking, and being in Amity with those of Perneo. The Subanos, that is, Dwellers on Rivers, for Suba signifies a River, are the least look'd upon of any People in the Island, as being Base and Treacherous. They never depart from the Rivers, where they Build upon long Pillars, so high that there is no reaching their Nest with a Pike; they climb up to it at Night by a Pole fastned to it for that purpose. They are as it were Vassals to the Lutaos. The Dapitans surpass all the four Nations before-mention'd for Valour and Wisdom; and there is no doubt but they were very assisting to the Spaniards in Conquering the Islands.

Vol. IV.

The Island is subject to the Mountain People, who being fond of Sloth and Liberty, keep there without any Inclination to come down to the Sea, or love of Tillage; and being thus grown wild for want of Commerce, gave Strangers an Opportunity of possessing themselves of the forsaken Shore and Rivers.

There are also in Mindanao some Blacks, like Ethiopians, who own no Superior, no more than those of the Island of Blacks, and Mountains of Manila; but live like Beasts conversing with none, and doing harm to all they can. They have no settled Place of abode, and in all the bad Weather have no shelter, but the Trees. Their Cloaths are such as Nature gave them, for they never cover so much as that which ought to be hid. Their Weapons are Bows and Arrows. They reap no other Fruit of their Barbarity, but Liberty.

The generality of the Inhabitants of these Islands are Heathens; but from Sanxil to Samboangan the People along the Coast are Mahometans; more particularly in the Islands of Basilan and Xolo, which are as it were the Metropolis of that Superstition, and the Mecca of the Archipelago; because the first Teacher of it is bury'd there, of whom the giddy Headed Casikes tell a thousand Fables. The Spaniards at their coming destroy'd his Tomb. However, to say the truth, they are generally Atheists, and those that have any Religion are Sorcerers. The Mahometans know nothing of their Superstition besides eating no Swines Flesh, being Circumcis'd and keeping many Wives; tho' they all agree in giving their Minds to Observations and Auguries upon every light Accident.

Religion.

N n 11

The

G. Hall.
1597.

The Devil appears to some of them, because they call upon him in Time of need, and offer Sacrifice to him. The Mountainers are absolute Atheists, for they have not the least sign of a Mosque, or other Place of Prayer. They are very temperate, contenting themselves with a little boild Rice, and where that is not to be had, with Roots of Trees; without making use of any Spice whether they are Rich or Poor; the better fort when they have a Deer, Goat, or Fish, using no other Seasoning but Salt and Water. Their Cloaths are plain, for being Enemies to Society, every Man is his own Taylor. One and the same Garment serves for Breeches, Doublet and Shirt. By their side they wear Daggers after their Fashion, with gilt Hilts. Over their Breeches they bind about them a Piece of the Country Stuff; so broad that it hangs down to their Knees, and on their Heads wear a Moorish Turbant. The Women in the Day time wear a Sack instead of a Petticoat, which at Night serves for Sheet, Blanket and Quilt, upon a scurvy Mat. Yet they wear rich Bracelets.

Habits.

Houses.

The little Wooden Houses are cover'd with Mats; the Ground is all their Seat; the Leaves of Trees Plates and Dishes; the Canes large Vessels, and the Cocos drinking Cups.

Customs.

As to their Manners they are more Barbarous than the other Mahometans; for if the Father lays out any Money for his Son, or ransoms him out of Slavery, he keeps him as his Slave; and the Son does the same by his Father. For any little Kindness they do, they deprive him that receives it of his Liberty; and for the Crime of one Man make Slaves of all the Kindred. They do much Wrong to Strangers that deal with them, and the Purse pays for all. He that is taken in Adultery buys himself off with Money, this being look'd upon as no Disgrace among them. They abhor Theft. Incest in the first Degree is Punish'd with Death; that is, casting the Criminal into the Sea in a Sack. Law Suits are soon decided, without many Formalities, either in Civil or Criminal Cases. The King of Xolo for the Administration of Justice has a Governor, whom they call Zarabandal, which is the Supreme Honour at Court. The great Ones oppress the Poor, because the King is not absolute enough. There are degrees of Nobility; as of Tuam, that is, Lord; Otaracayas, Rich Man; and Lords of Vassals. In Mindanao the

Government of Xolo.

Princes of the Blood-Royal are call'd Caciles.

The Subanos of the Mountains of Xolo and Mindanao have a more barbarous Government than the rest. They do not go to War one Nation against another, or one Village against another; but, like Enemies of humane kind, they all endeavour to destroy one another; for they know no other Power or Authority but what is got by Force and Violence. They have no other way to Try their Causes, but the Power of the Party griev'd to take Revenge, which yet in the most heinous Cases is mollify'd with Gifts. For this Reason, when one of the Subanos designs to Commit a Murder safely, he first heaps up a Sum of Money to pay for it; that he may afterwards be admitted to the number of brave Men, and as such wear the Red Turbant. More Cruelty is us'd among the Caragas, where to have the privilege of wearing a Turbant of several Colours, call'd Baxache, they must kill seven, as has been hinted before, and therefore for this inhuman Vanity, they do not spare even their Friends, whenever they catch them Sleeping or Unprovided.

Funerals.

At the Funerals of their Dead they are very Religious and Bountiful considering their Poverty, for they spend all they have, Cloathing the dead Body in new Garments, and laying rich Tissue over them. About the Grave they plant Palm-Trees and Flowers; and if the Person deceas'd was a Prince or King, they burn Perfumes, and cover the Tomb with a Pavillion, placing four white Banners on the sides. Formerly they slew others to bear the dead Man company, and cast all the best Things they had into the Sea, particularly the Lutaos. To put themselves in mind of Death, they make their Coffin whilst Living, and always keep it in sight in their Houses. A Custom observ'd by the Chinezes, and which ought to be imitated by Christians.

The Women are Chast and Modest, a Virtue much forwarded by their Deformity. Their Marriages are celebrated with much State; that is, Treating the Company a whole Fortnight, or rather making them Drink, wherein consists all the Satisfaction. The Bride is generally carry'd in State, in a Palanquine or Chair on Mens Shoulders; the Kindred and Friends attending her with their Swords and Bucklers, and Musick. The Bridgroom comes to meet her with his 1697.

Marriages

Gemelli.
his Company; and when they have accepted of one another, the Bride remains Clad in White, and the Husband changes his Garments into Red. When they come to the House, they all make Merry with Modesty and Plenty.

Boats.
The Boats of these Islanders are few'd together with Canes split, and on the sides have Fences made of Cane, that they may not overfet.

Weapons.
Their Weapon in the Town is a Dagger with a flaming Blade. The great Men have Ivory, or Gold Hilts. In their Wars by Land they use a Lance, and round Buckler; whereas in all the other Islands it is long and narrow, to cover all the Body. Upon Sea, besides the Weapons already mention'd, they use Bagacayes. These are small Canes, about the thickness of a Finger, hardned, and made sharp, which darted strike through a Board.

The Mahometans, whose Original is from Formosa, brought thence the use of the Trunk, through which they shoot little poison'd Arrows, with the help of a little Paper; which if they make but a slight Wound are Mortal; unless the Antidote be presently apply'd, and particularly human Dung, found by Experience to be a sure Preservative.

The People of Xolo, call'd Xembanos are Resolute, and wear white Armour. The Mindanaos besides the Lance, Dagger, and Buckler, carry a heavy cutting Scimitar, like the Inhabitants of Ternate.

About the Lake of Malanao, there are several Villages of Moors, and Gentils, govern'd by a petty King independent of him of Mindanao, who could never Subdue them. Their Food is Rice, and some Roots; their poor Garments of Hemp, dy'd Blew. The Commonalty are Heathens; the better sort Mahometans, and have no Communication with the others. This Lake is Triangular, seated in a pleasant Place, between the Coast that looks towards Bohol, ten Leagues distant, and that of Mindanao, an hundred Leagues distant by Sea, and fifteen at most by Land. It has a Point of Land running out four Leagues Eastward, and another three Leagues Southward, both well Peopled.

C H A P. VII.

Of the Molucco Islands, and others in that Archipelago.

THE Molucco Islands lying within the Line of the Spanish Conquests, and having been formerly under the Governor of Manila (whose Jurisdiction we have here propos'd to speak) whilst the Crown of Portugal was united to that of Castile; it will be proper to give some Account of them.

Moloc is a Malay Word, deriv'd from the Hebrew, Malach, signifying the Head of a great Thing; and the Molucco Islands were ever the chief of all the Archipelago. They are seated under the Line, 300 Leagues East of Malaca, and as much South-West of Manila. There are five in Number, and lie in such Order for 25 Leagues North and South, along the Country call'd Be-rochina del Moro, that they are always in sight one of the other. The first and chief of them is on the North side, and call'd Terranate, or Ternate, six Leagues and a half in compass. Som place it in half a Degree of North Latitude, others in but twenty Minutes. In it is a burning Mountain, whose largest Mouth on the top is a Stones throw over; the other two are less, one on the East side towards the Malay Sea; the other on the North-West over Tacome; about them all three there is much Sulphur gather'd. The greatest quantity of Fire, Smoke, and Ashes usually gushes out in April and September. Yet in 1648, or the 15th of June it did a vast deal of Mischief, for three Days without Intermission; casting out besides Flames, Smoke and Ashes, burning Stones for a great distance, which burnt all that came in their way; so that they reduced a Village of Moors call'd de la Sula to Ashes. All the while this lasted the Island was continually in Motion, a dreadful Noise being heard in the Subterraneous Caverns, like the Hammering in a Forge, and now and then like firing of Guns.

The Country is all Mountainous, and almost inaccessible by reason of its tall thick Trees, with abundance of Indian Canes, and Roots almost wove together. The Climate is Hot and Dry. There are no Rivers, nor Springs, but only one Lake; and yet the plentiful Rains make it extraordinary Fruitful, and always Green. On the Hills the Winds Burning Mountain.

Ternate.

are Cold ; and in the bottoms the Heat considering the Latitude, Moderate. The Provisions are slender, and not nourishing.

Habit.

The South-West Wind blows here without its natural Moistness ; but on the contrary passing over the burning Mountain of Machica, and over Montiel, and Tidore at such time as the Clove is in Blossom, and the Nutmeg ripening ; it is rather Hot and Dry ; so that it causes Distempers, especially that they call Berber, a dangerous and incurable Disease. The People of Ternate are of the same Colour, as the Malayes, that is, a little darker than those of the Philippine Islands, handsome Visag'd, and the Men better shap'd than the Women. The greatest Pride of both Sexes is in decking their Hair, which they anoint with Oil of Ajonjoli, a certain Herb growing in the Indies, and in Spain, which has a very small insipid Seed, whereof they make Comfits in Spain, and put to other Uses. The Men wear it down to their Shoulders ; the Women, as long as they can. As for their Apparel the Men wear a Doublet of several Colours, a sort of Breeches down to the Knee, and a Girdle ; all, even the best among them being bare Footed, and bare Legg'd. The Women wrap a piece of Cotton Cloth about their Waste hanging down to their Knees ; over which they have another of better Value which serves for an upper Coat. The Doublet is of the same sort as the Mens, but upon it they have a rich piece of Silk and Cotton Cloth, like a Mantle. They live Miserably, like all the other Mahometans, upon Bread of Sagu, or else Maiz, that is, Indian Wheat, and Camotes ; and yet they Live to an hundred Years of Age without being Sickly. As to their Behaviour they are little troubled with Religion, and less with Honesty. The Men are inclin'd to Arms, the Women to Sloath. Their Language is generally that of the Malayes ; their Weapons those of Mindanao. The chief, and almost only Product of the Island, before the Spaniards came into it was Cloves, and Nutmegs ; but afterwards the Islanders in Hatred to the Spaniards, went about destroying all the Trees. At present there is but little Maiz, or Indian Wheat, or other Grain, because of the War, whereas otherwise the Soil might produce abundance. The Sea abounds in all sorts of Fish ; the Mountains in wild Beasts, Civet Cats, and other Creatures, as also an infinite multitude of Snakes, of a prodigious Bigness, whose Gall is a Medicine against Fevers.

Among the other kinds of Parrots, there is one Tame and Tractable enough, call'd Cacasnas, all White, Talks Little, and makes much Noise. There are Herbs of singular Virtue, all well known by the Natives, who make use of them in several Diseases.

On the East side of the Island towards the Mountain, a Lake stretches it self out for about half a League, its Water good and sweet, and has no bottom in the middle. Being near the Sea it Flows and Ebbs, breeds no sort of Fish, and yet there are sometimes Crocodils seen in it. The Moors had thoughts of cutting a Communication between the Lake and the Sea to make a good Harbour, but never durst put their Hands to so great an Undertaking.

Two Leagues from Ternate is the Island of Tidore, which Sailors place in fifteen Minutes of North Latitude. It is more Healthy than Ternate, as well by reason of the Winds, as because the Soil is more Fruitful ; which is in some Measure the better, for not having been so much wasted with War as Ternate. It is somewhat bigger in Compass, that is, seven Leagues, and is four in Length. On the South side it has a burning Mountain steeper than that of Ternate, from the sides whereof there flow several hot sulphureous Waters, good for many Distempers. The People are Warlike, and can put to Sea twenty, or thirty great Vessels with 6, or 7000 Men. The King resides at Tidore, or Gamolamo, which signifies great Village, a Place strongly Situated. The little Island of Pulicaballo is half a League distant from Tidore, and is two Leagues in compass.

The principal Product of Tidore, and natural to it is Clove, as at Ternate ; but at present the Natives do not Improve it, because the Trade is decay'd, and the King takes it from them by way of Tribute. After they have gather'd in all the Clove, follows the Nutmeg, of which there is great Plenty. The Moors have apply'd themselves to Sowing of Maiz, or Indian Wheat, and Rice ; but their chief Sustenance is Sagu. They have three peculiar Trees ; one of them they call Atiloché, that is, moist Wood, because the Body, Branches, and Leaves are always dropping Water, of a greenish Colour, good to Drink. The second is Apilaga, or good Tree, from whose Bark cut like a Spout there runs so

Giemelli. so much Water, that it supplies the want of Brooks and Springs. The third is of a pernicious Quality, for the Wind that passes between its Leaves scorches what it meets, as does its Shade. None of these Trees bears any Fruit, but their Leaves are always Green.

Muti. Muti, or Timor, the third of the five Islands of Ternate lies directly under the Line, and is a League from Pulicabello. The Land is high and desert because Unhealthy, but produces Clove.

Machien. The fourth Island is call'd Machien, and has a burning Mountain of the same shape as that at Ternate. It yields the Dutch much Clove, they having four Forts and a Factory there.

Bachian. Bachian, sixteen Leagues distant from Machien, is the fifth and greatest Island, being twelve Leagues in compass. A burning Mountain in it, is of the same Nature as that in Tidore. It abounds in Beasts and Fowl; Fruit of all sorts; Tobacco; and Sagu for common Food. It is govern'd by a King of its own, who pays Tribute, and makes the Suba, that is, a sort of Homage to the King of Ternate.

Meao. Besides these, and three other Islands properly comprehended under the name of Moluccos, there are four more about eighty Leagues North of Ternate. The nearest is that of Meao, five Leagues in compass, and bearing nothing but only a little Clove. It has no Port, and the Inhabitants live upon Fishing.

Tafures. Tafures is six Leagues South of Meao, and scarce three Leagues in compass. But it is very Fruitful, abounding in Coco-Trees, Sagu, and other sorts of Fruit; and has a great Lake. At present it has no Inhabitants, for they all went over to Meao, to avoid the Hardships put upon them by the Spaniards in 1631.

Tagolanda. Sixteen Leagues to the Northward is Tagolanda, a large Island being 6 Leagues in compass. It has a burning Mountain, which does not obstruct its abounding in Coco-Trees, Sagu, and Fruit, and producing some Rice and Clove. There are two good Ports in it, and a deep River on the South side, with two small Islands, convenient for Fishing, with burning Mountains in both. It is govern'd by a King of its own, whose Power extends no further than to be able to put to Sea eight, or ten Caracoas for War, with Fire-Arms and other Weapons. Their Language differs from the Malay.

The Kingdom of Siao lies 4 Leagues North of Tagolanda, and 30 of Ternate.

It is an Island with a burning Mountain, from whose Top issue abundance of burning Stones; and on the other side a plentiful Spring of Water. The compass of the Island is about 4, or 5 Leagues, the Inhabitants Heathens. The King was a Catholick when the Spaniards possess'd the Moluccos, and ever very faithful to them, and therefore always at War with him of Tagolanda, who was a Mahometan. This was the antientest Christian Place in the Archipelago, Christianity having been planted from the time that St. Francis Xavierius went over thither. The Kingdom is poor and small, containing but 3000 Souls. It produces many Cocos, and but little Rice, Sagu, Plantans, Camottas, and Popayas, In the Places inhabited there are Hens, and several sorts of Creatures on the Mountains.

Twelve Miles North of this Kingdom is the burning Mountain and Kingdom of Colonga, lying East and West; and having but 6, or 7 Leagues in compass. From the burning Mountain flow many Springs of warm Water, which moisten the Island, and make it produce several sorts of Fruit. The Inhabitants are about 5, or 6000 using Fire-Arms and other Weapons. On the North side of it is a safe Harbour.

Cauripa is a small Kingdom 40 Leagues from Colonga. On the South side it looks upon the great Island of Matcos, and Kingdom of Macassar. On the North side it has a deep River and good Harbour. The King, and 4, or 5000 Subjects he has are Heathens. The Climate is Temperate, and the Soil produces such abundance of Sagu, that it sometimes supplies Ternate; and besides that all the common Fruit of India, Cocos, Grain, and several sorts of Beasts; among which one call'd Caraboas, or Sibolas. Nor do the Sea and Rivers abound less in Fish. The People are indefatigable and warlike. Men and Women are Clad like those of Tidore. They set out to the Number of fifteen Caracoas, or great Barques.

The Kingdom of Bulan is 7 Leagues West of Cauripa, on the Land of Macassar. It has more Plenty of Rice than Cauripa, and produces the same Fruit. There are several Rivers that lead up to Villages, inhabited by about 3000 Souls. This King sets out 10 Caracoas, and his Men use Fire Arms, and other Weapons, being supply'd with Salt-peter from the Village of Mogonda, and with Iron from the Mines. The Province of Manados is twelve Leagues, East of Bulan.

Donelli.
1697.

Bulan, and 40 from Ternate. It abounds in Fruit, Rice, and Grain; and as for Beasts, in Sibolos, Buffalos, and Swine. The Inhabitants are at least 40000, among whom the greatest Wealth is, Iron, Cotton and Bras. They go naked, covering their Privities with Clouts, and the Women wear a sort of Stuff, made of Cane, from the Waste to the Knees. These are the whitest and best shap'd of any we have hitherto spoke of. These People use no fire Arms, and yet are very Cruel, for they Persecute one another, without sparing the Lives of those that are overcome, for their greatest Glory consists in hanging up the Skulls of those they kill, at their Doors. They are not so Superstitious as the other Heathens, but great observers of the Singing of Birds. In other respects they are Affable, and lovers of Trade.

All the Islands, or Kingdoms here mention'd, either are comprehended in the Molucco Archipelago, where formerly the Arms of Spain bore Sway; or were Protected by them; or at least gave a helping Hand to Curb the Enemies of the Confederates, and keep the Dutch in Awe; and therefore I have made mention of them alone, tho' there be many more, as the Kingdom of Macassar, in the great Island of Celebes, and others Subject and Tributary to the same King.

Land of Papuas.

Beyond the Island of Gilolo, is the Land of Papuas, the Queen of which Place becoming a Christian, was a long time maintain'd out of the King's Revenue at Manila; because she leaving her Idolatrous Husband, and marrying the Christian King of Tidore, came to Manila to demand Succours. They will have this Country to be part of New Guinea, for Papuas signifies Blacks, whence New Guinea had its Name, which as yet is not known whether it be an Island or Continent, tho' some Maps set it down as an Island. So also between Amboina and Ternate, are the Isles of Banda, being as many as the Moluccos, and as valuable for their Nutmeg, and other Spices, as those are for their Clove. All five of them take the name of the biggest, and lie in four Degrees, and thirty Minutes of South Latitude, and three Leagues from Amboina. Here grows all the Nutmeg and Mace that furnishes the World, for tho' they grow in other Places, yet they are not so good.

Banda.

Banda, as it is the biggest, so it is also the most delightful and plentifullest of all Things. Its shape is like a Horseshoe, the two Points whereof running out North and South are three Leagues distant. In the Bay between them is the chief Village frequented by many Ships, and all the Coasts about are cover'd with abundance of Nutmeg-Trees; whose Blossoms spread such a Fragrancy, as if Nature had employ'd all her Art to make them wonderful Sweet. These Trees by degrees quit the Green, so natural to all Vegetables, and put on a Blew, mix'd with Black, Red, and Gold Colour like the Rainbow; tho' not so regularly distributed. Beyond this delightful Plain, there rises a little Mountain in the middle of the Island, from which flow some Brooks that Water the Country; and then follows another Plain, cover'd with the same Trees, growing naturally out of the Earth. The Nutmeg-Tree is like the Pear-Tree in height and Branches; but the Leaves are more like a Walnut, as is the Fruit, cover'd with such a Rind, the soft inside whereof call'd Mace, is as Aromatick as the other. The Natives of Banda Extract a precious Oil to Cure cold Distempers. Of these Nuts they chuse the Freshest, Weightiest, Largest, and full of Moisture, without any Hole; they are good to Correct a stinking Breath, clear the Sight, comfort the Stomach, and several other Diseases. The Trees they grow on are in Common, and when the Nuts are gather'd, which is in August, they are divided among the Inhabitants of the Villages.

The People are Strong, but ill Favour'd, Melancholy, and wear long Hair. They are all Mahometans; the Men given to Trade, the Women to Tillage. They have no King or Lord, but Obey the Eldest, and these seldom agreeing in Opinion, they often are at Variance and Quarrel; not to be Reconcil'd but by the Nations, that Resort to their Ports to Trade for Nutmeg and Mace. When these Islands were discover'd by the Portugueses, the People of Malaca and Java Traded to them.

The Portugueses and Dutch count the Island of Amboina, eight Leagues North of Banda, one of the chiefest. It lies in four Degrees, of South Latitude, and is seventeen Leagues in Compass. This alone produces more Clove than all the five Moluccos; but it is not so good. It also abounds in Oranges, Lemmons, Citrons, Cocos, Sugar-Canes, and the like. There are several sorts of Beasts, and Birds, and among the rest Parrots of

Amboina.

seve-

Gemelli. several Colours, and one with red Feathers, most Beautiful to behold. The Inhabitants are more Docible than those of the Moluccos and Banda. They wear the same sort of Apparel, and live on the Trade of Spice. Their Hardiness both by Sea and Land makes them much valu'd for Soldiers or Sailors. Besides Fire-Arms, they use Scimitars, and Javelins, which they Dart very Dexterously. The Land is Mountainous and well Peopled, abounding in Rice, Palm-Trees, to make Wine, and very excellent Fruit. It was once in the Possession of the Dutch; but the Inhabitants Revolted with the Assistance of the King of Macassar.

Having so often made mention of the Clove, it will be proper to say something of it. Because of its being shap'd like a Nail, the Spaniards gave it the name of Clavo. Its Blossom is like that of Mirtle, but the Leaves extraordinary small, coming out between those four little Teeth, which when dry remain like a Star, and Compose the Head of the Clove. Abundance of them grow in a Cluster, like the Mirtle, or Elder, and yield the most fragrant Scent. The Tree is like the Laurel, but thicker of Leaves, and they thinner, and narrower. Sometimes they are of several Colours; but the Cloves do not come out, or grow Ripe all at once. The backwardest are White, then Green, and when near Ripe grow Red; which Variety is a very pleasant Sight to Strangers. They are gather'd in February and September, and do not grow every Year, but every two, and sometimes three; but then the Harvest is very Plentiful, as if Nature would make amends for the Delay. They are gather'd like the Olives, by shaking the Boughs, after cleaning the Ground about them. Then they are spread out in the Sun, and in three Days are dry enough, between Black and Ash Colour. Fresh Water Rots, and the Salt Preserves them. Those that remain on the Trees, and are call'd Mother-Cloves, within a Year grow bigger and stronger, and are therefore more valu'd in Java. These falling to the Ground produce other Trees, without any help of Art; and they after 8 Years bear, and last sometime to an hundred. It is commonly said that only the Molucco Islands produce Clove, because of the infinite Quantity grows there, and so good that it exceeds the Clove of the other Islands, but that of Amboina is larger, and little inferior to it. The Virtue of Clove is wonderful against all Distempers proceeding from Cold and Dampness. When Green they Extract from it a Water of a most delicious Smell, and very good for the Palpitation of the Heart.

C H A P. VIII.

How the Philippine-Islands were discover'd.

Magellan. Providence made the Choice for the discovery of these Islands of Ferdinand Magallaens, a Portuguese, knowing in the Affairs of this Archipelago, by the Relations he had from his Friend Francis Serrano, who was the first Discoverer of them round by the East. He was at Malaca in the Year 1511, when Alonso de Albuquerque compleated the Conquest of it; after which thinking he could better make his Fortune in Europe, he return'd to Portugal.

Moluccos discover'd. In December, that same Year, Francis Serrano, and Anthony d'Abren Sail'd from Malaca towards these Islands, and the second of them hapned to discover the Isles of Banda, where the Nutmeg grows; and the other the Moluccos valuable for the Clove. Serrano staid there, at the Request of Boleyse, King of Ternate; but he sent Peter Fernandez to give the King of Portugal and his Friend Magellan an Account of the Nature and Importance of these Islands.

Magellan, as we call him in English, Magellan hearing this News, and not being able in Spain to move his own King Emanuel to give Ear to him; went over to the Court of the Emperor Charles V. in Spain, whom he made so sensible of the Consequence of the Undertaking, and that the Conquest belong'd to the Western part, assign'd the Crown of Castile; and not to the Eastern appertaining to Portugal; and the Emperor, seeing the Account written by Serrano and his Map, furnish'd Magellan with five Vessels well Equip'd, for him to try to find a way Westward.

He Sail'd on the 10th of August, 1519, from the Port of St. Lucar, well furnish'd with all Necessaries for so long a Voyage, as the finding a Passage from the North into the South Sea. Having run along the Coast of Brazil, and cut the Line; in 50 degrees of South Latitude he entred the River of S. Julian, and

Discovers
the Streight.

And Philippine-I-lands.

and in 52 and some Minutes found the Streight of his own Name. He enter'd on the 21st of October, and about the end of November came out into the South Sea, without meeting with any Storm in a Run of 4000 Leagues. Having again cut the Line and being in 15 degrees of North Latitude he discover'd two Islands, which he call'd Los Velas; in 12 degrees those known by the Name of Islas de los Ladrones, or the Islands of Thieves, and a few Days after the Island of Ibabao, of the Islands here describ'd. The first he met with was Humunun a little desert Island, near Cape Guiguan, now call'd La Encantada; where the first Indians that went to meet him were those of Silohan, now under the Government of Guiguan. Magellan call'd this Island de Buenas Senales, or of good Tokens, and all the Archipelago of S. Lazarus, because he Landed on Saturday before Passion-Sunday, in Spain call'd Sunday of S. Lazarus, in the Year of 1521.

On Whitsunday the first Mass was said on the Land of Butuan, a Cross erected, and Possession taken in the Name of the most invincible Charles the 5th. The Lord of Dimassava Kinsman to the King of Butuan and to him of Cebu, was assisting to Magellan, for he brought the Ships into that Port on the 7th of April. Before Mass was said on Whitsunday, that Lord and the King of Cebu were Baptiz'd, and by their means many Men of Note and others to the number of 500; and after Dinner the Queen with 300 more. The next Day the Royal Standard being set up with great Solemnity, the King and all his People took an Oath of Fidelity after the Indian Manner, whereof speedy Notice was sent back to Spain.

On Friday the 26th of April, Magellan and some of his Men were kill'd in the first Encounter, with the chief Men of the Island of Matan, opposite to Cebu. On the first of May, the treacherous King of Cebu at a bloody Entertainment, cut off the Heads of 24 of the principal Men belonging to the Ships, and among them Duarte Barbosa Kinsman and Successor to Magellan, all the Mischief being contriv'd by a Black, who was Slave to Magellan and had serv'd as Interpreter, 'in Revenge for some Injury done him by Barbosa. Upon the Receipt of this News, John Carvallo put out of the Port of Cebu with his Ships and Men steering East South East. Being come to the Point of Bohol and Panglao he lay by; and then discovering the Island de-los-Negros, directed his Course to Quipit on the Coast of Mindanao. Thence he sail'd to Borneo, where he took Molucco Pilots, and returning by the way of Cagayanas, Xolo, Taguina, Mindanao, Sarragan and Sanguil; on the 7th of November discover'd the Moluccos, and the 8th Anchor'd in Tidore. The King receiv'd him courteously, allowing him to Trade, and set up a Factory to buy Clove and other Spice; which was soon done. Whilst they were getting all things ready, the Ship call'd the Trinity, which had attempted to sail directly back to Panama, came back and deliver'd it self up to the Portugueses at Ternate. The Ship Victory took the same way home the Portugueses us'd, and having seen Amboina and the Isles of Banda, and stay'd some time at Solor and Timor, sail'd along the out side of Sumatra, keeping off from the Coast of India, to avoid falling into the Hands of the Portugueses, till it turn'd the Cape of Good Hope, and arriv'd at the Port of S. Lucar in Spain on the 7th of September 1522, three Years and some Days after it set out, with only 18 Men out of 59 that sail'd from the Moluccos, Sebastian de Cano being Captain. The Account of the New and wonderful Voyage of the Ship Victory being known throughout Spain, with the Information concerning the rich Trade of Spice. D. F. Garcia Jofre de Loaysa of the Order of S. John of Alcala, was sent thither with a Squadron of seven Ships, and Sebastian del Cano for his Successor. These sailing from Corunna, came to an Anchor in the new Streight of Magellan in January 1526, and in May following got out into the South Sea, after losing one Ship in that narrow Passage. In June a violent Storm parted the Ships, and sunk most of them. Aboard the Admiral which on the last Day of July was in four Degrees of South Latitude, the Commander in chief Loaysa dy'd, and four Days after him his Successor Sebastian del Cano and many more. On the 2<sup>d</sup> of October those that remain'd Landed in Mindanao, and not being able to get over to Cebu, directed their Course for the Molucco Islands; where they were well receiv'd by the King of Tidore on the last Day of December 1526. But as well he, as the King of Gilolo were so threatened by the Portugueses for having receiv'd the Spaniards belonging to Magellan's Squadron, that they seiz'd the four Factors left there by the Ship Trinity, and those that return'd now, and secur'd all the Goods: whence en-

The first Ship that sail'd round the World.

suad

 sued a War between the Spaniards and Portugueses that lasted till 1527. In the mean while the Marquis del Valle fitted out three Ships in New Spain, under the Command of his Kinsman Alvaro de Saavedra, who sailing on the Eve of all Saints in the Year 1527, on the Day of the Epiphany in 1528, being in the Latitude of eleven Degrees, discover'd some of the Islands de los Ladrones, and thence sail'd to Mindanao in eight Degrees of Latitude. He there recover'd some Christians, belonging to one of Loaysa's Ships which was cast away at Sanguil, and then going on to the Moluccos fought the Portugueses. Then coming to Tidore he there found 12 Spaniards, who had fortify'd themselves under the Command of Ferdinand de la Torre. Having repair'd his Ship, about the end of May he set out again for New Spain; and passing by some of the Islands of Ladrones in the Latitude of 14 Degrees, was drove back first to Mindanao and then to the Moluccos, whence he set out. Whilst it was here disputed by dint of Sword, at the expence of the Subject's Blood, who had the best Title to the Islands; the matter was controverted in Spain and Portugal with the Pen, Astro-labe, Sea Carts, and other Geographical Instruments. Judgment being at last given for Portugal, the few Spaniards that remain'd in the Moluccos, left them upon Condition they should be convey'd from India into Spain.

Ruiz-Lopez-de-Villalobos by Order of the Viceroy of Mexico, sail'd from the Port of the Nativity on the Day of all Saints, in the Year 1542. with 5 Ships to Conquer the Philippine-Islands, and Instructions not to Attempt any Thing against the Moluccos, or other Conquests of Portugal. After two Months sail in the Latitude of ten Degrees he discover'd the Island call'd de-los-Corales, and then others of the number of those call'd de-los-Ladrones. Then the Pilots varying, he came not upon the Islands in eleven Degrees of Latitude, but in ten; and the Winds starting up against him, in February he came to an Anchor in the Bay of Caraga. Here he lost many of his Men with Sicknefs and Famine, and all his Ships but the Admiral perish'd in Storms. Then forced by Necessity, as having but ten Days Provision, he steer'd his Course for the Moluccos to supply his wants; and Arriv'd at Tidore on the 24th of April 1544. The Portugueses oppos'd and would not allow him to take any Provisions or other Necessaries, so that being there now in February 1545. without doing any thing, he came to Composition with the Portugueses to give him a Ship to return to Spain. But whilst this Treaty was in Hand he dy'd for Grief at Amboina, and all the Religious Men of the Order of St. Augustin, return'd afterwards to Lisbon in 1549. by the way of Malaca, Cochin and Goa.

Fleet to Conquer
the Philippine.

CHAP. IX.

The Conquest of the Philippine-Islands.

THE ill Success of the Attempts before-mention'd made the Conquest of the Philippine-Islands be laid aside for ten Years, till at the perswasion of F. Andrew de Urdaneta, of the Order of S. Augustin, King Philip the 2d. order'd the Viceroy of Mexico, to send thither four Ships and a Frigot with 400 Men under the Command of Michael-Lopez-de-Legaspi, a Native of Mexico. F. Andrew would go with him and took four more of his Order.

In January 1565, this Fleet came to an Anchor among the Islands de-los-Ladrones; on the 13th of February arriv'd at the Island of Leyte; and running successfully through the Streight came to an Anchor in the Port of Zebu (by the Direction of a Moor of Borneo, who was acquainted with those Islands, taken near Panaon) on the 27th of April being Whitsunday, and dedicated to S. Vitalis the Martyr, who was therefore chosen Patron of the City.

The Fleet entred Zebu in peaceable manner, but perceiving that Tupas, who Govern'd there put off the Spaniards with good Words, they Plunder'd the Place. The third Day, among the Plunder was found the Image of the Infant Jesus before-mention'd, and therefore the first Church was by the Fathers of S. Augustin Founded under the Invocation of the Name of Jesus.

On the first of June, Philip de-Salzedo Captain of the Admiral Ship, sail'd in it with F. Andrew de-Urdaneta to discover the way back to New Spain. He Arriv'd thither on the 3d of October, but found that D. Alonso de-Arellana was come thi-

Zebu Con-
quer'd.

ther with his Vessel two Months before to gain the Honour of being the first Discoverer. However all is due to F. Gemelli. Andrew, for he took a particular Account of the Voyage, and made Charts proper for it.

Tupas and his People submitted themselves to the King of Spain, promising to pay Tribute; but whilst Legaspi was building the City Zebu, the Portugueses came with several Pretences to disturb him. He sending Advice to the Viceroy of Mexico, had a supply of 200 Men sent him in the Year 1567, under the Command of John de-Salzedo and Philip de-Salzedo his Nephews; so that Gonzalo Pereyra, coming afterwards with the Portugueses Fleet to expel the Spaniards, was forced to return with Disgrace.

Manila reduced.

In 1570 came the first Letters from Court to Legaspi, approving of all that had been done in the Islands, and Commanding him to proceed in the Conquest, constituting him Adelantado, or Lord Lieutenant of the same. In 1571 the Spanish Arms reach'd Manila, and reduced it without any expence of Blood. On the 24th of June being the Feast of St. John Baptist, the Foundation of the City was solemnly lay'd, and Trade settled with China, so that the first Champions came thence to Traffick in May 1572. The Governor Legaspi dy'd in August that same Year; and Guido de Labazarris entering upon the Government continu'd the Conquest of the Island, giving Souldiers that had serv'd well several Encomiendas or Parcels of Indians to be their Tenants, which was afterwards confirm'd by the King. In November 1574, Limahon a Chinese Pyrate, assaulted Manila with a Fleet of 70 Barques, but was bravely Repuls'd.

In August 1575 Doctor Francis de Sande, Alcade of the Court of Mexico was sent Governour. He it was that undertook the famous Expedition against the King of Borneo, in which that King was overthrown, and his Court Plunder'd; the Islands of Mindanao and Xolo oblig'd to pay Tribute; and he and other Governors afterwards continu'd the Conquest. In 1597, The Marques Stephen Rodriguez de Figueroa undertook the Conquest of Mindanao upon his own Coast, by the King's Leave. He also made War on the side of Tampuan against the Kings of Malana, Siligan and Buayen, and against Buhisan, Father to Corali King of Mindanao. But he dy'd in the Enterprize at the Hands of Obal, Uncle to the King of Mongay; and Colonel D. John de Ronquillo was sent by the Governor of Manila to prosecute it.

The Fathers of the Society of Jesus entered the Isle of Mindanao on the 6th of February 1624, to take charge of the new Christians; the Governor D. Francis Tello putting them in Possession of the Parishes.

The General John Chaves carry'd on the Conquests with a good Force, compos'd partly of Indians. On the 6th of April 1635 he landed at Samboangan, Fortify'd himself, putting all about to Fire and Sword, and at last erected a Fort there. Sultan King of Mindanao sued for a Peace, which was Concluded on the 24th of June 1645, by Captain Francis Arizzena-y-Banez Governor of the Fort of Samboangan, by Commission from D. James Faxardo Governor of Manila. The principal Articles were, That the aforesaid King Sultan and his Subjects, should be Friends to the King of Spain, and the King of Spain theirs. That if for the future either side was Aggriev'd, it should acquaint the Court to require Satisfaction, and the Peace should not be suppos'd to be broken till after six Months. That the Subjects of both sides might go and come freely without Let or Molestation, with Leave of their King and the Governor of Manila. And other Articles which may be seen in Robles's History of Mindanao, lib. 7.

This King of Mindanao could bring into the Field 30000 Men with Fire Arms, sold him by the Dutch, Bows and Arrows, and other Weapons. His Residence was in an open Place fortify'd only with Palisadoes, and a few Pieces of Cannon.

In 1662 the Governor of Manila fearing the Threats of a Chinese Pyrate, of whom we spoke in the 4th Volume; the better to secure Manila, resign'd Samboangan to the King of Mindanao, Conditionally that he should restore it, when demanded by the Spaniards. The Pyrate who was also petty King of Formosa, dy'd soon after in a Rage, and so deliver'd Manila from that Fear.

Notwithstanding the Garrison of Samboangan was withdrawn, the Province of Caragas remain'd under the Dominion of the Spaniards, Govern'd by an Alcade Mayor, placed there by the Governor of Manila with a good Garrison of Spaniards. Besides there is the Fort of Illigan, belonging to the Province of Dapitan; kept by a Spanish Captain and Corregidor, or civil Magistrate. The People of Dapitan pay Tribute, and are subject

Gemelli.
1697.

ject to Spain, with an inviolable Fidelity ever since the Spaniards first set Foot there. 'Tis true that then they submitted out of Fear; for seeing them with their Swords by their sides, eat Bisket and smoke Tabacco; they went and told their petty King, that those were a People with Tails, who eat Stones and cast Smoke out at their Mouths. This Account astonish'd the petty King; but being at War with the King of Mindanao, he join'd in Amity with the Spaniards, and guided them to Zebu.

Iligan and Dapitan are Parishes and Missions of the Fathers of the Society; and in Temporals depend on the Alcade Mayor of Zebu, but a few Leagues distant.

Whilst I was at Manila, F. Maurice Perera a Catalonian, set out with a Companion for the Mission of Samboangan, and soon after I heard they had been all well receiv'd by the King of Mindanao, and sent to the Place of their Mission, possess'd by the Prince his Son. There is a good Correspondence between this King and the Governor of Manila, in so much, that nine Years ago the King sent an Ambassador to the Governor to acquaint him, that he had concluded a Peace with another King his Neighbour. I had the Curiosity to enquire of the Governor, who was D. Fausto Cruzat y Goryora, how he had receiv'd that Embassy. He told me in the first Place, that the Ambassador was the King's Brother; and clad after the Moorish Fashion, bare Footed and bare Legg'd. That he had him led through the Spanish Foot drawn up, and receiv'd him under a Canopey. That neither the Ambassador nor any of his Retinue, would lodge in the Palace, but all of them retir'd at Night to their Vessels. The Present was only a few Quilts of no great Value.

Xolo Con-
quer'd.

D. Sebastian Hurtado de Corcuera, Governor and Captain General of Manila, subdu'd the Island and Kingdom of Xolo, going thither in 1638 with 80 Barques, and 600 Spanish Souldiers, besides many Indians, so obliging the Indians to submit themselves. The Peace of Xolo open'd the way to the Christian Religion, and the Fathers of the Society; but it was soon broke through the Indiscretion of Captain Gaspar de Moroles. It was restor'd again on the 4th of April 1646. upon Condition the King of Xolo should pay a Yearly Tribute of three Xoongas, or Barques six Yards long, loaded with Rice. The same Captain D. Francis de Arienza manag'd this Treaty for Spain; and Batiocan and Arancaye Daran, Embassadors of Sultan Corabat, King of Mindanao, and Mediator, for the King of Xolo. The Dutch lay'd siege to Xolo on the 27th of June 1648, but did nothing considerable. Afterwards the King of Xolo broke the Peace, doing much Mischief with a Fleet he put to Sea; so that at present he remains absolute Master of his Kingdom, and being at Peace with Spain, his Subjects Trade in the Philippine Islands. The Governor told me that some Years before, that King sent him an Embassy, giving him an account of his Brother's Death, and his own Accession to the Crown, sending the Governor a Mourning Suit of Cloaths to wear for his Brother, and a Present of two Quilts and other Trifles.

Lost again

When the Union of the Crowns of Castile and Portugal had put the Molucco-Islands under the Spanish Dominion; the Governor of Manila perceiving there still remain'd much to Conquer; in October 1593. set out a considerable Fleet for that purpose. But as he was going in a Galley to join the Fleet already under Sail, the Sangleys that Row'd, Mutiny'd, and killed him and other Spaniards; carrying away the Galley into China. His Son D. Luis de las Marinnas succeeded him in the Government in February 1596, and Prosecuted his Father's Enterprize. After him other Governors apply'd themselves to it, and particularly in 1606 a good Fleet was sent to the Moluccos.

CHAP. X.

The Author's short Voyage to the Port of Cavite, and the Description of that City

TO return to our Journal, after a Digression perhaps not displeasing or tedious, I spent a Week in providing my self with Necessaries for my long Voyage to New Spain, and taking leave of Friends, and on Sunday the 16th putting my Equipage into a Banca Boat,
Vol IV.

I went with my Black to the Port of Cavite, where we arriv'd about Noon. These Bancas are made of the Body of a Tree, six Spans in Breadth and Longer than the Faluccas at Naples. I found not as I expected Charles Joseph of Milan, because he was gone to the Marian Islands, to carry the Souldiery the King's allowance, and the Fathers of the Society: Cemelli. This done, he was to go on to discover the Southern Islands, and being come to them to send Men ashore, to enquire into the Religion and Customs of the Inhabitants, and then to bring away some Mander, for further Information, as the Governor had given him in his Instructions in my hearing. But above all he had Orders to find that which he himself had discover'd, and call'd Carolina in 1686, when he went to relieve a Vessel run aground. It was generally thought, he would go in Vain, because from 13 Degrees to the Line the Currents are violent, insomuch that a small Vessel cannot Stem them; and the less by reason of the Winds that prevail there. Otherwise it is not to be doubted, but that in all that space to the Line, there are Islands inhabited by Savage People, and many more Northwards as far as Japan; for there are often Boats of those Parts, brought by Storms to the Island of Samar, and Coast of Palapa, as has been said elsewhere. The said Charles being absent Michael Martinez Commander of the Galeon, that was to Sail, entertain'd me in his House.

The Alt.

Monday 18th, I went to see the Castle of St. Philip, seated on that Point of Land, which makes the Bay. It was built since the Fort of Manila; is a regular Square, with four Bastions, well provided with Cannon but small, besides some Pieces over the Gate. About it they were building Cazernes for the Souldiers, Magazines and Cisterns, leaving a large Parade in the middle. Here in the year 1679, was built a Wooden House, to serve as a Prison to Dr. Ferdinand Valenzuela, with a Chappel in it, that there might be no Infringement of the Communities of the Church, and he there perform his ten Years Banishment. At first he was kept very strictly, without being allow'd to write, or to live on the first Floor, but afterwards he had so much Liberty, that he caus'd several Plays to be acted in the Castle. He spent the day in Writing, Reading, and Praying, and so made the time easier to him. The King had assign'd him an allowance of two hundred and fifty pieces of Eight a Month. In 1689, the ten Years being expir'd, he went away to New Spain, where the Count de Galva, Brother to the Duke of Pastrana, whose Page he had been, being then Governor, he was well receiv'd, and was punctually paid a 1000 pieces of Eight a Month, allow'd him by the King of Spain with a Prohibition, to go over into Spain. His misfortunes had afterwards an unhappy end, for as he was intent upon managing his Horses, he receiv'd such a kick, as was the Cause of his Death; a good instance of the turns of Fortune, with those that think they have secur'd her Favour. This Minister being brought into the Queen Mother's Service, by means of an Aunt, who was one of her Women, knew so well how to gain upon her Affections, by his faithful Services; especially twice he was sent to the Court of Vienna, on important Affairs; that from a private Gentleman, he was rais'd to the Honour of prime Minister, and a Grandee which was afterwards the cause of his Fall.

Tuesday 19th, I took a View of the City Cavite, or Cavit, as the Tagalians call it. It is seated in sight of Manila, three Leagues South of it, on a long narrow Neck of Land, on one side of which is the Sea and on the other a Bay, that makes the Port. Thus being almost enclos'd with the Sea, it has no Wall about it; but only the Castle, before mention'd, at one end, and at the other next the Land, a Wall with some Pieces of Cannon. In this Wall is the Gate to which they go over a Drawbridge, because of the Ditch, which at Flood is full of Water. The City might with a small Charge, be made an Island. The Port before mention'd, is in the Shape of a Semicircle, like that of Trapani, in the Kingdom of Sicily. It is shelter'd from the South Winds, but not from the North, and therefore large Ships, which cannot come close under the Shore, are not very safe; and in the Year 1589, two were there cast away.

As for the Buildings, and Publick places, there is no Beauty in them, the Houses being of Timber, or Cane, and very few with the first Floor of Stone. The Parish Church is of Timber, the House and Church of the Dominicans of the same. The Monastery of the Barefoot Augustinians is somewhat better, and the Church of Stone. But the House of the Jesuits, tho' began of late Years, is very good. The Constable of the Castle Governs it and the City, as Chief Justice.

Wednesday 20th, I went to see the Ribera, or Arsenal seated on the aforesaid Point of the Castle. There 2, or 300 Indians, and sometimes 600, brought by force, from the Neighbouring Provinces, work at Building Galeons, and other Ships. The King allows every one a piece

W Gmelli.
1697.
W

piece of Eight, and a Cavan of Rice a Month, which is the time they are to stay, for at the end of it, they take others to Relieve them. Some of them plain, some saw, some Nail the Timber, some make Cables, some Careen, which is done there with Oil of China, mixed with Lime, but the greatest number, fell Trees on the Mountains; and these must be many, and large, to keep out the Tempestuous Sea, they are to cross. Besides that this sort of Wood is hard, and heavy as a Stone, the Planks are made so thick, and so lin'd both within, and without, that they receive little Damage by common Balls. That Vessel which fought some Years since, with fourteen Dutch, that came to take Cavite, had 90 Balls taken out of her sides, which stuck there as if they had been in a Wall of soft Stone; and this was because being run a-ground, she was forced to fight all the while on one side, to the great astonishment of the Enemy. The Arsenal is very large, and fit to build any great Ship. In 1694 the famous Galeon St. Joseph, before mention'd to be cast away, was finish'd there, being bigger, or at least as big, as that of the Portugueses call'd, O Padre Eterno. Its Keel was 62 Cubits, (each Cubit a Span and a half) long, and proportionably broad. The loss of it ruin'd the Inhabitants of Manila, but that of the other call'd Santo Christo, complicated their Misery. This last was sixty Cubits, as before in the Keel, and had made but one Voyage to New Spain after it was built at Bagatao. Whilst I was at Manila, another Vessel was building at Bagatao, call'd St. Francis Borgia, 55 of those Cubits in length, to go to New Spain, in 1697. What Success it will have, God knows; for the Citizens of Manila, having obtain'd a Grant from the King, to load a Galeon, and send another to Convoy it, paying 74000 Pieces of Eight for each, they save paying for two, building one at the King's expence, so very large, that tho' it carries Burden enough for three, yet it requires a Storm to move it; and this mighty Mass, not being strong enough knit together, to resist the furious Tempests of that vast Ocean, it is so traverse; it is easily cast away, as appears by experience, and it is demonstrable, that midling Ships are properer for that Voyage than the great.

Suburb.

Thursday 21st. I went to see the Suburb of St. Roch, stretching without the Wall from Sea to Sea, all of it consisting of Timber Houses, among Woods of Trees. The Parish Church is very good, being built by D. Ferdinand Valenzuela, for his particular Devotion. There are more Inhabitants, Spaniards, Indians, and Sangleys, or Chineses in this Suburb, than in Cavite. Here is good Fruit of the Country, and some few Grapes, the Vines being carry'd out of Europe.

Friday 22<sup>d</sup>, the Vessel having all its Lading aboard, I embark'd. This Ship was built at Bagatao, by Dr. John Garrococa, and had made one Voyage on the Coast. Because of the loss of the fore-said Galeons, the King had bought it of him, for 30000 pieces of Eight, to carry over the Royal Revenue to America. It was 45 Cubits, of those above mention'd in length, proportionably broad and strong.

Saturday 23<sup>d</sup>, there were Prayers for our good Voyage. When we were ready to Sail, the Commander call'd the Pilots, and all other Officers to give their Opinions, whether the Vessel was fit for the Voyage of New Spain, and in a good Sailing posture. Most of them were of Opinion it was overloaded, and therefore could make little way. He therefore order'd all the Seamen's Chests to be put ashore, that all those who had two might have one left behind. The Governor being inform'd of it, sent Colonel Thomas de Andaya to lighten the Ship. Andaya came on Sunday the 24th, and caus'd all the Casks of Water to be taken out; for the burden of the Vessel being 1500 Bales, they had put aboard 2200, besides Provisions and other necessities. On Monday 25th, the Colonel caus'd abundance of Bales, and parcels of Wax to be unshipp'd, leaving only the 1500 Bales that the Ship was enter'd for. The Governor and Oydores, or Judges, according to the King's Order, are to distribute the Stowage proportionably among the Citizens; but there is little Justice done in this Point, Favour carrying all, so that the Rich have Cockets given them, for 30 or 40, and even 50 Bales, and the poorest sort only for two or three, pretending the Ship can carry no more, and this contrary to the King's Intention. Tuesday 26th, there were more Bales and Parcels of Wax unloaded, still delaying our departure, whereas the King Orders were that the Galeon Sail the 24th of June. It is the Practice in this Voyage to carry the Water in earthen Jars, to the number of 2, 3 or 4000, proportionably to the number of People, and bigness of the Galeon; and these falling short for a Voyage of 7 or 8 Months, the continu-

Gemelli. 1697. Rains supply the Defect. This time they had made two Cisterns, on the sides of the Ship, reaching from the Deck to the bottom of the Hole, as is us'd by the Portuguese, and Moors; and these had prov'd very good; yet they were broken to stow more Bales in their place, without considering that relying on the Cisterns, they had made no earthen Jars, and it was not easy to make them in so short a time. This was done because the Officers put in Bales of their own in those places, notwithstanding the King's Prohibition, they not minding that they sent so many Men to Perish with Thirst, in such a spacious Sea. In fine, on Wednesday 27th, 800 Barrels of Water were cast away, by breaking the Cisterns; and the same was done on Thursday following being the 28, the Bales belonging to the Colonels Friends and Acquaintance, being put aboard again.

A Voyage round the World by Dr. John Francis Gemelli Careri. Part IV.

Containing the most Remarkable Things he saw in the PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

B O O K III.

C H A P. I.

The most Dangerous Voyage from the Philippine Islands, to America; and first to the Place call'd, Varadero.

THE Voyage from the Philippine Islands to America, may be call'd the longest, and most dreadful of any in the World; as well because of the vast Ocean to be cross'd, being almost the one half of the Terraqueous Globe, with the Wind always a-head; as for the terrible Tempests that happen there, one upon the back of another, and for the desperate Diseases that seize People, in 7 or 8 Months, lying at Sea sometimes near the Line, sometimes cold, sometimes temperate, and sometimes hot, which is enough to Destroy a Man of Steel, much more Flesh and Blood, which at Sea had but indifferent Food.

The Ship being again Laden, and about a thousand Jars of Water, put in by the Commander and other Officers, we set Sail on Friday 29, before Noon in the presence of the Colonel. Having Sail'd 2 Leagues, we came to an Anchor within the same Bay. On pretence that he wanted Water, the Commander left behind a Dominican, who had given him 500 pieces of Eight for his Voyage; a Recolet, and a Physitian he had agreed to keep at his own Table; which accident put me into a good little Cabin for my Bed and Equipage. Saturday the last day of June, the Wind continuing at South against us, tho' we had hoisted Sail, we soon dropp'd Anchor again. The same we did Sunday the first of July, having sail'd but half a League. Monday 2d, stirr'd not; and Tuesday just weigh'd and dropp'd Anchor again, the Wind continuing contrary both Days with much Rain; so that in 5 Days, we scarce sail'd three Leagues. Some Water being spent, the Boat was sent to take in more, near the Hill Basan. Being curious, I went in the Boat with the Major Vincent Arambolo a Biscainer, and Landed on a Plain, where the Arrows of many Negrillos or Island Blacks, who were Hunting in the Woods, could reach us. The Women and Children began to bark like Dogs, to drive out the Wild Beasts before their Husbands, and Fathers, who lay ready in Ambush. So whilst the Water was taking in, we stood very fearful, as not being able with two Firelocks, to oppose hundreds of Blacks, Arm'd with Bows and Arrows, short Javelins, and long Knives, wherefore I retir'd to the Boat, without enquiring into the matter of Hunting, as Arambo-

la

697. la did. The Indian Sailors belonging to our Ship, bringing the Water from the Wood, were no way molested by the Savages, because they are Friendly among themselves. Having taken the Water, we return'd aboard after Midnight, more afraid than hurt; having stood upon our Guard, not only because of the Blacks, but also on account of the Unconquer'd Sambolos, who live upon part of that Mountain.

Wednesday 4th, we stirr'd not, the Wind being contrary. Thursday 5th, before day, drove along with the Tide, and very little Wind, but the Wind then starting up against us, came to an Anchor near Maribeles. The Governor came aboard in a little Parao, which is a Tree hollow'd, with 2 Wings on the sides, to prevent its oversetting, to bring our Captain some Fruit, and then went away. Friday 6th, the same Wind continued with those Rains, which never fail about Manila. Saturday 7th, the Wind freshning, and the Rain growing Tempestuous, we weigh'd Anchor, and brought the Ship under the shelter of the Hill of Batan. The same Southerly Winds and Rains continuing, we lay in the same place, all Sunday and Monday the 8th, and 9th. Tuesday 10th, we were tow'd a little way. Nothing troubled me but the heat; for there was none of the other Plague of Lice, so frequent in other Ships; because, as has been said, in those Parts they do not breed on Europeans. Search was then made, to discover whether there were any Jars, that instead of Water, were fill'd with Commodities, upon pretence of carrying them safer; and several were cast into the Sea full of Pepper, Purcelane, and other Goods of Value. The South Wind ceasing, and the North succeeding, we weigh'd Anchor Wednesday the 11th, before day, and drove with the Tide with little Wind, between Maribeles and the Hill of Batan; so that Sun-set we pass'd the Point of Maricondon and Limbones, and then the Rock of Fortune.

Thursday 12 about Noon, we left a Stern the desert Island of Ambil, and that next it of Luvan; between which, and the Point Calavite, in the Island of Mindoro, pass'd the so often mention'd Galeon, St. Joseph, as it was running to Perdition. Before Sun-set, we pass'd by Point St. James, in the Island of Manila, which makes the Bay of Balayán. Friday 13th, we coasted the Island of Mindoro, where it forms a long Ridge of high Mountains, and two sides of its Triangle; besides a long high Neck of Land running out towards the South. This Island is mostly Inhabited by Savage Manghians, not yet subdu'd. They are of an Olive Complexion, and wear long Hair. The Jesuit Missioners that were aboard told me, that these People had a Tail half a Span long. They do no harm to the Spaniards, and Trade with those few Tributary Indians, who live in Villages, in the Plains of the Island, under the care of the Barefoot Fathers, of the Order of St. Augustin. These Savages exchanged Gold, Wax, Parrots, and other things, for Rice, and the like. The Island abounds in Buffaloes, Deer, and great numbers of Monkeys, which run in Troops along the Shoar, seeking what the Sea affords to eat.

The Wind rising, and against us, opposite to the Island of Maricavan, a place not far from Manila, where there are Plenty of Buffaloes and Deer; it was thought fit to lie by at Night, since we could not advance; but the Weather growing Stormy about Midnight, we lost all we had gain'd, and so on Saturday 14th, found our selves opposite to Cape St. James, and got but little from it, all the Day after. The worst was, the Coast afforded no good Anchoring, and we had no shelter from the Wind. Sunday 15th, the Violence of the contrary Wind abating, we coasted along to Weather the Cape. First we left on the right Hand, a little Bay near to the Cape, then another larger, call'd, El Varadero Viejo, and then the Streight between the aforementioned Point of Mindoro, and the Island of Maricavan; near the Bay of Baguan, on the Land of Manila, where are the Garrisons of Guarnio, Balaxivo, and Batangas. Turning the Cape, we came to the Varadero. All the Ships that go to Acapulco put into this Port, to take in Wood and Water. It is a semicircular Bay, form'd by a crooked Neck of Land, running out of Mindoro, and other Islands opposite to it. The greatest Danger in this narrow Passage, is caus'd by the contrary Currents, which here meet, one of them running toward Maribeles, and the other towards the Streight of St. Bernardin. After Dinner I went ashore to Hunt notwithstanding the Island was full of Savages. I could not get into the Woods, by reason of the thickness of the Trees, not to be pierced by Dogs, much less by Men; and finding neither Deer, nor Buffaloes along the shoar, went aboard again empty handed.

Manghian
of Mindoro
70.

C H A P.

C H A P. II.

The Voyage continu'd to the P<sup>r</sup>st of Ticao.

Gentil.
1697.

HAVING taken Aboard 200 Jars of Water brought us by the King's Galliot, which expected us there for that Purpose, we set Sail on Monday 16th, with a fresh Gale at South. We left on our right Hand near the Coast of Mindoro seven little Islands named from Bacchus, Pleasant to behold for their green Trees, but not Inhabited, and on the left Cape Galvan of the Land of Manila. At Sun-set we Sail'd among the Colonels Islands near the two Islands call'd Las Ermanas, or the Sisters; and then by three others, call'd Virreyes, or Viceroys, all full of Trees, but not Peopled.

Tuesday 17th, before Day we pass'd between the Islands of Banton, and Point of Marinduque, which was on our left. This Island abounds in Fruit, and very nourishing Roots; as also in wild Boars, Deer, Buffalos, and other Creatures; and therefore we sent the Chiampan thither before us to get fresh Provisions. Near the Point of Marinduque is a small Island, like that at Banton, call'd Botonillo, or little Button; behind which is another call'd Simara, inhabited by Civiliz'd Indians, as Banton is. As we Sail'd East, we saw at a great distance on the right the Islands of Romblon, Tablas, and Sibuyan, all inhabited; for all the way from Manila to the Embocadero, or Mouth of the Streight, is a Labyrinth of Islands, 80 Leagues in length, and very Dangerous. Wednesday 18th, we were Bealm'd; but Thursday 19th, had a little Wind that carry'd us as far as the Island of Sibuyan. Friday 20th, it freshned, and about Sun-set we got through the Streight made by the Islands of Bonas and Masbate, where there are rich Gold Mines, and the strange Birds call'd Tavonos, and then by Ticao, all of them inhabited by Indians not yet Subdu'd, and very Fruitful.

Having coasted along the Island of Ticao all Night, on Saturday 21st, in the Morning, two Hours after Sun-rising, we came to an Anchor in the Port of St. Hyacinthus, opposite to Sursegon. The Alcalde Mayor, or chief Magistrate of Alvay, came Aboard on Sunday 22d, and brought the Captain a Present of 20 Hogs, 500 Hens, and a great deal of Fruit. Monday 23d, the Chiampan came from Marinduque loaded with Refreshments given them by the Jesuits of that Parish, for the Fathers John Grigoyen, Antony Borgia, and Peter Antony Martinez, who were Aboard us Bound for New Spain; one to stay there, the other to go to Rome for the Affairs of the Mission.

The Wind coming up very fair for us to put into the Bay of Ticao, we weigh'd Anchor on Tuesday 24th, early, and advancing a little with the Stream, came to an Anchor in it. A Bare-foot Father of St. Augustin, that belong'd to that Province came to bring us some Refreshment of Fruit. Going Ashore after Dinner to Bath me, I was inform'd that the Village was formerly near the Shore, but having been Burnt by the Pilot of a Ship that put in there, the Indians retir'd half a League up the Land into the middle of the Wood. There are about thirty wooden Houses cover'd with Palm-tree Leaves, and the Church and Dwelling of the Missioners is of the same sort. But these are the most part of the Year at Masbate, because the Indians go away into the Mountains every one to Plant his Camotes, and Gavas, and only come to that Place when the Fathers go to make their Visitation.

Wednesday 25th, being St. James's Day, the Wind being contrary, we lay at Anchor; because the Ship stood in need of a strong South Wind to carry it out of the Streight against the Current. Thursday 26th, a Muster was made to see, if any Man was Aboard without License, for which they pay twenty Picces of Eight to the King. Sixteen Persons who had none were put a Shore, only 200 remaining Aboard. Friday 27th, 500 Bombones of Cane full of Water were brought Aboard, which the Alcade had caus'd to be cut by the Captain's Order; they were eight Spans in length, and as thick as a Man's Thigh. The same Day a fresh Gale starting up at South, we weigh'd Anchor to Sail, but soon dropt it again, the chief Pilot and his two Mates disagreeing, the first being of Opinion there was not Wind enough. Saturday 28th, it came about to North, and so hindred our Sailing. It was pleasant to see the Ship like a floating Garden with such abundance of Fruit and Greens brought from the neighe neighbouring Parts, as also Swine, and Hens, in their Caracoas, or Boats sew'd with Indian Cane, which have a Sail made of Mat, Triangular or Pyramidal fastned to two Poles, and long Canes on the sides to prevent over-setting. Sunday 29th, the same Wind continu'd; but at Night was a dead Calm, which lasted Monday 30th, and on Tuesday 31st, the contrary North Wind came up again.

Vernelli.
1697.

Wednesday the 1st of August, some Boats brought Advice of the safe Arrival of the Galeon, the Rosary, from New Spain. It had cast Anchor for fear of the Embocadero, or Mouth of the Channel, at the Port of Palapa, in the Island of Samar, and there landed the Money to be carry'd by Land to Manila. Thence some Boats had tow'd her to the nearest Coast of that Island; where when the Galeon has taken Port, it is unlawful to pass to Sea again without fresh Orders. The large contrary Wind kept us still Thursday 2d. Friday 3d, we Sail'd with something of a fair Wind, which soon coming about, we return'd to the Port; where the Festival of St. Dominick was celebrated Saturday 4th. Sunday 5th, the Wind blew so hard at North, that we were forced to drop another Anchor. The same continuing on Monday 6th, we diverted the tedious Hours with Cock-fighting, there being abundance Aboard, which was not pleasing to me, because we eat no other Meat. Tuesday

7th, the Chiampan went for Water. Wednesday 8th, the Pilot's Mate had some Words with a Passenger he carry'd over on his own Account, who complaining that his Table was too Poor, the other Struck him on the Face, and then run after him with a Knife. The Captain designing to enquire into the Matter, would have me be assisting to him, but all the Punishment ended in causing them both to stand some Hours in the Bilboes. Thursday 9th, after Mid-night the Wind blew fresh at South-East, so that about Noon the Pilot thought fit to Sail, because there is no getting out at the Embocadero, or Mouth of the Channel, where the Currents are always impetuous, without a Wind that is stronger than they. The Embocadero, or Streight is eight Leagues in length; and four, or five, and in some Places six over. It is enclos'd like the Court or Yard of a House, on the one side with the Coast of the Island of Manila; by the Islands of Borlas, Ticao, and Masbate; by the six little Islands de los Narayos, or of Orange-Trees, which are desert; by the fruitful Island of Capul; by the Indians, call'd Ava; by the Alupores; and lastly by the West Coast of Palapa; and on the other by the Island of Maripipi, inhabited by Talaxians, Tagapola, Mongol, Kamanda, and Limbanguayan, which all together render the Passage out towards America very difficult, what way soever a Man would go.

C H A P. III.

The Voyage continu'd to the Marian Islands.

THE Wind holding brisk at South-East, the Pilots all agreed to make their way out of the Streight, and accordingly about Noon weighing the two Anchors, the Tide being then with us, they hoisted Sail, and before Sun-set were near the Mouth of the Streight; which is made by Cape Malpal, in the Island of Capul, on the South of the small Isle of Kalentan, where there are some Flats near Cape Tiklin, and the Island of Manila on the North, two Leagues distant from one another. It is to be observ'd, That between Kalentan and Tiklin, there is Water enough for a quarter of a League over, for the Galeon to pass; but the Pilots will not venture into such a Streight, nor into those that lie between the Islands of Naranjos, and between Capul and Samar. As we were upon getting out, there fell such violent Storms of Rain, that together with the contrary Current, whilst the Moon was above the Horizon, we could not, tho' the Wind blew hard for us, advance one Step, but rather lost Ground, so that we were all Night in great Danger. I was Astonish'd, and Trembled to see the Sea have a Motion like Water boiling over a hot Fire, understanding that several Ships, notwithstanding the help of their Rudder had been by the violence of the Current whirl'd about, and at last Wreck'd. Friday 10th, the Tide turning for us, we got out of the Streight before Noon. First, we pass'd near the Coast of the Island of Manila, the Mountain of Bulessan, where is the burning Eruption of Alvai, and the Rock of St. Bernardin, in 13 Degrees of North Latitude, itude, leaving them on our left, and about Sun-set we had Cape Espiritu Santo, or Holy Ghost, on our right; this being the most Easterly Point of the Coast of Palapa, and the first the Galeons discover, coming from New Spain, as has been observ'd above. It lies in 12 Degrees, and 30 Minutes of North Latitude.

Gemelli.
1697.

Being come into the open Sea, to our great Satisfaction, our Cables were coil'd between Decks, being to cast Anchor no more till we came into New Spain, and the Boat was set Adrift that it might be of no hindrance, because we had another, in Case of Need, as the Spaniards call it, in Quarters, that is, in Pieces ready to clap together. The South West Wind blew hard all Night, and the Sea being rough made many Sick. Saturday 11th, the Wind continu'd at South West, and taking an Observation we found our selves in the Latitude of 14 Degrees. They that come from New Spain to the Islands Sail continually upon the same Parallel of 13 Degrees; for falling from Acapulco, which is in 17 to the 13 afore-said, they alway run in a strait Line, before the Wind, on a smooth Sea (whence that is call'd the Pacifick Ocean by the Spaniards) as if they were in a Canal, without any roughness of Water; so that they come in 60, or at furthest 65 Days to the Marian Islands, and thence in 15 or 20 to the Philippines. On the contrary, those that go thence to New Spain, have a very difficult Voyage; for the Sea may rather be call'd Inchanted, than Boisterous; and that they may gain Ground, and not be drove back, as often happens, they are forced to run away to the Northward, even to 40, or 41 Degrees of Latitude, sometimes coming in sight of Japan; that they may afterwards fall off till they meet with the Signs, (being Weeds, the Sea of California carries some hundreds of Leagues) and so continue their Voyage with the common Winds that are more favourable. The Pilot propos'd to pass by the Islands de los Ladrones, at 19 Degrees, and 20 Minutes of North Latitude (whereas the general Method is to pass them between 20 and 25) that he might from thence gain the greater Latitude; this having of late Years been found by Experience to be the best Course, and therefore he directed his Course East North East.

Sunday 12th, the fresh Gale which had continu'd all Night fell, and we were Becalm'd, and by Observation we found our selves in the Latitude of 14 Degrees, and 13 Minutes. That Day the Cloth the King allows the Seamen to keep them Warm, was divided among them. Monday 13th, the Calm continu'd, and an Observation shew'd us to be in the Latitude of 14 Degrees, and 20 Minutes. Tuesday 14th, the Wind came up at North West, and we Sail'd East and by North. Our Latitude by Observation 14 Deg. 34 Min. The same Wind continuing, we Steer'd North East on Wednesday 15th, and found the Latitude of 14 Deg. and 45 Min. Thursday 16th, we were Becalm'd, but the Current carry'd us some way, so that we found 14 Deg. 53 Min. Latitude. Friday 15th, a small Gale turn'd about all the Points of the Compass, and we found our selves in the same Latitude. Saturday 18th, we stood East North East, with little Wind at N. N. W. and the Latitude was 15 Deg. 1 Min. The allowance of Water was cut shorter, because there was but little, and we had far to Sail. At Night the Wind came up W. N. W. which made us lie East; and so we held on all Saturday 19th, in the Latitude of 15 Deg. 24 Min. as also Monday 20th, in 15 Deg. 34 Min. At Night a violent Storm blew, which kept us all Awake; and beat us very heavily all Tuesday 21st. That Day a little Rain fell, and every one strove greedily to gather the Water. We found 16 Deg. 16 Min. Latitude; and the Wind blew at W. S. W. which held all Wednesday 22d, and our Course being E. and by N. found 16 Deg. 26 Min. Latitude. Thursday 23d, we Sail'd East with a N. W. Wind, and found 16 Deg. 44 Min. Lat. Friday 24th, the Wind was all North, so that we stood East and by North, the Lat. 16 Deg. 46 Min. Saturday 25th, the Wind was S. W. and we stood N. E. and by E. Sunday 26th, the Wind at W. S. W. but we alter'd our Course, the Lat. 17 Deg. 1 Min. The same Wind and Course continu'd Monday 27th, Lat. 17 Deg. 15 Min. but on Tuesday 28th, we found 17 Deg. 18 Min. tho' we had been Becalm'd. Wednesday 29th, the Wind at S. but we made little way, and found 17 Deg. 34 Min. Lat. Thursday 30th, the Wind E. N. E. we stood North. No Observation could be taken. Friday 31st, the Wind came about from W. S. W. to W. N. W. and still no Observation to be taken. About Sun-set there fell a great Rain, and all the Thirsty Sailors went out Naked to gather the Water, so all the empty Vessels were soon fill'd. A great Storm continu'd all Night without taking any more

more Water for want of stowage, so that there being plenty, all the Men dress'd their Rice.

Saturday the first of September we stood E. and by N. the Wind at S. W. the Lat. 18 Deg. 50 Min. Sunday 2d. before Day the Wind came about and blew hard at East, so that there was no saying Mass, nor taking an Observation; and the Pilots were oblig'd to lower their Top-masts for fear they should give way and hinder our Voyage, as had hapned other times for want of Masts. We all watch'd Day and Night the Danger was so great, for the Waves broke upon the Galeon, and beat terribly upon its sides. We lay under a Main-sail Reef'd; and the Image of S. Francis Xavierius being expos'd, the Captain vow'd to make an Offering to the value of the Sail, which was worth 200 Pieces of Eight; devoutly Attributing to his Intercession the saving of the Sail and Calming of the Sea. Three Hours before Day the Wind came about fair.

Monday 3d, the Wind coming to N. W. we held on our Course E. N. E. and hoisted our Top-masts again. The same Day the first Cachorreta (a sort of Fish the Spaniards call by that Name) being taken, it was expos'd to Sail to the highest Bidder, according to the Custom spoken of elsewhere. The Captain bid up to 60 Pieces of Eight, to make an Offering to the blessed Virgin of the Conception; but four Sailers bid 5 Pieces more and carry'd the Fish. Afterwards about 20 Cachorretas and Bonitos were taken, these are Fishes full of Blood, somewhat like Mackrel. The Storm blew again at Night with Rain, so that the Sailers could not be got upon Deck without beating, there fell such a violent Shower. This Weather hindered our taking any Observation, the next Day being Tuesday 4th, but we held on our Course with that Wind. Wednesday 5th, the Wind first at S. W. and then at S. S. W. the Lat. 19 Deg. 33 Min. About break of Day Thursday 6th, we discover'd four of the Marian-Islands, but the Wind would not permit the Pilot to pass them by in 19 Deg. 20 Min. Lat. as he had design'd. When we had advanced farther we saw at a distance towards the South, the biggest of them, which is exactly shap'd like a long Saddle. The second bearing upon the same Point, was a steep round burning Mountain, in the Sea Carts call'd Griga, sending out Smoke from the Top. They told me it was three Leagues in Compass, and was Inhabited at the Foot of the Hill on the South side; to which the Masters Mate of the Galeon add'd, That as he pass'd by at another time, a great many of those Inhabitants came out in Boats, to bring him Fish, Cocos, Buyo and excellent Melons, but that they never after came to meet the Galeons, because an extravagant Passenger had struck one of their Men.

CHAP. IV.

Of the Discovery and Conquest of the Marian-Islands.

Marian-Islands, or De los Ladrones.

These Islands were formerly call'd De las Velas; and afterwards by the Spaniards, de los Ladrones, or of Thieves, because they sometimes putting in there as they went and came between New Spain and the Philippine-Islands, the Inhabitants stole all they could, and then fled to the Mountains. Michael Lopez de Legaspi took Possession of them for King Philip the 2d, in January 1565, when he was going with four Ships and a Frigate to Conquer the Philippines. But this Possession was only in Words, for there was no Garrison placed there nor Fort built, nor were there any Missioners sent to convert the Inhabitants to our holy Faith; perhaps because it was thought impracticable to talk of Religion to Men, who shunn'd all manner of Communication with the Spaniards, and fled to their thickest Woods. Afterwards the Fathers of the Society going to and coming from the Philippines on their Missions, out of their Religious Zeal, seeing those wretched People forsaken, and plung'd in the Darkness of Idolatry, they propos'd to the Queen Mother, then Regent during her Sons Minority, the cultivating of that Vineyard growin' wild under Paganism; perswading her that the Seed of the Gospel might be sow'd there to good purpose, if a Mission of their Order were Founded. The Queen out of her wonted Piety granted their Request; whereupon the Governor of Manila having receiv'd Orders from Court, set out a convenient number of Ships and Men for the Conquest of the Islands, and with them went as many Fathers as were thought necessary.

The Spaniards soon made themselves Masters of the Island Iguana in 13 deg. of North Latitude, as also of Sarpana, and then continuing the Conquest without any great difficulty, subdu'd them all from 13 to 20 deg. of Latitude, where the burning Mountain is.

The Missioners had no such Success, for venturing to go alone about the Island Preaching, they were ill treated; particularly F. Morales was hurt with a Javelin on the Leg, in a Place near the burning Mountain. In this same Place F. S. Victor receiv'd the Crown of Martyrdom 29 Years ago, for having Baptiz'd a young Girl without her Father's Consent, and they reckon ten Missioners in all were put to Death. For this reason the Fathers are retir'd into the Islands Tguana and Sarpana, under the Protection of the Spanish Garrisons.

During 177 Years the Spaniards have continu'd this Voyage passing between several Islands, they have found this is a continu'd Row of them from North to South; that is, from the Line where it begins opposite to new Guinea almost up to Japan, in 36 deg. of North Latitude. The Names given to all the Islands discover'd in this space, are as follow. Iguana in 13 deg. Sarpana in 14. Buena vista in 15. Saespara in 15 deg. 40 min. Anatan in 17 deg. 20 min. Sarigan in 17 deg. 25 min. Guagan in 18. Alamaguan in 18 deg. 18 min. Pagon in 18 deg. 4 min. the burning Mountain of Grigu in 19 deg. 33 min. Tinay and Manga in 20 deg. 45 min. Urrac in 20 deg. 55 min. The other three burning Mountains, the first in 23 deg. 30 min. the second, in 24. and the third in 25 deg. The Island de Patas is in 25 deg. 30 min. la Desconocida in 25 deg. 50 min. Malabrigo in 27 deg. 40 min. Guadalupe in 28 deg. 10 min. The three Islands of Tecla discover'd the 23d of December 1664, by the Galeon S. Joseph between 34 and 36 deg. There are other Islands from 13 deg. of Latitude, towards the Line and New Guinea, not yet known.

There is another Chain of Islands beginning at the Line 300 Leagues from Callao in Pern, and running Westward, the end whereof is not yet known. Those that are best known are not inhabited, and have no Beasts in them, but only Birds that are kill'd with Cudgels, being never frightened by Man, as I was told by some that had been there. The Pyrats that go through the Streights of Magellan into the South Sea, repair to these Islands to Wash and Tallow. They are call'd de los Galapagos, because of the great Quantity of those Creatures found there, which are very like Tortoises, or rather a species of them.

The chief of the Marian Islands is Iguana, and therefore a strong Castle is built on it guarded by 80 or 90 Men. The second is Sarpana, in which there is also a Garrison, but the Governor lives in Umatta. They are both flat, so that the Ships can come no nearer than within three Leagues of them. In Agana there are two Colleges, the one of Children, the other of Indian Maids, instructed and Govern'd by 12 Fathers of the Society, and Maintain'd by the King with an Allowance of 3000 Pieces of Eight a Year, besides his Bounty for Maintenance of the Fathers. His Majesty generously spends 34000 Pieces of Eight a Year to keep these Islands, the Governors Salary being 3000 Pieces of Eight, and the rest for a Major, an hundred Souldiers, the Jesuits and Colleges aforementioned. All this is sent from New Spain to Manila, with Cloth for the Souldiers. There is also a small Vessel kept to carry all Necessaries thither. The Houses of the Fathers of the Society are made of Mud Walls, because the Islands furnish no other Materials. Those of the Indians are Huts cover'd with Boards, or Palm-Tree-Leaves like Caves. The Island is ten Leagues in Compass, and is six from Sarpana. This is not so large, nor have the Jesuits any House in it, but repair thither as there is occasion. There is a small Garrison to curb those barbarous People.

CHAP. V.

Of the People, Religion, Fruit, Climate and wonderful Boats of the Marian Islands.

THE Inhabitants of the Marian Islands are of a Gigantick Stature, Corpulent, and very Strong; and will sometimes clap 500 weight on their Backs as if it were nothing. They are great Swimmers, and dive so swiftly that they will take Fish. Before the coming of the Spaniards they liv'd under a Chief,

Gemelli. a Chief, naked, wandering about the Mountains. They knew not what Fire was, or the use of Iron; but did eat raw Fish, sometimes rotten, Cocons, and Roots, drinking fair Water. There never was, nor is there at present, any selling among them, but only exchange; and should the Spaniards carry never so many Pieces of Eight, no Man would give them a Coco-nut or a Hen, and they might starve, did they not give Stuff, Cloth, or other things those People want in exchange.

Religion. No token of any Religion, has been hitherto found in any of the Islands discover'd, as several Missioners told me, who had been long there; only an extraordinary Veneration for their Ancestors, not out of Love, but Fear, keeping their Skulls in their Houses, and calling upon them in time of need; by which it appears they have some true notion of the Immortality of the Soul, and that there is some place for them to reside in, from whence they can do good, or harm. Their Language is different from that of the Philippines. Their Weapon is a Spear pointed with the Bone of a Man's Leg, or a sharp Stone.

Product. Tho' in these Islands the Trees are not so large and thick as in the Philippines, yet the Soil is proper to produce all things necessary for Man's sustenance. Formerly there was nothing but the Fruit of the Country, and some Hens; but afterwards the Jesuits and Souldiers residing there, brought over Rice, Herbs, and other things from the Philippine Islands; and as for Beast, Horses, Cows, and Swine, they have increas'd considerably in the Mountains. There were not so much as Rats, but the Ships have furnish'd them. No venomous Creatures at all breed there.

Rima a Fruit. The most wonderful and peculiar Fruit of these Islands is, the Rima, which serves the Natives instead of Bread, and is very Nourishing. The Plant is thick, and full of Leaves; the Fruit as big as a Man's head, of a Date colour, but prickly like the Giacca of Goa; and in the middle is a Kernel, like a white Nut. Boil'd, or Roasted, it serves for Bread, and keeps four, or six Months. The Taste is like an Indian Fig, or Plantain. Besides the Mountains abound in Coco-trees.

Ducdu. The Ducdu is a Tree like the Rima; and the Fruit, which is green without, is like a long Pear. The inside Pulp, is white and soft, sticking to about 15

Kernels which roasted, taste like Chestnuts, as do those of the Giacca. For common Food, there are abundance of Roots, as Ubis, Gavas, Camottes and others. The Water is very good. The Air is better and more temperate than that of Manila, tho' that Island, be upon the same Parallel with Iguana, and Sarpana.

The little Boats of these Islands are Boats very strange, as well for their make, as swiftness. They are made of two crooked Bodies of Trees hollow'd, and sow'd together with Indian Cane. They are about 5 or six Yards long, and because the breadth of them is not above four Spans, and they would easily overset, therefore they join to the sides pieces of solid Timber, which poize them; and as for Passengers, the Boat being scarce able to contain three Indian Sailers, they therefore lay Boards across in the middle, hanging over the Water on both sides, where those that will be carry'd from place to place, sit. Of the three Sailers afore said, one is always in the middle to lade out the Water, which certainly comes in over the sides, and at the Seam; the other two keep one at Head, and one at Stern, to move and steer the Boat. The Sail is like those we call Latin Sails, that is, Triangular, made of Mat, and as long as the Boat, which being therefore easy to overset when the Wind is a Stern, they keep out of it, as much as they can. No sort of Boat, whatsoever, can come near them for swiftness, for they run ten or twelve Italian Miles an Hour. When they are to return from any place, they remove the Sail without turning the Boat about, so that which was the Stern becomes the Head, and he that was in the Prow, is Steersman. If any thing is to be mended in the Boat, the Goods and Passengers are set upon the Sail; and the Boat is presently righted, and turn'd up if it was overset; things so wonderful, the Spaniards themselves can scarce believe them, tho' they see them every day. Tho' these be fit only for a short cut, yet in a case of urgent necessity, two set out from Iguana, crossing a Sea of 900 Italian Miles, to go to the Philippine Islands; but one of them was cast away. That the Reader may the better comprehend the manner of them, I have here added the Cut of one.

See Cut Number IV. Page 457.

C H A P. VI.

The Author's tedious and dreadful Voyage to the Port of Acapulco.

Gemelli.
1697.

Friday the 7th, the Wind being East, we stood N. N. E. without taking any Observation. Saturday 8th, the Wind at S. E. stood E. N. E. and found 21 Deg. of Lat. Sunday 9th, the Wind S. S. E. stood N. E. the Lat. 21 Deg. 40. Monday 10th, the same Wind and Course continuing, Lat. 20 Deg. The Sky appear'd of a Violet colour, with green Clouds, which I, and the Fathers of the Society look'd upon as a Prodigy, having never seen the like before. The Pilot began his Devotions for obtaining a good Voyage, and at Night there was Dancing, and such Sports as the Ship could afford. Tuesday 11th, we were becalm'd; that Lat. 22 Deg. 10 Min. Wednesday 12th, the Wind at E. S. E. we stood N. E. the Lat. 22 Deg. 37 Min. Here it is fit to acquaint the Reader, that during this long Voyage, there is a strange variation of the Needle observ'd; for which, neither Pilots nor Mathematicians have assign'd any reason in 180 Years, that Voyage has been us'd. It begins at Cape St. Bernardin, between 12 and 13 Degrees of Latitude, insensibly increasing for about half the way, to 18 or 20 Deg. for above a thousand Leagues. There it begins to lessen, till they come to Cape Mendocino, where it is observ'd to be two Degrees. Now this variation in some places being N. E. in others N. W. and in some places more, in others less, it is therefore the more unaccountable. There is no pretending it is caus'd by the Loadstones, because the Islands are at a vast distance, and perhaps a thousand Leagues. The Pilots perceive this variation when the Sun is setting, for marking the true West Point, they then see whether the North, and other two Cardinal Points answer.

Thursday 13th, the Wind being S. E. we stood N. E. the Lat. 23 Deg. 30 Min. so that we were got out of the Torrid, into the temperate Zone. That Night it blew a great Storm, and Friday 14th, we stood N. the Wind E. N. E. The Lat. 24 Deg. 12 Min. Saturday 14th, the Wind at E. N. E. we still run due N. Towards Noon, it blew so hard that the Pilot was forced to lie by, backing the Mainfail, and three hours before Night, the Wind came more to N. E. Such abundance of Cachorretas were taken all the day, that the Seamen grew weary of them; and would give them to any Body for asking. They greedily swallow'd the Hook, being deceiv'd by a flying Fish, made of Rags, which as the Ship run under Sail, could scarce be distinguish'd from the true, as we shall observe hereafter. Sunday 16th, the Wind being at S. E. we stood N. E. by E. The Lat. 25 Deg. 5 Min. Monday 17th, the Wind, S. S. W. run E. N. E. Tuesday 18th, lay the same Course, tho' the Wind was S. W. No observation could be taken either day. Four Sharks were catch'd, and opening one of them, there were seven small ones found alive in its Belly. This caus'd an Argument, or Dispute, between the Jesuits, the Dominican, and the Augustinian, to decide whether this Fish brought forth young, or not. Some foolishly said, the old one had swallow'd them, to save their lives, by Vomiting them up again, and that they came from Eggs lay'd and then kept in the opening under their Jaws, as is said of other Fishes, and particularly the Trout. But the most receiv'd and likeliest Opinion is this, that all Fish bring forth their Young hatch'd out of the Egg, or form'd out of the Spawn; for several Persons well vers'd in Sea Affairs have told me, that there have been Eggs found in Sharks, and young ones at the same time. I give it here the Name of Eggs, because the Italian Word Uova in the Author, signifies either Eggs or Spawn, and as some Fishes Spawn, others lay Eggs, as do the Tortoises, Crocodils, and Sharks here mention'd. To this purpose John Zavaletta a Biscainer, who had follow'd the Whale Fishing, several Years in Europe, said he had often found Young Whales in the Belly of the Old. That same day there fell much Rain, and the Sailers went out naked, to catch the Water, so that they fill'd all the empty Vessels, and therefore instead of shortning the Men's allowance of Water after two Months and a half Sail, it was increas'd.

Wednesday 19th, the Wind at E. we stood N. N. E. the Lat. 25 Deg. 50 Min. we had some diversion with Sharks that were taken. One great one, was throw'n into the Sea again, with a Board tied to his Tail, none of the Passengers caring to eat any more of them, and it was Pleasant to see him Swim about without 1697. without being able to dive down. Two others were ty'd together by the Tails, one of them being first blinded, and then being cast into the Sea, the blind one oppos'd the other that would have drawn him down, thinking himself taken. Thursday 20th, we were becalm'd till Noon, at which time a little Wind blew at S. E. and we stood E. N. E. the lat. 26 deg. Friday 21st, the Wind at S. W. we lay the same Course, and making much way, caught abundance of Cachorretas, with the same Bate, of a flying Fish made of Rags, for those Fishes running to catch it, were hung in the Hook hid under it. That Night the Pilots two Mates began their nine days Devotion, with abundance of Lights, and gave Sweetmeats to all the Company; and at Night there was Dancing, and acting of parts made extempore. Saturday 22d, the Wind at S. we stood N. E. and by E. the lat. 27 deg. Sunday 23d, held the same Course, the Wind at S. E. the lat. 27 deg. 30 min. Monday stood as before, lat. 28 deg. 12 min. Tuesday 25th, the Wind blowing fresh at S. S. E. we steer'd E. N. E. the lat. 29 deg. 3 min. That Night we were very watchful, to avoid two small Rocks in the lat. of 30 deg. Wednesday 26th, the Wind at S. we stood N. E. to get a greater lat. which we found to be 29 deg. 58 min. Thursday 27th, a great shower fell, and the Wind blowing at E. made us run N. and by E. the lat. 30 deg. 30 min. Friday 28th, stood N. E. the lat. 30 deg. 49 min. the Needle varying a Point N. W. Saturday 29th, the Feast of S. Michael was kept, that being our Captain's Name, extraordinary allowance was given, and a Play acted. The Wind blew at S. E. and we stood at N. E. and by E. the lat. 31 deg. 58 min. Sunday 30th, the lat. was 31 deg. 58 min. so that we thought our selves about the lat. of an Imaginary Island, reputed to be rich in Gold, and placed in the Sea Carls, in 32 deg. wanting some few min. whereas it is certain no Body ever saw any such Island. Till now we Sail'd N. E. and by E. the Wind being S. E. then follow'd a Calm till Mid-night, after which the Wind came up at S. S. E. and we stood N. E. That Night the Master began his nine days Devotion, treating the Company, and Dancing.

Gennelli.

Monday the first of October, the Wind continuing at S. S. E. we steer'd N. E. and by N. the lat. 32 deg. 28 min. Afterwards the Wind came to S. E. (abundance of Cachorretas and Albacoras being taken, by reason the Ship made such swift way) and at Night blew so hard at S. that the Pilot was forced to lower his Top Sails and Main Yard. A great Storm blowing on Tuesday 2d, at S, and the Sea beating hard upon us, we were forced to lie by the Forefall back'd, and the Waves beat so furiously on the Rudder, that the Whiplaff broke; the lat. 33 deg. 20 min. The Wind came about to N. W. but the Storm nothing abated; but rather increasing, the Ship was toss'd upon vast Mountains of Water, and then again seem'd to sink to the Abyss, the Waves breaking over it. No fire could be lighted, and so all eat cold Meat, and there was no Chocolate to be made [the Author was very dainty, to expect Chocolate at all times] and there was no standing or sitting in a place, but we were toss'd from side to side. About Midnight I had like to be knock'd in the Head, by two Linestocks of the Guns falling upon my Bed. Wednesday 3d, the same Wind continuing, the Storm was nothing abated; we steer'd N. E. and by E. All this time we had seen Sea Fouls, but this day two Ducks flew by us. Besides a Sailer catch'd a little Bird, like a Canary Bird, which being carry'd away by the Wind, found no place to stay itself, but the Rigging. The Captain endeavour'd to keep it in a Cage, but being quite spent, with hunger and weariness, it dy'd the same day, and there was Sand found in its Belly. This little Creature set the Pilot, his Mate, and the Passengers upon arguing whence it could come; and they concluded it certainly came from Rica de Plata, an Island 30 Leagues distant Southward, being carry'd away by the Wind; the lat. was 34 deg. 7 min. The Pilots suppose the Islands, Rica de Oro and Rica Plata, with others about them to be the Islands of Salomon; but I am of Opinion these are imaginary Islands, because as long as this Voyage has been us'd they have never been seen. The Situation and Latitude of the Islands of Salomon is unknown; nor could they ever be found in so many Years as they have been search'd after by the King's Order. A Galeon Sailing from Manila for New Spain, was drove by Tempest upon an Island. The Storm having remov'd and throw'n away all the Earth, about the Hearth, or Furnace in the Cook-room, they took some from the Island to put it in the place of it. When the Galeon came to Acapulco, this Earth being remov'd, they found under it a Mass of Gold, which the violent Heat

Imaginary
Islands.

Heat of the Fire had melted and separated from the Earth. The Commander admiring at this unexpected Accident, acquainted the Viceroy of Mexico with it, and he the King, who order'd a Squadron to be fitted out to find these Islands, the Pilot having taken their Latitude. In short, the Adelantado D. Alvaro de Mendoza sail'd from Callao, the Port of Lima, in the Year 1596, with some Ships to find out these Islands of Salomon, whereof that above-mention'd was suppos'd to be one. After a long and tedious Voyage he lighted upon an Island of Blacks of New Guinea, near the Line, on the South side of it, where he, and many of his Men dy'd; and his Wife the Lady Elizabeth Barreto return'd with only one Ship to Manila, the rest being lost in the vain Search after these rich Islands. See more of this Particular in the fragment of the Islands of Salomon.

D. Antony de Medina, about 30 Years since, offer'd the King to go upon this Discovery, relying on the great Experience he had learnt on those Seas. Orders being therefore sent to the Viceroy of Mexico, and Governor of Manila, to send him Commander of the Galeon that was to return from Acapulco to the Philippine Islands, the Viceroy gave him that Post; but the new Governor of Manila, who was Aboard the Galeon, when they were far enough from New Spain, depriv'd him of the Command, and put into it him that came from Manila. Medina highly resenting this Affront, as soon as he came to the Islands, stole away in a small Boat to China, in order to go over from thence to Madrid, to make his Complaint to the King; but there being no News ever heard of him, it is suppos'd he was kill'd by Pyrates.

Thursday 4th, the Wind coming about to North, and then to N. N. W. we sail'd E. for fear of running upon Rica de Plata, and found the lat. but 33 deg. 30 min. It was there very Cold. The Pilots said the Current there help'd the way of the Galeon. Friday 5th, the Wind blew at East, and we sail'd North, and then N. and by E. the lat. 33 deg. 50 min. A Storm rising in the Night, the Galeon was let run at Pleasure. Saturday 6th, the Storm increasing, the two Top-Masts were lower'd, and we drove with the Wind. These are the usual Storms observ'd to happen before and after the Feast of St. Francis, perhaps by reason of the Equinox. After Noon the Wind being S. E. we steer'd N. E. under a Fore-

Sail; but the Wind blowing a mighty Storm again, we drove as before. Sunday 7th, we stood N. and by W. the Wind being East, with terrible Waves breaking over the Poop. Monday 8th, the Wind being South, we sail'd N. E. and by E. leaving the imaginary Island of Rica de Plata South, in the lat. of 34 deg. 30 min. and found our selves in 36 deg. 20 min. Tuesday 9th, the Wind abating, and by degrees growing slack at S. E. we steer'd N. E. and by E. At Night it blew harder. Wednesday 10th, sail'd E. N. E. with the same Wind; the lat. 37 deg. 34 min. Thursday 11th, steer'd N. E. and by E. and after Noon N. E. the Wind coming to E. S. E. Friday 12th, stood N. E. and by E. and afterwards N. N. E. the Wind blowing S. E. and E. S. E. To avoid running further to Northward the Pilot tack'd about to Southward, the Wind blowing hard at E. S. E. In this Latitude we observ'd the Sky was always clouded, and a small Rain fell, which the Spaniards call Garuva. Saturday 13th, betimes we tack'd about to N. E. the same S. E. Wind continuing. The Cold was very sharp, but the Indians and Blacks Born in hot Countries were most sensible of it. Sunday 14th, by reason of the beating of the Sea, and breaking of the Waves Masts could not be sail'd; at Night we drove, the Wind being contrary; and at Mid-night sail'd East, the Wind at N. N. E. But coming to N. E. on Monday 15th, we tack'd about to S. E. and before Noon the Wind coming to E. S. E. we were forced to Tack again. The lat. upon Observation 36 deg. 30 min. for we made Southward. At Night the Wind chang'd. Tuesday 16th, the Wind at E. S. E. we stood N. E. but it coming about to East, oblig'd us to Steer N. N. E. and N. E. and by N. The lat. 37 deg. 2 min. The Rain which fell all these Days wet many Bales and Chests of Silk, and other Goods of China to the great Loss of the Owners.

Wednesday 17th, we were Becalm'd, the lat. but 37 deg. At Sun-set the Wind came up S. S. W. which made us Steer East, but the Calm returning at Mid-night we drove N. N. W. The same Wind coming up again Thursday 18th, we sail'd East, which was our Course; tho' to do it safely we were to keep in the lat. of 36 deg. 42 min. which is the greatest Elevation Ships use to take in this Voyage. This they do, because if they do not place themselves enough to the Northward, before they meet meet the Senas, that is the floating Weeds before mention'd, being once to the Leeward from the Coast of Cape Mirido to California, it will be very hard afterwards to get to the Northward. So it hapned six Years before the Pink that set out for New Spain, after the Galeon St. Joseph was cast away; for having run up to 35 deg. of lat. and not keeping up to that same, it could never meet the Senas, or Weeds by reason of its being fallen to Leeward; and all the Seamen had infallibly dy'd for want of Meat and Drink, had not Providence provided they should put into an unknown Island in the lat. of 18 deg. 20 min. which being found on St. Sebastian's Day, had his Name given it. Here they got Water out of a little Lake; and Flesh by killing abundance of Birds, which the Spaniards call Bobos, or Fools (elsewhere spoken of) which they carry'd salted in Earthen Vessels. This Island was small, plain, and full of pleasant Trees. After Dinner the Wind came to North, and we sail'd E. and by N. The lat. 36 deg. 30 min. Friday 19th, we were Becalm'd, the lat. 36 deg. 19 min. the Current driving us to Southward. The Wind came up at S. W. and we steer'd E. and by N. It blew hard at Night; and the Major Arambolo began his nine Days Devotion. Saturday 20th, held the same Course. A small Rain quell'd the Wind. The lat. of 36 deg. 30 min. Sunday 21st, we had a troublesome Calm, but at length the Wind came up at S. W. and we steer'd E. and by N. the lat. 36 deg. 37 min. the Needle varying a Point Eastward, we stood East to make the more way. Tho' this variation be sometimes more, and sometimes less, yet by it the Pilots know how far they are from Land. The sight of a Dove rejoiced all Aboard; taking it as a good Omen of the success of a Voyage, and guessing we might see Land within a Month. They thought that Dove might be drove by the Wind from the Island they call of D. Maria Laxara (because in that Latitude a Spanish Woman so call'd, coming from Manila, cast her self into the Sea) where there is such abundance of them that they darken the Air. Yet they are not Land Doves, tho' like them in Beak and Feathers, but of the Sea, and have Feet like Ducks. This Island is in the lat. of 31 deg. Monday 22d, the Wind continu'd to blow hard at S. W. as it had done the Night before, so we steer'd E. and by N. but at Night it came to N. N.

Island discovered.

W. Tuesday 23d, before Day the Wind settled at N. blowing so hard, that the Galeon made much way E. and by N. the lat. 36 deg. 16 min.

There is no doubt but this Voyage has always been dangerous and dreadful. In 1575, the Ship Espiritu Santo, or the Holy Ghost was cast away at Catanduanes, through the Ignorance of the Pilot, who could not find out the Embocadero, or Mouth of the Streight. In 1596, the contrary Winds drove the Galeon St. Philip as far as Japan; where it was taken by way of Reprisal with all the Lading design'd for New Spain; which gave occasion to the Emperor Taycosamu then Reigning to Persecute the Christians, wherein he proceeded so far as to put to Death F. Peter, a Recolet, who went thither from Manila with the Character of Amballador, the better to Exercise the Function of a Missioner. In 1602, two other Galcons were cast away, and others after that. Nor is the Difficulty and Danger any less at present; tho' the Voyage has been us'd almost two Ages; for many Galeons are lost; and others having spent their Masts, or drove by contrary Winds return, when they are half way over, after losing many Men at Sea, and the best but ill condition'd, as hapned to the Galeon Santo Christo not long since.

Ships lost.

The Wind continu'd to blow hard at North all Night, and Wednesday 24th, and put us on E. and by N. Abundance of Pigeons were seen about the Ship. The Captain because of the sharpness of the Weather caus'd some Wine of Palm-tree to be distributed among the Sailers, to warm their Stomachs. The lat. 35 deg. 45 min. The Pump was ply'd eight or ten times in 24 Hours, the Ship made so much Water. The Wind from North came to N. N. E. which oblig'd the Pilot to back the Main Sail, keeping her Head E. S. E. that she might not fall away to Southward. Thursday 25th, we continu'd the same Method lying sometimes one way, and sometimes another, to Rack the Galeon the less; and found the lat. but 35 deg. 10 min. The Wind blowing harder at Night, the two Top Masts were struck. A great Shower of Rain laid the Wind, and calm'd the Sea; yet we lay by most part of the Day, the Rain continuing with Thunder, and Lightning. These were look'd upon as Tokens of our being near the Continent, or at least some Island; some being of Opinion that Thunder and Lightning could not be produced, but from the fiery Exhalations of the Earth; and not from Vapours rising out of the Water; as if in the Air over the Water, there might not be much Niter, Sulphur, and the like, to occasion Thunder and Lightning. At Night we steer'd N. and by E. the Wind at E. and E. N. E. Three Hours in the stormy Night, that Light the Sailers call Santelmo, appear'd on the round Top, and was saluted by all the Passengers as the fore-runner of fair Weather. Saturday 27th, we steer'd first N. N. E. and then E. and by N. the Wind at E. and E. S. E. with much Rain. Sunday 28th, the Thunder and Rain continu'd, and the two Top Masts being hoisted again, we steer'd first E. and by N. and then E. N. E. and lastly, N. E. the Wind being at S. S. E. S. E. and E. S. E. The lat. 36 deg. 10 min. The Wind grew more favourable at Night, and so we sail'd E. N. E. to gain the Latitude we had lost against our Wills. The Sky clearing on Monday 29th, the Sun shin'd out bright to cheer the Hearts of the Passengers, who had been so many Days bury'd under dark Fog, and Rains, the Wind coming to S. W. we steer'd E. and by N.

Gemelli.
1697.

Hardships Aboard.

The poor People stow'd in the Cabins of the Galeon bound towards the Land of Promise of New Spain, endure no less Hardships than the Children of Israel did, when they went from Egypt towards Palestine. There is Hunger, Thirst, Sickness, Cold, continual Watching, and other Sufferings; besides the terrible Shocks from side to side, caus'd by the furious beating of the Waves. I may further say they endure all the Plagues God sent upon Pharaoh to soften his hard Heart; for if he was infected with Leprosy, the Galeon is never clear of an universal raging Itch, as an addition to all other Miseries. If the Air then was fill'd with Gnats; the Ship swarms with little Vermine, the Spaniards call Gorgojos, bred in the Bisket; so swift that they in a short time not only run over Cabbins, Beds, and the very Dishes the Men eat on, but insensibly fasten upon the Body. Instead of the Locusts, there are several other sorts of Vermin of sundry Colours, that suck the Blood. Abundance of Flies fall into the Dishes of Broth, in which there also swim Worms of several sorts. In short, if Moses miraculously converted his Rod into a Serpent, aboard the Galeon a piece of Flesh, without any Miracle is converted into Wood, and in the shape of a Serpent. I had a good share in these Misfortunes; for the Boat-swain, with whom I had agreed for my Diet, as he had Fowls at his Table the first Days, so when we were out at Sea he made me Fast after the Armenian manner, having Banish'd from his Table all Wine, Oyl and Vinegar; dressing his Fish with fair Water and Salt. Upon Flesh Days he gave me Tassajos Fritos, that is, Steaks of Beef, or Buffalo, dry'd in the Sun, or Wind, which are so hard that it is impossible to Eat them, without they are first well beaten, like Stockfish; nor is there any Digesting them without the help of a Purge. At Dinner another piece of that same sticky Flesh was boil'd, without any other Sauce but its own hardness, and fair Water. At last he depriv'd me of the Satisfaction of gnawing a good Bisket, because he would spend no more of his own, but laid the King's Allowance on the Table; in every Mouthful whereof there went down abundance of Maggots, and Gorgojos chew'd and bruis'd. On Fish Days the common Diet was old rank Fish boil'd in fair Water and Salt; at Noon we had Mongos, something like Kidney Beans, in which there were so many Maggots, that they swam at top of the Broth, and the quantity was so great, that besides the Loathing they caus'd, I doubted whether the Dinner was Fish or Flesh. This bitter Fare was sweetned after Dinner with a little Water and Sugar; yet the Allowance was but a small Coco Shell full, which rather increas'd than quench'd Drought. Providence reliev'd us for a Month with the Sharks and Cachorretas the Seamen caught, which either boil'd, or broil'd were some Comfort. Yet he is to be pity'd who has another at his Table; for the tediousness of the Voyage is the cause of all these Hardships. 'Tis certain, they that take this upon them, lay out Thousands of Pieces of Eight, in making the necessary Provision of Flesh, Fowl, Fish, Bisket, Rice, Sweetmeats, Chocolate, and other Things; and the quantity is so great, that during the whole Voyage, they never fail of Sweetmeats at Table, and Chocolate twice a Day, of which last the Sailers and Grummets make as great a Consumption, as the richest. Yet at last the tediousness of the Voyage makes an end of all; and the more because in a short time all the Provisions grew Naught, except the Sweetmeats and Chocolate, which are the only comfort of Passengers. Abundance of poor Sailors fell Sick, being

expos'd

 expos'd to the continual Rains, Cold, and other Hardships of the Season; yet they were not allow'd to Taste of the good Bisket, Rice, Fowls, Spanish Bread, and Sweetmeats, put into the Custody of the Master by the King's Order, to be distributed among the Sick; for the honest Master spent all at his own Table. Notwithstanding the dreadful Sufferings in this prodigious Voyage, yet the desire of Gain prevails with many to venture through it, four, six, and some ten times. The very Sailors, tho' they Forswear the Voyage when out at Sea; yet when they come to Acapulco, for the Lucre of 275 Pieces of Eight, the King allows them for the Return, never remember past Sufferings; like Women after their Labour. The whole Pay is 350 Pieces of Eight; but they have only 75 paid them at Cavite, when they are bound for America; for if they had half, very few would return to the Philippine Islands for the rest. The Merchants, there is no doubt get by this Voyage, an hundred and fifty, or two hundred per Cent. and Factors have nine in the Hundred, which in 2, or 30000 Pieces of Eight amounts to Money. And indeed it is a great Satisfaction to return Home in less than a Year with 17, or 18000 Pieces of Eight clear Gains, besides a Man's own Venture; a Sum that may make a Man easy as long as he Lives. Captain Emanuel Arguelles told me, That he without having any Employment, should clear to himself that Voyage by Commissions 25, or 30000 Pieces of Eight. It was reckned the Pilot would make 20000 Pieces of Eight; his Mates 9000 each. The Captain of the Galeon 40000. The Master, his Mate, and Boatswain, who may put Aboard several Bales of Goods, may make themselves Rich in one Voyage. He that borrows Money at fifty per Cent. may get as much more, without standing to the Hazard of Losses. These extraordinary Gains enduce many to Expose themselves to so many Dangers and Miseries. For my own part, these nor greater Hopes shall not prevail with me to undertake that Voyage again, which is enough to Destroy a Man, or make him unfit for any thing as long as he Lives. I have made this Digression to show the Reader through what Thorns Men must venture to come at the so much coveted Roses of Riches. The Spaniards, and other Geographers, have given this the name of the pacifick Sea, as may be seen in the Maps; but it does

Profit of this Voyage.

not fute with its tempestuous and dreadful Motion, for which it ought rather to be call'd the Restless. But the Truth is, the Spaniards gave it this fine Name in sailing from Acapulco to the Philippine Islands; which is perform'd very easily in three Months, without any boisterous Motion in the Sea, and always before the Wind, as was said before.

Tuesday 30th, the Wind blowing hard at S. W. we steer'd E. and by N. but afterwards the Wind came about to the West Stormy. The lat. 36 deg. 40 min. and we steer'd E. N. E. it being requisite to get more to the Northward. That Night the Waves beat so violently, that ten Men were fain to stand to the Helm. Wednesday 31st, the Day broke with the Wind at N. W. which made us Steer E. and by N. A piece of Wood being seen on the Sea about eight Spans long, and wrought, it was look'd upon as a Token of being near Land; but it might as well be the Sign of a Wreck. No Observation was taken.

The Month of October ending with so many Hardships, the Sky appear'd Serene, and the Sea Calm on Thursday the first of November. At Night the Wind was N. W. and came to W. we steer'd E. N. E. The lat. 37 deg. 18 min. All the Night the Wind blew hard at N. W. and so continu'd Friday 2d, without any Alteration, and we held on our Course E. N. E. the lat. 37 deg. 10 min. and therefore perceiving we fell off to Southward, by reason of the Currents, we stood N. E. and by E. Saturday 3d, the Wind turn'd to N. N. W. and therefore we steer'd E. N. E. We saw another piece of Wood, but not Wrought, which confirm'd the Hopes of our being near Land; notwithstanding the Pilots, being deceiv'd by the Currents which ran E. reckned themselves above an hundred Leagues further off. The Wind at Night coming up again at N. W. we sail'd N. E. and by E. afterwards it chang'd to N. N. E. and we stood East Sunday 4th, the Wind being more favourable steer'd E. N. E. The lat. 37 deg. 14 min. Monday 5th, Wind at N. W. Course N. E. and by E. lat. 39 deg. 2 min. Afterwards we stood E. and the Wind coming scant at Night we run E. S. E. Tuesday 6th, sail'd E. and E. S. E. the Wind being at N. N. E. and N. E. We found we were fallen to Southward, the lat. being 36 deg. 40 min. nor could it be otherwise as long as that Wind continu'd. At Night the Wind N. N. E. sail'd East. Wednesday 7th, the Wind coming

Q q q 2

Gemelli.
1697. coming to N. E. we stood E. S. E. the lat. 36 deg. 10 min. At Night we tack'd about to N. N. W. to avoid falling off any more to Southward. Thursday 8th, held the same Course, the lat. 36 deg. 13 min. The Moon was Eclips'd at Night, but could not be seen by reason of the Clouds. Friday 9th, in the Morning the Wind N. N. E. and therefore we steer'd N. W. and by W. lat. 36 deg. 17 min. Saturday 10th, the same Wind continu'd, lat. 36 deg. 40 min. Sunday 11th, the Wind at East, we stood N. N. E. lat. 37 deg. 25 min. Monday 12th, Wind E. S. E. sail'd N. E. and then E. N. E. lat. 38 deg. Tuesday 13th, the Wind South, sail'd E. and by N. The Cold began to Nip, and the few Provisions there were left Corrupted. They were therefore us'd very sparingly, and in the best Messes they gave a Dish of Chocolate; in the Morning betimes, some other small Matter two Hours before Noon, and the Dinner late. In the Evening they gave another Dish of Chocolate, and later some Sweetmeats without any Supper. The Wind veer'd quite round the Compass. Wednesday 14th, the S. W. Wind put us on a great Rate, but in the Evening it came to West. We saw a large Branch of a Tree with small Boughs brought by the Current from the Continent. No Observation could be taken. Thursday 15, we made good way E. and by N. the Wind continuing at W. but afterwards came to N. W. The lat. by Observation 39; and we stood N. E. and by E. to get more to Northward, for fear the Wind should come to N. E. Abundance of Toninas, or Tunny Fishes were seen about the Galeon, which they say do not go far from Land. After Mid-night the Wind came again to S. and S. E. which continu'd all Friday 16th, and at Night chang'd to W. S. W. our Course was E. N. E. No Observation could be taken. At Night the Wind at S.

Saturday 17th, it blew hard at S. W. The Indians Born at Manila, where they are always in a Sweat, could not endure the Cold of this Climate. We held on our Course E. N. E. but only under a Fore-Sail, because it blew a Storm. The same Weather lasted Sunday so furious, that there was no saying Mass. The Wind afterwards failing, and coming again to N. W. we held on our Course E. N. E. The lat. 39 deg. 20 min. In the Evening, the Wind came again to S. W. and lasted part of Monday 19th, then changing to W. but blowing hard we could carry no more but a Fore-Sail and Top-Sail. The lat. 39 deg. 38 min. so that the Pilots thinking we had no occasion to gain more to Northward, we stood E. and by N. and the rather because at Night the Wind came to N. W. At Sun-set about fifty Ducks flew over our Prow, which made us conclude we were near Land. Tuesday 20th, steer'd East, which was our proper Course. That Day the North Wind blew the coldest we had yet felt, and it Hail'd for half an Hour, which I had never seen since I left Europe. This made the Blacks Aboard creep into the very Hen Coops; and those that got under the Deck could not be got out at Night to do their Business, if they had Beaten them never so much; so that they Poison'd the Place where they lay, and in the Morning all was full of Complaints of the Seamen. The lat. was found to be 39 deg. 20 min. having lost 18 min. of Elevation. Afterwards the head Pilot and his two Mates declar'd how much they had been mistak'n. The first reckon'd we were ninety Leagues from Land; the others seventy, and the other sixty under Cape Ateneo. The North Wind continu'd Cold with Hail, and we held our Course East. Wednesday 21st, being the last Day, within which I had laid a Wager that we should see Land; none being seen I lost a pair of Gold Buttons with Emeralds in them. The lat. 38 deg. 45 min. At Night the Wind came to West somewhat Stormy, and grew still more Boisterous till four of the Clock; after which we saw the Light, they call Santelmo, on the Main, and Fore-round Top, which was saluted by all, as a good Omen. The Ship row'd much all Night; and the Wind coming to N. W. we sail'd E. and by N. Thursday 22d, we stood the same Course, the Wind at N. N. E. lat. 38 deg. 3 min. Finding we fell away to Southward, by reason of the Current which run S. E. we back'd our Main-Sail. A great Storm of Hail fell, and the Wind blew hard in the Night at North, swelling the Sea, which made us beat furiously.

Friday 23d, the Wind N. N. W. with Hail and Rain. The Galeon lay with the Sails back'd, very much toss'd, the lat. 37 min. less than the Day before, the Wind and Current driving us to Southward; so our lat. was 37 deg. 26 min. The Pilot perceiving he fell off from the Land by losing Latitude, stood his Course N. E. and by E. the Wind being ing N. N. W. Saturday 24th, in the Morning the Wind N. W. sail'd N. E. and at Night with a Gale at W. S. W. stood E. N. E. This Day we saw another large piece of a Tree in the Sea. At Night it blew a Storm at W. with a rowling Sea, and we saw Santelmo on the Round a third time. Sunday 25th, held the same Course, but began to be out of hopes of seeing the Senas, or Weeds, tho' we were run as many Leagues as the Pilots had calculated would bring us near Land. A violent Wind with Hail beat the Ship, but at the same time drove it on a great Rate. The Wind still rising, after Noon we steer'd N. E. and by E. to discover Land, or the Senas or Weeds. At Night we run E. N. E. and E. S. E. the Pilot altering his Course as the Wind chang'd. The Storm lasted all Night, the Sea running so high, and beating with such fury, that twelve Men could hardly Manage the Helm. At Mid-night the Light Santelmo appear'd the fourth time above the Main-Mast; but the Storm continu'd at West. Monday 26th, held on our Course E. and E. N. E. with a boisterous Sea, but made much way. The lat. 37 deg. 15 min. Tuesday 27th, the fury of the Storm began to abate, after it had toil'd us for three Days, tho' we ran before the Wind; which now coming to S. W. we stood E. The lat. 37 deg. 45 min. At Night there blew a Storm which oblig'd the Pilot to back his Main-Sail, tho' the Wind was fair. Wednesday 28th, the Wind blowing furiously at S. W. we ran E. and by S. the lat. 37 deg. 20 min. For fear of being Ashore we lay by all Night. Thursday 29th, the Wind continu'd in the same Place, but not so violent, with much Rain. The Wind came to N. W. and then to S. W. so we ran to E. Friday 30th, we held the same Course. The lat. 37 deg. 16 min. but the Wind at Night coming to S. W. we steer'd E. and by N. with much Rain.

Saturday the first of December we held the same Course, the Wind at first being South, and afterwards S. W. That Day a Sailer dy'd, and was presently thrown over Board; being the first we lost, notwithstanding all our Sufferings. There was no other Distemper among us but a raging Itch, caus'd by the Salt Meat. Sunday 2d, steer'd upon the same Point, the Wind at South, and afterwards at S. W. Monday 3d, the lat. 38 deg. we stood East, and then S. E. the Wind at W. This Day we saw other signs of Land, which was still distant from us, tho' we made much way. It rejoic'd all Aboard to see a very long Weed, with a Root like an Onion; which they said had been pull'd up from the Mouth of some River, by the violence of the Sea. Hereupon the Sailors (according to Custom) having Power so to do, took the Bell and carry'd it to the Prow; and the Judges they chose of their Court (call'd in Jests the Court of Senas, or of Signs) made Proclamation to try the Officers of the Ship. Te Deum was Sung, and all Persons congratulated one another with the sound of Drums and Trumpets, as if we had been in our Port, whereas we were then 700 Leagues from it. This unseasonable Rejoicing is caus'd by that long and dreadful Voyage of above 3000 Leagues; which makes them think themselves in the Port, when they have 700 Leagues to it. The Sailer, who first saw the Weed, had a Chain of Gold given him by the Captain, and at least fifty Pieces of Eight by the Passengers, and others. It now appear'd that the Pilots had mistaken above 200 Leagues in their Accounts. That Night we were Becalm'd, and upon Tuesday Morning it blew gently at South, which made us stand East. Mass was Sung in Thanksgiving, and indeed it was a great Mercy that the Wind had for twenty Days blown hard right a Stern of us; for the Pilots had not manag'd it so, well lying upon the Tack between North and South, without advancing on our way. That Day we saw a Fish the Spaniards call Lobillo, with a Head and Ears like a Dog, and a Tail like that they Paint the Mairmaids with; and with it another Weed like a Sugar Cane, with a large Root. These being both signs of Land we alter'd our Course from E. to S. E. and by E. and thus fell off from the Land to make it more to Southward, as is generally practis'd when they meet the Senas, or Weeds. At Night the S. W. blew harder. By reason of the great Rain that fell, the Judges put off holding their Court till Wednesday the 5th, but the bad Weather would not allow of it then. We steer'd E. S. E. because the Wind was come to S. S. E. Abundance of Lobillos were seen, as also of the Weeds before mention'd, call'd Porras, with fresh Roots, several Spans in length. The Wind coming up contrary at Night we lay by.

Thursday 6th, we steer'd S. E. and by E. the Wind S. S. W. which afterwards came to W. S. W. the Rain, and dull Wea-

Comelli.
1697.Comical
Trial.

Weather continuing, and a boisterous Sea. At Night the Wind being contrary we lay by. Friday 7th, in the Morning dy'd another sick Man who was thrown Over-board. About Noon we sail'd S. E. and S. E. and by E. the Wind being S. S. W. A Canopy being set up for the Sailors Court of Senas, or Signs, after Dinner the two Oydores, or Judges, and the President took their Seats, being Clad after a Ridiculous manner. They began with the Captain of the Galeon, chief Pilot, under Pilot, Master, Mate, and other Officers of the Ship; and after them proceeded to the Trial of the Passengers. The Clerk read every Man's Indictment; and then the Judges pass'd Sentence of Death, which was immediately bought off with Money, Chocolate, Sugar, Bisket, Flesh, Sweetmeats, Wine, and the like. The best of it was, That he who did not Pay immediately, or give good Security, was laid on with a Rope's End, at the least Sign given by the President Tarpaulin. I was told a Passenger was once kill'd Aboard a Galeon by Keel-baling him; for no Words or Authority can check or persuade a whole Ship's Crew. I did not escape being Try'd, it being laid to my Charge that I Eat too much of the Fish they call Cachorretas. The Sport lasted till Night; and then all the Fines were divided among the Sailors, and Grummetts, according to Custom. The lat. this Day was found to be 37 deg. 50 min.

Saturday 8th, the Wind being at W. we sail'd S. E. and then the Wind growing Scant we steer'd E. S. E. At Night we lay by, the Wind being contrary. Sunday 9th, the Wind blowing very hard at S. W. we steer'd S. E. The lat. was 37 deg. 38 min. That Night we held on our Course S. S. E. for fear of Land; because there had been seen some Snakes in the Sea, brought out of the Rivers by the Tide. Monday 10th, steer'd S. E. with the Wind at West. The lat. 37 deg. 10 min. for the Sails being bad the Galeon made little way. All that Night we lay by; as also Tuesday 11th, the Wind being contrary. Here our Mizen-Sail was put up, which had been taken down at the Embocadero, or Mouth of the Channel among the Philippine Islands. We did not make any way till Wednesday 12th, when we stood E. S. S. and E. and by S. to discover Land. The Anchors were also taken up which had been some Months bury'd in the Hold. The lat. was 37 deg. This Day one of those Weeds call'd Borras was taken up, 25 Spans long, as thick as a Man's Arm towards the Root, and as small as a Finger at the other end. It was hollow within, like an Onion run to Seed, the Root, as has been said, resembling it, at the smallest end. From the thick part there grew out long Leaves, after the manner of Sea Grass, two Fingers broad, and about six Spans in length, all equally long, and of a yellowish Colour. Some question'd whether the thick, or the thin end were the Root; for not considering the nature of Weeds that grow in the Water, they could not persuade themselves, that the thick part being the top of the Plant could bear up; notwithstanding they saw the Shells of Fishes sticking to the small end; for this Plant grows on the Rocks under Water. Indeed it is the strangest of any I have seen in so many Countries I Travell'd. I tasted, and found it not Unfavorable; and some Sailors put it into Vinegar to Eat it. At Night, instead of gaining we lost Ground, the Ships Head lying West for fear of Land. Thursday 13th, we again steer'd S. E. and by E. with a S. W. Wind, all the Anchors being ready, to make use of them in time of Need. After Noon the Wind came to N. N. W. and therefore we run that Night S. E. Friday 14th, holding the same Course with the same Northerly Wind, we discover'd to the Eastward in the lat. of 36 deg. the Island of St. Catherine, twelve Leagues distant from the Continent, and a little beyond the Bay of Toque. Here are five small Islands, and St. Catherine's is the largest, and inhabited by Savage Indians. Any Man may guess what a joyful Sight this was to us; after having seen nothing for so many Months but Sky and Water. The lat. was found to be 36 deg. 4 min. Towards Evening we perceiv'd the aforesaid Island of St. Catherine was longish, we having sail'd along one side of it. Saturday 15th, we again saw Land steering S. E. and by S. on a calm Sea, as it is always observ'd to be near the Coast. The Wind coming to N. W. blew harder, we being in the lat. of 35 deg. 11 min. This Day the few Cannon the Ship had were taken out of the Hold to be placed on their Carriages; as also the Pieces to make the new Boat instead of that we turn'd Adrift. A fair stiff Gale continuing at Night N. W. we sail'd S. E. and by S. and so continu'd all Sunday. Every Body began to take Heart with the Hopes of being speedily deliver'd

Gemelli. ver'd from so many Sufferings, and particularly from stinking Provisions, which began to breed Diseases. The lat. upon Observation was found to be 33 deg. 49 min. Monday 17th, we steer'd the same Course, with the Wind at W. the lat 32 deg. 27 min. About Night, one of the Pilots two Mates dy'd, when by reason of his Robust Constitution, he least expected Death; so that with much difficulty he was persuaded to make his Confession; but a few Hours before he expir'd.

Tuesday 18th, all the Masses having been said for the dead Man, and other Rites perform'd, he was thrown into the Sea, with an Earthen Vessel ty'd to his Feet. We sail'd S. E. with a N. W. Wind. The lat. 31 deg. 10 min. The same day another Sailer dy'd. The same Wind continuing. Wednesday 19th, we held on the same Course, and they work'd at the Boat, the stillness of the Sea giving way to it. This Night dy'd the second Captain of the Galeon, whom the Spaniards call Capitan de mar y guerra, the Chief Commander being call'd by the great Name of General, he dy'd of the Disease call'd, Berben. Tho' there be no Souldiers aboard the Galeon, yet the Governor of Manila, besides the Commander in chief, call'd General, as I said before, appoints a Major, a Captain, and a Royal Ensign; who, have these Titles without any Command at all. When the Galeon returns to Manila, it carries 250 or 300 Souldiers, under 15, or 16 Captains, who buy those Commissions for the Honour; but as soon as they come to Manila, are reform'd, as the Neapolitans are serv'd when they go to Flanders or Milan. There are two dangerous Diseases in this Voyage, more especially as they draw near the Coast of America; one is the aforesaid Berben, which swells the Body, and makes the Patient dye talking. The other is call'd the Dutch Disease, which makes all the Mouth sore, putrifies the Gums, and makes the Teeth drop out. The best Remedy against it, is going ashore. This is no other but the Sea Scurvy. The same Wind continu'd. Thursday 20th, and we steer'd S. E. and by E. so that by break of day, we found our selves opposite to the Island Cenizas, ten Leagues distant from the Continent, and Coast close under it. The length of it, is about eleven Leagues, and the breadth four, and in some Places six, but it is naked of Trees, and unpeopled. Then we left the Island of Guadalupe on our right Hand, to Westward; which the Galeons generally make, because it is far from the Continent. After saying five Masses for the dead Captain, he was cast into the Sea. The lat. was found to be 29 deg. 9 min. and we steer'd S. E. and by S. Next we discover'd the Island Cerros, 17 Leagues distant from the Continent. It is 36 Leagues in compass, and two high Promontories at its Extremities, make it resemble a Saddle. At Night we alter'd our Course, for fear of being foul in the Island; yet we perceiv'd in the Dark, we were very near it, which put us into some fear, so we tack'd about to West and by N. standing almost back. Friday 21st, we found ourselves opposite to the same Island, and the Wind blowing at North, we steer'd S. E. we found we had but 28 deg. of lat. The same Wind held all Night, and on Saturday 22d in the Morning, the Wind at N. N. W. we sail'd S. E. the lat. 26 deg. 35 min. Sunday 23d held the same Course, with the same Wind, the lat. 25 deg. 19 min, and then we steer'd S. E. and by S. Monday 24th, the Wind being N. W. (which is frequent those Months on that Coast) we sail'd S. E. to make the Land, which lies N. W. and S. E. from Acapulco, to Cape Mendocino. The same day Proclamation was made by beat of Drum, to discover all Goods that were out of the Hold, for them to Pay the King's Duties for the Galeon. Tuesday 25th, five Masses were said after Midnight, in Honour of the Nativity of our Lord. We still steer'd E. S. E. to discover Land. The lat. 23 deg. 56 min. Having fir'd ten Cannon, and settled them in their Places, all Persons had Muskets given them, to defend our selves against Enemies, that are often met on the Coast of California. At Sun-set we discover'd Land, but at a great distance, so that we held on our Course at Night, with the same N. W. Wind. The same we did on Wednesday 26th, coasting along a high Country, opposite to Cape St. Luke, the Current driving us on towards Acapulco. This Day we pass'd out of the Temperate into the Torrid Zone, for upon Observation, we found 23 deg. 23 min. lat. and consequently we began to feel the heat. All Night the Wind shifted, till it forced us to Steer N. E. and after that it fell altogether. Thursday 27th, the Wind being W. we steer'd S. S. E. because we discover'd a high Land near on the East side, beyond Cape St. Luke. The lat. 23 deg.

23 deg. 10 min. Friday 28th, about break of Day we found our selves directly opposite to Cape St. Luke, which may be call'd a bald Promontory, because there is no sign of any Trees on it. The lat. of it, is 22 deg. 35 min. and there is a small Island close to the Point.

California. In the Year 1595 the Galeon St. Augustin, which was cast away in the Port de los Reyes, was sent to discover this Land, as yet unknown. In 1602, the Count de Monterey, who then Govern'd New Spain, by His Majesties Command, sent thither Sebastian Biscaino, with two Ships and a Tender. He sail'd from the Port of Acapulco, and having discover'd all the Coast, as far as Cape Mendocino, and the Neighbouring Islands, made a Sea Chart of the whole. This Chart I saw, with the Journal belonging to it, for one of the Pilots Mates had it; and there I read, that he had talk'd with Savage Indians, in several Places, and found them well Temper'd, Loving, and some of them inclinable to entertain Friendship with the Spaniards; which made them invite the People aboard the Ships to their Huts, about Port Monterey, in the lat. of 37 deg. That he found the same Inclination in the Inhabitants of the small Islands on the Coast; but that the Spaniards must be upon their Guard against the Indians of the Bay of St. Quintin, in the lat. of 32 deg. and against those who live along the Shore, in the lat. of 27 deg. because they are Warlike and Faithless. The Religious Man who writes this Account, says, the aforementioned Port of Monterey has Water enough; and that about it, there is Timber to build Ships, and for other uses; that there is plenty of Game on the Neighbouring Mountains, that is, Bares, Deer, and other Beasts, and of Wild Fowl in the Plain, as also of Ducks in the Lakes; that six Leagues N. W. of the Port, there is a rapid River, which has at least 7 Fathom Water, and another like it in the lat. of 41 deg. whose Current is so strong, that they could not get up it with all their Sails abroad. He also reckons the aforementioned Port de los Reyes, where the Galeon St. Augustin was lost, a good one; that of D. Gasper in the lat. of 38, and others that have Water enough; giving an Account of their depth or shallowness. He gives other particulars, which not belonging to our Journal, but to the Pilots of those Parts, I shall forbear to set down. I shall only observe, what I think most Strange, which is, that in those same Ports, there is such abundance of good Fish (besides the Whales out at Sea) that with a Hook in a day, a good Vessel might be stor'd, or almost loaded. The Inhabitants of those Parts use Canoes, or Boats, like those of the Marian Islands, as well for Pearl, as for other Fishing. Those that inhabit along the Coast of that Streight, which separates California from the Continent, use Boats made of small pieces of Wood bound together, call'd by the Spaniards Balsas, that is, Floats. They are safe on them, being excellent Swimmers; nor do they value half their Body being in the Water, because they go naked, covering only their Privities with Barks of Trees, and therefore are not afraid of wetting their Cloaths. Ashore they lye, where Night overtakes them. In Winter they warm the Ground with Fire, and putting away the Coals, lie down in the hot Ashes. They have several Languages; and among them some are Mortal Enemies, on account of their Savage Jurisdiction. Their Weapons are long Spears, with the Points of Wood hardned at the Fire; and Arrows headed with Flint. They eat raw Fish, and exchange Pearls, in which all that Coast abounds, and the more because the Fishery is forbid the Spaniards, and Conquer'd Indians, for Knives and other Trifles, having no Knowledge of Money. The Author of the aforesaid account, says nothing of the Religion of these People, or of the Product of the Earth, as things not belonging to the Profession of a Sailor. But we are told they are Idolaters, like all the rest, and that they live upon what they kill, upon Roots, Herbs, and Indian Figs, call'd Pitaxayas, or Tunas, whereof there is great Plenty in the Country. These Ships spent some Months in their Voyage to Cape Mendocino (lying in the lat. of 41 deg. 20 min. whose top is bare of Trees, and always cover'd with Snow) where many of his Men dy'd, and the rest came away Sick, being pierced by the violent Cold. Thus they were forced to turn back from the aforesaid Cape, tho' they saw another at some distance, which they call'd Cabo Blanco, or White Cape, set down in the Maps, in the lat. of 43 deg. In the Year 1684 the Marquess de la Laguna, or of the Lake, Governing New Spain, with the general applause of all Men, two other Ships with a Tender were sent thither, with several Missioners aboard. to draw those those People out of the Darkneſs of Idolatry. They kept within Cape St. Luke in the lat. of 22 deg. and entring the Streight between it and the Continent run up 182 Leagues to 29 deg. of lat. where finding the Streight but 7 Leagues over, they turn'd back for fear of the Flats and Currents, which ran very ſtrong in that Narrow. From the violence of theſe Currents they concluded that the Streight has a Communication with the North Sea, and that California is an Iſland. But on the other ſide the Flats, the want of Water, and narrowneſs of the Channel, ſhew there is no Paſſage much further, and that California is part of the Continent. They add, That this Continent Borders upon Great Tartary; and the Jefuits of Peking, Macao, and Canton, told me, That whilſt F. Martin Martinez was Miſſioner at Peking, a Chriſtian Woman of Mexico was brought thither a Slave, who going to him to Confefſion, and being ask'd how ſhe came to be a Slave, ſaid ſhe had been made a Slave in her Infancy in Mexico, and that ſhe was carry'd thence by Land into the Great Tartary, and laſtly into China: Moreover, that in ſo long a Journey ſhe had been carry'd in a Boat, but that only to croſs over ſome Streight at fartheſt, not above two Days Sail over. This is ſuppos'd to be the Streight of Aynan; through which ſome will ſay a Dutch Ship ſail'd out of the South into the North Sea. The Ships returning Anchor'd in the Bay and Port of St. Barnaby, where having built ſome Huts on the Shore, the poor Indians came to them rather to ſatisfy their corporal Hunger, than to cure the Diſtemper of their Souls. They devour'd all the Spaniards gave them; but refus'd Cloaths to cover their Nakedneſs. A-board our Galeon was a Religious Man of the Order of St. John de Dios, who had been A-board one of thoſe Ships. He told me, the King's Deſign had no Succeſs, becauſe the Commadore ſpent five Months to no purpoſe at the aforeſaid Cape; but to his own Benefit, exchanging Trifles with thoſe Wretches for good Pearls; that the Indians brought no other Proviſions, but Fiſh, which they eat Raw, Roots, and Herbs. That before he went off, the Commadore, to revenge the Death of a Grummet kill'd by thoſe Barbarians, loaded a Cannon with Partridge Shot, and when thoſe Wretches came to gather up the Scraps the Spaniards had left, he fir'd it upon them, killing two, and wounding ſeveral others. So that it is not to be queſtion'd, that if any other Europeans ſhould reſort to thoſe Parts, they would be ill receiv'd.

We ſteer'd next S. E. before a ſmall Gale at N. W. to croſs over the Streight of California. Saturday 29th, we ſteer'd S. E. and by E. with the Wind at N. W. and loſt ſight of Land. The lat. 21 deg. 32 min. Then we flood E. S. E. and made good way, at Night the Wind blowing hard at North. Sunday 30th, the Wind was quite laid, and afterwards blew gently at N. N. E. The lat. 20 deg. 45 min. Finding that the Current had carry'd the Ship too far from Land driving it to the Southward, we flood E. S. E. with but little Wind. For this reaſon on Monday 31th, we did not come upon the three little Iſlands call'd Las tres Marias, that is, the three Maries, as was expected, our Galeon being 40 Leagues from Cape St. Luke, and 20 from Cape Corrientes, which make the Mouth of the Streight of California. The three aforeſaid Iſlands are ten Leagues from the Mouth of the Streight bearing N. E. and S. W. from it. They have good Trees and Water, abundance of Game, and Salt Pits; for which reaſon the Engliſh and French Pyrates who have paſſ'd through the Streight of Magellan to Rob upon the South Sea, have ſometimes Winter'd there. We found the lat. 20 deg. 24 min. At Night there was but little Wind.

Tuesday the firſt Day of January, and of the New Year 1698, we were again Becalm'd, and there appear'd abundance of Lobillos about the Ship turning up their Tails and Paws in the Air like Juglers Dogs. We took five good Tortoiſes, whoſe Fleſh was exactly like Beef; but not ſo Savory as ours in Europe. The lat. was 20 deg. 11 min. The Calm held all Night. Wednesday 2d, putting our Parao, or little Boat into the Water we took ſeven Tortoiſes that lay floating Aſleep; and ſome Sharks and Dorees were ſtruck with a Harping Iron. The lat. 20 deg. 5 min. About Evening a ſmall Gale blew at N. W. and at Night drew to Northward. Thus holding on our Courſe on Thursday 3d, we diſcover'd the Land of New Spain, a great way beyond Cape Corrientes. All the Sea Coaſt along here is inhabited by peaceable Indians from 20 deg. 55 min. We could not get near the Land becauſe the Current beat us off; and for fear of certain Flats which lie oppoſite to Cape Corrientes. Upon an Obſervation we found by three Minutes less Latitude than the Day before, and this because we had steer'd East all Day and Night, and then E. and by S. Then we stood E. S. E. to draw near Land, and set Ashore the Messenger who is to carry the Letters to Mexico. We coasted along the said Cape at a great distance, where begins a Ridge of vast high Mountains call'd Sametla. At Night the little Wind there was fell, and Friday 4th, we found we had made very little way E. S. E. The N. W. Wind, which the Spaniards call Virazon, blowing again we advanced gently all that Day, not very far from the Mountains (which they say are rich in Gold and Silver Mines) seeing several small Snakes of various Colours swim by the Galeon, which were brought by the Current out of Rivers. Before Sun-set several Muskets were fir'd to give Notice to the Galiot, which is usually sent about that time from Acapulco to meet the Galeon, or to have some Boat of Indians come off with Refreshments, but it was all in vain; only at Night there were two Fires seen upon the high barren Mountains, suppos'd to be made by the Country People. This Night the Wind blew sometimes at N. W. and sometimes at S. W. Saturday 5th, in the Morning the new Boat was Launch'd, to Land the Messenger with the Letters for Mexico, and Madrid. F. Borgia, a Jesuit, who had the Dutch Disease, or Scurvy, and other sick Persons were also put A-board it, to be Land'd with all speed; but the News is known at Mexico by another Express sent by the Alcade of Chiamela, as soon as a Centinel from the Tops of the Mountains discovers a Sail at Sea. Upon the uncertain Tidings sent by the Alcade of a great Ship seen at Sea, which may as well be an Enemy, they begin their Prayers at Mexico, which are continu'd till the Arrival of the Messenger with the Letters from Aboard. When he Arrives all the Bells Ring for Joy; and this Noise lasts, till a third Express comes from Acapulco, who brings the Viceroy Advice of the Galeon from China, being come to an Anchor in the Port. The City Expresses the like Joy upon the Arrival of the Flota, the Citizens having no less Concern Aboard it, and the same is done at Manila, when the Galeon returns.

Nativity, and Chiamela Ports.

The Port of the Nativity is in the lat. of 19 deg. 33 min. has Water enough for any Ships, but there is a Rock at the Mouth of it. That of Chiamela is too shallow for any but small Boats; but it is large, and shelter'd by several Islands on the N. W. and S. E. and by the Continent. It abounds in Pearls, and good Fish. All this Tract of Land from Cape Corrientes to the Port of the Nativity, is call'd New Galicia, and is inhabited by conquer'd Indians. After the Calm, which generally happens every Morning upon that Coast, follows the Virazon, or settled Breezes, beginning at S. W. and coming to N. W. The Night we steer'd S. E. along the Coast. Sunday 6th, being the Feast of the Epiphany we set forward on the rest of the way, which is counted 80 Leagues from the Nativity to Acapulco, but let the Pilots say what they please, they are full 150 Leagues. A Gun was fir'd to give the Guards on the Coast to understand that the Ship was a Friend. At Sun-set we found our selves opposite to the Port and Village of Salagua. Monday 7th, steering W. N. W. before Noon we came up with the Port and burning Mountain of Colima, where much Salt is made, as well as at Salagua. Still Coasting along bare Mountains, and steep Rocks, about Evening the Wind having favour'd, we came upon the Coast of Motines, or Montines, as others will have it, because it is a space of Land full of scattering small Hills all alike. The Country is almost Desert, there being only here and there a Village, some Days Journey distant one from another. Tuesday 8th, we held the same Course, but the little Wind we had soon fail'd, and we found we had scarce gain'd 2 Leagues all the Day. In the Evening a small Gale came up at S. W. but fell again at Night, so that we advanced not an Inch. This Coast of Motines is wonderful Calm; the Sky being free from Clouds in the Day, and at Night serene, and the Stars bright; especially after the Rains are fallen, which begin in June, and last all December. Wednesday 9th, the Calm continu'd, and the Weather was as Hot as the Dog-Days in Italy. At Sun-set the Wind came up at N. W. and lasted some few Hours in the Night. The Calm held again Thursday 10th, only a small Gale at N. W. blowing in the Evening, which soon was over. Friday 11th, Calm again, but late in the Evening we had Wind enough to come up with the Port and Village of Signatanejo, before which there are three Rocks. Here is a good Pearl Fishery, and Salt made. From this Place the Country appears not so Barren, the Mountains are cover'd with some small Trees, and the Sea

Gemelli. Sea abounds in several sorts of Fish, whereof we saw Shoals skud about the Ship. The North Wind blew as is usual on that Coast, but we made little way, because it was none of the best for us. At break of Day, Saturday 12th, we were still opposite to Signatanejo. The Wind then quite fail'd, so that we lay all Night in the same Place with unsufferable Heat.

Sunday 13th, the Wind came a-head of us, so that we could do nothing but catch a number of Cachorretas, whereof, as of all other sorts of Fish there is great Plenty along that Coast. At length, after so many Months the Anchors were dropt about half a League from Land, but at Night we were plagu'd with abundance of Gnats, and little Flies, that stung most intolerably. The Calm continu'd Monday 14th, and when it did not, the Wind was contrary. We stood E. and E. S. E. changing our Course as the Land hapned to Wind. Tuesday 15th, in the Morning the Wind came up, North, which set us forward. The Boat return'd with but little fresh Provision, bringing an Account that the Letter-Carrier finding no Body in the Port of the Nativity that could furnish him with Horses, caus'd himself to be carry'd to the Port of Signatanejo; where some Fishers of Pearls had found him Horses to go to Mexico, and that the rest had set forward, some by Sea, and some by Land. It also brought the News of the Arrival of the Flota at the Port of Vera Cruz, with the Count de Canete, the new Viceroy of Peru; and Count Montezuma of Mexico, which two had fallen out before their Landing. At Sunset we sail'd by Salina, a Territory subordinate to the Alcade of Patatan, a Town a few Leagues distant in the Valleys. In this Country grow the best Bainillas in the World; which brings no small Profit to the Alcade, as do the Cacao, and Fishery of good Pearls. This Night the Wind being sometimes North, and sometimes E. N. E. and the Current against us, we rather lost than gain'd Ground; which continuing Wednesday 16th, till Night, we could not get beyond the Port of Patatan, which is capable of great Ships.

A Calm held us all Night, and Thursday 17th, the same contrary Wind started up; but after Dinner the usual Virazon, or settled Wind coming up, which S. W. we advanced, and run along the Coast del Calvario, full of Cacao-Trees, and excellent Bainillas. At Night we continu'd our Course E. S. E. with the Wind at North, so that on Friday 18th, we were in sight of the Port of Acapulco. Our chief Pilot was Sick of the Dutch Distemper, or Scurvy, and of the Berben, which made his Life in Danger. At Noon a fresh Gale blew at S. W. which set us very forward, we steering E. S. E. as we sail'd along the Coast of Coahuila, we perceiv'd a Piraguen or great Barque making towards us. Being come up it brought us fresh Provisions, which were an Ox, Fowls, Bread, Sweetmeats and Lemmons, sent by the Governor, and D. Francis Mecca, to our Commander; besides other Things for private Persons; so that every one had something to Refresh him. The North Wind which blew all Night carry'd us so far E. and by S. that on Saturday 19th, in the Morning, we found our selves opposite to the Village and Port of Coyucca, whose Coast being 14 Leagues in length abounds in Coco, Cacao, Bainillas, and other Things. The Wind holding fair, we entred the Port of Acapulco, at the great Chanel, and came to an Anchor there at five in the Afternoon. All the Night was spent labouring with the Anchors to draw the Ship up the Bay, so that before Day the Stern was made fast with a Rope to a Tree; for tho' the Port be good, and safe against all Winds, yet being winding like a Snail, the Wind that is good to come in at the two Mouths, one N. W. and the other S. E. is not good to carry a Ship up under the Shore.

Sunday 20th, all that were Aboard again embrac'd one another with Tears of Joy, seeing our selves in our desir'd Port, after a Voyage of two hundred and four Days and five Hours. Te Deum was Sung in Thanksgiving, but our Commander had not the goodness to Solemnize it with firing some Guns, saying the Powder would not be allow'd him at Manila. The Castle was saluted with seven Guns; and then answer'd with three, hanging out its Colours.

Inquiring of the Pilots how many Leagues and Degrees we had sail'd, I found them of several Opinions; and this because, we had not kept our Course, but ply'd backward and forward to no Purpose. Peter Fernandez, a Portuguese, Born in the Island of Madera, the chief Pilot, said, we had run 125 Degrees, and 2500 Spanish Leagues. But Isidore Montes d'Oca of Sevil his Mate, would have it to be 130 Degrees, and about 3000 Leagues. In sailing from Acapulco to Manila it is certain there is none of this Cemelli. needleless Compass taken, as has been observed before, for having fallen down from bare 17 Degrees to 13, they then run upon one and the same Parallel quite to Manila, right afore the Wind, which carries them in two Months and a half, or three at furthest, without any Storm; and therefore they run through only 118 Degrees, which being from East to West it is hard to measure the Leagues; but the Pilots guess them to be about 2200 Spanish. Another way may be taken, which is from Acapulco N. W. as far as Cape Mendocino, and then to Steer for the Marian Islands, and Manila; and then they say the whole Run is 117 Degrees, and allowing 17 Spanish Leagues to every Degree, they are 2159 Leagues.

All Sunday we waited for the King's Officers to make their Search, that we might go Ashore. They came three Hours before Night, and were the Castellan, D. Francis Mecca, the Cortador, or Comptroler, and the Guarda Mayor, or Surveyor, to whom was deliver'd the Register, or Entry of all that was Aboard the Galeon (to Regulate the King's Duties, which amounted to 80000 Pieces of Eight, including the Present to the Viceroy) and the Duplicates of the Letters to be sent to Madrid; all to be sent to Mexico with all speed, by another Express, to make use of them in Case the first sent by the other Messenger, we said was put Ashore, were lost. Having taken an Account who I was, they ex-press'd a great deal of Civility, and offer'd their Service to me. When they were gone, the Image of our Blessed Lady was carry'd Ashore, and I went along with it to the Parish Church, the Galeon in the mean while firing all its Guns. At Night I came back, and lay Aboard the Galeon, that my Equipage might not be left to my Slave, through whose Negligence it might have been Damify'd. Going Ashore upon Monday, I was told that the Centinel which looks towards Peru (there being two on a Mountain, whereof this is one, and the other looks towards China) had discover'd two Ships out at Sea, making towards the Port. They were suppos'd to be the Admiral and Tender of the Peru Fleet that came for the Count de Canete, the New Viceroy. I din'd with D. Francis Mecca, and before we arose from Table we heard a Cannon fir'd. I ask'd the meaning of it, and he told me it was to signify to the Ships that came, if Friends, that they might come into the Port; if others, to let them understand that the Spaniards were upon their Guard, and ready to Receive them. The Castellan sent Major Arambolo with the Boat of our Ship to view them, and bring an Account what they were, because the Boats of two Vessels belonging to Peru were not fit to go. It is fit I should here stop my Pen, that I may with fresh Courage continue my Voyage in the next, which is the last Volume.

The End of the Fifth Volume.

A VOYAGE

Round the WORLD,

By Dr. John Francis Gemelli Careri.

PART VI.

Containing the most Remarkable Things he saw in NEW SPAIN.

BOOK I.

CHAP. I.

An Account of what hapned to the Author at Acapulco, and of that City.

Gemelli.
1698.
Introduction.

I Cannot chuse but condemn those Persons, who suffering themselves to be too much dazzl'd with the Lustre of the noble Actions of the Antients, make it their Study to Extol them to the Skies; without reflecting, that these later Ages have furnish'd us with others more Heroick and Wonderful. He that hears talk of Ulysses's mighty Travels, will doubtless conclude, he plow'd up mighty Seas, and saw far distant Countries; yet if duly consider'd, he must find it will cost more time to read those very Travels in Homer, than to perform them. What can a Man, who has rambled but a small part of the World, judge of the Labours of Eneas, in coming out of Greece into Italy? And yet the Poet magnifies them at such a Rate, one would think no Body could chuse but have much Compassion for this Hero persecuted by so many Deities. However all this to me looks like nothing, when I call to mind the Folly of Alexander, surnam'd the Great, who before he had subdu'd the greater part of

Asia is said to have Wept for want of other Worlds to Conquer; and indeed had his Master Aristotle been rightly in his Senses, he might have given him to understand, how great a part of the World there yet remain'd, which had not heard so much as the Fame of his Victories. In short, which way soever I turn my self, I see nothing but a prodigious Vanity in the Antients, when they make a Judgment of their Actions in their Writings, and a great Blindness in the Moderns to make so great Account of them. In those Times any idle, or perhaps wicked Persons were receiv'd as Gods, for any Action they did for the publick Good; every little Spot of Land was a Kingdom; every two or three Legions of Romans (who to say the Truth were not such great Boasters as the Greeks) were reckned a great Army; and yet a Legion did not exceed 7000 Men. I will not go about here to mention all the Inventions, or glorious Exploits of our Times; but would only have it taken into Consideration, how those worth antient Poets and Historians would be con-

Gemelli.
1698. conformed, if rising from the Dead, in the last Age, they should have attempted to discourse of America, and of the Wealth, Nature has placed there, as the Subject deserves. They having before applauded Actions so inconsiderable, that they look like nothing, in the most Magnificent Terms, and rewarded them with no less than Divinity; could not afterwards think themselves capable of Panegyrizing Columbus, and of giving any tolerable Account of a Country, where we may say, all that is seen is precious, and that which is trampled on is Gold and Silver. We must therefore say, the World is not now grown Old, nor Valour decay'd, or other Virtues fled from the Earth, but that it is in the Prime of its Youth; and that those we call Virtues are rather increas'd, than diminish'd, because Man learns something new every day, and is continually rising above his Being. And if we see no such Men as those so Renown'd in Antiquity; it is, because those endowments, which being then rare, rais'd Admiration in others; being now become common, no Body thinks them worth taking notice of.

~~Being~~ now to Treat of what I saw in America, in this last Volume of my Travels round the World, I would have the Reader conceive so great an Idea of it, that whensoever he finds the things describ'd, not to Merit his admiration, he would lay the blame on my Pen, and not attribute it to any defect in the things themselves; for so doing, I am satisfy'd he will not deviate from Truth, and I shall attain my end, which is to deliver the Truth.

No Inns in Acapulco.

There being no Inn at Acapulco, I was forced to go on Monday the 21st, of January 1697, to the Monastery of Nuestra Señora de la Guca of the Franciscans, by whom I was courteously entertain'd.

Tuesday 22<sup>d</sup> In the Morning the Castellans Lieutenant told me, he had been upon Guard all Night, by reason of the Jealousy there was, that the two Vessels discover'd might be Enemies; because there was an account, that 5 French Ships had pass'd the Streight of Magellan, being sent by the most Christian King, to commit Hostilities in those Seas; besides the Catholick King's general Order, enjoinning all Castellans, and Governors of the South Coast, to be upon their Guard whensoever any Ships were seen at Sea. In the Afternoon the Major Ambrosio return'd, and clear'd all doubts, saying, they were the Admiral and Tender of the Peru Fleet. It was not long before the Admiral came into the Port, saluting the Castle with 5 Guns, which answer'd with three. The Galleon St. Joseph saluted with 7, and being answer'd with 11, return'd the Civility with seven.

Salute.

Wednesday 23<sup>d</sup>, I went aboard the Admiral, before he was Search'd. It was a good Ship, carrying 42 Brass Guns, indifferent large, and was come to take aboard the New Viceroy of Peru, the Count of Canete. Those aboard said they had spent 48 days between Panama and Acapulco, by reason of the mighty Storms, they met at Sea, and the tedious Calms on the Coast of New Spain; and that they had lost 21 Men, of a sort of contagious Distemper, besides one, who falling into the Sea, was drowned.

As for the City of Acapulco, I think it might more properly be call'd a poor Village of Fishermen, than the chief Mart of the South Sea, and Port for the Voyage to China; so mean and wretched are the Houses being made of nothing but Wood, Mud and Straw. It is seated in the latitude of 17 degrees, bating some few minutes, and in 26 of longitude; at the foot of high Mountains, which cover it on the East side, but make it very subject Distempers, from November, till the end of May. It was then the Month of January, and yet I felt as much heat, as I have done in Europe in the Dog-days, the reason whereof is, because there falls no Rain, during those seven Months last mention'd; but only a little between June and October, which does not cool the ambient Air. But it is to be observ'd, that in Acapulco, Mexico, and other places of New Spain, it never Rains in the Morning, and therefore he that will not be wet, must take care to dispatch his business before Noon, and then stay at home. This ill Temper of the Air, and the Mountainous Soil, are the cause that Acapulco must be supply'd with Provisions from other Parts; and therefore it is dear living there, because a Man cannot eat well under a piece of Eight a Day; the place besides being dear, is dirty, and inconvenient.

Acapulco.

For these reasons, it is inhabited by none but Blacks and Mulattoes, and it is rare to see any Native there, whose Complexion is of an Olive Colour. The Spanish Merchants, as soon as their business is over, and the Fair made by the Ships from China and those of Peru, which come came loaded with Cacao, repair to other Places; the King's Officers and the Castellán himself going away, because of the ill Air, and so the City is left desert. It has nothing good but the natural security of the Harbour; which winding like a Snail, as was said before, and having Water alike in all parts, the Ships are enclos'd in it with vast high Mountains, as if they were Wall'd in; infomuch that they are fastned to the Trees upon the Shore. There are two Mouths or Channels to go into it, a small one at N. W. and a great one at S. E. The Entrance is defended by the Castle with 42 Pieces of Brass Cannon, and a Garrison of 60 Men. This Port is worth to the Castellán who is also Justicia Mayor, or chief Magistrate 20000 pieces of Eight a Year, and little less to the Contador or Comptroller, and other Officers. The Curate, tho' the King's allowance to him be but 180 pieces of Eight, makes 14000 a Year, exacting a great rate for burying of strangers, not only that die at Acapulco, but at Sea aboard the Ships from China and Pern; as for instance he will expect 1000 pieces of Eight for a rich Merchant. The Trade of the Place being for Millions of pieces of Eight, it follows that every Man at his profession gets a great deal in a short time; so that a Black will scarce be satisfy'd with a piece of Eight a Day. In short all live by the Port, and the Hospital has not only a deduction out of the Souldiers pay, but great Alms from the Merchants, which are afterwards freely distributed among the other Monasteries and Missioners.

1697.
the Port.

Port Marques.

There is another Port S. E. of this, call'd del Marques, or of the Marques, only two Leagues distant from Acapulco, which has Water enough for great Ships and good Anchoring; whither generally the Ships of Pern, that dare not put into Acapulco, because they have prohibited Goods, resort to sell them.

These barren Mountains are not without Game, for there are Deer, Rabbits, and other Creatures; and as for Birds, Parrots; Turtles less than ours with the tips of the Wings of diverse Colours, which fly into the very Houses; Blackbirds with long Tails, Ducks and other sorts of Fowl, as well of those known in Europe, as of others peculiar to the Country.

Thursday 24th, there arose a Dispute between the General, as they call him, or Captain of the Galeon, and the Admiral of Pern about Precedence, the latter pretending the other ought to strike his Flag, because his was a Royal Man of War, and the Galeon of China a Merchant; and the General of China on the other hand pleading his Ship ought to take place because it was supreme (tho it had none under it) the other being but Vice-Admiral. Thus both kept up their Flags, one at the Maintopmast, the other at the Foretopmast-head, till they writ to the Viceroy to decide the Controversie.

Most of the Officers and Merchants that came aboard the Pern Ships, went to lie ashore, bringing with them two Millions of pieces of Eight to lay out in Commodities of China; so that Friday 25 Acapulco was converted from a rustick Village into a populous City; and the Huts before inhabited by dark Mulattos were all fill'd with gay Spaniards; to which was added on Saturday 26th a great concourse of Merchants from Mexico, with abundance of Pieces of Eight and Commodities of the Country and of Europe. Sunday 27th, there continu'd to come in abundance of Commodities and Provisions to serve so great a multitude of Strangers; for as has been said, the neighbouring Mountains are barren, and the little Fruit they produce, tho' to the Eye it appear well, is not to be eaten unless preserv'd. Monday 27th, there came some Fathers of Bethlem begging Alms to carry them to Pern. This is an Order founded by the Approbation of Pope Innocent the 11th. The Habit is like that of the Capucins, and they live like them on Charity; their Institution is to be Hospitaliers; it being their Business to serve and attend those that are upon their recovery, till they have recover'd their Strength; and this they do with extraordinary Charity, even so far as to serve them on their Knees. On the left side of their Cloak they wear the Figure of the Crib, and therefore the Spaniards call them Fathers of Bethlem. They as being a new Order, have but few Monasteries in the City of Mexico, City of Anges, Lima, Uguaxacca, Guatemala and other Places.

Acapulco
Fair.

A new Order.

Sunday 29th, going to visit a Spaniard Paraguay aboard the Man of War, he instead of Herb. Chocolate, treated me with the Herb of Paraguay. It grows in the Province of that Name, under the Government of Buenos Ayres, on a Tree no higher than a Man, and to me it seems not to differ much from the Mirtle of Europe. The Leaves are first dry'd in the shade, and then in an Oven; and thus dry'd are Transported in Leather Bags, and sold all about Peru, where they are more in use than Chocolate in Spain. It is accounted a wholesome Liquor in that dry Climate, for they say it is hot and moist; but on the other side, besides that it is not Nourishing; it is Insipid, and has one great Fault, which is that it provokes Vomiting, and takes away the Stomach. It is prepar'd by steeping in cold Water for half an Hour in a Matt, that is, a Dish made of a Calabash curiously Wrought and Adorn'd with Silver, and then mixing it with boiling Water and Sugar, and straining it from the Dust of the Herb before they drink it; after which they pour more Water upon that same Herb, which serves many more. Some throw away the first Water, and pour the hot upon a second Infusion. Abundance of it is spent in Peru, it being counted an excellent quencher of Thirst. The Peasants take it in cold Water, or else chew the Herb. See more of this in del Tecbo's History of Paraguay.

Gemelli.
1698.

Wednesday 30th, came to Town the Treasurer of the Count de Canete Viceroy of Peru, in order to go away to Lima, and borrow of those Merchants an hundred thousand Pieces of Eight for his Master, to pay the Debts he had Contracted, laying out 300000 Pieces of Eight to procure that Government, and carry his Family over to the Indies.

Thursday 31st. the Express return'd from Mexico with the Settlement of the Duties the Galeon was to pay, being 80000 Pieces of Eight; so that on Friday the first of February, they began to land the Bales. In the mean while abundance of Men dy'd aboard the Peru Ships, of a sort of contagious Distemper; and the more because the violent Heat and bad Air of Acapulco did not suffer the Sick to recover.

The Castle Saturday 2d, I went to see the little Castle, which having no Ditch or Bastions, is only remarkable for its good Brass Cannon, sufficient to defend the Port against any Enemy. Sunday 3d. I went to a small Spring at the foot of the Mountain, which is the only Place of Recreation thereabouts. The Water is very good, but the quantity small. Monday 4th, more Merchants came from Mexico, and yet I was told there were fewer than other Years; as fearing that the Merchants of Peru had enhanced the Price of their Commodities. Tuesday 5th annoy'd with the Heat much more on Wednesday 6th, I saw the arrival of a Merchant of Spain, according to the Custom of that Nation, endeavouring to talk me into a Bargain, gave me a violent Head-ach, and yet we concluded upon nothing. The Spaniards of New-Spain are of another Temper, for they deal Generously and Gentilely as becomes them. Thursday 7th, when all the Goods were unloaded, the Porters of Acapulco made a sort of Funeral, carrying one of their number on a Beer, and bewailing him as if he were dead, because their Harvest was at an end; for some had got three Pieces of Eight a Day, and the worst of them one. About two in the Afternoon there was a little Earthquake, the Noise whereof being heard from the Mountains, would have given People time to save themselves, tho' it had been violent. These Earthquakes are so frequent at Acapulco, that the People are forced of necessity to build low Houses. Friday 8th, the Mate of the Admiral having agreed with me for a Black at 400 Pieces of Eight, he felt his Lips, Checks and Legs, to see whether he was not swell'd; without considering that the Blacks have naturally thick Lips. Saturday 9th, I saw abundance of Mules come in loaded with Goods and Provisions. Sunday 10th, I stir'd not out because of the great Heat. Monday 11th, the Castellan invited the General of China, Admiral of Peru, D. Joseph Lopez, the Viceroy's Treasurer, me and several Officers of the Ships to see some very indifferent Jugling, perform'd by an old Genoese; and the best of it was, that the Guests paid for the Entertainment, the old Man going about when he had done, to receive every Man's Benevolence, without receiving any Thing from the Castellan. Tuesday 12th, I order'd my Affairs to set out for Mexico; hiring 3 Mules for 30 Pieces of Eight each, tho' it was to cost me six Royals a Day upon the Road for their Meat. Wednesday 13th, Afternoon the Peru Tender sail'd, to carry thither the aforementioned D. Joseph Lopez the Treasurer. He having contracted Friendship with me, would have persuaded me to go to Lima, where he said he would persuade the Viceroy to give me some good Post, but being resolv'd to return into Europe no Interest could draw me. I took my leave of all my Friends the following Days; and Sunday 17th being Shrove-Sunday, the Blacks, Mulattos and Mesticos of Acapulco, after Dinner ran Races with above an hundred Horses; which they perform'd so well, that I thought they far outdid the Graceros I saw ride at Madrid, tho' these use to practise a Month before they appear in 1698.

Gemelli.

in Publick. This is no Fable, for those Blacks would ride an Italian Mile, some holding one another by the Hand, others embracing, without ever loosing their hold, or being discompos'd in all that space.

C H A P. II.

The Author's Journey to the Imperial City of Mexico, and Description of the same.

ft Inn.

HAVING taken a Guide from the Custom-House, and the Castellan's Pals for the Guard half a League from Acapulco not to stop me, I set out on Monday 18th at four in the Afternoon, and having pass'd the Guard aforesaid, and gone up and down vast high Mountains, in all three Leagues Journey, I came to the Inn of Attaxo, consisting of five Cottages, Thatch'd and Palisado'd about. Here a legion of Gnats suck'd my Blood all the Night. The owner of the three Mules having stay'd behind at Acapulco, I was oblig'd to stay for him at the Inn on Tuesday 19th till Noon. I could not choose but have a bad Shrovetide in such a febrile Place, for the Host made me pay a Piece of Eight for a Pullet, and about a Penny a piece for Eggs. The Wood adjoining was full of Game; where for my Diversion I kill'd some Chiachilaccas. This Bird is of an Ash-colour, has a long Tail, is little less than a Hen, and as well Tasted. In the thickest of the Wood I found many fine Orange and Lemmon-Trees, whose Fruit was lost for want of some Body to gather it. Setting out hence, after travelling three Leagues over Mountains and through Forests of Brazil-Wood, I came about Sun-set to the Venta, that is, the Inn of Lexido, where I had a bad Night again by reason of the Gnats. Wheaten Bread is quite banish'd from those Parts, for the Inhabitants eat none but Cakes made of Maiz or Indian Wheat, which is also given to the Horses and Mules instead of Barley. They first wet, and then grind it on a Stone as they do Cacao. The Cakes made of that Dough they bake on an Earthen Pan, over a gentle Fire. Hot they are tolerable; but when cold I could scarce get them down.

rd. Inn.

bread.

biociaccos sort of fruit.

I set out early upon Wednesday the 20th, and travelling through a plainer Country, came after four Leagues riding to the Inn, call'd de dos Arroyos, or of two Brooks, where I rested till towards the Evening. An Indian of this Place gave me a sort of wild Fruit to eat (call'd Shiociaccos, that is sharp) red and white, as long as a Finger, and of the taste of a

Cherry. With it there were little black Seeds, like Pepper. The Tree that bears it, is usually ten Spans high, and its Leaves long. The Air being somewhat cooler, we travell'd four Leagues farther, and lay at a Place call'd los Pozuelos. Before Night I kill'd a wild Cock, which the Indians call a Pheasant. It is bigger than a Capon, has a long Tail and Wings, a Tuft on the Head, and black Feathers, but the Breast black and white, and the Neck bare like a Turkey Cock; the Flesh of it is not unsavoury. The Night was cool and without Gnats, tho' we lay under the Canopy of Heaven. Thursday 21st in the Morning, we set out early to go take some Refreshment at the Pilgrims Inn, on the Mountain of the same Name. Thence we rode very cautiously along the sides of the Mountain del Papagayo, or of the Parrot, where a Man must climb a League up a solid Rock, and then go as far down, no less troublesome a Road to come to the River of the same Name, which I forded over; but in Winter when swell'd with the Rains they cross it upon Floats. These are made of Planks ty'd across, and bore up by 20, or sometimes 60 Calabashes, according to the bigness fastned under it. When the Float is loaded, an Indian leaps into the Water, drawing it with one hand and swimming with the other, till he brings it to the other Bank, and the Current always carrying it down, therefore the Indian afterwards takes it on his back, and carries it to the right place. Having pass'd the River, we went to lye at the Inn of Caccavotal (so called because formerly there were abundance of Cacao Trees in that place) having travell'd six Leagues this Day, over very uncouth Mountains. At Night I kill'd two Chiachilaccas, which serv'd at Supper, for want of other Meat.

Papagayo-
Hill.

Floats:

Friday 22d, after riding four Leagues of Mountainous way, we rested at Los dos caminos, or the two Ways, the first Village in the way from Acapulco. We lodg'd in the Town House, whither Indians came to do us any Service we had to Command. Among these Mountains nos a V.

Dos cami-

Gemelli.
1698.
Caxones
Mountain.
the Air was cooler than that we came from. Four Mules quite spent were left in this Village, and others taken in their room. Setting out we went up first and then down the dreadful steep Mountain de los Caxones, which is a League high, and having rode four Leagues came to the Guard of the Customs of Accaguisotla, in which Cottage we Supp'd and Lay. The Officers search'd my Goods, and made good my Pass I brought from Acapulco.

Saturday 23d, we set out late and travelling four Leagues, part Mountain and part Valley we came to the Trapichi of Massatlan, so call'd because there is a good Sugar Work. Our Muletiers who reckoned at Pleasure counted these but two Leagues, because they were never weary with Riding. Here we found good Bread, which is no little Rarity among the Mountains, whose Inhabitants eat none but little Cakes of Indian Wheat. Not far from this Place is a Silver Mine, and abundance of Deer. After Dinner we travell'd two Leagues further to the Village of las Pataquillas, consisting of a few Mountains at the foot of the Hill, and lay in the Town-House. At Night we felt much Cold, the Climate differing from that of Acapulco.

Pataquillas
a Village.

Chilpan-ingo.

Sunday 24th, having rode two Leagues we heard Mass at the Village of Chilpan-ingo, a convenient Place, in the midst of the Valley, so plentiful of Maiz or Indian Wheat, that they lay up their Harvest in little Country Houses, or Barns made of Wood and Clay. The Maidens in this Place to beautify their Faces and secure them against the Cold, daub them with a yellow Flower pounded. We went hence two Leagues further to lye at Zumpango, another Village in the Valleys; which the Spaniards call Canada, because there is a Road eight Leagues in length without shelter of any Trees. In all these publick Houses there is an Innkeeper, and other Indians, who serve Travellers in dressing their Meat, and find them Salt and Fewel for nothing, being paid for it by the Publick. They keep the Lodgings clean, and have always an Altar in them, with an Image of our Saviour or some Saint.

Zumpango.

Monday 25th, I set out betimes, and travell'd through a Plain like that of Tirol, riding nine Leagues without drawing Bit, to the River de las Balsas, so call'd because they cross it on Balsas or Floats. Both this River and that of Papagayo run down to the South Sea. The Indians of the neighbouring Village pass'd over all our Goods and us on Floats, as was said above; the Current carrying them down a Musket shot before they came to the further Bank. Other Indians carry'd the Mules over the Ford, which was not above a Musket shot over. We lay in the Field, two Leagues from the Place they call Nopalillo Canada del Carrizal. About ten at Night hapned a terrible Earthquake, which lasted whilst a Man might say the Creed twice. It could do no harm to us who were in the open Field; but at Acapulco as was afterwards known, it laid several Houses level with the Ground.

Tuesday 26th before Sun-rising, whilst the Mules were Sadling the Earthquake return'd; being preceded by a noise like a Cannon shot. Mounting we travell'd four Leagues on an indifferent good Road; by the way I shot several Chiaccalaccas and other Birds, whereof there is great plenty. Passing by Rancho de Palula, we came to dine near a little Lake; and riding three Leagues further lay at Pueblo Nuevo, that is, new Town, where there is a great Lake full of Ducks.

*Pueblo nu-
ovo.*

Wednesday 27th, after travelling six Leagues over rugged Mountains, we rested by the Water; and then riding as many Leagues more, foorded a great River at Night, and lay at the Village of Amacuzac, of the Liberty of Cornavacca. Such good Order is taken, that whenever Travellers come in, the Topile and Mesonero, or Innkeeper come immediately to furnish them with all things necessary. The Topile, which in the Mexican Language signifies, Sergeant or Servant, is oblig'd to buy all the Passengers stand in need of, and the Innkeeper to dress it, make the Beds, and see there be no want of Utensils, Water and Fewel.

Amacuzac.

Thursday 28th, after three Leagues riding, we came to Aguaguezingo, where having rested a little, we went two Leagues further to Alpugleca a Village of Cornavacca, and there din'd. In the publick House we found a Teponaste, or Drum, such as the Indians us'd formerly to beat. It was made of a piece of Timber hollow'd, four spans long, and both ends cover'd with Skins, and made a noise that might be hear'd half a League off. After Dinner travelling a League, I pass'd by Cychitepec, where I saw an indifferent Church of religious Men, and three Leagues further we lay in the open Field. This Day we cross'd two large Rivers.

*Aguague-
zingo.
Alpugleca.*

Friday

Gemelli.
1698.
Cornavaca.

Friday the first of March, after a Leagues riding, we halted at Cornavaca, the chief Place of the Alcadia, or Government of that Name, belonging to the Marquess del Valle, or of the Valley, which reaches to the Valley of Amacuzac. The Place is Rich, because inhabited by many Merchants attracted by the goodness of the Soil. Having taken some Refreshment I set out again, and at the end of half a League, having pass'd the small Village of Taltenango, about a League further, the way very troublesome, came to the Top of the Mountain of Cornavaca, where stands a Village call'd Guichilac. The Inhabitants of it make good Pulcre, a Liquor, which being drawn from the Plant call'd Maghey, and work'd up with some Herbs, will make Men Drunk like Wine. The Excise upon this Liquor formerly yielded the King 100000 Pieces of Eight, but he Prohibited it, because of the Brutalities the Indians committed when they were Drunk. I drank some of it, as it came from the Plant, and thought it tasted like the Mead in Spain, the Colour of it was like Whey, or Milk and Honey. Going three Leagues further, we lay all Night on a horrid Mountain full of Pine-Trees; because the Owner of the Mules, to save the Expence of Towns, made thirty he had with him Graze upon the Common; which made them so Weak, that only five of them Wrought in their Turns. The worst of it was that in Mountainous Places, there was none but wither'd Grass, such as the Country People burnt to Manure the Ground. That Night so much Snow fell, that in the Morning my Quilt was quite cover'd, by which you may guess how Hot I lay.

St. Augustin de las Cuevas.

Saturday 2d, we went down the Mountain along a craggy Road, and travell'd four Leagues and a half to St. Augustin de las Cuevas; having first paid a Royal for every Mule to the Guards of the Road, whom we found at the foot of the Mountain. The F. Procurator of the Mission of China, who was in this Place treated me very Civilly; for which reason I left him some Goods, that might have caus'd me Trouble at the Custom-House of Mexico. We went on with a great Storm of Wind and Rain; and passing by another House of Toll, three Leagues further entered the City of Mexico, over a Causeway or Terrace made upon the Lake. The Officer that is generally at the entrance of the City, went with me to the Custom-House, to have my Trunks search'd; but the Officers there were extraordinary Civil to me, only just opening them, and seeing what was at the Top. Being dismiss'd at the Custom-House, I went away to an Inn very ill serv'd, to stay there till I had provided a Lodging.

Monday 4th, I went to pay my Respects to Count Montezuma the Viceroy; who receiv'd me Courtcously. Going out I met the Sindics, or chief Magistrates of two Indian Villages, attended by many People, they being come in the Name of all their People. It is their Custom, when they are to present a Petition, to carry a great Tree, cover'd with Flowers, which they leave with the Viceroy. An Express from Acapulco brought the News of the Mischiefs done there by the Earthquake on the 25th and 26th of the last Month. In Mexico some Monasteries were overthrow'n, and some Houses dammag'd.

Tuesday 5th, I heard Divine Service in the Cathedral, and Wednesday 6th, went to the Mint, where I was told they coin'd 16000 Pieces of Eight a Day. Thursday 7th, I saw the Monastery of St. Bernard, of Nuns of that Order. It is very large, and the Church adorn'd with rich Altars. That of our Lady of Valvaneda is not inferior to it, where on Friday 8th, I saw the Church serv'd by venerable Priests, and noble Nuns in the upper and lower Quire.

Saturday 9th, the Obsequies of the Queen-Mother were celebrated in the Church of Jesus Maria, a Mausoleum being erected in the middle of it, and the Viceroy, Magistrates, and Nobility being present. In this Monastery they receive without any Portions the Daughters of the Successors of the first Conquerors, and of other well deserving Persons; but they must have the King's Order for it, who allows for their Maintenance; other Maids are admitted paying their Portions.

Sunday 10th, four Oydores, or Judges, and a Fiscal, or Solicitor General set out for Acapulco, in their way to Manila, to succeed those there who were to come to Mexico, to be employ'd in the Courts there. D. Michael de Isurrieta, at whose House I was entertain'd desir'd me to go with him to St. Augustin de las Cuevas, to bear his Nephew D. Francis de Castro y Gusman, who was going Captain of Foot to Manila, Company; which I did, as well to oblige D. Michael, and to bring away the Goods I left there with the Father Procurator.

We went in a Coach, and came late to Gemelli. that Hospitium of the Franciscans. Monday 11th, after the Captain was gone 1698. with the Oidores we return'd to Mexico.

Mexico
City describ'd.

Mexico, so call'd by the Spaniards, and by the Indians Tenochtitlan, is in the Latitude of 19 deg. and 40 min. and in the midst of a Valley, almost flat, fourteen Spanish Leagues in length from North to South, seven in breadth, and about forty in compass; but if it were measur'd from the tops of the Mountains next to Mexico, it would be 70, or perhaps 90 Leagues.

On the East side of this Valley is a Lake, into which several Rivers, and other Waters fall; which stretches Southward, as far as the City of Tescuco. The Ridge of Mountains that enclose it on all sides in the lowest Place is 42500 Spanish Varas, or Yards above the Lake.

The City is seated in a perfect Plain, near, or rather exactly in the middle of the Lake; and therefore by reason of the instability of the Soil, the Buildings are half bury'd, in spite of the Inhabitants, who use all means to lay the Foundations secure. The Plat of it is square; and it looks like a curious Chess-board, by reason of its long, wide and well pav'd Streets, lying North, and South, East and West; so that the whole Extent of it may be seen, not only from the middle, as Palermo from the great Market, but from any part of it whatsoever. The Compass is two Leagues, and the Diameter half a League, the whole being almost a perfect Square. There are five ways into the City, over as many Causeways, or Banks on the Lake, without Walls, or Gates: The ways are call'd la Piedad, or the Pity; St. Antony, Guadalupe, St. Cosme, and Chapultepec; the Calzada, or Causeway del Penon, which Cortes march'd over, when he came to Conquer, being now quite taken away. For excellent Structures and Ornaments of Churches it may be said to vie with the best of Italy; but for beautiful Women it surpasses it; for they are most beautiful, and excellently shap'd. They are great admirers of Europeans, whom they call Cathopines; and they had rather Marry them, tho' never so Poor, than their own Country People, call'd Criollos, who are Rich; seeing them fond of the Mulatto Women, whose ill Customs they have imbib'd, as they suck'd their Milk. For this reason the Criollos have such an aversion for the Europeans, that they Jeer them, as they go along the Streets; giving one another Notice from Shop to Shop, by crying Elis, which signifies 'Tis he; and therefore the Spaniards newly come to the City, have sometimes in a Passion fir'd Pistols at them. Nay, they carry this Prejudice so far, that they hate their own Parents because they are Europeans.

Mexico contains about 100000 Inhabitants; but the greatest part of them Blacks and Mulattoes, by reason of the vast number of Slaves that has been carry'd thither. Another reason is, That all the Lands being in the Hands of Church-men, as well as the Houses; the Spaniards, and other Europeans, finding no way to get Estates real, as all discreet Persons ought to do, will not easily be perswaded to Marry, and generally they themselves become Religious Men. Thus, tho' within the City there be 22 Nunneries, and 29 Monasteries of Monks and Friars of several Orders, they are all richer than they ought to be. That the Reader may have some Insight into this, the Cathedral alone maintains nine Canons (besides one for the King, whose Revenue the Inquisition enjoys, as it does one in every Cathedral throughout New Spain) five Dignify'd Priests, viz. the Dean, Archdeacon, Schoolmaster, Chanter, and Treasurer; six Demi-Canons, and six half Demi-Canons; one head Sacristan; four Curates chosen by the Viceroy; twelve royal Chaplains, elected by the Chapter; and eight others call'd of Laurenzana, these also appointed by the Chapter; all the rest being appointed by the King. The Archbishop takes to himself out of the publick Stock 60000 Pieces of Eight a Year; the Dean 11000; the four other Dignify'd Priests 8000 each; the Canons 6000; the Demi-Canons 5000; the half Demi-Canons 3000; each Curate 4000; every Chaplain 300; and the other Priest and Attendants less, being in all to the number of 300. So that upon Computation it will appear that the Cathedral of Mexico has above 300000 Pieces of Eight of yearly Income; reckning together with the Livings the allowance for Repairs, Wax, Vestments, and other Necessaries for the Divine Service. In short, Mexico is a little City six Miles in compass, a small space for so great a number of Churches, which cause a want of Houses for Inhabitants.

The Weather in Mexico is very unequal all the Year about, it being for the most part both Cold and Hot at the same

Monast-ries:

The Cathedral.

Climate.

same time; that is, cold in the Shade, and hot in the Sun. In other Respects the Air is not bad, being neither Hot nor Cold to any great Excess at no time of the Year; tho' the tender Inhabitants complain of the Cold being somewhat sharp in the Morning; and of the Heat from March till July. From that time forward the Rains quell it, as happens at Goa; otherwise both those Countries being under the torrid Zone would be Inhabitable, as the antient Philosophers imagin'd. From September the Rains are less frequent, and very small till March. The Indians reckon those pleasant Nights Cold, which begin in November, and hold till February; but the Europeans, who are not so Tender, like the Climate, because there is no great Heat, or Cold all the Year, and the Water they drink is as cool as the ambient Air. The Soil by reason of the great Rains that fall, gives three Crops in a Year; but in several Places. The first is call'd de Mayo, that is, of watering, and falls out in June, being of the Corn sow'd in October. The second, nam'd del Temporal, that is, of the Season, is in Octo- ber, of what was sow'd in June. The third, because very uncertain is term'd Aventurera, that is, Accidental, the Land being till'd in November, along the sides of the cool Mountains, to Sow it as the Weather proves. The Maiz, or Indian Wheat, which is the chief Sustenance of the Natives is sow'd the earliest in March, and the latest in May, and yields a wonderful Increase. For this reason it is cheap Living at Mexico in comparifon of other Cities; half a Piece of Eight a Day being enough for a Man's Expence. But it is to be observ'd, That there being no Brass Money, and the least Piece in Silver being half a Royal, that is, three Pence, it is very chargeable buying Fruit. However it is only in the Market of Mexico, that Cacao-Nuts are Current, in buying of Herbs, and they give 60, or 80 for a Royal, according as the Price of Cacao runs higher or lower. In short, Mexico must be allow'd to be an excellent City, for all the Year round there are Flowers and Fruits of all sorts in its Markets.

C H A P. III.

Of the Original of the City of Mexico, its Conquests, and the Chronology of its Kings.

A Mexican Fable of the Original of Mexico.

THE antient Histories of Mexico make mention of a Flood, in which all Men and Beasts Perish'd; and only one Man and Woman were sav'd in a Boat, which in their Language they call Acalte. The Man according to the Character by which his Name is express'd, was call'd Coxcox, and the Woman Chicquequetzal. This Couple coming to the foot of a Mountain, which according to the Picture was nam'd Culhuacan, went ashore, and there had many Children, all born Dumb. When they were multiply'd to a great Number, one Day a Pigeon came, and from the top of a Tree gave them their Speech; but not one of them understood the others Language, and therefore they divided, and dispers'd, every one going to take possession of some Country. Among these they reckon fifteen Heads of Families, who hapning to speak the same Language, join'd together, and went about to find some Land to Inhabit. When they had wandered an Hundred and four Years (which is denoted by the Figure at Number 1.)

they came to the Place they call Anatlan, and continuing their Journey thence, came first to the Place call'd Chapultepec, then to Culhuacan, and lastly to the Place where Mexico now stands; tho' the Mexican Histories do not always give these Places the same Name. Thus Mexico was founded in the Year the Indians call Ome cagli, which answers to the Year 1325. from the Creation. The pointed Line is the way the Founders travell'd; the Figures by it are the Places where they made any stay; the Circles the number of Years every one continu'd there. The meaning of it all is express'd in every thing by a Character or Figure.

The design the Author had in Copying this Picture from an antient Original drawn by the Indians in the time they were Pagans, was to show they were as Antient as the Flood; tho' the Chronology is not so Exact as it should be, there being too few Years allow'd between the Flood and Founding of Mexico. The Reader will the better conceive it by the following Cut, and by

Gemelli.
1698.
Wild People.

by what shall be said more distinctly hereafter. See Acoſta's nat. and mor. Hiſt of the Ind. lib. 7. cap. 2. pag. 453.

Thus it appears, That the firſt Inhabitants of New Spain were a ſort of wild People, ſince they kept on the uncouth Mountains, without Tilling the Land, without Religion, without any Form of Government, and without Cloaths; living after a diſorderly Manner like Beaſts; feeding upon what they kill'd, (whence they had the name of Otomies, and Chichimecas) tho' they were foul Creatures; and for want of them, on Roots; and lying in Dens, and under thick Buſhes. The Women follow'd the ſame Employments leaving the Children hanging on the Trees. Now at this time in New Mexico and Parral there is ſuch a ſort of Men, deſcended from Chichequetzal and Coxcox, who remain'd in barren and mountainous Lands, without troubling themſelves to ſeek for a better Soil; and who ſtill live upon what they kill, and never join together unleſs it be to Rob and Murder Travellers. The Spaniards have not been able to Subdue them, becauſe it is in vain to look for them, who hide themſelves in thick Woods, where they have no ſetled Place of Abode; and to endeavour to Fight them would be no other than hunting of wild Beaſts.

Thoſe more polite and ſociable Men deſcended from ſeven of thoſe fifteen we ſaid, ſet out to find a good Country, are call'd Navatlacas, to diſtinguiſh them from the Chichimecas; and theſe, as their Hiſtorians believe, came from a remote Country, towards the North, thought to be that now call'd the Province of Aztlan, or Tencul, in New Mexico. Some Spaniſh Authors will have it, that theſe Navatlacas, coming out of that Country in 820, ſpent 80 Years before they came to Mexico, where they ſetled in the Year 900. But this does not agree with the Picture before-mention'd, or the Hiſtories of the Indians, who will have it to be in 1325, as has been ſaid. The occaſion of their Stay, was their ſtopping now and then in Obedience to an Idol of theirs, to People ſome Places; whence they afterwards departed by Order of the ſame Idol. I ſpeak according to their Hiſtories and Traditions. They came not all together to the Lake of Mexico, but one after another. The firſt were the Su-chimilci, which ſignifies Gardeners of Flowers, who ſetling on the South Bank founded a City of their own Name. The next a great while after, were the Chicſci, that is, People of the Mouths, and built a City of their own Name, not far from the former. Then came the Tapanecas, or People of the Bridge; who fixing on the Weſt ſide of the Lake, increas'd to ſuch Numbers, that their Metropolis was call'd Azcapuzalco, that is, Ants Neſt. They were a long time very Powerful.

Then came the Founders of Teſcuco, call'd Culhua, or the crooked People, becauſe in their Country they had a crooked Mountain, and planted towards the Eaſt. The Lake being thus beſet by theſe four Nations, when the fifth Family of the Tlatelnuicas, that is, Ignorant Mountain People came, finding all the Plains as far as the Mountains taken up, they went away to a Fruitful hot Plain, beyond the Mountains, and there built the City Quahuac, which ſignifies an Eagle, and is at preſent corruptly call'd Quernavaca, and is the chief Place of the Eſtate of the Marqueſs de Valle, and Duke of Monteleon. The ſixth Generation was that of the Tlaſcaltecas, which ſignifies People of Bread (in Engliſh generally call'd Tlaſcallans) who paſſing beyond that burning Mountain always cover'd with Snow, which is between Mexico and Puebla de los Angeles, or the City of Angels, founded many Cities and Villages to the Eaſtward, calling the Metropolis Tlaſcala. This Nation afterwards aſſiſted the Spaniards to Subdue Mexico, and in Requital was made Tax-free.

Of all the Chichimecas, or wild People, none oppos'd the Tlaſcallans but the Inhabitants of the oppoſite ſide of the aforeſaid burning Mountain; but they not regarding the Gigantick Statute of their Enemies, knew how to overcome them by Policy. The Barbarous Chichimecas, ſeeing theſe ſix Nations keep a friendly Correſpondence with one another contracting Marriages together, marking out their Borders, and vying to out-do one another in good Government; they alſo began to take up a better Form of Living, covering their Privities, building Huts, obeying their Superiors, and forſaking many of their brutal Cuſtoms. However, they reſolv'd ſtill to keep in the Mountains remote from any Commerce with the others; and from theſe it is believ'd the Inhabitants of the other Provinces of the Indies derive their Original.

After the aforeſaid ſix Nations had been ſetled there 302 Years (according to

Founders of Cities.

D. Carlos Siquenza in which ient Mexicans travell'd when they e Lake, call'd at present of Mexico, he names of places & other things.

Chapultepec

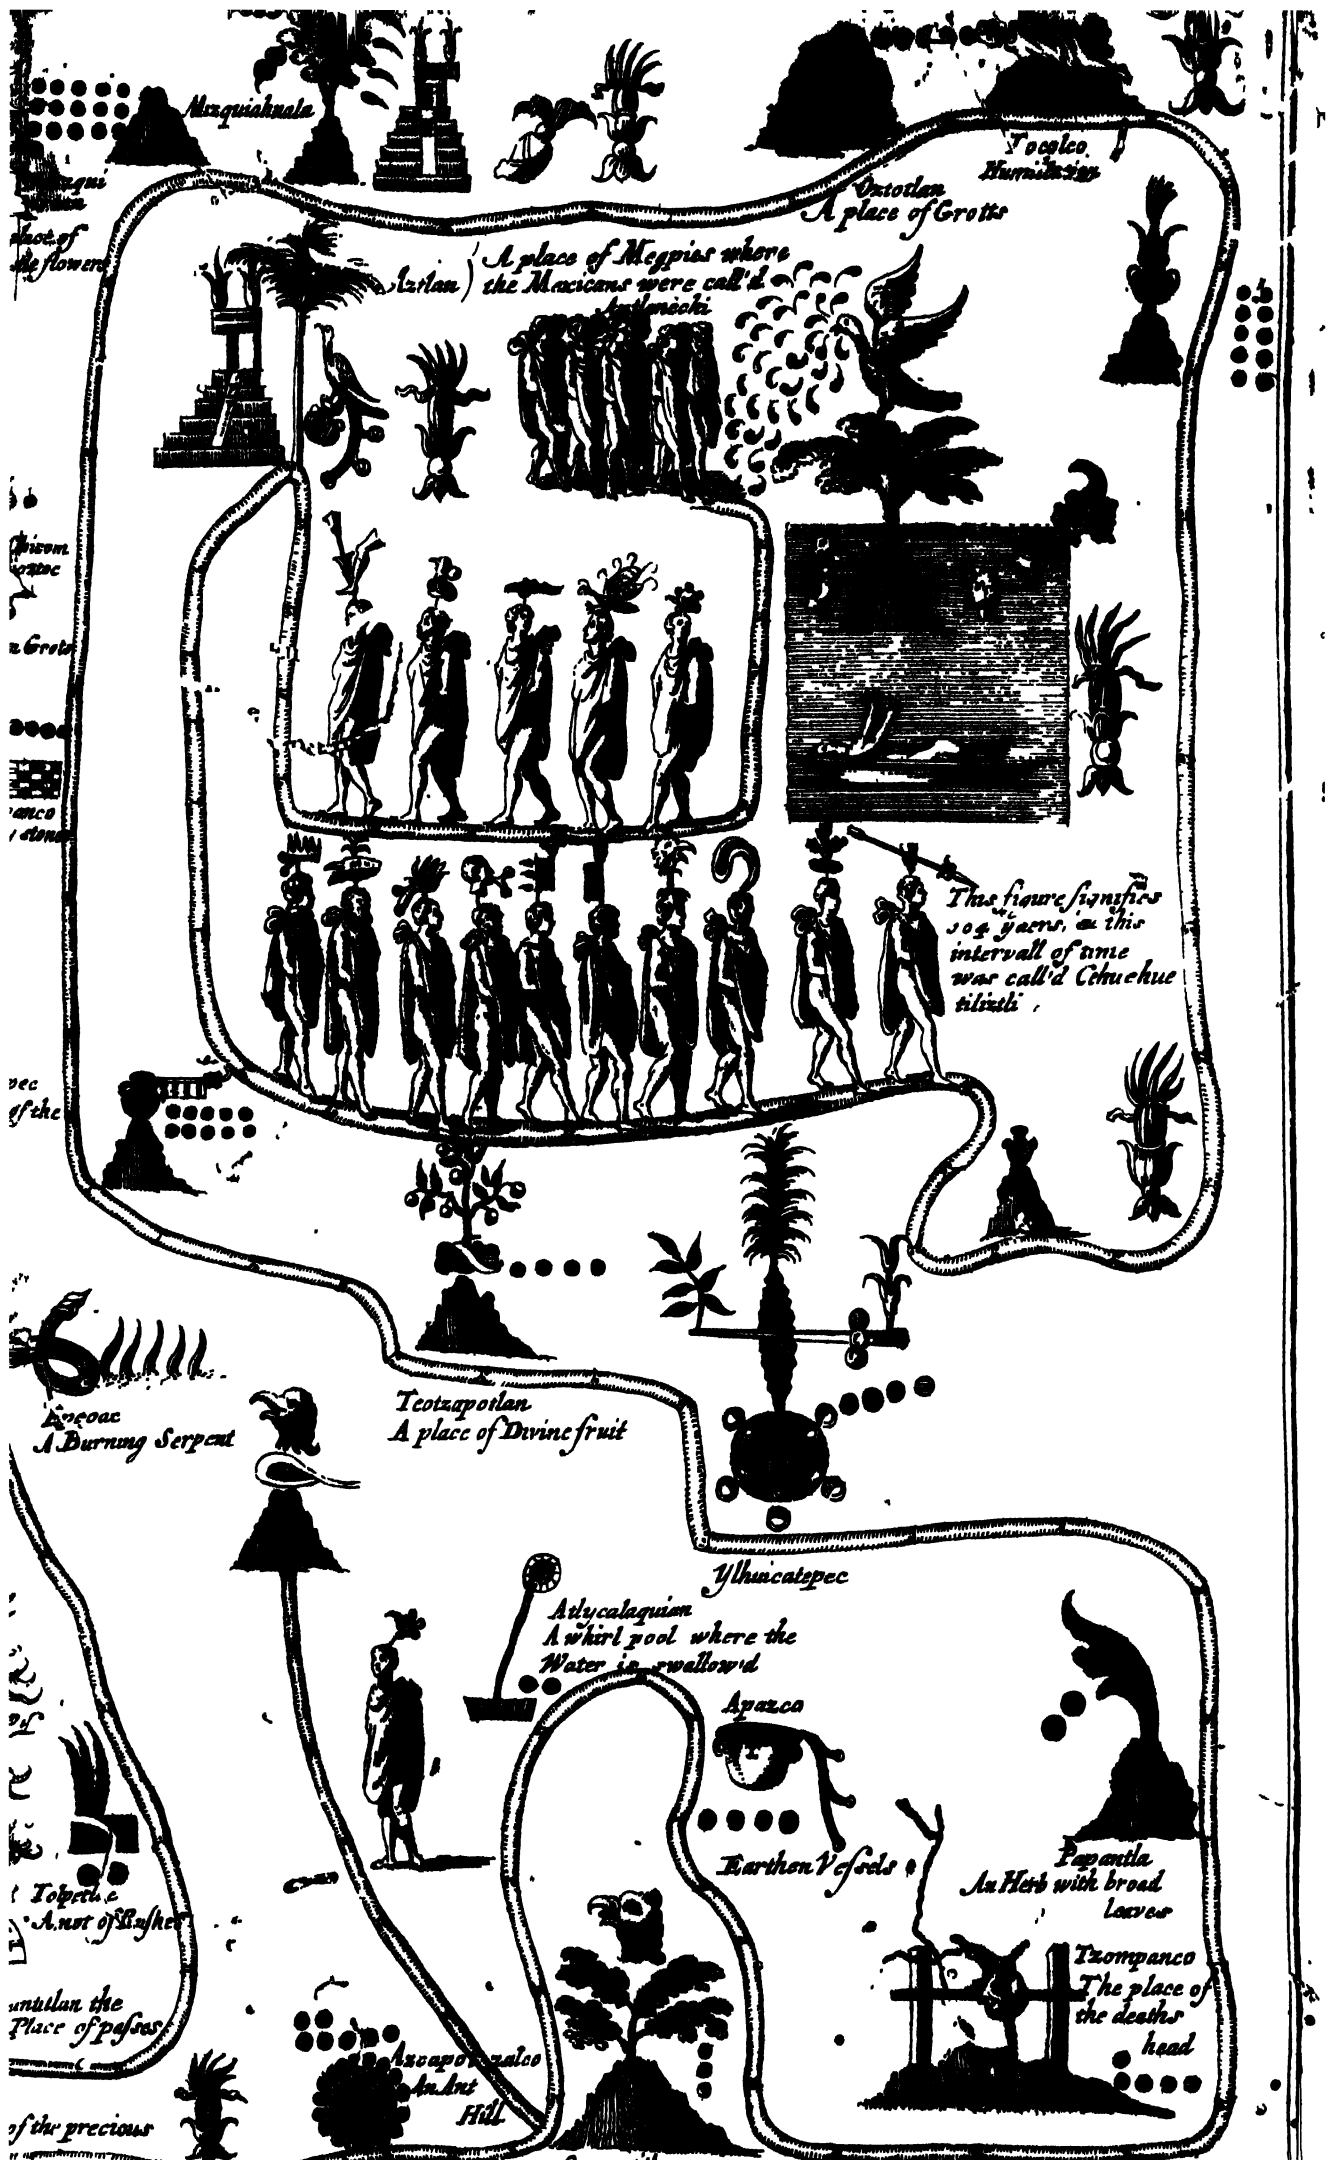

The Hill of Grasshoppers

Teozomaco

Gods Monkey

Wal of

Qua
Moun

Mixquahuata

Tecolco
Huanuac

Oxtotlan
A place of Grotes

A place of Megpias where the Macicans were call'd Mecmichi

This figure signifies 304 years, in this intervall of time was call'd Cituehue
tiltali

Tecozapopan
A place of Divine fruit

Ylhuicatzpec

Atylcalaquim
A whirl pool where the Water is swallow'd

Apasco

Earth's Vessels

Papantla
A Herb with broad leaves

Tzompango
The place of the death head

Acapulco
Hill

Encoac
A Burning Serpent

Topetue
A sort of Bayonet

until the Place of Passes

of the precious

to the Computation of F. Acosta above cited) call'd Mexicans from their Prince Mexi. This Nation departed from its antient Country, upon the fatal Promise made them by their Idol Vitzilipuzli, that he would Conduct them to a Place, where they should have the Command over all the Provinces Peopled by the other Nations; whereupon there is an Author, who is not ashamed to make a Comparison between this People's Travels, and those of the Children of Israel in the Desert. Four Priests declar'd the Idol's Will, on the way; making all the Multitude at their Beck settle in several Places, build Houses, and Sow for some time; and perswading them to offer human Sacrifices to their false Deity. Then departing from those Places by Order of the Idol, they left the Old and Sick behind to People them, if possible. Once the Mexicans settled at Mechoacan, that is, Land of Fish, because of the great Plenty there is in its Lakes, and having made many Villages there, went on to Inhabit Molinalco, the Inhabitants of which Place are reputed to be descended of a great Sorcerer left there in the Temple. Being at length come to Chapultepec, they there fortify'd themselves; and in a short time overthrew, and reduced the other six Nations to a low Condition; especially the Chalcos, who oppos'd, and made War upon them.

The time appointed by the Father of Lies ador'd in that Idol, being come; Vitzilipuzli appear'd to one of those Priests in a Dream, and told him, the Mexicans must go and settle their Abode in that part of the Lake, where they found an Eagle, perching upon a Fig-Tree, whose Root was upon a Rock. Having told his Vision in the Morning, they all went together in search of this Sign given, and after some time spent found a Fig-Tree growing out of a Rock, and on it a most beautiful Eagle, looking upon the Sun with her Wings display'd, and holding a pretty little Bird in her Talons; and about her many others, some White, some Green, some Red, Yellow, and Blew. Upon this Sight they all fell down to pay their Adoration, and presently began to Build their City, which they call'd Tenochtitlan, that is, Fig-Tree on a Rock. For this reason, to this Day the Arms of the City of Mexico are an Eagle with her Wings display'd, looking on the Sun, holding a Snake in her Talons, and standing with one Foot on a Branch of an Indian Fig-Tree; and besides, by Grant of the Emperor Charles, V. a Castle, Or, on a Field Azure, to denote the Lake, with a Bridge to it, and two others on the sides that do not touch it, on which are two Lions Rampant. In Base two green Fig-Leaves in a Field Or.

The next Day the Mexicans thought fit to build a Tabernacle to place their Idol in, till they could have Leisure to Erect a stately Temple, when the City was finish'd. This done, the Idol order'd by the Mouth of his Priests, that all the Mexicans should divide themselves into four Parts, leaving the Tabernacle in the middle; and these are the four great Quarters of Mexico, now call'd of St. John, of St. Mary Redonda, or the Round, of St. Paul, and of St. Sebastian. After this Division he directed, every Quarter should make it self an Idol, and sub-divide into other small Wards; and thus from a small beginning, the City of Mexico grew up to its height, as more plainly appears by the foremention'd Cut.

See Cut, Page 511.

Next the Mexicans perceiv'd it was necessary for them to have a Head, who should Govern them, and study the means of preserving what they had got, and extending their Empire over their Neighbours. Accordingly they chose a Youth call'd Acamapichtli, the Son of a Mexican Prince by the Daughter of the King of Culhuacan, which Name signifies a Dog in the Fist; and this they did to appease that King, who had been highly provok'd by them, by killing and fleeing the Daughter of his Predecessor. From that time forward they began to have a Form of Government, and to be look'd upon by Strangers; so that the neighbouring People enjoying their Honour endeavour'd to Destroy them; particularly the Tapanecas of Azcapuzalco, to whose King the Mexicans paid Tribute, as being the last that came to Inhabit there. The King of Azcapuzalco seeking a Pretence to break the Peace, sent word to Acamapichtli, that the Tribute was too small, and therefore, for the future he should send him all Materials for building his City, and every Year a certain quantity of Grain, but it must be such as grew within the Water of the Lake; otherwise he would Destroy his Kingdom. The Mexicans looking upon this as impossible were very much concern'd; but their God appearing, encourag'd them to admit the condition

First Government settled.

Acamapichtli first King.

dition of the Tribute; for he would be aiding to them. To conclude the next Year, they carry'd that King a floating Garden with several Greens growing on it, besides Timber for Building; and such a floating piece of Land on the Lake is carefully cultivated to this Day. They lay Rushes and long Grass interwoven together on the Water, with Earth upon them, which bears out the Water; and when the Seed there sown is grown up, and Ripe, they cut the Roots of the Rushes and Grass grown in the Water, and then carry the floating Garden where they please upon the Lake. The King of Azcapuzalco much surpriz'd at this Wonder, order'd that the next Year they should bring him such another Garden, with a Duck sitting on her Eggs, which were to be Hatch'd before his Face. Seeing this afterwards perform'd, and thinking it Supernatural, he told his Subjects that the Mexicans would one Day Subdue all about them; yet he would not Ease them of their Tribute.

Huiztlaubli
the 2d King

The King of Mexico, having Reign'd forty Years, dy'd without appointing his Sons to Succeed him; and therefore in return for this his Moderation, the chief Men Assembling, chose one of his Sons, whose Name was Huiztlaubli, which signifies rich Quil, and then Crown'd and anointed him with the Oyl wherewith they us'd to anoint their Idols. Then they gave him to Wife, the Daughter of the King of Azcapuzalco, who prevail'd with her Father to change the first Tribute into a couple of Ducks, and a little Fish. The Wedding was kept with great Solemnity, according to Custom; which was perform'd by tying one end or point of the Bridegroom's Cloak, to the point of the Brides, to denote the Matrimonial knot. The Queen dying, the King did not outlive her a Year, but dy'd in the thirtieth year of his Age, and thirteenth of his Reign.

Chimalpopoca
the 3d King

His Son Chimalpopoca was chosen the 3d King, at ten Years of Age; adding to the ancient Ceremonies of Coronation, that of putting into his Left hand a Bow, and Arrow, and into his Right a naked Sword. There being a great scarcity of Water in his Kingdom, he got leave of the King of Azcapuzalco, his Grandfather by the Mothers side, to bring Water from the Mountain of Chapultepec, a League distant from Mexico; but the Mexicans having made the Pipes of Canes, and little or no Water coming through them to the Lake, they were so bold as to demand of that King their Friend, Stone, Lime, Timber, and Workmen to make a solid Aqueduct. The Tepanecas offended at it, made a bloody War upon the Mexicans, so that the old King dy'd, for Grief to see his Grandson going to Ruin; who was treacherously Murder'd in his own Palace.

For their next King the Mexicans chose Itzcoatl, which signifies Serpent of the Knife, being the Son of their 1st King by a Slave. He to revenge the Outrage committed against his Predecessor; fought with the Tepanecas, and destroy'd them; Plundering and Ruining Azcapuzalco, and pursuing the People to the Mountains till he made them Subject to him. Then according to Custom, he divided the Booty and Lands of those Conquer'd among his People. Nor did the course of his Victories stop here, but having first subdu'd the Inhabitants of Tacuba and Cuyoacan, who liv'd under Lords of their own, he also overthrew and destroy'd the Suchimilcas, first Inhabitants of the Lake, as was said before; obliging them to make a Causeway on the Lake, to join Communication with their City, which was four Leagues from Mexico. Next he bent his force against the City Cuiclavaca, the King whereof voluntarily submitting, own'd him for his Sovereign; and thus Mexico gain'd the Sovereignty over all the Towns and People about it.

Itzcoatl, having Reign'd thus Prosperously twelve Years, dy'd; and the General under whose Conduct these Conquests had been made, whose Name was Tlacaellel, and who was his Nephew, took care to assemble the Electors, which were the Kings of Tescuco, and Tacuba, and 4 others, to appoint a new King. Mohtezuma the General's Nephew was elected. He first instituted the barbarous Custom, that no King should be Crown'd, till he had Sacrific'd some Captives taken by himself in War; and therefore a Quarrel being pick'd with the Province of Chalco for this very purpose, he in Person took several Prisoners, and then Sacrific'd them at Mexico upon his Coronation day. This Sacrifice was perform'd by ripping open the Breast of the Captive with a Knife made of Flint, and taking out the Heart immediately, which was thrown into the Face of the Idol, whilst it was yet leaping. To this he added the drawing of some Blood out of his Ears, and other parts, before the Firepan, they call'd Divine, which serv'd for their abominable Sacrifices. Then he bestow'd

Mohtezuma
the 5th King

great

great largess among the People, and received the Tribute of the Provinces: 1698. Having subdu'd Chalco, he undertook to extend his Empire, by the advice of his Uncle; who was always of Opinion, not to conquer the neighbouring Province of Tlascala; that it might serve to sharpen the Courage of their Youth in War, and to furnish Prisoners to Sacrifice to the Idol. This King erected a stately Palace for himself, and a sumptuous Temple for his God, and erected several Courts. He dy'd when he had Reign'd 28 Years.

Tico-chu,
6th King.

The four Electors meeting with the Kings of Tescuco, and Tacuba, chose Taclaellé, who would not accept of the Crown, saying it was better for the Publick, that another should Reign, and he assist him with his Service, and advice. This Generosity, which show'd the Barbarian was much Superior to Cesar, who thro' Ambition, depriv'd his Country of its Liberty, mov'd the Electors to leave it to him to make whom he pleas'd King, and he nam'd Tico-chu, Son to the King deceas'd. Tico-chu appearing to be no Souldier, the Mexicans Poyson'd him, raising his Brother Axayacac to the Throne, by the Advice of Tlaclaellé, who dying with Age, recommended his Son to the new King, who in gratitude, made him his General.

Axayacac,
7th King.

Before his Coronation, Axayacac march'd against the Province of Taguapetec; and in a short time Plunder'd and subdu'd it. In his return coming to a Battle with the Lord of Tlatelulco (where at present is the Church of St. James) he slew him, and level'd his City with the Ground. This King dy'd when he had reign'd eleven Years.

Ahuizotl,
8th King.

After him Ahuizotl the 8th King ascended the Throne, but before his Coronation, he went according to Custom, to punish the Quaxauatlans, who had taken the Tribute, as it was coming to Mexico on the Road. He extended the Borders of his Kingdom, as far as Guarimala, and encompass'd Mexico with Water, by bringing to it an Arm of the River that ran by Cuyoacan. This Man at the Dedication of the Temple, to the Idol Huitzilipochtli (which was in the year 1486) Sacrificed in the space of 4 days following 64089 Men; six Millions of People resorting to the Festival, as the Mexican Histories tell us. This Indian New dy'd in the eleventh Year of his Reign.

After him was chosen Montezuma, whom the Spaniards found there, when they came to Mexico, his Name in their Language signifying a Wise Lord; because he before his exaltation to the Throne, was Grave, and a Wise Man of few Words, and his sanctified made him much honour'd, and Besides he had refus'd the Crown, retiring into the Temple of the Idol, where he had a Solitary apartment; so that the Electors were fain to go thither to persuade, and bring him to the Empire, with extraordinary Modesty. When once a King, he chang'd his Humility and Meekness into such Pride, that he order'd all Places and Employments about the Court, should be taken from Commoners; and Nobles to come in their stead. Before his Coronation, with the assistance of the Nobility, he march'd to reduce a Northern Province, that had revolted, and brought home a rich Booty, and many Prisoners for Sacrifice. At his return he was receiv'd with great Joy by his Subjects, and Crowned in great State, with abundance of Tributes from the conquer'd Countries.

If the Royal Standard hapned to be lost, those People us'd to retire, without Prosecuting the Battle; as it hapned at Otumba, where Cortes and his Spaniards pursu'd the flying Mexicans; the same they did, if the King were kill'd, to Celebrate his Funeral, coming from all Labour. Montezuma made his Subjects adore, rather than respect him; he was always carry'd on the Shoulders of great Men; never wore one Garment twice, or eat or drank out of the same Vessel. He kept in his Palace all sorts of Birds, and Beasts, and Sea-Fish in his Salt Fish-ponds, and River-Fish in fresh Water. If any kind could not be had, he kept them in Gold, and for Grandeur. He was very precise in exacting punctual Duty from his Subjects; and therefore sometimes went abroad in disguise, to see whether his Orders were obey'd. Lastly he seldom appear'd in Publick, to avoid creating Familiarity.

The downfall of the Empire now drawing near; several signs appearing, as Blazing Stars and Piramidal Fire in the Sky, Monsters on the Earth, and Prodigies in the Lake; Montezuma, tho' at first he had treated the Astrologers hardly, (who foretold some great Calamity; and the Magicians who related dreadful Visions) being at last brought to Repentance, retir'd to a solitary House, expecting his Ruin; to be wrought by the Children of the Sun, coming from

Gemelli.
1698.

from the East, according to antient predictions. In the 14th year of his Reign, the Spaniards came from the Northern Sea in 11 Ships, subdu'd Mexico, took Montezuma Prisoner, and afterwards the Inga of Peru and Cusco, which last was Lord of a Country a thousand Leagues in length from the Kingdom of Ghile, beyond that of Quito; and the first from the North, to the South Sea; and look'd upon, more like Gods than Men. Among other enormities the Inga was Guilty of, he would Marry his own Sisters, whose Son afterwards inherited the Crown, as Born of the Coaya, or first Heiress; but if the King deceas'd left ever a Brother, he was prefer'd before his Nephew. Whilst Montezuma was still alive, the Mexicans chose Quauhchimoz for their King, who dy'd a Prisoner to Cortes.

It is to be observ'd that the Succession of the Crown of Mexico, went to the collateral line, not the immediate Issue, Age taking the preference; the 2d, 3d, 4th, and so to the last Brother, being chose after the first; and for want of them, they began with the Eldest Son of the eldest Brother, and so to the 2d, 3d, and so-forth. At first the choice belong'd to all the People; but afterwards by the advice of Tlucacelleh, in the Reign of Itzcoatl the 4th King, it was committed to only four Electors of the Blood Royal, and the two Kings of Tescuco and Tacuba; the first of which perform'd the Ceremony of the Coronation. As long as the Kings of Mexico were Poor, they were moderate in their expence, and attendance, but as they grew Powerful, they became Haughty, Tyrannical, and Stately.

CHAP. IV.

Of the comparison some Writers make between the Mexican Monarchy, and the Vision in the 13th, chap. of St. John.

I have dilated a little upon the Origin of the Seven Generations, and the Genealogy of the ten Kings of Mexico; that the Ingenious and Discreet Reader, may in this Chapter conceive how some Persons came to take this Monarchy, for the Beast describ'd by St. John, in the 13th Chapter of his Revelation; with no less reason than others did the Roman Monarchy; for they considering the Lake of Mexico, say the Lake of Chalco, 1. Makes the Head, and Neck, 2. a Rock, the Eye; 3. another Rock, the Ear, 4. the Causeway, the Collar, 5. the Lake on which Mexico is built, the Stomach, 6. the Feet they say are the four Rivers, 7. the Body, the great Lake of Mexico, 8. the Wings, the two Rivers of Tescuco and Papalotla, 9. the Tail, the Lake of St. Christopher, and Xaltocan, 10. the Horns, the two Rivers of Tlamanalco, Tepeapulco. And then the other Lakes lying confusely, they say they were made by the Slaver of the Beast.

See Chap. Page 514

Now follows the Resemblance between the Mexican Monarchy and its Religion, and the same Beast.

The seven Generations, or Nations inhabiting it, are, the seven Heads.

- |                 |                  |
|-----------------|------------------|
| 1. Suchimilcas. | 5. Tlatelulcans. |
| 2. Chalcas.     | 6. Tlascallans.  |
| 3. Tecpanecas.  | 7. Mexicans.     |
| 4. Tescucans.   |                  |

Ten Kings.
Ten Horns.

- |                      |                     |
|----------------------|---------------------|
| 1. Acamapichtle, 56  | 6. Tizochic, 37     |
| 2. Huizlahtli, 96    | 7. Axayacac, 27     |
| 3. Chiamalpopoca, 66 | 8. Ahuizotl, 77     |
| 4. Itzcoatl, 62      | 9. Montezuma, 84    |
| 5. Mouhtezuma, 84    | 10. Quauhchimoz, 77 |

364

302

Which together make 666, the number of the Beast.

For the better understanding hereof, it is to be observ'd, that the Mexican Language uses but 15 Letters (not being able to Pronounce the rest) to which applying the Numbers, from one to fifteen, and these to the Names of the Kings, calling up every one apart, and then adding all the Sums together, they make the just number of 666. To make this the plainer, I first set down the

An Hydrographick Draught of Mexico, as it lies in its Lakes

Gemelli. the fifteen Letters, and the Numbers answering to them under; then the Names of the Kings, with each Figure to each Letter; then cast up the particulars, and the Total of all those Sums, is 666. This will appear by the Calculation of every King's Name, according to the Indian Histories, quoted by Arrigo Martinez, at the end of his Register of Times, Printed at Mexico in the beginning of the last Age.

A. C. E. H. I. L. M. N. O. P. Q. T. U. X. Z.
1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6. 7. 8. 9. 10. 11. 12. 13.
14. 15.

The Analysis, or Solution of the Names of the ten Kings in Numbers.

| 1.   | 2.   | 3.   |
|------|------|------|
| A—1  | H—4  | C—2  |
| C—2  | V—13 | H—4  |
| A—1  | I—5  | I—5  |
| M—7  | Z—15 | M—7  |
| A—1  | T—12 | A—1  |
| P—10 | L—6  | L—6  |
| I—5  | A—1  | P—10 |
| C—2  | V—13 | O—9  |
| H—4  | H—4  | P—10 |
| T—12 | T—12 | O—9  |
| L—6  | L—6  | C—2  |
| I—5  | I—5  | A—1  |
| 56   | 96   | 66   |

| 4.   | 5.   | 6.   |
|------|------|------|
| I—5  | M—7  | T—12 |
| T—12 | O—9  | I—5  |
| Z—15 | V—13 | C—2  |
| C—2  | H—4  | O—9  |
| O—9  | T—12 | C—2  |

|      |      |     |
|------|------|-----|
| A—1  | E—3  | I—5 |
| T—12 | Z—15 | C—2 |
| L—6  | V—13 |     |
|      | M—7  |     |
|      | A—1  |     |
| 62   | 84   | 37  |

| 7.   | 8.   | 9.   |
|------|------|------|
| A—1  | A—1  | M—7  |
| X—14 | H—4  | O—9  |
| A—1  | V—13 | V—13 |
| I—5  | I—5  | H—4  |
| A—1  | T—12 | T—12 |
| C—2  | Z—15 | E—3  |
| A—1  | O—9  | Z—15 |
| C—2  | T—12 | V—13 |
|      | L—6  | M—7  |
|      |      | A—1  |
| 27   | 77   | 84   |

I am oblig'd further to let the Reader understand, that the Plan, or Map before inserted, is not mine, but we are indebted for it, to the experienced Adrian Boot, a French Ingenier, sent into New Spain in the Year 1629 by Philip the 4th of Happy Memory, to find a Passage out for the Waters of the Lake of Mexico. He made that draught upon an exact survey; but being in some Measure defaced by time, it was with great Labour restor'd to its being, by Dr. Christopher de Guadalajara, of the City of the Angels, an able Mathematician, who made me a Present, of an exact Copy of it, when I pass'd thro' that City, that I might cause it to be Printed, for the Satisfaction of curious Persons.

CHAP. V.

Of the Mexican Months, Years, and Age, and of their Hieroglyphicks.

FOR want of Letters, the Ingenious Mexicans us'd Symbols, or Hieroglyphicks, to express Corporeal things, which have a shape; and for other things, other proper Characters, and so, for the Benefit of Posterity, they noted down all that hapned. As for instance to denote the coming of the Spaniards, they painted a Man with long Hair and Cloaths red, in the sign of a Cane, which becom'd that Year. Their way of Writing was from the bottom of the Board, or Paper upwards, directly contrary to the Chineses. They had certain rounds, or Circles painted, which contain'd the space of an Age, divided into Years with the proper Symbols; to set down there, the time, when remarkable things hapned, with the proper Figures and Characters. This Age consisted of 52 solar Years, of 365 days each. The Wheel, Circle or round, was divided.

vided into four Parts, each containing 13 Years, and answer'd to one of the 4 parts of the World, after the following manner.

A Snake turn'd it self round into a Circle, and in the Body of the Serpent, there were four Divisions. The first denoted the South, in that Language, call'd Uutztlampa, whose Hieroglyphick, was a Rabbet in a blew Field, which they call'd Tochtli. Lower was the part that signify'd the East, call'd Tlacopa, or Tlahuicopa, denoted by a Cane in a red Field, call'd Acatl. The Hieroglyphick of the North, or Micolampa, was a Sword pointed with Flint, call'd Tecpatl, in a yellow Field. That of the West, or Sibuatlampa, was a House in a green Field, and call'd Cagli.

These four Divisions were the beginning of the four Terms that made up the Age. Between every two, on the inside of the Snake, there were 12 small divisions, among which the four first Names or Figures, were successively distributed, giving every one its number to thirteen, which was the number of Years that compos'd an Indiction; the like was done in the 2d Indiction, with the same Names from one to 13, and so in the 3d, and 4th, till they finish'd the Circle of 52 Years, as follows.

```

○
○ ○
○ ○ ○
○ ○ ○ ○
○ ○ ○ ○ ○
○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○
○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○
○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○
○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○
○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○
○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○
○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○
○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○
○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○
○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○
○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○
○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○
○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○ ○

```

This way of reckning by 13, was not only observ'd in their Years, but in their Months; for tho' their Month was of 20 days, yet when they came to the number 13, they began again. To endeavour to find out the reason why they did so, is aiming at an impossibility, but perhaps they might in this particular follow their Calculation of the Moon. They divided the Lunar motion into two times, the first of watching, from the Heliacal, or solar rising, till the opposition, which was of thirteen days; and the other of Sleep, of the same number of days, till the Morning setting.

This extravagant computation of the Moon, was grounded upon a Fable, which is, That the Gods having resolv'd to destroy the darkness that cover'd the World; two of them undertook this Work, which were Tecucisfecatl, and Nanahuatzin. These after making great preparations at Teotihuacan, a place now call'd Tzacagli, having cast themselves into the Fire of a burning Rock, call'd Tutexcagli, and being converted into Ashes; within a short while after appear'd in the East, Nanahuatzin become the Sun, and Tecucisfecatl the Moon. At first they had no motion, but afterwards the Wind by Order of the Gods, began to move them; but after a different manner, for at the end of 13 days, the Sun being come to the West, the Moon began to appear in the East. This being so unlikely, they might perhaps say so, to give every one of their greater Gods, which were thirteen, the Government and Dominion of their Years, and Days; but the Mexicans themselves are ignorant of both.

From what has been said above there arise several doubts; the first is, why they begin to reckon their Years from the South; the second, why they made use of the four Figures, of a Rabbet, a Cane, a Flint, and a House. To the first they answer that when the Gods had resolv'd at Teotihuacan, to take away the great Darkness, and Nanahuatzin and Teotihuacan, by means of the Fire, were converted into Sun and Moon, the rest of the Gods set themselves to observe, from what quarter of Heaven, the Light would first appear, wherein they were of sundry Opinions, some affirming, it would come from the North, others from the South, others from the East, and others from the West (as if the Names of East, and West, &c. had been invented before the Sun had enlightned the Earth) but that at length it was seen to come out of the South. Moreover the antient Mexicans believing the World would end with their Age, among other Ceremonies, on the last day of it, they knelt on the tops of their Houses, with their Faces to the East, doubtfully expecting to see whether the Sun would continue his Course, and whether the end of the World was come; and since in this posture, they must of necessity have the South on their right Hand, they thence argued that the Light began from the South. To this may

A strange
Fable.

Gemelli.

1698.

may be added that the Mexicans firmly believ'd Hell to be in the North, and therefore it was not proper that the Sun should have commenced his Course from thence, but from the opposite part, where the Gods Vivitznaoa dwelt, in respect to whom they call'd the South Vivitzlampá.

They also said it was a Benefit of those same Gods, that the Age was renew'd, because Time naturally would end with the old Sun; and that the Sun of the new Age, was a new Sun, that was to follow the course of Nature, which every Year made the Trees green, after January (as is observ'd in that Climate) when the Sun was come away from the South, which is the Habitation of the Gods. Having found this Analogy between the Age, and the Year they would carry the Similitude, or Proportion on further, and as in the Year, there are four Seasons, so they would adapt the like to the Age; and accordingly they appointed Tochtli for its beginning, in the South, as it were the Spring and Youth of the Sun's Age; Acatl for Summer, Tecpatl for Autumn, and Cagli for his Old Age, or Winter.

These Figures so dispos'd, were also the Hieroglyphicks of the four Elements, which is the second doubt; for Tochtli was dedicated to Tevacayohua God of the Earth, Acatl to Tlalocatehutli God of the Water, Tecpatl to Chetzahcoatl God of the Air, and Cagli to Ximhtecuhil God of the Fire. Perhaps they meant to express the Nature of the four Cardinal Winds, which were the only ones they knew, and this in Honour of Chetzahcoatl God of the Winds, who, as was said before, gave the first motion to the Sun and Moon. Whatsoever the reason of it was, 'tis certain that Neptune, whom they call'd Tencipactli was the Inventor of these Hieroglyphicks and Method of disposing them, to the end that every Man, without any other Study, might know the number of Years that made an Age; the distinction of the Indictions, in what Year any thing remarkable had hapned; the Succession of their Kings, and other things of Note.

Mexican Years.

Their Solar year consisted of 365 days, according to the form of the Egyptian Priests, which had its Original from Noah, after the Flood, as Berosus tells us (if it be true, that the Books which now go under his Name, were writ by that ancient Caldean) who writes thus. He also taught them (that is, the Priests) the course of the Stars, and ordain'd the Year according to the course of the Sun, (for which reason he was thought to partake of the Divine Nature.) For which things (says the same Author) they thought him to partake of the Divine Nature, and therefore call'd him Olibama, an Arfa, that is, Heaven and the Sun. However others differ in Opinion, concerning the great diversity of Years among the Egyptians, 'tis certain other Nations had the same Year of 365 days, but they learnt it of the Egyptians who preserv'd the Knowledge deliver'd by Noah, by means of his Son Cham, or Ham. Now the Mexicans must of necessity follow the same Doctrine, being Originally descended from J. spine, who cannot be thought to have given them any other Instructions, but what he learnt of his Father Mesraim, who had them from Cham, or Ham, and from his Grandfather Noah, among the first Inhabitants of Egypt.

As for the Months, tho' some of the Offspring of Noah reckoned them after several manners, some allowing 28 days, some 29, others 30, and 31, and not always after the same manner; yet the Mexicans still following the same Egyptians, made their Month regular, not of 30, but of 20 days; but this turn'd to the same account, putting 18 Mexican Months of 20 days each, to 12 Egyptian Months of 30 Days. The names of the Months are as follows. 1. Caxipe hua liztli, 2. Tozoztli, 3. Hueytozoztli, 4. Toxcatl, 5. Etzalcualiztli, 6. Ticuyil huitl, 7. Hueytecnil huitl, 8. Micayl huitl, 9. Hueymicayl huitl, 10. Ochpaniztli, 11. Pachtli, 12. Hueypachtli, 13. Chetciogli, 14. Panchetzaliztli, 15. Atemoztli, 16. Tititl, 17. Izcaghl, 18. Atlacoalo, as may be seen by their Characters upon the inner circle of the Figure.

Every one of the 20 days had its proper Name, which were, Cipaëtl, Cecatl, Caglicuetzapaglin, Coatl, Michiztli, Mazatl, Tochtli, Ati, Itzcuintli, Ozomatli, Malinagli, Acatl, Ocelotl, Quauilitli, Cozcaquauhuitli, Oglin, Tecpatl, Quiahuitl, and Xocitl.

These Months were not divided into Weeks, because these began among the Hebrews in the time of Moses, in Memory of the Days of the Creation, long after the institution of the Mexican Circle, or as others will have it, was invented soon after by the Babylonians, to distinguish the days by the 7 Planets, and the Dominion they assign'd them over the unequal hours, whereof they were the first observers. I said the Days were also counted by the Mexicans by thirteens, tho' there were 20 in a Month.

This

Temelli.
1698. This was done to avoid confusion; for giving the Name of any Day, according to this Method, with the number answerable to it in this Order of thirteen and thirteen, they knew what Month it belong'd to, without ever mistaking. Besides this division by thirteen, there was another of, five and five days, on which they made Tianguez, as is still practis'd in several places, and this was on the 3, 8, 13, and 18th of every Month, being days Dedicated to the four Figures Tochtli, Acatl, Tecpatl, and Cagli, and this Rule was always the same, tho' the Years did not begin with Tochtli.

See Crit. Pag. 518.

This further makes out the great resemblance with the Egyptian computation, for as these, to twelve Months (which they call'd Thotli, Phaophi, Athyr, Ceac, Tybi, Mecir, Phameneth, Pharmuthi, Phacon, Paymi, Epephi, and Meſori) which made 360 days, added 5 days more, which they call'd Epagomeni, to compleat the Circle of the Sun; so the Mexicans, their 18 Months in like manner, making 360 days, added five days at the end of every Year, and call'd them Nonontemi, that is, wandering, to make the same number of 365. Some link that these 5 Days being out of the number of the Months, had no particular Name, and that therefore the first of every Month was Cipactli. But they are much deceiv'd, for they had not only Names, but were brought into their thirteens. For the better understanding hereof, let us imagine an Age, the first Year whereof is Tochtli, to which Cipactli answers, as first day of the first Month; if the 360 days, which make the 18 Months of this Year, be counted round successively by thirteen, and thirteen, it will appear that the last day of the 18th Month, will be 9 Xoxitl. But if the 5 days call'd Nonontemi had no Name, the following Year must have begun from 2 Mazatl, with 10 Cipactli. Thus the reckoning of the thirteens would have been interrupted, with Cipactli, had not they been reckned in. The Mexicans therefore, to this Day sufficiently solve the Mystery; saying, that the days Cipactli, Michiztli, Ozomatli, and Cozcaquauhuitl, are companions to, that is, in all respects follow the Order of the four Figures that denote the Years of an Age, viz. Tochtli, Acatl, Tecpatl, and Cagli; to signify that every Year whose Symbol is Tochtli, will have Cipactli for the first day of the Month; that whose Symbol or distinctive Mark, is Acatl, will have Michiztli for the first of the Month; Tecpatl, will have Ozomatli, and Cagli will have Cozcaquauhuitl. Yet this is to be farther observ'd, that the numerical Value according to the thirteens, regularly counted from the beginning of the Age (including the 5 Nonontemi days) will answer to that, which belongs to the first Day of the Year, according to the succession from Tochtli forwards, as plainly appears by the Draught above mention'd. The whole will be better understood after this manner. This first Year of the aforementioned Age, the Months ended with 9 Xoxitl, and the Names and Numbers answering to the 5 Nonontemi days, were 10 Cipactli. 11 Cecatl, 12 Cagli, 13 Cuetzpazlin, and 1 Coatl, which made up the Year of 365 days. Thus without breaking the Order of Names, the next Year began Michiztli, which is the Day immediately following Coatl, and continuing on with the thirteens, since the last of the 5 Nonontemi Days, was the first call'd Coatl; this also will be the Character of the first day of the second Year, viz. that will be Ome, and this Ome Michiztli. This is not accidental, but very regular in all the Years of an Age (as may be easily demonstrated) and so this 2d Year beginning at 2 Michiztli, will end its Months at 10 Coatl, and 365 days at 2 Izcumtli, so the following 3d Year Tecpatl, will begin at 3 Ozomatli, and the next being the 4th Cagli, at 4 Cozcaquauhuitl, and so on in the rest, till the thirteen is out. By this it appears, that the 4 days Cipactli, &c. did not only answer to the 4 Symbols of the Years Tochtli, &c. but that they had also the same numerical Denomination, deriv'd from the thirteens.

They therefore who know how much almost all the Eastern Nations err'd in this particular, may be Judges how much the Wit of the Mexicans deserv'd to be commended, and look'd upon, for inventing so Artificial and regular a Circle. But this Honour is not due to the Mexicans of these times, who are neither Astrologers, nor Arithmeticians, and therefore by their Ignorance would convict me of Falseness; but to those Heathens as we shew'd above, and to their most antient Master Neptune, as is learnedly observ'd by D. Carlos de Sigüenza y Gongora, Professor of Mathematicks in the University of Mexico, in his Cyclographia, where he brings Texts of Scripture, tra-

Gemelli.
1698.

Traditions of the Indians, Paintings, and most notable Hieroglyphicks, which had been preserv'd by Dr. John de Alva, Lord of Catzcasgo, and of S. John Teotihuacan, who inherited them from his Forefathers, Kings of Tescuco, from whom he was lineally descended by the Males; and they were left in the Hands of D. Carlos his Executor. It is most certain the like is not to be found in all New Spain; because the Spaniards at their first coming burnt all they found; for seeing them without Letters, and with such variety of Figures, they look'd upon them as Superstitious. Monseñor Sumarica first Bishop of Mexico, made an end of destroying what remain'd, and broke a-bundance of old Idols; so that the Figure of the Mexican Year, and other Antiquities of the Indians which follow in this Volume, are all owing to the Industry and Courtesy, of the aforesaid D. Carlos de Sigüenza, who presented me with these extraordinary Rarities.

leap year.

They order'd the Bissextile, or Leap Year, after this manner. The first Year of the Age began on the 10th of April, and so did the 2d, and 3d, but the fourth or Leap Year, on the 9th, the 8th on the 8th, the 12th, on the 7th, the 16th, on the 6th, till the end of the Age, which was on the 28th of March, when the 13 days of the Leap Years, till the 10th of April, were spent in rejoicing.

Before the new Age began, they broke their Vessels, and put out the Fire; supposing that since the World was to end with an Age, perhaps that might be it. When the first day appear'd, they solemniz'd it with Drums and other Instruments they us'd; giving thanks to God, for having granted them another Age; they bought new Vessels, and receiv'd the new Fire, from the high Priest in solemn Procession.

The People of Peru reckned by Moons, and 12 Months with as many days as we do, and besides began their Year at January, but afterwards one of their Kings would have it to begin at December. They placed about the City Cuzco, which was the Court of the Inga Kings, 12 Pillars, at such distances, and in such Order, that each of them every Month, should point out the Suns rising, and setting; and thus they regulated their Festivals, and the Seasons for Sowing and Reaping, every Pillar having its proper Name.

Year in Peru.

CHAP. VI.

Of the horrid Sacrifices, the Indians offer'd to their Idols, and of their Festivals, and Habit.

sacrifice
a Tezcac-
puca.

THE Mexicans kept as it were a Jubilee every fourth Year, on the 19th of May, on which was the Festival of the Idol Tezcacipuca. They fasted 5 days before it, and the Priests abstain'd from their Wives, and went about beating themselves in a Penitential Habit. All other People were clad after the same manner, and went in Procession begging one another's Pardon. Upon the day appointed a Slave that was like the Statue of the Idol was sacrific'd, and others with him, ripping open their Breasts, as was said before, and casting the Hearts still alive, upon the Idol's Face. These Captives to make them the more miserable, were fatted up some Days before, and Worshipp'd about the City like Gods.

o Quetzal
etail.

The Festival they kept in Honour of their God, Quetzal etail, was yet more detestable. Forty days before it, they bought a found Slave without any Blemish, and clay him in the Idols Garments, that he might be honour'd. Nine days before the Solemnity, two old Men came from the Temple, to tell him he was to dye, and seeing him concern'd, they went and wash'd the Knives of the Sacrifice, and the Blood they took off them, they gave the Wretch to drink, mixt with Cacao; believing that would cause him not to fear Death. The Festival day being come, they ripped open his Breast, at Midnight, and taking out his Heart, offer'd it to the Moon, and then to the Idol. The Body they threw down the steps of the Temple; where the buyers took it up, and carrying it to the House of the chiefest among them, the next day made a plentiful Feast.

There was another sort of Sacrifice call'd Racaxipe Valtsil, which signifies Fleaing of People; because they flead a Slave, and cloathing another in his Skin, led him about the City, begging for the Temple, and striking those who gave nothing, over the Face with some of the Skin, as long as it was found. Other times they clad several Slaves with the Idol's Garments, a whole Year before the Festival, leading them in the day

Other inhuman Sacrifices.

Gemelli.
1698.

day time about the City, that they might be ador'd like the Idols, and keeping them shut up at Night, feeding them plentifully. At the Years end they Sacrific'd them, and substituted others in their Places, Some Years they butcher'd to the number of 20000; for the Barbarous Priests would go tell the King, that the Idols had nothing to eat, and were starving with Hunger; and for this reason they made War to get Prisoners to Sacrifice. Four Priests held the Victim by the Hands and Feet, an other ripp'd open the Breast, and took out the Heart, and another held up the Neck, having first lay'd him with his back on a sharp Stone.

In Peru.

In Peru they also Sacrificed Children from 4, to 10 Years of Age, for the Ingas Health; and so did Sons for their Parents when desperately Sick, offering them to the Sun, or Viracova; stifling, or cutting their Throats.

Noted Idols.

The most famous Idols in Mexico, next to Vitzliputzli, were Tescatepucan, and Huicilobos, to whom they sacrificed every Year, 2500 Men, fatted in Pens. The offering was only of the Forehead, Ears, Tongues, Lips, Arms, Legs, and other extreme Parts. The Temples were built after the manner of the Pyramids of Egypt, ascending by Stairs, and for the most part of Clay; the Idol being placed at the top in a Tabernacle, near which was a place apart, to lay the Heads of the Victims. Close by the Temple, there were apartments for the Priests.

They had an Idol of Rain, call'd Tlaloc, that is, fertilizer of the Earth. His Figure was of the common Stature of a Man, with a Frightful face; and they often anointed him with a Liquor, call'd Oholi, which distils from certain Trees. All his Ornaments were Hieroglyphicks of Rain, and Plenty; for in his right Hand, he held a Plate of beaten Gold, signifying the Lightning; in his left a round Border of blew Feathers, garnish'd with I know not what sort of thing like a Net. His Garment was also of blew Feathers, with such a Trimming at the Edges, and another made of Hares, and Rabbits Wool, like white half Moons. On his Head was a great tuft of white and green Feathers, signifying the green Fruit, and Leaves; about his Neck a Collar of Buck's Skin, his Legs colour'd yellow, with Gold Horse Bells about them. This was the Indian Hieroglyphick to denote Rain. The whole may be seen more exactly in the adjoining Cut.

See Cut, Page 521.

Ingas ador'd in Peru.

In Peru, besides adoring the Statue of the Inga, when he dy'd, thousands of his favourite Concubines and Servants were kill'd, to serve him in the other World; and vast Treasures were bury'd with him, that he might make use of them upon occasion. The other Indians besides all this, placed Meat near the Tombs, believing the dead would eat. Besides, having perform'd the Obsequies with abundance of Ceremonies, they cloath'd the dead Body in its Robes or Garment, that denoted its Dignity, and then bury'd it in the Court, or having burnt it, kept the Ashes in an honourable place.

Mexican Souldiers.

As for the manner of cloathing it, was no less barbarous. The Souldiers that they might appear the more dreadful to their Enemies, stain'd their naked Body; or else cover'd it with a whole Lions, or Tigers Skin, placing the head of the Beast upon their own. They hung across them like a Shoulder Belt, a string of Men's Hearts, Noses and Ears, with a head at the end; and in their hands, carry'd such things as may be seen in the Cut.

See Cut Page 521.

The Habit of the King and Princes of the Blood was not amiss, if compar'd with that of the common sort; but it was the less commendable for the Practice in use among them, of boring their under Lip, for to stick a Gold nail or some other Jewel in it as appears by the Cuts, copy'd from Originals of great Antiquity, which are in the Custody of D. Carlos Siguenza, before spoken of.

The Habit of the Indians at present, is a short Doublet, and wide Breeches. On their Shoulders they wear a Cloak of several Colours, which they call Tilma, and which crossing under the right Arm, is ty'd upon the left Shoulder, the two ends making a great knot. Instead of Shooes, they wear Sandals, like those of the Franciscan Fathers, the rest being bare footed, and bare legg'd, as they are. But they will never part with their Hair, tho' they were quite naked, or in Rags. The Women all wear the Guaipil (which is like a Sack) under

King and Princes Habit.

Indian Habit now.

Gemelli. 1698. the Cobiza, which is a fine white Cotton Cloth; to which they add another upon their Back, when they are Abroad, which when in the Church they place upon their Head. Their Coats are narrow with Figures of Lions, Birds, and other Creatures, adorning them with curious Ducks Feathers, which they call Xilotepec.

All, as well Men as Women are of a dark Colour, notwithstanding their Endeavours to defend their Faces against the Cold, and make them Fair with Herbs pounded. They use also to daub their Heads with thin Clay, such as they use in their Buildings, thinking it refreshes the Head, and makes the Hair black and soft; so that several Country Women are seen about the City in that dirty Condition. The Mestizo, Mulatto, and Black Women, which are the greatest Number in Mexico, not being allow'd to wear Vails, or be cloath'd after the Spanish Fashion, and scorning on the other side the Indian Habit, go in an extravagant Garb, wearing a thing like a Petticoat, a cross their Shoulders, or on their Head like a Cloak, which makes them look like so many Devils.

All the Blacks and Mulattos are insolent to the highest Degree, and take upon them as much as Spaniards, whose Habit they wear; so among themselves they take the Title of Captain, tho' they be not so; nor can there be many in Mexico, where there is but one only Company of Spaniards, and a few of Militia, in case of Need. This Rabble of Blacks, and Tawnies is so encreas'd, that it is fear'd they may one Day Rebel, and make themselves Masters of the Country; unless the carrying of so many Blacks be obstructed by Farming it.

The Indians at present are nothing near so Ingenious as they were formerly, when they successfully apply'd themselves to the liberal Arts and Mekanicks; but now they are altogether devoted to Idleness, and apply themselves to nothing but Cheating. Yet those that apply themselves to any Trade shew they are very capable: Some make several Figures of nothing but Feathers of several Colours, of a Bird the Spaniards call Chupafior, that is, Such-flower; of which sort I have one: Others work curiously in Wood; and others contrive to deceive Ducks, as Shy as they are; for when they have us'd them to be frequently among Calabashes left floating on the Lake, for that purpose, they make Holes in those Calabashes, so that putting their Heads in them they can see out of them, and then going up to the Neck in the Water, they go among the Ducks, and draw them down by the Feet.

The Indians are naturally very Fearful; but excessive Cruel, if well Back'd. The Vices the Spaniards generally Charge them with, are, first the want of Sense of Honour (for they make nothing of robbing one another of it; besides the Incests they commit with their Mothers and Sisters) being Beastly in Eating, lying on the bare Ground, and Dying without any Concern. They are very great Thieves, Cheats, and Impostors; but above all the Mulattos, among an Hundred of whom it is hard to find an Honest fair dealing Man. On the other side the poor Indians are worse than Slaves, for only they work in the Mines; and what is worse, all they get is taken from them by the Governors, and other Officers; notwithstanding all the daily Threats that come from Court.

CHAP. VII.

The Author gives an Account of the most remarkable Things he saw in Mexico.

There being a great Dearth in New Spain, by reason the Harvest had not answer'd the foregoing Years, and the Scarcity being great upon Tuesday the 12th of March, there hapned on that Day a sort of Mutiny, abundance of the Rabble going that Day under the Viceroy's Windows, to demand Bread. This Accident rais'd such a Jealousy in him, that he caus'd several Pederos to be planted about at the Loopholes, to be able to make the better Resistance; and not suffer the Crowd to approach perhaps to Burn the Palace, as they did in the Year 1692, when the Count of Galve was Viceroy, firing the Market-Place at the same time, where many vast rich Shops were burnt. To remedy this Evil, the Viceroy on the 13th sent out his Orders and circular Letters to the Farmers, and other wealthy Persons, for them to bring into the City all the Corn that possibly they could; for at that time they eat small Leaves which cost about three Pence, and were not worth a Penny.

1668. Some Indians having lain with a Mother and a Daughter, and then Robb'd and Murder'd them, two Leagues from the City, two of them were Executed upon Thursday the 14th. With them was brought another, who had been taken two Hours before, opening a Shop with a false Key, to Rob it. This Man after receiving 200 Lashes on his Back, was mark'd with a red hot Iron under the Gallows; besides the Punishment he was to receive after his Trial, the Viceroy being very Severe in punishing Thieves.

A Procession. Friday the 15th of March, a devout Procession in Honour of our Saviour's Passion, set out from the Royal Hospital, erected by the King, with a Revenue of 8000 pieces of Eight, for the Sick Indians. Above an hundred Brothers went first in a penitential Habit; then the Nobility, and then other Penitents. Then follow'd a Company of Soldiers clad in Black, with Head-pieces on, and trailing their Pikes; and in the midst of them was one a Horseback, carrying a Tunick hanging to a Spear, representing that of our Saviour. But there were very few Musicians. This Procession must infallibly be made, because the King has given a particular Order for it.

Saturday 16th, I went out to shoot Thrushes, there being abundance of them of several sorts, Black, White, and speckled with Red. At my return I went to the Royal Court to hear the Trial of my Friend Don Anthony Gomez. Being there in the Gallery of the Court I saw the Viceroy go into the Criminal Court, and take his Seat upon the same Bench with the Oydores, or Judges. Sunday 17th, I went to the Royal Hospital to see an indifferent large Theatre, where Plays are Acted, and the profit of them goes to the Maintenance of the Hospital.

Cathedral. Monday 18th, I heard Mass in the Cathedral, which is large, and has three vaulted Isles supported on high Pillars of Stone. The Structure is not yet finish'd, but is carry'd on at the King's Charge, who, besides an Allowance out of his own Revenue, has assign'd it, a Tax of half a Royal a Head throughout the Diocess: And therefore the Archbishop lives in a House the King pays for over against the Mint. In the midst of it is the Choir, curiously caw'd in Sweetwood, with beautiful Figures and Feuillage; and four fine Altars in the Arms of the Cross. About the Church there are several Chappels Gilt, and vastly Rich, nothing Inferior to the famous high Altar. The Front is extraordinary Noble with three Gates; besides five others on the sides. Historians tell us, That this Church was founded by the Marquess D. Ferdinand Cortes, on the very same Ground where the Heathen great Temple stood; but others, from antient Paintings and Draughts prove that Temple stood, where now the College of St. Ildefonso is. However it is, this was made a Bishoprick on the 13th of October 1625, and an Archbishoprick on the 13th of January 1645. It has eleven Suffragan Bishops, which are those of Puebla de los Angeles, or the City of Angels, Mechoacan, Huacacca, Guadalaxara, Guatemala, Yucatan, Nicaragua, Chiapa, Honduras, and Nueva Biscaya, or New Biscay; of which eleven Bishopricks the Tenths only amount to 516000 Pieces of Eight; and all the Profits 5160000 Pieces of Eight. There has been spent in building the Church of Mexico from the Day it was founded till the 22d of December 1667, 1052000 Pieces of Eight, and the Work is not done to this Day.

Tuesday 19th, being St. Joseph's Day, I went to the Church of the Mercenarians. The Altars are vastly Rich, and the Roof Gilt; and the Monastery is large, and capable of abundance of Religious Men. Going thence I met the Blessed Sacrament going from the Cathedral to some Sick Body. It was carry'd by a Priest in a Coach drawn by four Mules, maintain'd at the Charge of the Brotherhood.

Wednesday 20th, I heard Mass at the Nunnery of St. Clare, famous for the excellent sweet Pastiles the Nuns make. The Church is well adorn'd, and the Monastery a good Structure.

Thursday 21st, I rode three Leagues out of Town to see the celebrated Garden of St. Angel, of the barefoot Carmelites. The Fathers shew'd me the upper Church, which tho' small, was all a meer Mass of Gold. The lower Church was also Beautiful, and had five Altars. Then we walk'd about all the Monastery which is so large, that it has not only conveniency for 52 Religious Men that Live in it, but the Provincial Chapter has been kept there these 108 Years. The Library is one of the best in the Indies, containing about 12000 Volumes. I was then led to the so much renowned Garden, which tho' it be not above three quarters of a Spanish League in compass about

Gemelli. about the Wall; yet a great River running through the midst of it, makes it so fruitful, that only the European Trees here planted yield a Revenue of 13000 Pieces of Eight a Year. There are forty several sorts of Pears, which are sold for five Pieces of Eight a Load; variety of Apples, Peaches, and Quinces; for there are but few Walnuts, Chestnuts, or the like. The Archbishop claiming the Title of this Fruit, and the Fathers refusing to give it, as being Trees planted for the use of the Monastery; by the King's Order an Oydore, or Judge went to count the Trees, and found 13000, as I was inform'd by credible Persons. The Garden is seated in a delightful Place, at the Foot of vast high Mountains. The Fathers of the same College have a good Flower Garden, in which there are Clove Trees; but these, tho' they produce Blossoms as sweet and fragrant as those of the Molucco Islands, yet the Fruit comes not to Perfection. There is also a Park, Fish-Ponds, and curious Fountains for the Diversion of the Religious.

Nuns. Friday 22d, I went to see a famous Nunnery call'd the Conception. The Nuns are 85, and have about an hundred Women Servants: because most of the Monasteries in New Spain, not living in Community, but every Nun receiving Money out of the publick Stock to Maintain her, that is, two Pieces of Eight and a quarter a Head every Week, some keep five or six Maids. The Monastery accordingly is large, and cost some hundred Thousands of Pieces of Eight Building; and the Church is large, and well adorn'd.

Saturday 23d, I went into the neighbouring Church of the Nuns of St. Lazarus, which is also well adorn'd, has seven Altars, and the Roof gilt.

Dominicans. Sunday 24th, I saw the Hospital of St. Hiacinthus, belonging to the Dominican Missioners of Manila. The Church is small, but beautiful; and the Hospitium, or House new built, fit to receive and entertain fifty Religious Men, who are maintain'd upon the Revenue of their Garden, like the College of St. Angel; and they have Money over to send to China; F. Martin Ibanez having told me it yields 8, or 9000 Pieces of Eight a Year in only Herbs, and Sallads. It is to be observ'd, That the compass of the Garden Wall is not above the third part of a League. Its being near the City makes the Revenue the greater.

The Hospitium, or House call'd St. Nicholas de Villanueva, of the Augustinians of the Mission of China, is adjoining to the other towards Mexico. Here is a Church, and Room to entertain forty Missioners, as I was told by F. Peter Flores the Procurator. This also is maintain'd upon the Revenue of the Garden.

Monday 25th, I went to the Nunnery of the Incarnation, where the Nuns Sung well enough. They are about 100, and keep above 300 Servants; the Church has seven little Altars, but the Monastery is very great. Passing by St. Francis the Great in the Afternoon, I saw half the People of the Town got together, to see the Obsequies of three Persons that had been put to Death, and quarter'd a Month before for horrid Crimes. The Fathers of St. John de Dios begg'd them of the Court; which is usually granted. Having placed them in the Chappel de los Desamparados, or of Persons forsaken, in their Monastery, they begg'd Alms to bury and say Masses for them. Then they carry'd them to St. Francis, where those Fathers perform'd their Obsequies according to Custom, and then carrying them through the great Streets of the City, bury'd them in the aforesaid Chappel de los Desamparados.

Tuesday 26th, I went to the Exchequer, which is the Royal Palace. Three Officers have the Care of it, and are the Contador, or Controller, Fator, or Factor, and Treasurer, who receive all Tributes, and the King's fifth part of all Plate for Marking it. This does not amount to less than 600000 Marks a Year, every Mark being eight Ounces; besides what the King is charged of, which is a greater Sum. D. Philip de Rivas, the King's Refiner, or Assayer in that Court, told me, That in the Year 1691, he mark'd 800000 Marks. All this Plate is afterwards Coin'd, first separating the Gold from it, provided there be above forty Grains in a Mark, otherwise 'tis not worth while to separate it.

Wednesday 27th, I met the Governor of New Mexico, whom I had known in Naples, and who was to reside five Years in that Post. This Country is newly Conquer'd, tho' there still remains much more to Conquer. Upon this occasion I was told that those Chichimecas are such skilful Archers, that they will hit a Royal tofs'd up into the Air, and shake off all the Grain out of an Ear of Corn without breaking it off. They are great lovers of Mules Flesh; for which reason they have often robb'd Travellers, and carry'd away only the Beasts, leaving behind the Chests of Pieces of Eight, which they do not value. They also Paint their Bodies, after the manner of People that have been at Jernusalem. The King maintains 600 Horse in several Garrisons in New Mexico, with an allowance of 450 Pieces of Eight a Man; but the Soldiers have the least part of it, the Governor putting the rest into his own Pocket, for he sells them all they stand in need of, exacting twenty Pieces of Eight for that which is worth two; and by this unlawful Practice the Government comes to be worth 300000 Pieces of Eight. These Soldiers are arm'd with a Buckler, Musket and half Pike; not to Fight with the Chichimecas, but to go a Hunting after them as if they were wild Beasts, in November. They are order'd by the King to endeavour not to kill them, but to bring them in to be instructed in the Holy Faith. Thus 150 Leagues have been conquer'd Westward, tho' the People endeavour to defend themselves with their Arrows. The worst is, that being 500 Leagues from Mexico, those Barbarians quickly Revolt; knowing there cannot be supplies of Soldiers sent in a short time. The Country is Plain, and convenient for Carriages, for some Months in the Year; but they are to pass such wide Deserts, that they generally intrench every Night, and keep Guard, for fear of being set upon by the Savages. The Franciscans have the Charge of the Conversion of these Chichimecas, who are rather Atheists, than Idolaters; and have brought a considerable Number of them to live like Men, but their wild Nature always inclines them to Solitude. The Country is so ill Peopled, that they Travel several Days Journey through it without meeting any Village; for which reason the Viceroy of Mexico sent several Families thither of late Years, to People it; the Soil producing all Things that are sow'd in it plentifully, even of Fruits of Europe; besides that there are rich Mines of Gold and Silver. The length of the way not allowing Travelers to carry their Quilts to lie on; the Jesuits that go to their Mission of Pararal, have learnt of the Indians to carry before them on their Saddles their Matresses and Pillows made of Leather, which at Night they blow full of Wind, and in the Morning let it out, and put them up as they were.

Genselli.
1693.

Saturday 30th, being the Day for visiting the Prisons before Easter, the Viceroy heard Mass in the Royal Chappel, where on a row of Chairs he sat down in the middle, and the Oydores, or Judges, and Alcades on his sides. Over against him were the two Fiscales, or Solicitors General, one for the King, and one for Criminal Causes. After Mass they went to the Court of Criminal Causes, and by the way there were presented to the Viceroy two tall Boughs full of Flowers, with Rabbits hanging about it, by some Indians representing their Corporations, and Nofegays to the other Ministers of State, in token of Submission. The Viceroy took his Seat on the middle of the Bench, under the Canopy, with the Oydores, Alcades and Fiscales on his sides being Ten in Number; and then the Eldest Oydore, or Judge, read the Petitions of the Prisoners; whose Crimes being heard, the Viceroy, with the Advice of the Oydores decreed what was to be done; but no Mercy was shewn to Thieves, for he order'd them all to be Prosecuted. The same Day I saw the Formality of Examining a Refiner or Assayer of Gold and Silver, which was perform'd, the King's chief Refiner, and other Officers sitting under a Canopy, and the Person to be Examined making a Trial of giving the Assay of Gold and Silver in their Presence, there being a Furnace there for that purpose. After which, sweet Waters, Chocolate, and Sweetmeats were given about in such Plenty that there was enough to Eat and carry Home; especially abundance of Pastiles, which are very much Perfum'd, and have Figures stamp'd on them. The Indians use to give them with Chocolate and Biskets, not to be eaten then, but to carry away, taking it ill if any Man for want of being acquainted with the Custom, leaves them behind. They give more or less according to the Quality of the Person, and they are worth at least a Royal a Piece.

Sunday 31st, in the Evening, I saw a fine Ceremony perform'd at the Cathedral; which they call de la Segna. Thirteen Canons in long black Cloaks with Hoods, went from the Choir to the Chapter, along Iron Galleries: There kneeling, the Dean took up a black Banner with a red Cross in the middle of it, which after Singing some Prayers and Verses of the Passion, he began to wave first towards the right, to touch with the Point of it the last of the Canons, then towards the Altar, after that towards the left, to touch the last Canon on that side, he standing in the midst of them.

Gemelli. 1598. them. Lastly, he flourish'd the Banner a while in the Air, and then laying it on his Shoulder, walk'd about the Chapter in Memory of our Saviour's walking in Pilar's Court. Then all being rank'd with their Backs to the Altar of the Chapter, made a low Bow one after another, and went back towards the Choir, dragging vast long Trains after them. The Dean went last, between two Canons, with the Banner in his Hands.

Processions.

On Holy Thursday the 4th of April, three Processions went out one after another; the first of the Brothers of the Trinity clad in Red; the second of Brothers of the Church of St. Gregory of the Jesuits; and the third of Brothers of St. Francis, call'd the Procession of the Chineses, because made by Indians of the Philippine Islands. Each of them carry'd its Images, with abundance of Lights, and a company of arm'd Men, after the manner as was mention'd before, besides some that went a Horseback, with Trumpets sounding dismally before them. The Procession being come to the Palace, the Chineses, and Brothers of the Trinity strove for Precedence, and there pass'd some Blows with painted Clubs they carry'd instead of Torches, and the Crolls, so that several Persons were Hurt.

The Sepulchers and Monuments they make at Mexico are beautiful and lightly, but poor in Lights, all made by one Model, and every Year the same; the Tabernacles being high, with Pillars, and Fret-work gilt, which serves as long as the Wood holds. Friday 5th, I saw the Procession of Jerusalem, or Mount Calvary, which goes from St. Francis the Great, carrying the Figure of the Sepulcher. About eight in the Morning three Trumpets founded a doleful Tune, and then appear'd a great many Brothers with Lights in their Hands, and among them several Persons Whipping themselves. Then follow'd a Company of arm'd Men; some of them a Horseback carrying the Sentence in Writing, Title, Garment, and other Tokens of the Passion. Then Persons representing our Saviour, the Blessed Virgin, St. John, St. Veronica, the good and the bad Thief. Then two representing Jewish Priests on Mules, and others in very good Order. In the Afternoon was the Procession of the Blacks and Indians of the Sodality of St. Dominick, much like the others. After this follow'd that of the Spaniards, call'd the Funeral of our Saviour, in which went 16 Regidores, who are like Aldermen, two Alcades, and a Corregidor, who are the Supreme Magistrates of Mexico, with Alguaziles, and Serjeants before them. Then follow'd abundance of Knights, and Brothers, and all the Mysteries of the Passion carry'd on small Biers, by Men clad in Black like Angels, and adorn'd with Jewels. After them came ten Penitents, with vast long Trains; next the Company of arm'd Men, in white Armour, as has been said in other Places; and lastly, an Image of our Saviour, in a rich Shrine of Silver and Crystal, given the Dominicans by the Bishop of Campeche. By the Shrine was the Blessed Virgin, and St. John, follow'd by an infinite Multitude of devout People. In short, nothing was inferior to the Magnificence of Europe. Another Procession of Indians went from the Parish of St. James of the Franciscans, much like the last, only that some Indian Women went in Mourning Weeping, to represent the Daughters of Sion.

Saturday 6th, the Viceroy and Vicequeen went to hear Service at the Cathedral; he sat on a Place rais'd above the rest of the Church, she in a Closet shut up with Lattices, both on the right side of the Altar. On a Bench behind the Viceroy sat the first Chaplain, Captain of the Guard, and Gentleman of the Horse. On the left side of the Altar sat the Regidores, attended by two Mace-Bearers, clad in Damask with Silver Maces in their Hands. After the usual Ceremonies, Mass beginning at Gloria in excelsis, the rich Marble Tabernacle was uncover'd; the lower part whereof is supported by sixteen Pillars, and the upper by eight, with noble gilt Statues, which vast Work rises to the top of the Church. There is also a Pulpit of the same fine Marble of the Pillars curiously Wrought.

A fine Tabernacle.

Sunday 7th, I saw the Viceroy at the Church of St. Augustin the Great, at Mass, sitting on his Throne, and 18 Knights of Santiago, or St. James, upon two Benches by him, with their white Mantles of the Order. There are in Mexico abundance of Knights of this and other Orders, who sell Cloth, and Silk, Chocolate, and other Things of less value; saying this no way lessens their Gentility, they having a Warrant of the Emperor Charles V. for so doing. This Church is very beautiful, and has thirteen Altars extraordinary rich in Gold, and adorn'd with curious Pictures. At the Entrance, on the left hand is a small Congregation of the third Order, with five Altars richly Adorn'd. I saw a Play in the Afternoon very ill Acted by Criollos, that is, the Sons of Spaniards by Indian Women, the Europeans looking upon it as a disgrace to Act in Publick.

Gexpelli.
1698.

Guadalupe.

Monday 8th, I went a League out of the City to visit the Church of our Lady of Guadalupe, which they say was built by Command of the Blessed Virgin appearing to an Indian, and is now a noted Pilgrimage, whither the Mexicans resort with rich Offerings, with which there is now building a large Church with three Isles supported upon eight Pillars, and will cost a great deal before it is finished. The high Altar of a little Church, serves for the present, and is curiously wrought of Silver. There are three other Altars for saying of the Masses, where are Alms brought for every Day. Near the aforesaid Church is the Place, where the Blessed Virgin is said to have appear'd the fifth time, and a great Spring; and not far from it on the Rock an Hermitage of great Devotion, in the place where the Indian who had the Vision, is reported by order of it to have gather'd Roles to show the Bishop in token of the truth of what he said. This Afternoon I went upon the Canal of Xamatica, where People either walk on the Banks, or divert themselves in Boats on the Water, there being many Men and Women who Sing and Play on the Musick, striving to outdo one another. The Banks are cover'd with little Houses of Indians and Inns, for the People to take some Refreshment, such as Chocolate, Atole and Tamales. The principal Ingredient of the two last nam'd is Indian Wheat, order'd after this manner. They boil the Indian Wheat with Lime, and when it has stood a while grind it, as they do the Cacao. Then they strain that Past through a Sieve with Water, which makes a white thick Liquor, like that we draw from Almonds; which Liquor when it has been boil'd a little, they call Atole, and is drank either mix'd with Chocolate or by it self. The more dainty People drink it the latter way with Sugar; but either way it is very nourishing, and much us'd in the Indies. Of the Past that remains after that washing, they make the Tamales, mixing it with minc'd Meat, Sugar and Spice, and colouring it over. I lik'd the Taste of them both, tho' my Mouth was us'd to good and bad.

Atole a Liquor.

Tuesday 9th I hear'd Mass in the Nunnery of S. Agnes, Founded by a Citizen of Mexico, with a Revenue to Maintain 33 poor Maids, which are now chosen by his Heir. The Monastery on the other hand, in gratitude pays a thousand Pieces of Eight a Year to this Protector and Heir, by order of the Founder. This right of Patronage is at present in a Criollo or Son of a Spaniard by an Indian Woman, of the Family of Cadena. The Church is well adorn'd, has nine Altars, the Roof vaulted, and all decent.

Thursday 11th, in the Morning I went to see Chapultepec, where History tells us Montezuma's Palace of Recreation, or Country-House stood. At present it serves to receive the Viceroys, till the City is ready to receive them, and their Palace of Residence put in order. Of late Years this publick Reception has not been made, the City having represented to the King what a great Expence it was; so that the present Viceroy the Count de Montezuma, went in privately to take Possession of the Government in the great Hall where the Courts are kept, and when all things were in a readiness, made his solemn Entry a Horseback over the Causeway of Guadalupe, attended by the Nobility and Magistrates. When he came to the Triumphal Arch erected before the Church of the Dominicans, the Gate was shut according to Custom, to perform the Ceremony of presenting the Keys, and tending the Oath to keep the Liberties of the City. As he was going to alight for this purpose, he fell from his Horse, and his Perriwig dropt off his Head, the Horse being unruly, and he, as a Scholar, little us'd to ride. Then he pass'd through the second Arch, which was richly adorn'd, and then a Bridge over to the Church-yard of the Cathedral, at the Gate whereof the Archbishop in Pontificalibus expected him, with all the Chapter, to swear him to the keeping the Privileges of the Church. This done Te Deum was sung.

Chapultepec

Viceroy's Reception

To return to the Palace of Chapultepec, it was built at the foot of a Hill (on the Top whereof is a Hermitage of the Invocation of S. Francis Xaverius) by D. Luis de Velasco, who was Viceroy in the Reign of the Emperor Charles V. as appears by the Inscription over the Gate; but it is too little for a Viceroy's Court. It has two Courts, in one of which the City did use to have the Juego de Toros, or riding at Bulls, whilst things were preparing for the Entry. The Garden is small but has a good Spring, which after serving the Palace is convey'd in Pipes to Bethlem, the Novitiate of the Mercenarians, to serve

Omelli. 1688. serve the Inhabitants of that Quarter. They say this Spring was accidentally found by a Viceroy, who caus'd that Place to be dug to find Montezuma's Treasure. Close by it is a little Wood, and not far from it the Powder-House, the Mins drove by Water. At Chapultepec begin the famous Arches or Aqueduct, which conveys to the City of Mexico an excellent Water brought from Santa Fe, three Leagues distant. One Mark Guervara a private Citizen, was at all this charge. Almost all People use this Water, because that of Belen is thicker. Some say it is spoil'd by being convey'd beyond Chapultepec in Leaden Pipes; but I found it good enough.

Friday 12th, I travell'd three Leagues through a Plain well cultivated Country, like that of Poggio Reale in Naples, to see the miraculous Image of our Lady, call'd de los Remedios. The Church is built on a Hill, with convenient Dwellings for the Priests that serve it, under the Care of a Vicar. It is adorn'd with excellent Pictures in gilt Frames, as is the Roof and four Altars. But the high Altar (on which stands the holy Image, which is Massy and two Spans high) besides being all gilt, has a noble Canopy of beaten Silver, an Antependium of Crystal, with gilt Figures behind it, and about 30 large Silver Lamps of curious Workmanship; nor have they spar'd this Metal to adorn the Pulpit. Behind the high Altar is a little Treasury where they keep all the Things of value offer'd by the Devotes. For fear of Thieves the Church being vastly rich and standing on a Mountain, they never open it till ten in the Morning.

Thence I went to S. Joachim, a Monastery of Carmelite barefoot Fryars, begun to be Built of late Years, and therefore the Religious are as yet but ill Lodg'd, and say Mass in a little Church with three Altars. They are Walling in a great piece of Ground to make a Garden, which in time will be delightful and yield great Profit.

Saturday 13th, I went to the Monastery of the Dominicans, to see the Chappel of D. Peter Montezuma, descended from the Emperor Montezuma, where I found a Spanish Inscription, in English thus, The Chappel of D. Peter Montezuma, who was hereditary Prince to Montezuma the Lord of the greatest part of New Spain. The Chappel is dedicated to our Lady de los Dolores, or of Sorrow; devoutly adorn'd, and enrich'd with Gold, as are the other 40 Altars in the same Church, besides Oratories and particular Congregations. The Monastery is large, containing 130 Religious Men in handsome Dormitories. The Nunnery of S. Teresa of her Order is rich; in the Church there are six Altars handsomly painted, and magnificently adorn'd with Gold.

C H A P. VIII

An Account of the wonderful Conveyance for the Water to run out of the Lake of Mexico.

Being desirous to see this mighty Work, I mounted a Horseback on Monday 15th, and travell'd 3 Leagues along the Plain to the Village of Tanipantla. Then going up the Hill of Barrientos, two Leagues further came to Guanacatlan; where there is good earthen Ware made, like that of Cilli so much valu'd in Europe, which when broke wanton Ladies eat. In the Evening crossing the River Guanacatlan (which falls into the Disague, or Channel made for carrying off the Water from the Lake of Mexico) I rode a League further, and set up that Night at Teplosotlan in the Noviceship of the Jesuits, where the Rector entertain'd me courteously. This House is built upon a Hill with Dormitories and Conveniences for 52 Priests, Novices and Lay-Brothers. The Church is of the Invocation of S. Francis Xavierius, and has six Altars richly gilt, especially the high Altar, which exceeds all other in Magnificence. There is a Chappel of our Lady of Loretto of the same bigness, and exactly built like that in Italy. The Garden is large and has a great deal of European Fruit.

Tuesday 16th, having travel'd some way over Plains well cultivated, I came to Gueguetoca, the Place where Waters have their Passage under the Direction of the Guarda Mayor, or head Keeper. The Viceroy is oblig'd by the King's express Command to go thither every Year in August to view what Condition the Place is in, and give the necessary Orders for it. D. Thomas de Buyron y Mexica entertain'd me courteously, and gave me a true Account of that Work.

Gelwelli:
1698.

Mexico
subject to Floods.

Mexico is so seated that it is always subject to be overflow'd by the Water of its Lakes, which run down in vast quantities from the Mountains about it. This hapned the first time in the Reign of Montezuma the first of the Name; afterwards under Ahuizotl, and under the last Montezuma; so that the Inhabitants seeing themselves forced to go in Boats about the City, would certainly have chang'd their antient Abode, had not they been assisted by the neighbouring Kings, making some Banks against the Water.

The Year after Mexico was Conquer'd by the Forces of the Emperor Charles V. that is, in 1523, the Waters swell'd so high, that they were oblig'd to make the Bank and Causeway of S. Lazarus. This not being a sufficient Defence against the Mischief that might happen, they began to turn away the River Guanitlan, which did most harm; this by Order of D. Luis de Velasco, who was Viceroy in the Year 1556; because the Year before the City had been Drowned, notwithstanding the new Bank.

Another great Inundation hapning in the Year 1580, the Viceroy D. Martin Enriquez, order'd some Method should be found to drein all the Lake; and the Village of Gueguetoca was thought a proper Place to convey the Water into the River of Tula; but the Work was not begun. In 1604 the Inundation was so great, that the City had like to have been all Drowned; wherefore the Marques de Montes Claros, who had charge of conveying away the Water, was for beginning the Work immediately. The King's Solicitor oppos'd it, alledging, That Work could not be finish'd under an Age, and could never be maintain'd, because a Channel was to be Cut nine or ten Leagues in Length, and in Depth from sixteen to an hundred Yards (every Yard of these is 3 Spans and a Quarter of Naples, that is, about three Quarters and a Nail of an English Yard) on which Work 15000 Indians must be employ'd every Day; and therefore the Work was put off. In 1607 D. Luis de Velasco Governing, there was so

A great Canal to carry away the Water
begun.

great a Flood, the Fences made by his Predecessor proving useless, that the City was almost swallow'd up; which made the carrying off the Water before, thought impracticable to be thought of again, and the Place was often view'd by the Viceroy, Judges, Magistrates of the City, Clergy, Ingeniers, and other understanding Persons to find the easiest way to convey the Water. After several Consultations it was resolv'd, That the King's Solicitor and the City should Petition the Viceroy. He going in Person to the Place aforementioned with the Judges of the Royal Court and the Viceroy General, order'd the Work should be done; and accordingly on the 28th of November 1607. after Mass sung at Gueguetoca, the Viceroy himself taking a Spade began to dig. This Place was found out by Arrigo Martinez an European, who undertook to bring the Work to perfection. The Expence being so great, the same Viceroy caus'd the Houses, Possessions, Merchandize and Goods of all the Citizens to be Apprais'd, which were valu'd at 20267555 Pieces of Eight, upon which he rais'd one in the hundred, and that amounted to 304013 Pieces of Eight and two Royals and a half; which was paid by Laity and Clergy alike. Whilst Martinez was carrying on the Work, the Viceroy went thither with some Persons of Judgment, who were of Opinion that the Trench or Canal should be carry'd on open, from the Bridge of Gueguetoca, or Salt-River, up to the Lake of Sitlaltepec, for the space of a League and a half, and from the Bridge downward, the Water should run under Arches with Gaps left open at certain spaces; and that the Canal all along should be four of their Yards, as above, deep, and five over. The number of Indians that wrought from the end of November 1607 till the 7th of May 1608, was 471154; and those that made it their Business to dress them Meat 1664, the Expence of Pieces of Eight 73611. The Viceroy and Archbishop saw the Water run to the end of the cover'd Canal, at the foot of the Hill of Nocistongo.

In 1611, the King by special Warrant of the 8th of May, demanded a particular Account of the Viceroy, the Archbishop and City, of what had been laid out till that time; what benefit had been reap'd, what they could hope for the time to come, what it would cost to bring the Work to Perfection, and what the Charge would be every Year to keep it in Repair. The Viceroy by the Advice of understanding People, answer'd, That they had taken wrong Measures, and therefore all the Expence was lost. Alonso d' Arias was of opinion the Canal under Ground must be forty Yards deep, of those before-mention'd, and 60000 in length up to Mexico to secure the City; and that it was impossible to finish the Canal as 'twas begun under Ground, or to keep it afterwards in Repair, because of its narrowness. The City gave the same same account the Vice-roy had done; Gemelli. concluding all was mistaken, because 1608. they had not proceeded according to the first design; adding that the expence to that time amounted to 413324 pieces of Eight, for the labour 1128650 Indians. Martinez, on the other Hand, writ in Vindication of what he had done, clearing himself of what was objected by his Adversaries.

Hereupon it was resolv'd at Madrid, to send over Adrian Boot a French Ingenier, and accordingly he went. He coming to Mexico in 1614, view'd all the Lakes, and Rivers that could do harm to the City, in the Company of one of the Oydores or Judges; and at last concluded that all the Work done was in vain, and would only serve to ease the City of the River of Guantitlan, which carries the greatest quantity of Water, into the Lakes of Mexico, Citlaltepec, and Sumpango. Then he offering to throw up the Banks about the City, the next Year 1615, for the expence of an hundred eighty six thousand pieces of Eight, his Proposal was rejected, that Method having been found unsuccessful in the Years 1604, and 1607. Martinez was therefore order'd to carry on his Work, upon condition he should finish it for 110000 pieces of Eight. The King confirm'd this Contract in 1616, ordering the Money to be paid out of Duty on Wine in Mexico. The Count del Priego being Viceroy, to see how much the Water must rise to Flood the City, caus'd the work of the Canal to be left off, the Banks to be broke down, and the River of Guantitlan and other Waters to be let in, from the 13th of June, till the last day of October 1623. The Water was observ'd at first to rise a Yard, wanting 2 Inches, but in December it swell'd so high that the City was in Danger. The Marques de Zerralvo finding things in this Posture, following the Steps of his Predecessors, made several Fences; but they avail'd nothing, for the River of Guantitlan running into the Lake in 1627, the Water was half a Yard deep in the City. Hereupon the People of Mexico press'd the Vice-roy, to make the Canal be carry'd on as the King had order'd; whereupon after some consultation, it was order'd to be proceeded upon. But upon St. Matthew's day, that same Year, some Banks breaking, so great a quantity of Water came in, that it was two Yards deep in the City, and they went about the Streets in Boats. This was caus'd by the River of Guantitlan, breaking into the Canal of Zumpango, after the Work of the Canal was left off. Seeing the Waters up to their Chins by this inundation, they began to talk of removing the City, to some high Ground, according to several repeated Orders from the King. In order to it, the Viceroy on the first of November 1629 held a Council of all the Courts and Citizens; where it was agreed that several Magistrates and skilful Persons, should go find out the Canal that had been begun.

On the 6th of December 1629, upon a second Debate, it was resolv'd to continue the Canal of Guaguetoca, which would now cost 200000 pieces of Eight, to bring it to perfection; besides other Works upon the Causeway and Banks. At the beginning of January 1630, the Work was begun, upon condition it should be finish'd in 21 Months, with the expence of 280000 pieces of Eight, and the Labour of 300 Indians every day, according to the Method propos'd by Martinez, which was found to be easier than the rest. The Marques de Zerralvo Viceroy on the 12th of October 1630, put out an Order for carrying on the Canal to the Mouth of St. Gregory.

Afterwards considering it was impossible to find a Passage for all the Waters, obtain'd a new Order of the 19th of May, 1631, for building a new City, between Tacuba, and Tacubaia, in the Plains of the Village of Sanctorum, towards the Mills of John de Alcocer, and would have this debated in a General Council. The Magistrates, Chapter and Religious meeting, the greatest part would not consent to it, saying there was no reason to lose the value of 50 Millions and upwards, in the Structure of Churches, and Houses, to save the expence of four Millions, it would cost to drain the Lake; urging further the loss of the Revenues of the Church, the King and private Persons. Thus all that could be alledg'd on the contrary being of no force against private Interest, nothing was concluded on.

In 1632 Martinez dy'd for Grief, that the Oydor Villabuena had reflected on him, upon account of the mistake, committed in making the Canal.

The Marques de Cadereyta, coming over Viceroy in 1635, caus'd all the Canals of the City to be cleans'd. Boats to go upon them, with of 34000 pieces of Eight following Year having seen the condition of the Banks

Genelli.
1678. Canal of Gueguetoca, he order'd Ferdinand Zepeda, and D. Ferdinand Corrillo to draw up another particular of all that had hapned, and what had been laid out upon the said Canal, from the 8th of November 1607, when it was begun under the Government of the Marquess de Salinas the 2d Viceroy, till the 27th of March 1637. Three points were consider'd in that Paper. The first, whether in order to secure Mexico against inundations, it would be available to preserve the Canal of Gueguetoca; whether being made open, deeper, and wider, it would be capable of dreining the Lake of Mexico, and in case it were, whether it was possible to keep it in repair. The 2d, whether in case no way were found out for all the Waters at Gueguetoca, or elsewhere, Mexico might be secur'd by Banks. And the third, whether, if both were impracticable, the City ought to be remov'd. The Computation was made of what had been spent till then, and it amounted to 295016 pieces of Eight, seven Royals and a half.

This account being Printed at Mexico on the 7th of April, 1637, Copies were given to all Magistrates, the Chapter, Provincials of Orders, and other Persons of Judgment; that they might examine it, and give their Opinions. To this purpose, a Consult was held in the presence of the Viceroy, where they all disagreed, according as every one stood affected. On the 20th of July 1637 the same Viceroy order'd that the Canal of Gueguetoca should be made open; whereupon the Geometricians declar'd, that between the Causeway of St. Christopher, and the Mouth of St. Gregory, there must be dug up 70721526 cubical Yards of Earth, to make way for four cubical Yards of Water of the Lake of Mexico. It has since appear'd by experience, that for almost an Age past, wherein there has been continual Labour, and Application, about three Millions of Gold have been spent, without compassing the intended end; for no other way having been found for the River Guatitlan, upon Floods it has carry'd Trees, Stones, and Earth into the vaulted part of the Canal; so that in process of time, it has by degrees obstructed the Passage of the Waters, which afterwards of necessity run into the Lakes of Zumpango, thence to that of Xaltocan, and lastly into those of St. Christopher, Tescuco, and Renon, indangering the City of Mexico, as particularly in 1645.

The inhabitants never agreeing to remove the City, according to the King's Orders, the Marquess de Cadereya caus'd the Work of the open Canal to be carry'd on, causing the old Arches to be broken down, the better to remove the Impediments that hindred the Passage of the Water. This Work, as has been said, was begun in 1637, and at this present, there remains much more to do, than has been done; and the worst of it is, that they must cut down a vast depth, to lay open the old vaulted way, made them by digging under ground, like Conny-buries. This Work is carry'd on, but most is done in rainy Weather, because then the Flood helps to carry down the Stones, dug out, otherwise it would not be done in many Ages. To do this, they fasten a Beam on the Bank of the River, or neer the mouth of the Vault; about this Beam, they wind several Ropes to which the Indians are made fast by the middle, who dig the Earth and Stones along the Canal, to make them fall into the Stream, into which they sometimes tumble themselves.

That I might give the Reader a true account of the present condition of this Canal, I went in the Afternoon to see it. I found it open for a League and a half, to the place call'd Guinnata, where it winds, because they met with a solid Rock, and from thence forward to the Mouth of St. Gregory, being half a League in length, it is not open, except in some places for an experiment. Here it is necessary the ground be cut down open to the Banks; to do which will employ many thousands of People, and require a much greater expence than the 100000 pieces of Eight assign'd by the King. And when all this is done, it will not secure Mexico against the Floods; to prevent which, it would be necessary to make the Canal much deeper, that it might carry all the Water, that gathers in the Lake, when the Rains fall.

I went hence to see the Bank or Dike, call'd Vertidero, half a League above Gueguetoca, made to keep the River of Guatitlan from running into the Lakes; and confine it to the small Lake of Cuyatepeke, and this to avoid destroying the Canal which is not capable of receiving it in time of Floods. Sometimes the Waters gush into the Lake of Zumpango, which is twelve Spans lower than that of Cuyatepeke, and as much higher than that of Xaltocan, and thus they are kept as it were laid up, till the Floods are over. Then that they may not run out of the Lake of Zumpango, into those of St.

St. Christopher, Tescuco, and Pennon to Gemelli. mischief Mexico, a strong Bank, is always kept up. There are also two other Banks or Dikes, which answer to the Lake of Zumpango, the one with three Sluices, the other with two, to convey the spare Water of Zumpango, when it does not Rain, into the afore-said Canal. When I went thither, the Canal was choak'd up, and out of use, by reason of the great quantity of Earth carry'd into it, by the Waters. Two other Dikes, one after another have a Communication with the River and Lake of Cuyatepeke; the first has six Sluices, the 2d four. The Keeper of them led me all about, and tho' an Indian, treated me courteously in his House.

C H A P. IX.

Of the Danger the Author run himself into, to see the Plate dug, and a Description of the Mines of Pachuca.

THO' all my Friends discourag'd me from going to the Mines of Pachuca, as being incredibly deep, yet having fix'd my Resolution, I set out upon Wednesday the 17th. I din'd at the Village of Techischiac two Leagues distant, then went on a League further to the Village of Guipustla, and from thence 3 Leagues to lye at the Farm of Tinsantlalpa. I there kill'd four Hares by the House, and might have kill'd more, but would not; first, because they are not so good as those of Europe; in the next place, because the Mexicans abhor them, because they have seen them eat the Maggots bred in dead Horses.

Thursday 18. having travell'd six Leagues, part Mountain, part Plain, I came to Pachuca, where I was entertain'd by Dominick Lavarra, the chief Officer there of the King's Reveue. My chief design being to see the Mines as soon as we had din'd, he sent his Son-in-law with me to the two nearest, about half a League distant, to which the Way was rough and craggy. They were both extraordinary deep. The depth of the first call'd Santa Cruz, or Holy Cross, was 92 Eftados (an Eftado is 3 Spanish Yards, and a Spanish Yard, as was said before, is three quarters and a Nail of our English Yard) so that the 92 Eftados being 276 Spanish Yards, makes 224 English Yards. The other, call'd of Navarro, is 80 Eftados, that is, 195 Yards. In that of Santa Cruz, the Metal was taken out with Malacates. This is an Engine with a perpendicular Axle-tree resting in two Irons. About the Axle-tree moves a Wheel, upon which instead of a Rope an Iron Chain is wound, one end of which comes up with the Metal hanging to it, and the other goes down for more, like Buckets in a Well. The Engine is kept going by four Mules, made fast to a piece of Timber that crosses the Axle-tree. Two of these Malacates work at this Mine, as well to draw up the Metal, as to drain the Water, which would otherwise rise and hinder the Work. I went down five Ladders, or Poles; but the Miner would let me go no further, for fear I should tumble headlong; and indeed the Poles we were to go down by were wet, and a Man's Foot might easily slip, as he was finding out the Notch. Then I went to the Mine, call'd del Navarro, where the Indians brought up the Metal on their Backs, with eminent Danger of their Lives, in climbing so many Ladders, or rather upright Poles with Notches. This they do for four Royals a day; but at Night they are allow'd to carry as much Ore as they can at once, which they afterwards share with the Owner of the Mine. They had wrought five Months to make a Communication under Ground from one Mine to the other, and convey the Water out of that of Navarro, into that of Santa Cruz, which was deeper; as yet the Miners had not met, but were so near one another, that both heard each others Strokes.

Friday 29th, I went two Leagues further to see the Mines on the Mountain. There I found a little City of clay Houses, cover'd with Wood, as in other places the Indians cover them with Leaves of Maguey; for here at least 12000 got their living in those deep Dungeons. There are in the space of six Leagues about a Thousand Mines; some laid aside, others where they now Work, and others they preserve; but some privately get down into them to steal the Metal. Eight days before I was there, fifteen Indians had been kill'd in one of them, the Earth falling in upon them, as they were going down a narrow Mouth ; the great one being stopp'd up by the Owner's Orders.

G. G. G.
169

Having rested a little, I went to the Mine, they call of the Trinity ; because it is made up of the three several Mines, distinguish'd by the Names of la Campechiana, Joya, and Pennol. Tho' these be three Mouths, they all go to the same Vein. As for its Riches, Persons of Reputation and well acquainted with the Place, told me, that in these ten Years, there have been forty Millions of Silver drawn thence, nine hundred, or a thousand Men working there every day. When they had sunk the Work, an hundred Estados (each three quarters of an English Yard and Nail, as has been explain'd before) they found Water, to drain the which sixteen Malacates (before explain'd) were set up, and two Millions were laid out in Timber-work to keep the Earth from falling in. Yet time, that consumes all things, has render'd this rich Mine so dangerous, that it is counted impossible to get more Plate out of it, and therefore all the Mouths are stopp'd up.

However a new Mine was open'd close by it, eight Years since, which has yielded great Profit to the Owner, and is call'd, St. Matthew's Mine ; the Veins of Metal lying East, and West, which are easily found and dug. In this Mine, the which is fifty Estados deep (as above) I resolv'd to see the Veins of Silver ; but having gone down five Ladders, or Poles, I was astonish'd to see how likely it was to tumble down headlong. Being therefore about going up again, the Miner, who has the charge of propping up the Mines, encourag'd me, saying, there were but few Poles to the bottom ; whereupon he going before with a Light in his Hand, I ventur'd to go down the rest, tho' with much Fear ; because I sometimes found it very difficult to clasp the Pole with my Arms, and fix my Feet on the Notches on it. However recommending my self to Almighty God, I went down three times as far as the Miner had told me, only to encourage me ; so I came at last to the Place where the Miners with Iron Wedges made the hard strong Ore fly about. They told me, that in some Places it is softer, and of several Colours ; and having rewarded them, they gave me a great deal of Metal. Here I bethought my self of the Danger I had run into ; and the more because it was very unwholesome being in that deep Dungeon, by reason of the pestilential Damps of the Place. Having therefore stay'd there, about two Hours, I went up again, in much dread, because of the bad Ascent ; and got up into the open Air, very weary. I thought I was then newly Born into the World, and I confess in my Days, I never undertook so Rash, if not Foolish, an Action ; nor was I ever so much afraid in five Years, I travell'd among barbarous Nations. I would not have gone down again into that Place, whither only my Curiosity had led me, for two, or three thousand pieces of Eight.

The Mines are so deep, because they always dig down Perpendicularly, to find the Veins of Silver, which being dug away as they lye Horizontally, they again begin to sink deeper, till they meet another ; and that being spent, down again ; so that this Work continuing above an Age, the Mines must of necessity be vastly deep, as will appear by the following Cut.

- A. The Mouth of the Mine.
- B. Poles, or Timbers with Notches, very dangerous to go down.
- C. Indians that carry up the Ore, with Light in their Hands.
- D. Veins of Metal, where other Indians dig the Ore.

See Cut, Page 522.

The worst of it is, that tho' the wretched Indians carry Light ; yet this not showing them what is below, they are forced to set their Feet at a Venture, and so they sometimes tumble down, with the Metal on their Backs. They would have carry'd me to see others, but I would not tempt God any more. I return'd betimes, to Pachuca, and din'd with Lauerrai's Son-in-law.

CHAP. X.

How the Silver is separated from the Stone of the Mines, by Fire, and Quicksilver.

Gemelli.
1698.
The Ore
broken.

After Dinner they carry'd me to see the Metal separated at the Silver Works, whereof there are many in Pachuca. It is done after this manner. When the Ore is brought out of the Mines they break it with Hammers, to separate the Metal from the Tepetate, or Stone that has no Silver. The Pipinadores, that is, the Men that break it, being well skill'd in their Trade, put the Metal which is for the Fire, and that which is for the Quicksilver into several Sacks; Experience teaching them how to know the one from the other, and so send it to the Haziendas, or Mills.

Then pounded.

There the Ore is ground, and pounded in six Iron Mortars, like those for Powder, working like Mills with Water, or with Mules. In order to run it, they mix with it a certain proportion of burning Lead (first separated from the same Metal) which is like a Letharge of Iron, and is put with an equal quantity of Coals into a Furnace, like a Chimney twelve Spans high, and wider at the top than the bottom. Two great pair of Bellows blow this Furnace, two Mules working the Engine that moves them; and whilst the first Metal is melting, they lay on more for about six Hours. When the Lead, and Silver are melted, they take off the burnt Scum with a Hook; whilst the Silver is let run out at the small end of the Furnace, through a Trough into a Mould, where it hardens; and when Cold is taken out. Then they shut the Spout of the Furnace, and lay on more Ore, Lead, and Coals as at first, to cast more Pigs, or Bars. The burnt Lead, we have spoke of, is Sold by the Indians to their Masters; making it in their Houses, when they endeavour to melt Silver by Stealth. When they have made 50, or 60 Pigs, in a Week's time, more or less, according as the Owner of the Work is in Wealth; they are put into another Furnace adjoining, to separate the Lead, and refine them. This Furnace is like our Ovens to bake Bread in, with a Trench in the middle, full of wet Ashes moulded together to receive the pure Silver. It is first heated with a Wood Fire in another Furnace adjoining, call'd the refining Furnace; and when the Pigs are ready to run, they clap great Bellows, like those of the first Furnace, to it. Then the Silver running, the pure part of it runs off along the afore said Trench, and the Lead or Earth drawn off with an Iron Hook; when Cold looks like a Froth, or Pumice Stone. This Froth of the first and second running, is kept to serve again in the Furnace where they melt the Ore.

Refining.

Then the Pigs, or Bars of pure Silver, weighing 80, or 100 Marks, of eight Ounces to a Mark, are carry'd to the King's Refiner or Assayer, who tries whether they are Standard, that they may be Coin'd. If they find them so, they are Mark'd, and the King takes his Fifth; there being in all Places where there are Mines a Treasurer, a Controller, and another Officer call'd Official Mayor, to receive the King's Dues. If they are not Standard, they are Refin'd over again, and then Stamp'd, marking how many Grains of Gold there are in every Mark, and if above forty, they are carry'd to the King's Refining House to be separated.

Marking.

If it is Pure, or Virgin Ore, the Quicksilver is us'd after this manner. After being well pounded in the Mortars above mention'd, into fine Powder, and sifted, it is moulded in a strong wooden Box, with Water, Salt, and the Dross of Copper, as if it were to make a Clay to build Walls. This done they add the Quicksilver to it, and tread it for 24 Hours, so that it may mix through all the Mass. Then they make a Heap of it, under Covert, but open to the Air on the sides, with a Mark to know the Day it was made; for every two Days it must be work'd up again with Water, be stamp'd for 24 Hours, and be put in the same place.

Course
Ore.

All the Heaps, thus made, are visited, as if they were Sick Persons, by the Azoguero, or Quicksilver Man; who washing a little of that Mass, by the Silver that remains clotted together in the Dish, and by the outward Heat of all the Heap, understands what quantity of Mercury, and of Dross of Copper must be added to it, or taken from it, because too much Quicksilver makes it turn Black, and it must be cool'd with the Ouse taken out of neighbouring Rivers. If it is Cold they add more Copper Dross, because the Quicksilver is no fermentative Menstruum, and it receives but gives no Quality. Skilful Men say, That when the Mass is of a Colour like Bran, it shows there wants more Quick-silver; if of a Pearl Colour, that the Work is in a good Condition; if of an Ash Colour, that the Heap cannot be better than it is. This Perfection it comes to in twenty Days, or a Month, more or less, according to the Nature of the Ore.

Gettelli.
1698.

Washing.

This Mass, or Mixture is afterwards wash'd at the Lavadero, or Washing-place, with Hand-wheels; the Earth thus wash'd running through Spouts into three several Vessels, one under another, that the Silver running off from the first, may stop in the second or third, from the last of which the Water runs out through a Spout, and falls into a Place, where the Women always find some small quantity of Silver.

The Silver that remains at the bottom of the Vessels, is put into a thin Cloth Bag ending in a Point at the bottom, that the Mercury may drop out at the Point, the Weight at top pressing it. Yet only the fifth Part goes off this way; for which reason they use to put several Balls of about three Pounds each, of that first Paste, or Amalgama, as the Chymists call it, into a Brass or Earthen Bell, or Crucible, with little Plates of Iron across the Mouth of it, that the Silver may not fall when it is hardned. Such another Bell is put into the Ground, one third part of it full of Water; and then the Mouth of the other is fitted to it so exactly that nothing may Evaporate. Then they make a Cole Fire on the uppermost, till it is red Hot; which is the sign that the Quicksilver is separated, and the Silver alone remains in a Body.

This is carry'd to the King's Officers to be Assay'd; and if not Standard, is again run to Refine, and cast into Bars, on which they put the Stamp to show it has paid the Fifth, and the Mark denoting how many Grains of Gold it contains, as has been said.

The Silver might be separated in a few Hours by only Fire, but then there would be a great Loss; on the other hand it requires a whole Month to do it with Quicksilver; and a greater Expence.

because the Mercury coming from Spain, or Pern is very dear; they paying 84 pieces of Eight the hundred Weight, and being oblig'd to separate an hundred Marks with it. In my time I saw 300 pieces of Eight given for it: not that the King sells it so dear; but because his Officers sometimes make their advantage of the necessity of the Owners of the Mines; and this want of Quicksilver is what Empoverishes Mexico. Hence it is also, that in New Spain for the King's Fifth, they take but Ten in the Hundred, and one call'd de Cobos for the Assayer, and other Officers, by reason of the great Expence the Proprietors are at; whereas in Pern they take Twenty in the Hundred to the full, the Quicksilver being Cheap there. In former times the Silver was separated with only Mercury, and Salt, and it lay a whole Year; but afterwards a Dominican Friar made the Work easier, by the invention of the Dross of Copper, which presently heats the Mass.

There is one wonderful Particular to be observ'd in this Matter, and is, That the Quicksilver receiv'd by the Water in the lower Bell is found so much short of what was put in, as is the Weight of the Silver gain'd by its means. And therefore some make a Question, whether the Mercury fixes, or whether evaporating, it consolidates the Silver. The first is counted the more likely Opinion, because of the equality of the Silver, and of the Mercury that is missing.

Saturday 20th, I set out from Pachuca betimes, and having travell'd 7 Leagues, din'd at the Inn of the Village of Tesayucca. Then riding two Leagues further I lay at St. Lucia, a Farm of the Jesuits belonging to the Noviceship of Tepicsetlan. This Farm contains many Leagues of Pasture, and Tillage. There are on it about an hundred marry'd Blacks, who living in Cottages multiply, to the great Benefit of those Fathers; every one being sold for 3, or 400 pieces of Eight. They have about 140000 Sheep, and Goats; 5000 Horses, and Mares; and 10000 Cows, and Oxen. Those that look after them, have the Tithe of all the Increase, which is bought by the Fathers, at a set Rate. Sunday 21st, I travell'd seven Leagues on a good Road to Mexico.

A Voyage round the World by Dr. John Francis Gemelli Careri. Part IV.

Containing the most Remarkable Things he saw in NEW SPAIN.

B O O K II.

C H A P. I.

Upon what Conditions the Mines are granted to Proprietors.

Gemelli.
1698.
Mines free
to all.

ANY Person whatsoever that discovers a Mine, whether of Gold, or Silver, may make his Advantage of it, paying the King the fifth Part of its Product. A Mine forsaken by the first Discoverer for three Months, falls to the King; so that any Man is free to go dig in it, giving Notice to the first Owner. If he opposes, and showing a Reason, why he has not kept Men at Work, the Royal Court judges whether his Opposition is to take Place or not.

How divided.

The King gives 60 Spanish Varas, or Yards, such Measure as above, towards every quarter of the Heaven from the Mouth of the Mine, or all on one side, as the Miner likes best; without which Space another may open another Mine, leaving five Yards between them to part their Ground. As they sink under Ground, one may Work into the others Division, till he meets with the others Workmen, for then he must retire to his own; or Dig lower that the other may not meet him again Digging in the upper part.

If the lower Mine be drowned by any Spring, as often happens, he that is above is oblig'd to give him the sixth Part of the Metal Ore he gets; and if the Water breaking out in the upper should run into the lower, the Owner of the first of them is bound to Drein it, because the Veins of Metal being like those in the Body, full of Moisture, and Water instead of Blood; when open'd they send the Water down; which if it were not drein'd by the lower Miner, the higher would be forced to do it.

These, as has been said, pay the Tenth to the King, wherein they differ from the Peruvians, who pay the Fifth, as to Silver; but as for Gold there is no Privilege, and they are all bound to pay the Fifth.

The King's Duc.

C H A P. II.

Of the Mint, and Royal Office of the Apartado, or House to separate the Gold from the Silver.

How much late is tried.

ALL the Plate dug out of the Mines in New Spain is to come to Mexico to be entred in the Exchequer; and they say there are two Millions of Marks of eight Ounces as has been said, entred in a Year, besides what is slipt aside, or conceal'd; and out of this Sum they Coin every Year 700000 Marks into pieces of Eight at the Mint.

Manner of mining.

The Silver that is to be coin'd into pieces of Eight, besides the first Entry to pay the King's Fifth, is to be

Vol. IV.

again entred in the Exchequer, there to pay to the King a Royal in a Mark, which the Spaniards call Sennoraje, that is, the Duty of Lordship, to wit, when the Plate is such as they call de ley Canfada, that is, Bare Standard, which is 2210 Maravedies a Mark, and is up to 2367 Maravedies, call'd Ley Subida, that is, the High Standard. The King's officers will not Mark it, unless it is Fine; and if it be otherwise, reduce it to the fineness of 24

Mara-

Y y y

Genilli. 1698. pedies; and then add to every Mark five eighth parts of an Ounce of Alloy, to reduce it to 2210 Maravedies; such as is the Plate of the common pieces of Eight. The Owners are at the Charge of this Work in the Furnaces of the Mint, where a great deal of Silver is lost in casting the Bars, for want of good Utensils. These Bars are carry'd to the Assayer, for him to see whether they are Standard, that is, worth 2210 Maravedies a Mark; and he finding it right, they are carry'd to the Ornazas, which are the eight Places where they Coin. In each of them is a Capataz, or Head of Ten, or Twelve Men. To him the Bars are deliver'd, being weigh'd by the Weigher, and entred in their Books by the Clerk and Treasurer. Here the Bars are put into the Fire, that they may be Cut, and when Cut, because the Silver is harsh, they are wetted with Water, and being put into the Fire again are Coin'd.

Sort of Coin.

There are five sorts of Mony made there, which are pieces of Eight, half pieces of Eight, quarter Pieces, single Royals, and half Royals. When cut according to their due Weight they return to the Treasurer, who receives them at the Hands of the same Weigher, Clerk, and other Officers. The Mony coming out Black by reason of the Copper, it is sent first to the Whiteners; and then passing the Officers who are to see it has the just Weight of 67 Royals to a Mark, it is deliver'd to twenty Coiners who are together in a great Room. To them are deliver'd every Day the five Stamps call'd Trueles; but at Night they are carefully kept by the proper Officers upon Danger of their Lives. The Mony being Stamp'd, returns to the Treasurer, with all the Formality before mention'd, and he delivers it to the Owner, deducting what belongs to the Officers, viz. the Treasurer himself, the Assayer, Cutter, Clerk, Weigher, two Guards, and other under Officers, and twenty Coiners. But this Deduction is no Loss to the Owner, because it is taken out of two Royals added to the value of the Plate before it was Coin'd; which being worth 65 Royals before it came to the Mint, according to the common Weight of 34 Maravedies, goes thence worth 67 Royals, according to the Weight of 33 Maravedies. This Increase is divided among the Officers by Maravedies and Raciones, that is, Shares, or Parts, every Maravedi having 137 Raciones, or Parts, as follows.

To the Treasurer 22 Maravedies, and 120 Raciones, or Parts. Fees for Coining

To the Assayer 1 Maravedi, and 60 Raciones.

To the Cutter 5 Maravedies, and 60 Raciones.

To the Escrivano, or Clerk, 1 Maravedi, and 60 Raciones.

To the Weigher 1 Maravedi, and 60 Raciones.

To one Guard 1 Maravedi, and 60 Raciones.

To another Guard 1 Maravedi, and 60 Raciones.

To a Merino, or under Clerk, 16 Raciones.

To an Alcade, 16 Raciones.

To the Capataces and Brazajeros, that is, Heads of the Firemen, and Firemen themselves, 24 Maravedies.

To the Coiners 8 Maravedies.

Which in all make 68 Maravedies.

All the chief Officers, as Treasurer, Assayer, Cutter, Clerk, Weigher, two Guards, and two Alcades are appointed by the King, and all the Inferior are appointed by the Treasurer, paying 3000 pieces of Eight. The first are all liable to pay for any Cheat or Fraud committed by their Companions, that they may all be a Check upon one another, and this upon pain of Death, particularly to the Assayer.

The said principal Offices are bought, and every one has a right to make his over, or resign it to whom he pleases. But that this Resignation may stand good, he that Resigns must live twenty Days after it; and he who has the Benefit of it, is to make it known to the Viceroy within sixty Days; and pay the third part of the value of the Place to the King, and the other two to the Owner, or his Heirs. If he that Resigns does not Live twenty Days, or he to whom it is made over does not make it known in sixty, it is forfeited, and sold for the King, and therefore they that have the Places Resign them once a Month, that they may always reckon they liv'd twenty Days after. The Treasurer's Employment is worth between 50 or 60000 pieces of Eight a Year. Those of Assayer, and Founder (given for ever to the Monastery and Hermitage of the Barefoot Carmelites of Mexico) being serv'd by the same Person yield 15, or 16000 pieces of Eight. That of Cutter 10, or 11000; and the rest of the great ones abovemention'd, some 3500, and the worst of them 800 pieces of Eight a Year. The Masters of the eight Furnaces,

Value of their Places.

Gemelli.
1698. naces, and 20 Coiners, have every one between 800 and 1000 Pieces of Eight a Year, and the meanest Servants earn a Piece of Eight a Day. A good number of these being the Treasurer's Slaves, he makes the Profit of their Places.

Selling of Plate.

Tho' every private Citizen that has Silver may have it Coin'd into Mony, yet the Mint is almost continually Employ'd by Merchants, and at present there are three richer than the rest, who buy the Metal of private Persons, who are not so rich; paying two Royals short of the value in a Mark; one that they pay to the King for Senorage, or Duty of Lordship, and the other for the cost of Work; for whereas the value of Standard Silver of 2376 Maravedies, is eight Pieces of Eight and six Royals a Mark, they pay but eight Pieces of Eight and four Royals.

Separation of Gold and Silver.

There being some Gold, as has been said before, mix'd with the Silver, it is separated in another Place, call'd el Apartado, or the Separation. Before the Plate goes thither, it must go to the Exchequer to pay the Kings fifth, to be then sent thither. The Separation is made in the aforesaid House after this manner. The Silver being run is converted into little Balls, which are put into Vessels with Aqua fortis to dissolve. The Gold remains at the bottom of the Vessel like black Powder; and the Aqua fortis containing the Silver is put into two Glasses with their Mouths together; by the Spaniards call'd Cornamusas. Putting Fire to it the Silver remains in one of the two Glasses, and the Aqua fortis in the other. The Gold is run in a Furnace, and is first cast into round Pieces, and then into Bars, as is done with the Silver separated from it. For this Trouble there are six Royals a Mark allow'd to the House del Apartado, or of Separation. Both the Gold and Silver return to the Exchequer, where the first appearing to be 22 Carats fine, and the Silver 2210 Maravedies, it is stamp'd, as has been said above. The Office of the Apartador, or Separator, belongs to a private Person in Mexico, who bought it of the King for 74000 Pieces of Eight.

When the Gold is Coin'd, it is done after the same manner, as has been said of the Silver; and they may have Pieces of 16, of 8, of 4, and of 2 Pieces of Eight, which are call'd Crowns of Gold. But there is a difference in the Fees, for whereas the Silver pays 2 Royals a Mark, the Gold pays three and a half; the Mony being delivered out by a Weight which is less than the common, by which the Gold is receiv'd, as has been said of the Silver.

This is all I could learn touching this matter, part of which I was an Eye witness to, and the rest was told me by D. Philip de Rivas of Sevil, who had been Assayer 30 Years.

C H A P. III.

The Journal Continu'd.

UPON Sunday the 28th, I went to divert me on the Canal of Xamai-ca in a Boat made of one Tree, call'd a Canoo. This being the only Diversion at Mexico; there us'd to come aboard there Men and Women, Young and Old, Fair and Foul, with Garlands of Flowers on their Heads; and so go up and down the Canal, after filling their Bellies with those wretched Dainties I have spoke of before, which are sold along the Banks. If they would cleanse the Canal and make convenient Boats, this would be a pleasant Diversion. I went in the Canoo as far as the Village of Istacalco, which in the Mexican Language signifies, the white House. The Water of this Lake being boil'd with a sort of Earth they call Techichite, or of Saltpeter, and run off through a Pipe, makes Salt. By the way I saw an Ear of Corn like a Pyramid, with eight other Ears joining to it, all upon the same Reed, a sufficient Argument of the Fruitfulness of the Soil.

Vol. IV.

Monday 29th, five Thieves were hang'd, a Spaniard, a Mestizo, a Mulato and two Indians. The Spaniard had kept a Mestiza Woman, whereupon his Father Confessor prevail'd with him to Marry her, which done the Criminal press'd to consummate the Marriage, pleading the legality of it, and was so eagerly bent upon it, that the Priest had much difficulty to dissuade him, tho' he was to be executed the next Morning, which was done accordingly, they being carry'd to Execution Clad in White, with Caps on their Heads, on which was the Cross of the Brotherhood of the Misericordia. It is the Custom there when any are Hang'd to pull down their Feet by a Chain they carry dragging with them.

Y y y

Tuesday

Tuesday 30th, I went to Tacubaga 2 Leagues from the City, where there are several pretty Country Houses, with Fountains and Gardens; and particularly the Count de Santiago's Olive-Garden, which at present is going to Ruin. Thursday the 2d of May, I went to S. Cosmo half a League from Mexico to see the House and Garden of D. John de Vargas; the first finely Furnish'd, and the second full of pleasant Fountains. This Gentleman keeps his Coach and six, and spends 6000 Pieces of Eight a Year, without any other Revenue, but what he has from Cards and Dice, for some Nights he wins 30000 Pieces of Eight.

Friday 3d. I went to shoot Rabbits at the Pedregal de S. Angel, that is, a stony spot of Ground, extending two Leagues, which they say was made by the eruption of a burning Mountain; but found no Sport. The next Day I saw the Farm of the Jesuits of Manila, which they bought for 100000 Pieces of Eight. There was a good House and they were building the Hospitium, or Place to entertain the Fathers that come from Spain, to go to the Philippine-Islands. Tuesday 27th, I saw 45000 Marks of Silver carry'd into the Mint brought from Parral in Carts, a Journey of six Months. And Wednesday 8th, 236 Marks of Gold 22 Carats fine from S. Luis de Poetusi, to be Coin'd into Spanish Pistoles. Thursday 9th, I visited the Infirmary of the Fathers of Bethlem, for the use of sick Persons that are Recovering. There were two Galleries of a good Structure, with decent Beds. The Church has beautiful Altars and a fine Sacristy, for the use of secular Priests, because the Religious themselves never ascend to the Degree of Priesthood. Their Place of Burial is a long Gallery, with Benches on the sides, where they place the dead sitting.

Friday 10th, there was new Barley and Indian Wheat in the Market, but the scarcity was yet so great, that the Magistrates were fain to deliver it out to many thousands of Indians by measure, as they saw the greatest necessity. Saturday 11th, the Bishop of Mechoacan, who had been Viceroy pro interim, or till the new Viceroy came, was attended out of Town by him, and had the right Hand, abundance of the Nobility, and great Officers following in their Coaches. Sunday 12th, was the Solemnity of the Dominicans electing a Provincial, which is alternative, for one time they choose a Spaniard, and another the Son of a Spaniard born there. The Franciscans choose one time a Spaniard, the next the Son of a Spaniard born there, and the third time a Spaniard that has taken the Habit in the Indies. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, there were Processions, being Rogation Week, but nothing worth the observing. Friday 17th, a Collegian was examin'd in the University, in order to take his Degree of Batchelor in Philosophy. They who were to be his Judges argu'd against him. His Master the Professor, being a religious Man of the Order of the Mercenarians sat in the Pulpit above him, and wore on his Head a Priests Cap such as they use in Spain, with some purple Tufts on it, as Doctor in Philosophy, and two white Ones, as Doctor in Divinity. The Doctors of the Civil Law wear them Red, those of the Cannon Law Green, and Doctors of Physick Yellow. The Votes being for the Candidate, when he had made a Profession of his Faith, he went up to the Pulpit where his Master had been, and the Ceremony ended with a great noise of Trumpets; the new Graduate mounting a Horseback to be attended about the City by others of his Profession.

C H A P. IV.

The Description of the Hermitage of the Barefoot Carmelites.

HAVING obtain'd leave of the Provincial of the Barefoot Carmelites to see the Hermitage of that Order, which is not to be seen without his leave, I went thither upon Saturday 18th, and came to it an Hour before Night, the way being bad, and having spent much time in climbing the Mountain, up a Path half a League in length, which cost the Order 6000 Pieces of Eight to make passable. Being come to the Gate of the first Enclosure, we waited there half an Hour after ringing the Bell for Admittance; the Monastery being a full Mile from thence, so that we were forced to send an Indian, who was within, and he return'd with the Key. The Father Rector and some other religious Men came out to Receive and Entertain'd us Courteously. Sunday 19th, one of the Fathers shew'd us the Church and Dormitories. The first is small and has five

Altars

Altars modestly adorn'd, and in it is the Gemelli. Burial Place of the Founder and his Family. In the Dormitories the Roof is low and the Cells small. At small distances there are small Oratories, where the Fathers may say Mass when they please. There is a good Library, and a Garden that produces nothing but Apples and Roses. Besides the Monastery there are nine solitary Places to which the Fathers may retire in Lent, Advent, or any other time. In each of these is a little Cell, with a Kitchen, and a little Garden with Fruit and Flowers, Water'd by a clear cool Fountain. Here the Fathers may not eat so much as Fish, but only Fruit and Cheese, or at most boil'd Herbs. They pray at the same time as those in the Monastery, being govern'd by the same Bell.

The House All the Ground belonging to this Monastery being about 7 Leagues, is encompass'd with a good Wall of Lime and Stone. Within it there are vast high Mountains cover'd with tall thick Pine-Trees, and a few Fir-Trees; so that the enclos'd Deer, Lions, Tigers and Rabbits, have liberty enough and come under the Windows of the Monastery. I hapning to kill a Deer, the Fathers were very much displeas'd, it being forbid to kill any Creature there.

A vast Enclosure.

Strange Crows.

The most wonderful thing is, that ever since the first Founding of this Solitude, there have always been two Crows there, which suffer no others from abroad to come in; but as soon as their own Young are able to fly, drive them away. The Cook calls them with a Whistle, and they come and feed, and then fly away into the Wood. The Seat is Melancholy and Unwholsome, by reason of the continual Fog rising every Morning from the Rivers and Valleys about; and therefore the Fathers suffer much who reside there.

Mountain of Idols.

At a small distance from it is a Mountain, call'd of the Idols, because formerly the Indians Sacrificed there. There are still to be seen some little Idols of Clay in the hollow of a low ancient Wall; and some Indians who are not well grounded in the Faith, go thither to make their abominable Offerings.

The Founder.

The Hospital was Founded on the 25th of January 1605, under the Invocation of our Lady of Carmen, or the Carmelites, by D. Melchior Quellar an European, who liv'd in the City of the Angels. Besides the building of the Monastery, and settling Revenues to maintain the religious Men, he lay'd out 26000

Pieces of Eight upon Walling in so great a Tract of Ground; and then presented the Monastery with the Employments of Assayer and Founder (as has been observ'd above,) which are worth near 16000 Pieces of Eight. So that calculating the whole Expence as near as a Man can guess, it amounted to about 600000 Pieces of Eight, which he got by his Ingenuity in the aforesaid Employment, for he came poor out of Spain. His Wife Da. Mariana Nino was also a Benefactress to the Order, Founding the College of S. Angel, to which out of her Portion she left a sufficient Revenue for the Maintenance of the Fathers.

There is no reason to think this strange, because many other Spaniards from mean Beginnings have arriv'd to vast Wealth, and then finish'd prodigious Works. Among the rest one James del Castillo, born at Granada, coming poor out of Spain, laid the Foundation of his Fortune by following the Trade of a Brazier, and in progress of Time came to be worth above a Million of Pieces of Eight, built the great Monastery of Chiribusco of the Order of S. Peter de Alcantara, a League from Mexico; that of S. Elizabeth of Barefoot Franciscan Nuns, within the City; and that of S. Agnes. After all this vast Expence, when he dy'd, he left a Million to D. Dominick de la Rea, Knight of the Order of Santiago, or S. James; who had Marry'd a young Maid kept out of Charity by Castillo.

A wonderful Fortune rais'd from nothing.

Joseph de Retes, Knight of the Order of Santiago, after building a Nunnery of the Invocation of S. Bernard, left a Million to his Daughter, who obtaining the Pope's Dispensation, marry'd her Cousin D. Dominick de Retes, Knight of the Order of Alcantara and Marques of Xorge. His Wife dying without Issue he restor'd the Million Portion; and yet was not left Poor, for his Brother D. Joseph de Retes, had left him 150000 Pieces of Eight.

D. Francis Canales, Knight of the Order of Calatrava, having made his Wife Heiress of all he had, which amounted to 600000 Pieces of Eight, she tho' left Young, despising many rich and noble Persons who courted her for a Wife, gave all she had to the Poor, and in the Year 1695, became a Nun, to the great Edification of all People, in the Monastery of the Capucin Nuns. This Nunnery was Founded by Simon de Haro, as was that of the Conception, and yet this Haro brought nothing out of Spain but the Cloaths on his Back.

Another.

Great Charity.

Gschelli.
1698.

Dominick Laurencana coming Poor into the Indies, acquir'd so much Wealth, that he built the famous Monastery of the Incarnation; and afterwards a Nun of the same, without letting it be known who did it, built the Nunnery of Valvaneda.

John Navarro Pasfrana, by no better a Trade than a Coachman, got so many pieces of Eight, that he built the Nunneries of St. Joseph de Gracias, and that of the Conception.

Stephen de Molina Mosquera, tho' he had built the Church and Nunnery of St. Teresa, yet at his Death he left 100000 pieces of Eight.

D. Mark de Guevara made the Aqueduct of Mexico, a League in length, which was a vast Expence by reason of the many Arches it lies upon. As an acknowledgment for his good Work he was made Aguazil Mayor; and had place in the Chapter for him and his Heirs. I pass by many other Instances to avoid being tedious; and think it enough to say, That all that is great and magnificent in the Structures of the Indies (which cost four times as much as they do in Europe) is all the Work of Europeans and Spaniards, who by their Industry have rais'd their Fortunes there.

It being forbid to stay above 24 Hours in that solitary Place, we return'd upon Monday 20th, by the way of Santa Fe, to see the Source of Water that goeth to Mexico, which is two Leagues from the Hermitage. It rises at the foot of a Mountain, and is convey'd into open Troughs about a League from Mexico; and then into close Pipes which convey it to all the Quarters of the City. Near the Spring is the House where Gregory Lopez, Born at Madrid, led an eremitical exemplar Life for several Years. A Mexican Lady built an Oratory there, and a convenient House for any that would go thither to say Mass. That Night we return'd to Mexico.

CHAP. V.

What more the Author saw during his Stay at Mexico.

Escapusal-
co.

Friday 24th, I went to Escapusalco to see whether there were any Footsteps left of the Palace of the King so call'd. Having rode a Mile and a half out at the Quarter of St. Cosmo, I came to the little Village of that Name, which is a Parish of the Dominicans, where I found no other Structure of Stone, but a little Monastery of that Order, no bigger than for five Friars, and a very plain Church with twenty Altars in it. The Palace we may suppose was destroy'd by the first Conquerors. Calling as I return'd in at the Hospitium of the Dominicans call'd St. Hyacinth, the Vicar in the Garden show'd me that so highly valu'd Cochinille, for dying Scarlet. There were certain Worms of an Ash colour sticking to the Leaves; these he told me, when ripe, they shook off upon a Cloth, and when dry they turn Scarlet. The greatest quantity of them is gather'd in the Province of Uguazaca, or rather Guanaxaca, famous for good Chocolate.

Cochinille.

The Royal Palace.

Saturday 25th, the Viceroy remov'd to the New Palace, Re-built after it had been Burnt. They say this belongs to Cortes, and that for the Viceroy's greater Convenience it was exchange'd for that of Montezuma, which belong'd to the King. While the Royal Palace was Re-building, the Marquess del Valle, Successor to Cortes, gave the Viceroy House-room Gratis in that we have mention'd of Montezuma, opposite to the Cathedral. The said Royal Palace has a Front to the great Square, nothing Inferior to that of Naples; the beautiful Symmetry of open Windows, or Balconies supplying the want of curious carv'd Work; and the want of other Ornaments being sufficiently recompenced by its being Square, with a Court in the middle, and two towards the great Square, on which there are small Brass Guns, to make use of in case of any Mutiny.

From the great Court, there is a pair of Stairs (like that of the Palace at Naples) leading to the Apartments, which are not only beautiful, but many and large. The Courts of Justice are a-part, and is the Corps de garde for those few Soldiers that Mount. The Viceroy in the Morning went to the Court of Criminal Causes, in order to the Goal-Delivery for Whitsontide, and took his Seat between five Oydnes, or Judges of the Royal Court, and five Alcades de Corte. There were 400 Prisoners Spaniards, and all for Theft; for living Idle, and like Vagabonds, they must Steal, and Cheat to Live; and therefore tho' a Stranger be never so much upon his Guard, he will never get out of Mexico without losing

Many Thieves.

Gemelli.
1698. losing some Mony or Equipage; for they are so Expert at Lying, that they will deceive a Man, tho' never so Cunning. They had rather be Poor and Naked than follow any Trade, or Serve; and yet they may get four times as much as in Spain. If Vagabonds were taken up as is Practis'd in other Countries, People might live safe in their Houses; but, as it is, tho' they be shut, they are not safe; the Thieves making their way in at the tops, or else burning the Doors. Besides in the Day time no Purse is safe in the Church, they are so very Dextrous; and one Day I saw my Sword taken from my side. Tho' this was a Day of Mercy, yet very little was shewn by the Viceroy and his Ministers; mentioning of whom puts me in mind, that when any of them is Dying, the Viceroy is oblig'd, by special Order from the King to go Visit, and ask whether he has any thing that lies upon his Conscience to discover to him; and when he is Dead he is to attend the Body to the Church.

Trinity
Hospital.

Wednesday the 5th of June, I saw the Hospital of the Blessed Trinity, which is only for sick Priests, of any Nation whatsoever. The Church is well adorn'd with 21 Altars gilt. The Infirmary holds about twenty Beds, and is serv'd with great Charity and Neatness. There is an Apartment for the Superior, and some Lodgings for the Chaplains; as also to cure Mad Men. The Licentiate D. Alfonso Gomez made a Present to this charitable Place of the twelve Pictures of the Apostles of a great Value. Thursday 6th, against the Procession of Corpus Christi all the Streets and Windows of the City were richly adorn'd with Images, Carpets, and Quilts, which together with the green Herbs and beautiful Flowers, made a delightful Show. In the Silver-Smiths Streets was the Conquest of Mexico curiously painted, with the Houses exactly as they were then, and the Habits the Indians then wore. The Procession began with about 100 Images adorn'd with Flowers, then follow'd the Brotherhoods, and Religious of all Orders, except the Jesuits and Carmelites. Then came the Cannons carrying the Blessed Sacrament on a thing like a Bier. The last were the Archbishop, the Viceroy, the Ministry, Magistrates of the City and Nobility.

*corpus
christi
procession.*

Friday 7th, I went to the Monastery of St. Francis the Great, to see the Tomb of Ferdinand Cortes, the Conqueror of Mexico. On the right Hand of the High Altar was his Picture under a Canopy; and a little higher than the Ground a Tomb, where he told me the Bones of that great Commander were preserv'd, not yet honourably bestow'd. The Feast of St. Peter and St. Paul being the 29th, was kept in the Cathedral, the high Altar being so richly adorn'd, that it was valu'd at 150000 pieces of Eight, the Chalice alone, which was set with Emeralds having cost 11000. Sunday being the last Day of the Month, I went in a Coach to the Alameda, (which is the Place to take the Air like the Park in London) all the Diverfion there is about a Fountain, because there are several Water-works. The Basen is of Brass, much better than that in the middle of the great Square.

Cortes's Tomb.

There having been a plentiful Harvest of the Grain they call de Riego, that is, which comes up with watering, the Viceroy on Monday the 1st of July, sent for all the Bakers and Farmers, and desir'd them to make the Bread of the Weight it us'd to be; and the more to Oblige them, treated them with Biskets and Chocolate, being by himself all the while. They promis'd fairly, whilst they were Drinking, but were very unwilling afterwards to be as good as their Words; being us'd to get half in half; or else they could never wear Cloaths worth 4 or 500 pieces of Eight.

Tuesday 2d, being the Visitation of the Blessed Virgin, the Viceroy and his Lady went to the College of the Maids of St. Elizabeth, where they were entertain'd. Here 26 Orphans are maintain'd by the Brotherhood of the Blessed Sacrament, which allows every one of them 14 Royals a Week, and 500 pieces of Eight Portion when they Marry. However they have a Chance to partake of other Portions given in other Charitable Places.

College of Orphans.

Saturday 6th, I went to the College of Amor de Dios, or the Love of God, which has 36000 pieces of Eight a Year of Royal Foundation to be spent in the Cure of those that have the French Disease.

also the take from whole Year, obliging

C H A P. VI.

The Funeral of the Lady Fausta Dominica Sarmiento, Grandchild in the fifth Descent of Montezuma; also the Festival of St. Hippolito, and Pendon.

 ON Tuesday 16th, dy'd the Lady Fausta Dominica Sarmiento, Grandchild in the fifth Descent to the Emperor Montezuma, and Daughter to Count Montezuma the present Viceroy. She was but eight Years of Age, and by her Death a Revenue of 40000 pieces of Eight a Year she had in the Indies, fell to her younger Sister. For the clearing of her Genealogy the Reader is to understand that the Emperor Montezuma, among his many Wives, had one call'd Miyahuaxochite, who was also his Niece, as being the Daughter of his Brother Ixtlicuechahuac. By her he had a Son, whose Name was Tlaca huc pantzinyohualyca huacatzin, who was afterwards Baptiz'd, and took the Name of Peter. He took to Wife the Lady Magdalen Quayaubxocitl, his own Cousin, (as being the Daughter of Tlacahucpan, third Brother to Montezuma) of whom was Born D. James Luis Ikuil Temotztzin, who marry'd in Spain. From him are descended the Counts of Montezuma, Tula, &c. to whom the King's Exchequer of Mexico pays 40000 pieces of Eight a Year. By another Wife, whose Name they say was Teitalco (which it is likely has been ill Spelt, because it is no Mexican Name) Montezuma had a Daughter call'd at first Tecubich potzin, and when Baptiz'd Elizabeth. Her first Husband was her Uncle Cuitalahuatzin, who ought to have succeeded Montezuma in the Empire, had not Quahrimoc usurp'd it. Her second Husband was Quauhquemotztzin; after whose Death Ferdinand Cortes gave her in Marriage to D. Alonso de Grados, who had no Issue by her. She had to her fourth Husband Peter Gallego de Andrada, from him are descended the Andradas Montezumas, now living in Mexico. Her fifth Husband was John Cano, from whom come the Canos Montezumas.

The Funeral.

This Lady, above-mention'd, her Funeral was put off to the next Day, being Wednesday 17th, and in the mean while all the Bells in the City rung Peals. About ten in the Morning all the Religious Orders in the City came to the Palace to Pray for her Soul. She lay on a conveni<sup>ent</sup> Brocard Bed, on which her Mother of Montezuma was under a Canopy, in a Room King. White Damask. Then all the Reli- building, the City, and Officers came to attend the Funeral. The first that took up the Body were the Judges of the Royal, and Criminal Courts, who upon occasion represent but one Body, after them the Officers of the Court of Cuentas, and Exchequer took it, then the Magistrates of the City, and lastly four Dominicans. Next the Body march'd the Spanish Company with their Arms revers'd, and Drums unbrac'd; and then the Doctors of the Civil and Canon Law, and of Physick, being distinct parts of the University, with their Mace-bearers. Then follow'd the Magistrates of the City and Courts, in their proper Places, and lastly the Viceroy Nephew clad in sad Colour. By the way there were three Canopies erected upon Scaffolds only for Show; not that the Body was to be set down there. All the Religious, with the Clergy, and Chapter, being come to St. Dominick the Great, the Body was set upon a high Mausoleum, with a Garland of Flowers, as being a Maid; and the Mass being Sung, the Foot-company that was in the Church-yard gave two Volleys; for at the Elevation nothing was done but only the Ensign flourish'd the Colours near the high Altar. Then the Body was carry'd to be Bury'd in the Chappel of Peter Montezuma, before spoken of. The Arms of this Family are an Eagle with her Wing extended towards the Sun, and Indian Figs about her.

Monday 29th, I went to the Hospital <sup>Notable</sup> of the Love of God to see D. Charles <sup>Charity.</sup> Siguenza y Gongora, of whom I had the Cuts I have insert'd in this Volume, and found him Busy distributing a Purse of an hundred Pieces among the Poor. Inquiring of him about that D. Francis de Aguiar y Seixos Gallego, the Archbishop of Mexico, provided such a Purse every Monday to be distributed among poor Women, that could not Work; and that with his own Hands he gave two pieces of Eight to every Person recover'd after Sicknes, that carry'd a Certificate from the Hospital. This good Prelate in the Year gives about 100000 pieces of Eight more than his Revenue in Charity; for besides what has been said, he Distributes 100 Pieces every Friday in his Palace, and every Day 20 Bushels of Indian Wheat, which cost 80 pieces.

pieces of Eight. He allows the Hospital of the Trinity 30 pieces a Day; among all the Sick 2 Pieces; to the Dead 12 Royals; to private poor Men and Women about 3000 Pieces every first Day of the Month.

Friday the 9th of August, going to the College of St. Ildephonsus to see some Antiquities; I found on the East side of it, some antient Stones, upon one of which there were Figures and Hieroglyphicks carv'd; and among the rest an Eagle with Leaves of the Indian Fig-tree about it; and another on the Wall, besides Circles, and other Figures. D. Charles Siguenza, a great Antiquary in what concerns the Indies, told me, those were the remains of a Temple of Huitzilpochtli, dedicated in the Year 1486; because by other Pictures, and antient Pieces of the Heathen Times, it appear'd that Temple had stood there; but others will have it, that it stood where now the Cathedral is. Both may be true, for it might be so large as to reach to both Places. Saturday 10th, I saw some Indians that kill'd the least Birds upon the highest Trees with Pellets shot out of Trunks.

On Monday 12th, after Vespers began the Solemnity, they call del Pendon, or of the Standard, which is the greatest that is kept in Mexico, in Memory of the Conquest of Mexico, which fell out upon the Day of St. Hippolitus. All the Magistrates of the City, and Gentlemen invited by them being Assembled, they took up the Standard with which Cortes conquer'd Mexico, and went to the Viceroy's Palace, where they found all the Officers of State. Here the Procession began after this manner. First went four Kettle-Drums upon two Asses (Beasts esteem'd in America) then follow'd the Trumpets, 12 Alguaziles on Horseback, and the Cities two Mace-bearers; then the Gentry and Magistrates of the City, and then all the King's Officers, and among them the Standard, carry'd by a Magistrate of the City. In all they were about an Hundred, ill mounted. They were all displeas'd at the Viceroy for refusing to go with them, contrary to the King's Orders, which particularly enjoin him to mount and attend the Standard, going on the left Hand of it; and therefore to omit, it is reckned an Offence he may be call'd in Question for. It was said he staid at Home for fear, having fallen from his Horse at his Entry. Having left the Standard in the Church of St. Hippolitus, they all return'd in the same Order to the Palace. The same Company heard Mass on Tuesday 13th, being the Day of St. Hippolitus, and then carry'd back the Standard. Thursday 15th, was the Festival of the Assumption of our Lady, when her Image was carry'd in Procession, being all of beaten Gold, set with Diamonds and Rubies. It weighs, with the four Angels at its Feet 6984 Castellanos of Gold, and the whole Value of it is about 30000 pieces of Eight. It belongs to the Cathedral, where there are other precious Relicks, rich Furniture, and Vessels of Silver and Gold. Here several Maidens drew Lots for three of them to have 300 pieces of Eight, a-piece, Portion.

A rich Image.

CHAP. VII.

Of the Sport the Spaniards call la Gamita.

Monday 26th, I set out of Mexico with some Friends to shoot Deer, but finding none where we expected on Tuesday 27th, went away upon Wednesday 28th, to the Village of St. Jerome, inhabited by Ottomito Indians, where we were fain to make use of an Interpreter, because they understand not the Mexican Language. These Wretches, like many more in New Spain, live rather like Beasts than Men, among frightful Mountains. They live the most of the Year upon Herbs, because they have no Indian Wheat, by reason they Till but little Land, and are given to Idleness. The Tears stood in my Eyes to see them in that miserable Condition, that they had scarce wherewith to cover their Nakedness, both Men and Women; and grinding the empty Ears of new Indian Wheat on a Stone to make Chocolate, to which they added some Bran to make Dough of it, and Bake that green Paste. Seeing one of them pick up the Crums of Bread that fell from me, I gave him some. Their Lodging is answerable to their Diet, for they have no other Bed all the Year round but the bare Ground. There is no doubt but their own Sloath is the cause of their Misery, as also the Avarice of some Alcades, who take from them all they have got in the whole Year, obliging

Vol. IV.

Z z z

Gemelli.
1698. obliging them to buy Oxen, Mules, Horses, and Quilts of them, at three times the Value, and taking their Provisions at their owne Rates.

After an uneasy Night spent in a Cottage, we went upon Thursday 29th in the Morning to the Mountain to Shoot by way of the Gamita. This is a Noise resembling the Cry of the young Fawns, which draws the Does within reach of the Gun to be Shot. Many Shot were made all Day, and but one Doe killed. The next Day being Friday 30th, tho' 26 Does came to the Noise of the Gamita, only two were kill'd; but having now Venison enough, we return'd to St. Ferome. By the way we met abundance of Bucks, (I kill'd a great one) and Gua-xolotes, or Turkeys, that went about the Wood in Troops. These are the best Fowl the Spaniards found in America, so good that they bred some Tame, and brought them into Europe. That Night we lay at St. Ferome's, and the next Day being Saturday the 31st of August return'd towards Mexico, with four Deer upon a Mule, but it is to be observ'd they are no bigger than a good Fawn in Europe. Night overtook us in a Farm, where we were fain to lie that Night. The Man of the House civilly gave us Cheese, and Milk, without taking any Money for it. Sunday the first of September we return'd to Mexico. Nothing remarkable hapned till Saturday the 14th, when, the Price of Bread having been set before at half a Royal for 14 Ounces, a Baker was fin'd for selling 16 Ounces for the same Price. An Action altogether unaccountable.

Monday 16th, going to the Palace, I found in the great Hall four Chichimecas (a Word signifying, bred up amidst Bitterness) come from Parral, to beg an Alms of the Viceroy. They had no part cover'd but their Privities; all the rest of their Bodies being Naked, and stain'd of several Colours. All their Faces were streak'd with black Lines made by pricking the Skin till the Blood comes, and rubbing it with Ink. Some cover'd their Heads with a Staggs Skull with all the Horn on, and the Skin of the Beasts Neck fitted to theirs. Others carry'd a Wolfs Head with all the Teeth; others a Tygers, and others a Lions, to look the more terrible. But when they are abroad, the Cries and Noise are more terrible, than their Presence. The Mules and Horses smell the Stink of their Flesh at a great distance, and will not go on. They desire above all things to kill Spaniards, that they may flea their Heads, and fit that Skin upon their own Heads, with all the Hair, and so wear it as a token of Valour, till it rots off in bits.

C H A P. VIII.

Of the Cus, or Pyramids of St. John Teoti, Guacan.

THE time of my Departure from Mexico drawing near, I thought fit to see some Indian Antiquities, not far from the City, and in order to it on Thursday 19th, I rode a-crofs the Lake of St. Christopher to Acolman, or Aculma, a Parish of the Augustinians; and having rested there a while went on to the Village of Teotiguacan (which in that Language signifies, a place of Gods, and of Adoration) six Leagues distant. That Night I lay in the House of D. Peter de Alva, Grandson to D. John de Alva, descended from the Kings of Tescuco. Friday 20th, in the Morning he bore me Company to see the Pyramids, a League from his House. First we saw that call'd of the Moon standing towards the North, two sides whereof were found to be 200 Spanish Yards in length; that is, about 650 Spans, or 160 Yards English, the other two sides 150 Spanish Yards. We had no Instrument to take the height, but as near as I could guess it was about 200 Spans, or 50 English Yards. To say the Truth, it was nothing but a heap of Earth made in Steps like the Pyramids of Egypt; only that these are of Stone. There stood once on the top of it, a vast great Idol of the Moon, made of hard Stone, coarse enough; but the Lord Summarica, first Bishop of Mexico caus'd it to be broke in pieces, out of a Religious Zeal, and there are three great pieces of it at the foot of the Pyramid to this Day. Within this great Pile, there were some Vaults, where the Kings were Bury'd; for which reason the Road to it is still call'd Amicacali, which in the Mexican Language signifies, the way of the Dead. About it are several little artificial Mounts, suppos'd to be the burying Places of Lords. Thence we went Southward to see the Pyramid of the Sun, call'd Tonagli, 200 Paces distant from the other. Measuring two sides

Pyramid
of the Moon.

Pyramid
of the Sun.
we

Gemelli.
1698.

we found them 300 Spanish Yards in length; but the other two were not above 200. Its height was about a fourth part more, than that of the Moon. The Statue of the Sun that stood on the top of it, after being broken, and remov'd out of its place, was left in the middle, there being no throwing it down to the Ground, by reason of the greatness of the Stone. This figure had a great hollow in the Breast, where the Sun was placed; and all the rest of it was cover'd with Gold, as was that of the Moon, which afterwards the Spaniards took away, at the time of the Conquest. At present, there are two great Stones at the foot of the Pyramid, which were part of the Idols Arms and Legs. This gives occasion for two Doubts, or Questions; the first, how the Indians having no use of Iron, could cut so hard a Stone: the second, how they could carry, and raise it to such a height, being destitute of convenient Engines, and wanting the Art to make them. Besides, there are no such hard Stones in the Neighbourhood, and they had neither Mules, Horses, nor Oxen to draw it so far, those Creatures having been carry'd thither by the Spaniards. The Word Cu, is not Mexican (it might perhaps be of Mechoacan or some other Province) for the Mexicans call the Church Teocagli, or Zootli.

The building of these Pyramids, is attributed to the Ulmecos, the second Planters of New Spain, who came from that Island Atlantis, Plato speaks of in his Timæus. This Conjecture is made, because all the Indian Histories, unanimously agree, that these Ulmecos came by Sea, from the East; and on the other side, according to Plato, the Inhabitants of the Island Atlantis, deriv'd their Original from the Egyptians, who had the Custom of raising Pyramids. Aristotle in his Book de Admirandis, says, that the Carthaginians use to Sail to an Island, very far distant from Hercules's Pillars; and that many of them settled their Lives there; but that afterwards the Senate forbid them, for fear that being taken with the delights of the Place, they should forget their Country. If this be true, it is not to be look'd upon as any Wonder, that the Mexicans should raise Pyramids after the Egyptian manner, and have the same Year; no more than that which Ammianus in his 17th Book, relates, viz. That on the Egyptian Obelisks, there were sometimes Birds, and Beasts of another World carv'd. No Indian Historian has been able to discover when the American Pyramids were set up; but Dr. Charles Sigüenza believes them to be very antient, and not much later than the Flood. It is certain that where they stand, there was formerly a great City; as appears by the vast Ruins about it, and by the Grotts or Dens, as will artificial as natural; and by the Number of Mounts, believ'd to be thrown up, in Honour of their Idols. One of them is call'd Tonagli-iguezia, which signifies, the fall of the Sun. Saturday 21st, I return'd home. Monday 22d, it rain'd so much that several Houses were ruin'd, and they were forc'd to go in Boats, in the quarters of St. John de la Penitencia, or of Penance St. Francis, and St. James, almost as far as the Alameda, or publick Place, of taking the Air.

CHAP. IX.

Of the Birds, and Beasts of New Spain.

Birds.

There is such variety of beautiful Birds in New Spain, that no Country in the World can parallel it. The preference among them all is given to the Sesontle (which in the Mexican Language, signifies 500 Voices) a small matter less than a Thrush, and of an Ash-colour; only the Tail and Wings, which are speckled with white. That the Spaniards call Gorrión, or Sparrow, Sings sweetly, is as big as our Sparrow, and its colour inclining to Black. The Bird call'd the Cardinal sings well, is as big as a Wood-lark, and has not only the Feathers, but the Beak Scarlet; and besides, on the head a most beautiful Tuft. It is taken in the Temperate parts of New Spain, and Florida; and the Spaniards give ten, or twelve pieces of Eight apiece, for them to send into Spain. There is another small Bird of the same colour; he is less than the other, and does not Sing. There is another as big as a Thrush, by the Spaniards call'd, Tigriño, or little Tiger, because spotted like a Tiger, val'd for Singing. The Cuir-lacoe, has dark Feathers; and is as big as the Sesontle, but has a longer Beak, and red Eyes. When kept in a Cage, it must have a Pumice stone,

Vol. IV.

Z z z z

Stone by, to grind its Beak on as it grows, that the length may not hinder its eating. There is another call'd Cacalototol, which in the Mexican Tongue, signifies Black-bird. It is as big as our Black-bird, of a Yellow colour, and Sings delightfully enough. The Silgueros, are black and white, as big as a Sparrow, and are valu'd to keep in Cages. There are some black Wood-larks, black and yellow, who build their Nests, hanging at the Trees, by Horse-hair, wove like a Purse, and they Sing well.

Parrots.

As for those that imitate the Voice of Man, or Speaking, there are Parrots of several sorts. Some call'd Catarinillas green; others Loros which are green, but have the tips of their Wings, and their Head yellow. Pericos little bigger than a Thrush, and green. Others as big as a Dove, call'd Guaccamayaz, very Beautiful; for they have red, green, and yellow Feathers, and a beautiful Tail, as long as a Pheasant's; but these do not talk.

Foul to eat.

As for eatable Foul, there are two sorts of Pheasants; one with black Wings and Tail, and a dark Body, which they call Gritones; another of a Murrey, much bigger than the last, call'd Real or Royal, because it has a thing like a Crown on its Head, better relish'd. There are Chachalacas, in all respects like our Hens, but their Feathers are of a murrey colour, and they are not so big. Abundance of wild Turkeys, which about the new Moon, are easily kill'd upon the decay'd Trees, on which they perch; for when one falls to the Ground, there is no Danger, the rest should fly away, at the noise of the Guns. There is another sort of Birds good to eat, which they call Black-birds, who go tamely into the Houses. There are several sorts of them, some quite black, others with red Wings; others with yellow Heads, and Breasts, and others bigger than a Black-bird, black, and with a long Tail, call'd Urracas, that is, Pies.

The Quails are of the same colour as ours, but with some Feathers standing upon their Heads, and not so well tasted as ours in Europe. The Pito Real is as big as a Turtle Dove, and with a Bill as long again as its Body. Its Feathers are all black, except those about the Neck, which are yellow. The Spaniards look upon the Tongue of it, as a Sovereign remedy against the Heart-burning; giving the Patient warm Water to drink, that it has been steep'd in. Besides, the smoak of the Feathers cures other Pains by sympathy; as for instance, those of the Wings, Pains in the Arms; those of the Legs, in the Legs, and so of the rest. There is another wonderful Bird, call'd Guachichil, or Chupaflores, that is, Suck-flowers, because it is always seen in the Air, sucking Flowers, without ever lighting on the Ground. The Indians say they stick their Beaks in the Boughs of Trees, for several Months of the Year, where they take them asleep, to make of them their Images, and other Curiosities abovemention'd.

The Suppilotes are as big as Crows, there are two sorts of them, the one has a Tuft of Flesh on the Head, and do not eat Carrion; the other, a Tuft of Feathers, and these last eat all the Carrion, and filth of the City, and Country. At Vera Cruz, it is forbid to kill these Birds, for the good they do; and it is allow'd to kill Pigeons in the House, or Abroad. Of European Birds, there are Geese, Cranes, Ducks, Pigeons, Turtles of two sorts, some as big as ours in Europe, and others less, and several sorts besides.

As for Beasts, there are Bears, Beasts Wolves, wild Boars, but different from ours, for they have the Navel upon their back, Hares, Rabbits, Deer, Foxes, Tigers, Lions, and other sorts. The Lions are not so fierce as those in Africk, but being pursu'd by the Dogs, run up the Trees. For such as are peculiar to the Country, there are Siboles, as big as a Cow, whose Skin is much valu'd for its long soft Hair. Ardillas black and sad colour'd, like Dormice; Lobos like Leopards; Zorillas, as big as a Cat, with black and white Hair, and a beautiful Tail. These when pursu'd, stop to piss for their Defence; because this Water of theirs, infects the very Air for an hundred Paces about, and overcomes those that pursue it, and if it light upon any Garment, it must be bury'd to get out the Stink.

C H A P. X.

Of the Fruit, and Plants of New Spain.

Gemelli.
1698.

To speak the Truth, the best Product of New Spain, is the Gold and Silver, the Pearls taken in its Seas, the Emeralds found among the Rocks, in the Kingdom of Santa Fe, and other precious Stones of Peru, but having spoke of them elsewhere, there is no need of Repeating it here.

Fruit.

But to speak of the Fruit growing on Trees, there are all sorts that Europe affords, except Nuts, Cherries, Medlars, and Service Berries. Those peculiar to the Country, are Plantains, Pine-apples, or Ananas, Anonas, Cocos, Ates, and Dates, of which I have given an account elsewhere, and set down their Shape and Figure. Those which grow in no other Country, or if they be in the Philippine-Islands, have been carry'd out of America, are these that follow. The Aguacate

Aguacates

grows on a Tree, like the Walnut, but thicker. It is sometimes long like a Pear, and sometimes round. The colour without is green, and green and white within, with a large Kernel in the middle. It is of a most exquisite taste, so that it is either eaten raw with Salt, or boil'd; for it is very unctuous, and sweet. Physicians count it hot, and therefore forbid it to Nurses, for fear they should lose their Milk. All that have tasted, do allow it exceeds all the Fruit of Europe.

apotes.

The next place is due to the Sapotes, whereof there are four several sorts. Some they call black Sapotes, their Tree is as big as a Walnut, and thick; but the Leaves very green, and smaller than those. The Fruit is round, and has a very thin green Rind; within it is of the colour and taste of Cassia, with four small Kernels. Green, it is Poison for Fish; ripe it is very wholesome for sick People. The 2d sort is call'd, white Sapote. The Tree is as tall as a Pear-tree, the Fruit as big as a Pear, green without, and white within, with four white Kernels. It is good to make People Sleep. The third sort is call'd Sapote Borracho, or Drunken Sapote. The Tree is like the last, but the Branches more slightly. The taste of the Fruit, is between sweet and tart, but very Pleasant; the colour is green and yellowish without, and whitish within, with two Kernels. The 4th is call'd Chico Sapote, or little Sapote. The Tree is higher bigger, and thicker than the Walnut. The Fruit without, is almost Purple, and within higher colour'd. It has four small Kernels placed as it were in Niches. The Taste is sweet, and the most valu'd of all that grow in a hot Country. They make a Composition with it, which the Ladies chew to keep their Teeth white.

The Mamey is a very tall thick Tree, which always has Fruit on it, from one Year to another, and it is as big as a large Lemon. The outside is a Barly colour, and red within, with a large Purple Stone, in which is a Kernel like a bitter Almond, call'd Pestle, which they make use of in Glisters.

The Granadilla de China, grows on a Plant like the Ivy, which winding about any Tree, covers it all. It is as big as an Egg, and as smooth; white and yellow without, and whitish within, and has Seeds like those of a Grape. Its Taste is sweet, somewhat inclining to a pleasant Tartness, very pleasing to Ladies. Some fancy, they see the Instruments of our Saviour's Passion, represented in it, as may be seen in the Cut.

All the aforesaid sorts of Fruit, are eaten in Mexico, from March, till September; but the Mameys and Black Sapotes, are always to be found on the Mountains, when any Body wants them.

Among the Indian Plants the first Place is due to the Cacao, as well for the Profit it yields the Owners, as for being the chief Ingredient of a sort of Drink become almost general to all the World, and very grateful and delightful, particularly to Spaniards. It is sow'd in a Soil that is hot and dry, with the Eye upwards, well cover'd with Earth. It springs out within a Fortnight; and does not grow above three Spans in two Years; at which height it must be Transplanted; where it is to be observ'd, That the Plant must be taken up with all the Earth that covers the Root. When they are Transplanted they must be set in Rows 18 Spans from one another. A Stick is set up to support every one, and about them Plantains, and other Fruit Trees, because it grows well under their Shade. Besides all Sprigs that shoot out at the foot of the Plant must be cut off, that they may not hinder it running up; the Ground must be weed-weeded, and the Roof must be kept warm, from too much Wet, and from some Worms that use to come about it. After five Years, it is as thick as a Man's fist, seven Spans high, and then bears. Its Leaves are somewhat like those of the Chestnut-tree, but a little narrower; the Blossom comes out all over the Body, and Branches, like the Jesmin; but scarce the fourth part of it holds. From the Blossom there shoots out a little sort of an Ear, like that of the Indian Wheat, which before it is Ripe is Greenish, and when Ripe of a Chestnut Colour, and sometimes Yellow, White, and Purple. Within them are found the Cacao Nuts with a white Down upon them, being from ten to fifteen in Number. These Ears are gather'd after the full of the Moon, open'd with a Knife, and the Nuts taken out, which is then kept three Days in the House a drying in the Shade; then laid three Days longer in the Sun; then again as many more in the House, and lastly in the Sun again, that it may be thorough dry. These Shrubs make the Air somewhat unwholsome.

Bainilla. The Bainilla is a sort of Indian Cane by the Spaniards call'd Bexuco, which twines about the Orange-tree like Ivy. That long Cod it produces, when gather'd is Green, but is dry'd in the Sun, and stretch'd out now and then, that it may not split, and at last it remains hard, and blackish. The Spaniards, to make them the sweeter, use to sprinkle them with rich Wine, in which a Bainilla has been boil'd cut in Bits. It grows on the South Coast of New Spain.

Every Body knows, that Cacao and Bainillas are the principal Ingredients of Chocolate. The Europeans to every Pound of Cacao add a Pound of Sugar, and an Ounce of Cinnamon. The Indians use no Bainilla, whether they be Rich or Poor; nor the Spaniards that live in America, because they say it is not Wholsome; and the goodness of their Chocolate consists in good Cacao and Cinnamon; adding to every Pound of Cacao two Ounces of Indian Wheat, that it may Froth the better; not to save Cacao, which is very Cheap in those Parts. Others add some of the Cacao Shells to the same purpose. In Europe they use to add some Nuts to the Cacao, which gives the Chocolate a pretty Relish. This Drink is very antient, and us'd by the Indians before the Spaniards conquer'd their Country; but the Spaniards improv'd it. In the Indies it is so common now that there is not a Black, or a Porter, but Drinks it every Day, and the better sort four times a Day.

There is another useful Plant in the Indies call'd Maghey, which grows in a temperate Soil. From the Leaves they draw something like Hemp to make Ropes, Sacks, Shirts, and several sorts of curious Works. It also yields Wine, Honey, and a good Balsam. The Liquor when it comes from the Plant is Sweet as Honey; a while after it is like Meat, and good for the Strangury, and other Distempers. The Indians put into it a Root that makes it boil up and ferment like Wine, and it makes People as Drunk as Wine, and is call'd Pulche. The Plant is frequently found about the Fields; and there is of it in Spain, especially between Port St. Mary and St. Lucar. It is like our Houseleek, but much taller, and its Leaves thicker, and more solid. When it is of six Years standing, they cut away the middle Leaves, making a Concavity in the middle, which receives the Liquor, and the Indians every Morning take it away, and keep it a Month in Vessels; after which the Plant withers, and young Sprouts shoot out, so that it is with good reason call'd the Indian Vine. If it be not cut, it produces nothing but a Stalk like a Ferula, with a Fruit that is of no use. They make Aqua vite of it after the same manner as was said of the Coco Wine in the foregoing Volume.

This Drink is so universal among the Indians, that the Excise upon it was no less than 110000 pieces of Eight; but it was taken off by his Majesties Order, after the Indians set Fire to the great Square, and Palace in the Year 1692, as was said above, and the Drink it self was Prohibited. Nevertheless it is conniv'd at, and some Spaniards drink it as well as the Indians; for which reason, whilst I was there, fresh Orders came from the King to receive the Duty again, and allow of the Drink as formerly.

The Indian Fig-trees do not only produce pleasant Fruit, but also the Cochinille for dying Scarlet, as was said before. For dying Blew there is the Plant they call Annil, whereof there is great Plenty in the Island Hispaniola, and elsewhere. This is what we call Indigo. Besides these, and many more Indian Plants too tedious to be mention'd here, there grow almost all that Europe affords, of which it is needless to give any Account.

A Voyage round the World by Dr. John Francis Gemelli Careri. Part IV.

Containing the most Remarkable Things he saw in
NEW SPAIN.

B O O K III.

C H A P. I.

The Author's Journey to the City of the Angels, and an Account of what is remarkable there.

Gemelli.
1698. first day's journey, 7
leagues.

BEING weary of my long stay in Mexico, and having taken leave of all my Friends, I set out from that City, on Thursday, the 10th of October, intending to embark aboard the Advice-boat, bound for the Havana, in order to sail from thence for the Canary Islands, there being no hopes that the Fleet would sail in any reasonable time. After two Leagues riding, I came to Mexicalingo, a little Village, where a River, that comes out of the Lake of Chalco, runs out towards that of Mexico, and is very serviceable for conveying of Goods. Travelling on a League further over Marshy Plains, I came to the Village of Istapalapa, and at the end of four Leagues more to the Inn of Chalco, where the Host made me pay dear for a bad Supper, and worse Bed.

con-

Chalco. Chalco is an indifferent Village and the best Alcaydeship, or little Government upon that Lake; through which all the Meal, Sugars, and several other Things are convey'd to Mexico. Near Mexicalisinga, the River is so Rapid that it may be said to hurry the Boats on headlong.

Friday 11th, I set out before Sun rising with other Company, and after riding up a dirty steep Way a League in length, bated at Cordova, whence entering upon a Mountain which was all along cover'd with Pine Trees, we went four Leagues further to lye at Rio Frio, that is, cold River; an Inn in the middle of the Mountain, where every Horse pays a Royal to the Guard. Our Host look'd more like a Robber than any thing else.

Saturday 12th, we proceeded betimes along the Mountain Way two Leagues to the Inn of Tejmolucca. Thence I descended into a delightful Plain, strew'd with little Country Houses, and three Leagues thence got by Noon to the little Village of S. Martin. After Dinner I would go to Tlascala, three Leagues distant, to see the remains of that City against which the Arms of the Mexican Empire could never prevail. Having rode through some marshy Plains partly under Water, near the City I cross'd a River, where I had like to have Perish'd by reason of the Flood and Darkness of the Night; and to mend the matter lodg'd in a scurvy Inn, after so troublesome a Journey.

Sunday 13th, I heard Mass in the Parish Church, where there hangs up the Picture of the Ship that brought Cortes to Vera cruz, and being satisfy'd there was nothing worth seeing in Tlascala, (which is become an ordinary Village) besides a Monastery of Franciscans, I set out for Puebla de los Angeles, or the City of the Angels, to which the Bishoprick is translated. Thither I came at one in the Afternoon, having rode 5 Leagues over the Plain, and was lodg'd in a private House near S. Christopher's, for a Piece of Eight a Day.

Puebla de los Angeles, or the City of Angels, was founded by the Spaniards on the 26th of April 1531, and so call'd, as they say, because Queen Isabel, or Elizabeth of Spain, whilst the City was Building, saw in a Dream a great many Angels, with Lines marking out the Ground. The Buildings here for the most part are of Lime and Stone, and Vyc with those of Mexico. But the Streets are much neater, tho' not Pav'd; all of them Handsom and Strait, crossing one another towards the four Quarters of the World; whereas those of Mexico are always Stinking and Dirty, so that a Man had always need to go in Boots. About the City there are many Mineral Waters, on the West side they are Sulphurous, on the North Nitrous and Al-lomy, and on the East and South Sweet. Monday 14th, I went to see the great Square. Three sides of it are adorn'd with good Porticos, uniform, and set off with rich Shops of all sorts of Commodities. On the other side is the Cathedral, with a most beautiful Front, with a high Tower, the fellow to which is not yet finish'd, so that this Square is finer than that of Mexico. Going into the Church I found it built after the same Model as that of Mexico, but somewhat less. It has seven Stone Pillars on each side, like that of Mexico, which make three Isles. The Choir and high Altar are also like those of Mexico, but lower, and have only twelve Pillars of good Marble. The Entrance was then adorning with Marble, and good Iron Work. The Church has 25 Altars in all, a decent Sacristy, and a little Room, call'd Osbayo (to keep the Things of most value,) richly Gilt, as is its little Cupula. The Chappels are well Painted and Gilt. Near the same Church towards the Square, is another Chappel, where the Blessed Sacrament is kept, with three Altars. There are three Gates on another side which is handsomly wrought, leading to the Bishop's Palace and the Seminary. The Bishop's Canopey is in the Church on the right side of the Altar; whereas the Archbishop of Mexico, to avoid contention with the Viceroy, has none, but sits in the Choir, in pursuance to the King's Orders. This Bishoprick is worth 80000 Pieces of Eight a Year; besides 200000 that go among the Canons and Officers of the Church, whose whole Revenue is about 300000 Pieces of Eight. Ten Canons have every one 5000 Pieces of Eight a Year. The Dean 14000; the Chanter 8000; the Master of the School 7000; and the Archdeacon and Treasurer not much less. There is a proportionable Allowance to six Demicanons, six half Demi-Canons, and other inferior Officers.

Cathedral

698.

Churches.

Monday 14th, I saw the College of the Holy Ghost of the Jesuits, whose Church has 14 Altars richly gilt. Tuesday 15th, I saw the Church of the Barefoot Carmelites without the City, which is small and has ten Altars; but the Monastery is large, and has a good Garden. This Day D. Nicholas Alvarez, Master of the Ceremonies, shew'd me a Loadstone as big as an ordinary Apple, which holds up twelve Pounds Spanish of Iron. Also a Giant's Rib as thick as a Mans Arm, and ten Spans long. There is a Tradition that these Giants dwelt on the Mountains above Tlascala. In this City it rains in the Afternoon as at Mexico; and that day the Flood carry'd away Houses and Cattle, and what was worst of all, four Men and two Women. In the Church of the Nunnery of S. Jerome, there are seven Altars well adorn'd. The Monastery of S. Dominick is a noble Structure. The Church Vaulted, and has about 12 Chappels richly Gilt, particularly that of the Rosary. The Church of the Augustinians is also Vaulted, very Large, and more magnificently Built. The Parish of S. Joseph has three Isles Vaulted and twelve Altars. On the right Hand of it, the Chappel of Jesus of Nazareth was Building, with a Cupula upon four large stone Arches. S. John de Dios of the Fathers Hospitallers, has a large Cloister with good Pillars, but the Monastery is Poor. In the Church there are eleven Altars. The Church of the Nuns of S. Monica is worth seeing for the Gold about its six Altars. Nor are the nine of the Nuns of S. Catherine inferior to them. The Church of the Nuns of the Trinity is beautiful, and has six Altars, and the Monastery has a curious Front. The College of S. Luis of the Dominicans without the City, is not very great, and the Church has only four Altars. Twenty Fathers live there subject to the Provincial of Mexico, and keep the Schools.

Cholula.

Sunday 20th, I went to the Village of Cholula a League from the City. It looks more like a Wood, for all the Houses are among Gardens. The Government is profitable, because many rich Merchants live there. In the midst of it is an ancient Pyramid of Earth, on the top of which at this time there is an Hermitage. To return to the City, the Church of S. Christopher is richly adorn'd, being vaulted, and having 19 Altars. Nor is that of the Nuns of S. Clare inferior to it, in which there are six curious Altars. The Monastery is vastly Rich, having 500000 Pieces of Eight rais'd by Portions, which lye dormant. S. Francis is a very spacious Church with 24 Chappels, well set off, as is the Arch. Before one comes into the Church is the Chappel of the third Order, with nine Altars well gilt. In the Monastery there are 150 Religious Men. That of the Recolets is not so big, where there are but 25 Friars, and the Church is small, and has but 5 Altars. S. Paul, the College of the Dominicans, is also but small, containing 20 Religious Men, and the Church has but 4 Altars. As I went out of this City I could see the burning Mountain of Mexico cast out mighty Flames. The Monastery of the Mercenarians is convenient for 50 religious Men it contains, the Church is beautiful, has 12 Altars and 10 Chappels well gilt. That of the Fathers of Bethlem has been 15 Years building, with the Monastery. The College of S. Ildephonsus of the Jesuits, newly Built, is very large, and there are 50 Fathers in it. The Church has 7 Altars well gilt. Adjoyning to it is the Parish Church of S. Mark, in which there are 12 Altars. The Church of S. Agnes has 7 Altars; that of the Conception eight; the holy Cross a Parish of secular Priests fourteen; and S. Roch of the Fathers of S. Hippolitus only four.

The Reader by the number of Monasteries so Rich and well Provided, may judge of the Greatness, Magnificence and Wealth of the City. The Bishop when I went to take my leave of him made me a Present worth 50 Pieces of Eight.

C H A P. II.

The Author continues his Journey to Vera-Cruz.

6th Days
Journey
5 Leagues.

Proceeding on my Journey towards Vera Cruz, upon Monday the 21st. three Leagues from the City I came to the Village of Amataque, and then travelling two Leagues further lay at the

Vol. IV.

Village of Quachinla in the Indian Governor's House.

Tuesday 22d, after riding 4 Leagues on 6th Day a plain Road, I rested at the Village of 7 Leagues. S. Augustin. Near to the Parish Church of

A a a a.

this

Gemelli.
1698.

7th Day a bout 7
Leagues.

this Place, is a great Pyramid like those before-mention'd. After Dinner I travell'd 3 Leagues further, and set up that Night at the Farm of Istapa.

Wednesday 23d, having rode up a dreadful Mountain, I met the Guards of the Way, who took a Royal for each Horse. Soon after upon another boggy Mountain my Mule fell into a Slough, where several of the Country People were fain to help her out. Having travell'd a League further over Precipices, I rested at the Village of Aculingo, built in a Wood of Cirimoya-Trees. I din'd with the Alcade's Deputy, and then set out again, and travelling 3 Leagues further, stop'd at that they call Ingenio del Conde, or the Earls Engine, passing over a large River on a long Bridge. I found no Body to entertain me here, besides that it would have been dangerous, the People being all Blacks, and therefore I went on guided by a Black on Horseback, because the Place was so dirty that the Mud and Water reach'd up to our Stirrups. I came late, after riding a League to the Farm of S. Nicholas, crossing the same River again upon another Bridge at the foot of the Mountain Orizava. Here a Spaniard, who was Owner of the Farm, receiv'd me Courteously; but a Fowl I gave him to dress, came to Table without Legs or Wings.

8th Day 5
Leagues.

Having rode a League on Thursday 24th, I was oblig'd to take a great Compass to cross the White-River, over a Bridge, and go to Orizava to take fresh Horses; where at the Alcade's House, I found the Vice-Admiral of the Windward Navy, who would make me stay and Dine with them. Mounting after Dinner I rode a long way through the Town of Orizava, which standing among so many Trees of Cirimoyas and Anonas, looks like a Wood, and came into a spacious Plain, near the burning Mountain of the same Name, which is cover'd with Snow. The Guide led me through a dirty Way to a more dirty Mountain, therefore call'd Despenadero, or the Precipice, where I thought it a Miracle that our Beasts came off safe. Being over this Mountain I was forced to climb such another, and being come down into the Valley under it, cross'd a great River upon a Bridge. Having in all travell'd 5 Leagues of very bad Way, I came to lye at the Town of Cordova, the Head of that Alcadeship, or little Government. The Place is Inhabited by rich Merchants, who have Sugar-Works. Most of them are Spaniards, the Air being wholsom, and the Soil producing all sorts of Fruit-Trees. I lay that Night in a pitiful Inn, where the Black that was my Guide, seeing he could steal nothing else, took away my Mules Halter.

Friday 24th, coming into a hotter Country I saw Parrots of several sorts, and abundance of Turkeys (call'd by the Spaniards Guaxolotes, or Gallos de la tierra, which shews they are not right Turkeys, these being call'd by them Pavos) sitting tamely on the Trees. Having travell'd four Leagues through the Wood, I bated in the Village of S. Lorenzo de los Negros, or S. Lawrence of the Blacks, in the midst of a Wood. This Place being all Inhabited by Blacks, looks like some part of Guinea, but they are handsom, and apply themselves to Husbandry. They are descended from some run-away Slaves; and they were afterwards permitted to remain free, upon Condition they should not entertain any more fugitive Blacks, but restore them to their Owners; which they religiously observe. Riding six Leagues further I lay at the Inn of S. Compus, where there was neither Mans Meat, nor Horse Meat; and for our greater Plague, the hungry Dogs and Rats would not let us sleep, so that we were forced to hang up our Stirrups and Shooes that they might not be eaten. The Host was a lean naked Spaniard, who led an eremitical Life there, rather than serve any Body. Many Spaniards of Quality for this reason marry Indian and Mulato Women, and live miserably as Herdsmen on those Plains, being sham'd to return into Spain poor; as if the Soil of America were all Gold and Silver; and every Man that goes thither must of necessity be immediately Rich. How many perfectly starve, in respect of those few that rise to great Honour and Wealth in the Indies? Even as it is in the Army, where many Thousands perish, for some few that rise to be Colonels or General Officers. Abundance of Blacks and Mulatos live in the neighbouring Plain, like so many wild Beasts.

9th Day 1
Leagues.

Saturday 26th, I travell'd four Leagues, which might pass for six, over a wild Plain not Till'd no more than the last, and rested at Passo de las Carretas, or the Pass of the Carts. In this Place there is nothing but a House of Mulatos without any Provision; so that the Horses fasted, and we eat some small matter we carry'd with us. The neighbouring Mountain might have furnish'd Fruit enough to fill our Bellies, but the Indian Fruit cannot be eaten till it has been three Days in the House.

10th Day 8
Leagues.

Gonselli.
1698.

House. These Mulatos make good Thred, call'd Pira, to sew Shooes, of an Herb like Maghey, which they Plant. Here I found my self in some distress, being to foord a great River. At length making a virtue of necessity, I, and a Spaniard of Orizava made one of those Mulatos guide us, and being come to the Bank caus'd him to go over first, upon a tall Mule, and saw the Water come up to her Crupper. There being no going back, I made the Mulato come again to carry over my Portmantue, in which were all my Manuscripts; and then recommending my self to God's Protection, went into the rapid River bare Legg'd in great fear; and tho' there were two several Branches to divide the River, yet the Water came almost over my Mule, and wash'd my Thighs. Being by God's Mercy come to the other side, and having recover'd our selves, we bethought us how little we should have been pity'd, had the Mulato left us both in the lurch and gone away with the Mule and all we had, that is, 1000 Pieces of Eight of the Spaniards, and my four Years and four Month's Manuscripts of my Travels, and my Money for my Journey. But Fear had blinded our Understanding, so that we forgot that one of us ought to go over first to the other side. There was formerly a Boat in this Place to waft over Travellers; but the Alcade to punish the Mulato that kept it for some Offence, took it from him, forbidding him to receive or entertain any Passengers, but to send them the way of Cotasta, which was for his Advantage; and the Mulato answering, He might order them to be call'd, and told of it by the Inhabitants of that Village, he was abus'd by the covetous Alcade. Thence we travell'd over a Plain, and through a thick Wood, of a sort of Palm-Trees that bore a Fruit like green Walnuts, hanging in Clusters. The Pulp within them tastes like our Almonds. We pass'd several small Lakes, and had like to lose our way by reason of the high Grass; and the more because there being no Boats to carry us over, we were forced to foord, and were very wet. Having travell'd four Leagues, we came to a Farm call'd Asperilla, where there was an infinite multitude of Gnats, and we were forced to pay dear for two Hoods to defend us against them.

Sunday 27th, we rode two Leagues to the Farm of Xamapa and cross'd the River of that name in a Boat. A Spaniard there confirm'd what F. Colin writes in his History of the Philippine-Islands concerning the Bird Carpintero, viz. That it finds an Herb which makes Iron fly like Glass; which he said he had try'd, by nailing an Iron Plate over that Birds Nest, but that he never could find out the Herb in all those Plains. After Dinner we travell'd 3 Leagues further to the Port of the new Vera Cruz, where I found my Equipage sent thither a Month before, by Ferdinand Mercado. There are no Inns in the City, so that a Stranger is forced to hire a House. Here I rested after my Journey, and tho' a small Vessel sail'd for Havana on Wednesday the 30th, would not go aboard it, being promis'd better Conveniency aboard another that was to set out soon after. Being ill Lodg'd where I was, D. Antony Penaloza, Lieutenant of a Troop of Horse, generously gave me an Apartment in his House.

11 Day 5 Leagues.

CH A P. III.

The Description of the new Town and Port of Vera-Cruz.

Vera Cruz.

THE new City of Vera-Cruz is seated in the Latitude of 19 deg. and 16 min. and 273 deg. of Longitude; on a sandy barren Soil; so that Provisions coming a great way, it is very dear living there. Its Figure is longish, lying East and West, and the whole Compass scarce half a Spanish League. The Air is not wholsom, especially in Summer. Very often when the North Winds blow, to which it is very subject, the Houses are half bury'd in the Sand about them.

The Walls.

They who were entrusted to Wall it in, cheated the King Impudently, making a thin Wall about six Spans high, which would scarce serve for a cover'd Way; besides that at present every Body rides over them, because they are bury'd with Sand; and there is no need of shutting the Gates, all Parts being passable. Some Bastions and Redoubts there are about it at a great distance from one another and irregular; only two little Forts, or Redoubts on the Shore, at both ends of it, might make some Defence. This City was built instead of the old Vera Cruz, because that Port was not fit for great Ships. In 1683 it was taken taken and sack'd by one Lorennillo a Pirate of Petiguavas. He landed one Morning early half a League West of the City, and surpriz'd the Inhabitants who made no Opposition. Afterwards his Ships Anchor'd at the Island of Sanficios, because it was out of reach of the Castle Guns. This Castle is half a League from the City, so that it can no way defend it, but only serves to secure the Port and Ships that Anchor under its Walls. The Port is naturally Strong, because on the East and West it is defended by abundance of Rocks; which Strangers, who are not acquainted, cannot avoid running upon.

The Castle Inhabitants.
Now tho' all the Fleets, or single Ships that go out of Europe to New Spain put into this Port; yet the City instead of being Rich and Large like Mexico, is, for the Reasons above alledg'd, Small and Poor, little Inhabited by Spaniards; but for the most part by Blacks and Mulattos; so that there are scarce any white People to be seen, but only when the Flota is there. As soon as that is gone, they that are well to pass, retire up the Country, as well because of the unwholsomeness of the Air, as because their Effects are not safe; and therefore they build none but little wooden Houses, not at all lasting.

Friday the first of November, I went to the Parish Church, which has four Pillars on a side, that support the vaulted Roof, and make three Isles, in which there are nine Chappels. The Church of the Jesuits is poor, has but ten Altars, and those meanly adorn'd. Sunday 3d, I din'd with the Governor, before whose House one of the two Spanish Companies that are in Garrison in the City, always keeps Guard; as does a Troop of 60 Horse to scour the Coast. Saturday 9th, there being no Diversion in the Town I went out a Shooting, and Riding five Leagues, ferry'd over a great River to the old Vera Cruz. This at present may more properly be call'd a small Village of Fishermen, than a City; for it has no Houses, but Cottages cover'd with Leaves and enclos'd with Canes. The Inhabitants are always tormented with the stinging of Gnats. Before me they took some Fish in the River call'd Bobos, or Fools; because when the North Wind blows they make to the Sea, and so fall into the Nets. Their Rows dry'd are excellent to eat. These Rivers and all those of New Spain, but particularly those of Guatemala being full of Crocodils or Alligators, it is worth observing, That the Dogs when they cross them, knowing by instinct of Nature, that the Alligators are most fond of their Flesh, go first, to secure themselves, and bark in one Place, that the Alligators may come thither, and then run to swim over at another Place. This same is related by F. Navarrete in his Account of the Philippine-Islands. That Day I kill'd abundance of Pheasants, of a better sort than the black Ones. They were as big as Turkeys, with a black and white Tuft on their Heads, and all the rest of their Feathers Murrey.

CHAP. IV.

A short Account of the Discovery and Conquest of New-Spain.

Cortes's Ships having Anchor'd in the Port of the old Vera Cruz, it will not be from our purpose to say something in this Place of the Discovery and Conquest of New Spain; adding to what other Authors have already made publick, some Particulars kept in that Country by Tradition from Father to Son, and extracted out of four Letters writ by Cortes to the Emperor Charles V. Printed Copies whereof are still preserv'd by D. Charles Siquenza.

Some will have it that America was accidentally discover'd by a Ship drove thither by tedious Storms, which returning afterwards to Lisbon with but a few Men, the Master of it gave Christopher Columbus, born at Nervi on the Coast of

Genoa, an Account of his Voyage and what he had found, and then dy'd. Many other preposterous Notions go about this particular, too tedious for us to handle, and therefore we will come to the Point.

Columbus being himself in no Condition to undertake this Voyage upon his own Account, apply'd himself to the Kings of England and Portugal, who both giving him but little Encouragement, he in the Year 1486, went and offer'd himself to Ferdinand and Isabel or Elizabeth, King and Queen of Spain, who were then engag'd in the War against the Moors of Granada, and so far prevail'd, being seconded by Cardinal Mendoza, Archbishop of Toledo, that he had 16000 Crowns allow'd him, wherewith he fitted out 3 Ships,

Columbi.
1698.
Discovers Land.
2d. Voy-
age.

Ships, Man'd with 120 Souldiers and Sailers. He set Sail on the third of August 1492, and having furnish'd himself with Necessaries at the Canary-Islands, continu'd his Voyage. On the 11th of October he discover'd Land, which was one of the Islands Lucayos, call'd Guanahani, between Flonda and Cuba, where he landed and took possession of the Indies. Thence he pass'd on to the Island Hispaniola, where he gain'd so far upon the Caique or Lord of that Place, that he allow'd him to build a Fort of Earth and Wood on the Shore, in which he left 38 Spaniards under the Command of Roderick de Arana of Cordova; and taking ten Indians, forty Parrots, some Gold, Indian-Wheat, and other things to make out the truth of his Discovery, return'd to Spain with two Ships. The Court being then at Barcelona he repair'd thither. The King was much pleas'd with what he brought, and the Account he gave of his Discovery. Six of the Indians were Baptiz'd, the King and Queen being Godfather and Godmother. Columbus had much Honour done him, and Pope Alexander VI. granted the Crown of Castile all the Islands and Continent that should be discover'd Westward, and all Eastward to the Portugueses, dividing the World between those two Kings, by two Lines drawn from North to South, Columbus for a second Voyage was furnish'd with 18 Ships and 1500 Men aboard them, besides Mares, Cows, Sheep, Goats, Swine and Asses to breed in the Indies where there were none; besides, Wheat, Barley, and several Herbs and Plants of Europe to bring up in that Country. This Fleet sail'd from Cadiz on the 25th of September, and keeping along near the Line, the first Land it discover'd was, the Island afterwards call'd Desceada. Then they came to Puerto de Plata in the Island Hispaniola, and thence to Puerto Real, where they found the 38 Spaniards who were kill'd for having attempted to force the Indian Women. Here Columbus Founded a City and call'd it Isabella, in Honour of the Queen. This done he sent back Antony de Torres with 12 Ships into Spain, to carry Presents of Gold, Parrots, Indians and other things, and he with three other Ships went on to discover further according to his Orders. He discover'd the Island Buba, and other lesser Islands. He fell at variance with the Pope's Vicar for his severity towards the Priests and Spaniards, and thereupon was call'd to Court, whither he carry'd rich Presents, and yet was reprov'd for his Harshness to the Spaniards.

3d. Voy-
age.

Having obtain'd 8 Sail more he sent away 2 before him under the Command of his Brother, loaded with Provisions and Ammunition; and he himself with the other six set out from S. Lucar de Barrameda in May 1697. From the Madera-Island he sent three Ships to Hispaniola with 300 Men. With the other three he kept close to the Line till he discover'd the Continent call'd Paria, along which he coasted 330 Leagues, as far as Cape Vela, where striking athwart a great Tract of Sea he arriv'd at Santo Domingo, a City built by his Brother on the Banks of the River Ozama, where he was receiv'd as Governor. Here the Spaniards suffer'd much, because the Indians thinking Famine would drive them away, did not sow their Wheat, which forced them for want to eat Snakes and filthy Vermin. The Spaniards are also said to have got the Pox of the Indian Women, and some of them bringing it over to Naples, gave it to the Neapolitans and French, which made the first of these call it the French Disease, and these the Neapolitan.

4th Voy-
age.

Bartholomew Columbus Brother to the Admiral, having disoblig'd the Spaniards, they made their Complaints to the King, who sent over Francis de Bovadilla, who clapt the Admiral and his Brothers in Irons, and so put them aboard and sent them into Spain. After some trouble Columbus was restor'd to his Authority, and return'd with three Ships to Hispaniola, where the Governour would not suffer him to enter into the Port, and therefore he went on to discover as far as Cape Higuera, and then on the South Coast to Nombre de Dios. He return'd to Cuba and Jamaica, but could not get to Santo Domingo for want of Ships. Here his Men mutiny'd, but the Mutiniers were defeated in fight by Bartholomew Columbus. The Admiral after this return'd to Spain, and when he thought to have gone back to America, was prevented by Death at Valladolid, in May 1506. I omit to say more of him, because his Life is to be seen at large in this Collection of Travels.

Afterwards several attempted to Conquer the Continent discover'd, but without Success. Francis Fernandez de Cordova sail'd thither in 1517, with three small Vessels, and discover'd from Campeche, to St. John de Ulva. John de Grijalva in 1518, with 4 Sail set out by James Velasquez Governour of Cuba.

both of them had Skirmishes with the Gemelli. Indians, but could make themselves Masters of no Place.

Heaven had design'd this Conquest for Ferdinand Cortes, born at Medellin, in Estremadura, who was sent thither by the aforesaid Governor of Cuba, in November 1518, with the Command of ten Sail; which he would afterward have taken from him, ordering the Alcade of the Town of the Trinity to secure him. But he could not bring it about, Cortes being very much belov'd by five hundred and eight Souldiers, and one hundred and nine Sailers he had with him.

His first Conquest. His first Conquest, was over the Village of Tabasco, where the Inhabitants made some opposition. They having never seen any Horses, thought the Horse and the Rider had been all one Creature. Upon Monday Thursday, in the Year 1519 Cortes arriv'd at St. John de Ulva, where all his Men Landed upon Good-Friday, for which reason, that place was call'd Vera Cruz. Here they continu'd some Months, by reason of the opposition made by the Indians; till at length, being resolv'd to Conquer, or to dye, Cortes caus'd the Ships to be broke up, that his Men might have no hopes left of retiring; and be sensible their safety, consisted in their Swords. Accordingly on the 15th of August 1519, he set forward with 400 Men, for the Province of Tlascala, leaving a sufficient Garrison at Vera Cruz. He had several Incounters, with the Tlascallans, who thought they were sent against them, by the Mexicans their Enemies. The Spaniards dress'd theirs and their Horses wounds, with the Grease they took out of the Bowels of the Indians they kill'd. The Tlascallans, at length dismaying, su'd for Peace. Whilst they were treating, four Indians came from Montezuma to bid him welcome, and offer a Tribute, provided he would not go to Mexico. Cortes entred Tlascala, on the 23d September 1519, attended by Caciques and Lords of Towns; who after giving him the best Accomodation they could, offer'd him their Daughters for Wives; and set free many Wretches they kept up a Fattening for Sacrifice. Montezuma sent other Ambassadors with Gold and Jewels, fearing some ill Consequence after the Peace concluded with the Tlascallans. After this Cortes was receiv'd by the chief Men of Cholula; but being inform'd that they, by Order of Montezuma, conspir'd to betray him, he put a great number of them to death, and rescu'd the Prisoners kept to be Sacrific'd. Hereupon Montezuma being more terrify'd than before, sent another Embassy to him, with Presents of Gold and Rich Coverlets, excusing himself on account of the business of Cholula, and offering vast Gifts to Cortes, and Tribute to the Emperor Charles the 5th, provided he would not come into the City, which was all in Confusion, for fear of him, and for want of Provisions. Cortes persisting in his Resolution to go, severely reprimanded the Ambassadors, Montezuma perceiving there was no putting a stop to this Evil, making a virtue of Necessity, sent his Nephew Camatzin, Lord of Tescuco, and other noble Men in great Pomp, to meet him a days Journey off, and conduct him. Cortes came with them, through Iztapalapa, to the broad Causeway of Mexico; whither Coadlavacca and Cuyoacan, the Emperor's near Kinsmen came out to meet him. After them, came other Lords. and Montezuma himself alighted when he saw Cortes, who did the like and presented him with a Collar of false Stones. After this Ceremony Montezuma departed, ordering his Nephews, the Lords of Tescuco and Cuyoacan, to conduct him to the Palace, where his Father Axayaca had liv'd, whose Idols and Treasure were there still; and to provide quarters for the Souldiers. Here Montezuma again, met Cortes and presented him a Collar of Gold, treating all his Men plentifully at Supper. This they say was on the 18th of November 1519.

The Emperor was then 40 Years of Age, of a good Stature, a dark Complexion, a chearful Countenance, wore short Hair, and a little black Beard. He liv'd in great State, as well in regard of the number of his Courtiers, as of his Souldiers. When he went to the Cu, or Temple, he carry'd a Rod made half of Gold, and half of Wood, several great Men going before him; two of whom carry'd two Maces, as the Hieroglyphick of Justice. Cortes and some of his Officers desiring to see this great Temple, to which there was an Ascent of 114 steps; Montezuma receiv'd him very Courteously, and from the top of it, shew'd him all the City, most of it in the Lake, to which the way was over three Banks, or Dikes, one call'd of Iztapalapa, another of Tacuba, the third of Tepeaquilla, with Drawbridges, at certain distances. He also shew'd him the Temple of Huichilobos, the God of War, and of Tezcatlipuca of Hell, Goes to Mexico.

Montezuma.

Gemelli.
1698.

He is se-cur'd.

Hell, both Brothers, full of a deadly stench caus'd by the Men there Sacrific'd.

The Souldiers one day searching about for a place to make a Church of, broke through into an Apartment, the Door whereof had been lately made up, where they found a great quantity of Gold, and Jewels, it being Montezuma's Treasure, which they thought fit to shut up again, without taking any thing away. Cortes had resolv'd to secure Montezuma, but was afraid of the Success, because of the small number of his Men. For this reason he contriv'd to deceive him, bringing him by fair means to his Quarters, and then tell him he must be content to live a Prisoner, or to dye. Afterwards understanding that the Indians at Vera-cruz, had kill'd John de Escalante, and six other Men, (which made the Indians take heart, perceiving that the Tenlis or Gods come from the East, were Mortal) he lay'd hold of this opportunity, to quarrel with Montezuma. Having therefore sent a Message before, he went with five of his most resolute Commanders to the Emperor's Palace, and there loudly upbraiding him with breach of Faith, told him, he must submit to be his Prisoner, or resolve to dye. Montezuma excus'd himself, promising Satisfaction, and urging it was not proper to make him a Prisoner; but being frighted at the Officers Swords, and at the Words of Marina the Woman Interpreter, who made him sensible of his Danger, he offer'd a Son and two Daughters as Hostages, and Cortes refusing, suffer'd himself to be carry'd to his Quarters, where a Guard was put upon him. Lords and other Subjects, came from Places far distant, to him about their Affairs, and went into his Presence bare-footed, not right forward, but sideling, with their Eyes fixt on the Ground, and ordinary Coverings on them, leaving the Rich ones without. When they came before him, they bow'd three times, and when they went away, were not to turn their Backs. The four Commanders who had kill'd Escalante, were brought Prisoners, and Cortes condemn'd them to be Burnt; putting Fetters upon Montezuma, whilst it was doing. He ask'd leave once, to go out a Hunting, and another time to the Temple; that his People might believe he was not kept Prisoner, which was granted him with a Guard of 150 Spaniards, and notice given him, that upon the least commotion of the People, they would kill him. Cacamatzia King of Tescuco, seeing his Uncle Montezuma made a Prisoner, thought of rescuing him, and crowning himself Emperor, which his design he imparted to the Lords of Iztapalapa, Tacuba, and Chyoacan, Montezuma's Nephews. He having notice of it, would have Cortes secure them all, as was accordingly done by his Orders, which were obey'd, tho' he was Prisoner. The Imprisonment of these great Men, emboldned Cortes to demand of Montezuma, that he should swear Fealty to the King of Castile; and he consulting with the Principal Caciques, resolv'd to do it, which he did in Form, promising to pay a Tribute, with the Tears standing in his Eyes, and the same was done by the Petty Kings, subject to him.

Cortes seeing so much Gold, would needs know, where they found it, and Montezuma sent some Indians to three several Places with Spanish Officers, who return'd with the value of 1500 pieces of Eight, in Gold dust, which the Indians had gather'd in the Sand of certain Rivers. After this the Emperor made a Present by way of Tribute to the King of Spain, of all his Fathers Treasure, which was shut up in the aforementioned Apartment; besides many Jewels brought him by the Caciques. All the Gold being melted into Plates, by the King's Officers and Seal'd, there was found to the value of 600000 pieces of Eight; whereof one 5th part being deducted for the King, and another for Cortes, the rest was divided among the Men. The Idol Priests provok'd, that Cortes had set up the Cross upon their Temple excited the People to fall upon 'em, and therefore Montezuma advis'd him to be gone; but he to gain time, said he had destroy'd his Ships, and could not go, till he had built three Ships. Montezuma allow'd of the delay, order'd Workmen to build the Ships, and promis'd to keep the People quiet.

This being the Posture of Affairs at Mexico, and James Velasquez understanding that Cortes, had sent Deputies to the Emperor with rich Presents, without taking notice of him, he fitted out 19 Sail, with 1400 Men and 20 pieces of Cannon, and sent them under the Command of Pamphilo de Narvaez, with whom went an Oydore, or Judge of Santo Domingo, to mediate between him, and Cortes, since it had been in his Power to hinder his setting out. The Fleet coming into the Port of St. John de Ulva,

Narvaez sent against Cortes.

Mon-

Gemelli.
1698.

Montezuma soon had notice of it; because the Indians who were upon Guard at that Port, brought the whole Fleet painted upon a Cloth of Nequen or Maghey. He sent Narvaez a good Present of Gold, Quilts, and Provisions, and had in answer from him, that Cortes was a Run-away, and Rebel to his King, and that he was come to secure him, and deliver Montezuma from his Imprisonment. Cortes being inform'd hereof by Montezuma, who thought he had known it all before, having advis'd with his Captains, writ to Narvaez, desiring him for the Honour of their Nation, and the sake of the King's Service, not to raise the City against him, caused Montezuma to be set at Liberty, offering him all that was Conquer'd, and promising to retire to another Province. Narvaez instead of giving ear to these fair Proposals, put the Oydore into Irons, because he advis'd him to Peace, and march out with his Forces towards Mexico. Cortes hearing of it, left Peter de Alvarado, with some Men to secure Montezuma and their Fort, and set out himself, with the rest of his Forces, to meet Narvaez, demanding assistance of his Friends at Tlascala. His Men, and above 6000 Indians arm'd with Pikes, to keep off the Horse, prepar'd to defend themselves. Cortes being come with his little Army, within a League of Cempoulla, in the dark of the Night, pass'd over a Brook that was before him, and surprizing Narvaez and his Forces, routed, and took him Prisoner, with others of his Officers, and all his Cannon; obtaining a compleat Victory over an Army six times more numerous than his. The next day all the Soldiers of the adverse Party, took an Oath to be obedient to him; so that he having now secur'd 19 Ships, sent to several Parts, to make new Conquests. Advice was brought him from Peter de Alvarado that he was besieg'd, the City having revolted, and stood in need of speedy Succour. Cortes therefore leaving Narvaez in Custody at Vera Cruz, march'd away in all speed with 1300 Foot, and 96 Horse, besides 2000 Tlascallans. He entred Mexico on the 24th of June 1520, and Montezuma coming to meet him in the Court, he would not speak to him, being angry that he had held a Correspondence with Narvaez. This so incens'd the Emperor, that not regarding the Fealty he had Sworn, he caus'd James de Ordas as he was marching out of the Garrison with 400 Men, to be set upon by an infinite multitude of Indians with Slings, Arrows, Staves, and Stones, so that they wounded him, and kill'd several of his Men, and then went to fire their Quarters, which was put out at Night. In the Morning the Spaniards renew'd the fight, but being overpower'd by the multitude of Enemies, many were kill'd, tho' they fell not unrevenge'd; and the rest retir'd to their Quarters, to fortify themselves. Here they were so vigorously assaulted in the Night, that many dropt on both sides.

The War continuing, the Spaniards made some wooden Towers to remove, and went out to burn the Temple, but were beaten back to their Quarters with the loss of 46 Men. This made them resolve to sue for Peace the next Day, and to depart Mexico; but as soon as ever it was Day they were attack'd by the Indians on all sides, with such Fury, that Cortes was forced to send a Religious Man to Montezuma, to desire he would make his Subjects desist, and he would be gone immediately. Montezuma, being still Angry, refus'd at first, but then comply'd, and from a Gallery commanded the Mexicans to lay down their Arms. This was accordingly done, but immediately four Caciques came up to the Emperor, and told him, That the People being highly offended, and resolv'd that the Spaniards should Perish, whatever came of it, had chosen another Emperor, for which they nevertheless beg'd his Pardon. No sooner were these Words spoken, but the Indians let fly many Stones and Arrows towards Montezuma, so that he was wounded in the Head, Arms, and Legs, whereof he soon after dy'd, having reign'd 17 Years.

Cortes acquainted the new King with Montezuma's Death, and sent him his Body, that it might be honourably Bury'd; and then demanded of the Mexicans, to put one of Montezuma's Sons in Possession of the Empire, because he whom they had Chosen was no lawful Emperor; renewing his Demands of Peace in order to depart Mexico. Instead of Peace they fell so furiously upon his Quarters, that they kill'd many Soldiers, whereupon the next Day Cortes march'd out with all his Forces, to be revenge'd, burnt many Houses, and kill'd abundance of Indians, but with great loss on his side. Perceiving 'it was impossible to withstand such Numbers of Enemies, Provisions and Powder growing scarce, he resolv'd to depart Mexico. First he kill'd Montezuma's

Montezuma kill'd

Narvaez routed.

Spaniards besieg'd in Mexico.

Gemelli.
1698.
Cortes
leaves
Mexico.

Montezuma's Kindred, and the petty Kings he had Prisoners, and then on Thursday the 10th of July 1520, when the Indians least expected it, having divided the aforementioned Gold among his Soldiers, began to March silently out of the City, carrying along with him a wooden Bridge to pass over those Places where the Banks were broken down. As he was passing over the Banks at Mid-night, tho' it was very Dark, the Enemy perceiv'd him, and attacking him both by Land, and from the Canals in a great number of Boats, kill'd at least twenty Spaniards, part with the Sword, and part drown'd in the Water; besides several Prisoners, the Canals being choak'd with dead Men and Horses. Alvarado here taking a wonderful Leap to escape falling into the Enemies Hands, that Place is to this Day call'd Alvarado's Leap. Having pass'd the Bridge, Cortes came in all hast to Tacuba, with the Indians always at his Back; but being asham'd that many were left behind Wounded, expos'd to the Cruelty of the barbarous Enemy, he turn'd back to fetch them off. But seeing the People of Tacuba and Escapuzalco all in Arms against him, he was forced, following Tlascallan Guides, to take the by Roads, still pursu'd by the Indians in the dark Night. Being come to a Temple, he halted, fortifying himself to have the Conveniency of Dressing his wounded Men; for which Reason afterwards the Church of our Lady de las Remedias, was erected there. This was call'd the dismal Night, because of the great Slaughter, especially of those, who forwarded their own Death by not forsaking their Gold. They continu'd their Retreat still facing the Mexicans; but the Battle on the 14th of July near Ozumba was very remarkable, and the Slaughter was great on both sides, after which upon a Muster, there were found but 440 Spaniards. This small Body coming to Tlascala was well receiv'd, tho' it had lost 1200 Tlascallans.

Comes to Tlascala.

Cortes reinforced.

Quauhtimoc, Montezuma's near Kinsman began his Reign at Mexico, being elected, as was said before; and at the same time 120 Men, and 17 Horse accidentally reinforced Cortes; for Francis de Garay having sent three Ships to take Possession of the River of Panuco, the Soldiers meeting with more Opposition than they expected, went all away to Cortes.

He now thought good to send away some Officers and Soldiers, part into Spain, and part to Hispaniola and Cuba, to make known what he had done till that time; and some to Jamaica to buy Horses. Another parcel of Souldiers came out of Spain, and arriving at Vera-Cruz joyn'd him, so that on the 26th of December he march'd towards Tescuco, with his Spaniards and 10000 Tlascallans. There he was honourably receiv'd by seven of the principal Lords of the Country, and the petty King, who gave him a Gold Banner. Some Days after, finding himself Strong, having receiv'd another Recruit brought by the King's Treasurer in one Ship, and 13 Brigantines he had caus'd to be Built being ready; he first subdu'd the Country about, which had revolted; and then resolv'd to go about the Lake, through the Canals to find out the properest way to Besiege Mexico.

Accordingly he set out on the 5th of April 1521, with 365 Spaniards, and above 20000 arm'd Indians, besides those who follow'd the Army like Crows only to glut themselves with Man's Flesh. After subduing Tespulcan, passing forward thro' Cornavaca, he overthrew the Mexicans in a bloody Fight, but they bringing fresh Forces, attack'd the Spaniards several times at Suchimilco. Cortes return'd to Tescuco, and understanding that a Friend of Narvaez was conspiring with others to Murder him, he caus'd the Conspirators to be Hang'd.

Returnsto
Mexico.

Upon a Muster at Whisfontide 1521, he found he had 84 Horse, 650 Foot arm'd with Sword, and Lance, and 194 with Fire-Arms. He took 150 of these, and distributed them among the Brigantines, each of which carry'd twelve Oars; the rest of his Men he divided into nine Companies, giving one Man the chief Command over three of them. He order'd 8000 Tlascallans to go Besiege Iztapalapa, Cuicacan, and Tacuba, and broke down the Aqueduct of Chapultepec, that carry'd the Water to Mexico. He went in his Brigantines about the Lake, and sinking several Canoes of Indians made his way over to Iztapalapa to relieve Gonzalo de Sandoval, who was beset by several Bodies of Mexicans. Having brought him off, he sent him to Attack the Bank of Tepeaquilla, now call'd the Causeway of our Lady of Guadalupe, whilst he dividing his Forces into three Parts, and Back'd by the Brigantines went to Assault the Mexicans. The Spaniards could do little good, because at Night they lost all the Ground they had gain'd upon the Causeways; for all the Houses being encompass'd with Water, with Trenches cut about them, the Indians open'd them at Night, that the 1698. Men and Horses might drop in.

On the 24th of June the Spaniards were attack'd on all sides, and tho' they kept their Ground with a very small loss; yet Cortes being sensible that all delays, were Prejudicial, his Army decreasing, he resolv'd to break on a sudden into Tlatelulco, then the greatest Square in Mexico, now the Monastery of Santiago, or St. James, of the Franciscans, and thence advance to gain the Streets of Mexico. The three little Squadrons advanced three several ways, but all to no purpose; for Cortes pushing too forward upon one of the Causeways, whether the Indians had drawn him by giving way; and being bore down by the Water and Mud, was wounded in the Leg, and 60 of his Men taken Prisoners; nor did the other Squadrons suffer less, being attack'd in Canoes by Water; and by Land with Sticks and Stones from the tops of the Houses, nor could the Brigantines relieve them, being kept off by the Timbers laid across the Channels. The Indians Sacrific'd all the Spaniards they had taken, to the Idol Huichilobos; casting their Bodies out to be devour'd by Wild Beasts, and keeping only the Legs and Arms, to eat them with Chilmole, a hot Sauce. They flead their Faces, to put on that Skin they took off like a Vizor at the Solemnity.

Indians
forsake
Cortes.

After so many losses, the Souldiers of Tlascala, Tescuco, and other places, went away home despairing of Success; so that the few Spaniards were left to keep the Posts they had secur'd, part of them filling the Ditches with Earth and Fascine, whilst others stood upon their Guard, the Brigantines at the same time with all their force, striving to break through the obstructions lay'd against them in the Canals. Thus they advanced so far without falling into the Water, notwithstanding the opposition of the Mexicans, that the Souldiers of Tlascala, and Tescuco, came again to their assistance.

They return.

In the mean while Cortes made application to the King for Peace, but he daily grew more obstinate in carrying on the War; which made Cortes demand supplies of his Confederates. They being come, perceiving the King would not hearken to any accommodation, he caus'd the City to be assaulted at all three Attacks, and gain'd Ground as far as the great Temple of Tlatelulco, on which he set up his Colours. Three days after, all the three Attacks were carry'd on so successfully, that they met in one Body. Then the King and his Men retir'd to that Port of the City, where the Houses were encompass'd with Water; but there many were kill'd by the Spaniards shot, who had drawn up all their Force in the place of Tlatelulco.

He take part of the City.

Peace was demanded a third time, but the Indians, after a Cessation of three days, fell again upon the Spaniards, who had been supply'd with Powder, and other necessaries, by a Ship come from Spain. Cortes seeing the King would not hearken to Peace, relying on the Water that secur'd him, order'd Christopher de Sandoval to besiege him with the Brigantines. This done, the King fearing the People would kill him, got into a Boat with his Wives and best moveables, and fled over the Lake; which Sandoval understanding, he sent Garcia Holguin after him; who took him and all his Company, and brought him to Cortes, without touching any thing that belong'd to him, particularly the Women, for whom the King was concern'd. Cortes had been on the top of a Temple, to view the Action; but as soon as he heard of the King's being taken, he came down to prepare a place to receive him Friendly. The wretched Prince, with Tears standing in his Eyes, said to him, Lord Melinche, I have done my Duty in defending my City and People: Since Fortune has thrown me into your Hands, I desire you to kill me with that Sword by your side, that I may not be reduc'd to a more miserable Condition. Because you have bravely defended your City (answer'd Cortes) you deserve the greater Honour and Esteem. That same day he sent him to Cuyoacan with Sandoval. This hapning in the Evening, on the 13th of August 1521, being the day of St. Hippolitus, after a Siege of 93 Days; therefore the Anniversary of the Conquest is kept on that day, as has been said before. Quauhtimoc was about 24 Years of Age, well made, of a dark Complexion, and a long Face. For this Conquest, Cortes had given him for his Coat of Arms three Crowns, with a Bordure of seven Kings heads. He dismiss'd all the Indians that had assisted him, with Thanks, sending them away loaded with Spoils of the Conquer'd; and the Mexicans thought themselves very Rich, in carrying away many Loads of dry'd Flesh, of the slain Mexicans.

King of Mexico, and the City taken.

After

Gemelli.
1698.

After cleansing the Streets, and removing the dead Bodies, the next thing was the Torturing the Lord of Tescuco, to oblige him to discover where the Gold was hid, all they had found being worth but 386000 Crowns. Then the City was Rebuilt, that it might be again Inhabited, and several Commanders were sent to subdue other Provinces; and Cortes went in Person, and Conquer'd that of Fanuco. After his return to Mexico, he sent two Ships to Spain, and in them, Alonso de Avila, and Antony de Quinones, with a Present of 220 Thousand Crowns in Gold Plates, and all that was left of Montezuma's Treasure, to ask of the King the Government of New Spain for him; and intreat him not to send Lawyers into the Indies, to breed Dissention among the Inhabitants.

These two sail'd on the 20th of December 1522; but being come to the Tercera Islands, Florin a French Pirate took both the Ships, Gold and Jewels, and carry'd Avila Prisoner into France, Quinones being Dead before. The King of France, when that rich Treasure was brought to him, said, The Emperor Charles V. and the King of Portugal have divided the new World between them, without allowing me any Share; I would desire them to show me Adam's Will, which Entitles them to it.

Avila going into Spain did not only obtain the Government of New Spain for Cortes, but a Confirmation of the Division he had made of the Country among the Conquerors; and Power to do the like for the future. Some time after Cortes sent the Emperor 80000 Crowns, and a small Culverin curiously wrought, all of Gold and Silver, call'd the Phoenix, with this Inscription,

*Ave nacio sin par,
Yo en serviros sin segundo,
I vos sin igual en el mundo.*

That is, As the Phoenix has no Mate, so neither had any Man serv'd you like me, nor have you any Equal to you in the World.

Cortes going afterwards to punish the Rebellion of Christopher de Olid, in the Provinces of Higueras and Honduras, took along with him Quaughtimoc, and the Lord of Tacuba, and caus'd them to be Hang'd in the Village of Gheyacola; which Action his own Men did not approve of. The King before his Death <sup>Other</sup> said, I have been long convinced of the <sup>Conquests</sup> Falshood of your Words, Captain Melinche, and that you would put me to Death; unhappy I that did not kill my self that same Day you were Victorious over me. I hope God will Punish you, for killing me so wrongfully. The Lord of Tacuba, said he, was pleas'd to Die with the King his Uncle. Finding Olid already put to Death, Cortes with incredible Celerity subdu'd those and other Provinces, and return'd to Mexico in June 1525.

Being afterwards put upon his Trial <sup>Cortes</sup> by the Emperor's Order, he was depriv'd <sup>made a</sup> of the Government of New Spain, and therefore went away to Court. He was there honourably received in the Year 1527, and created Marques del Valle, worth at this Day 60000 pieces of Eight a Year, and had the Title of Captain General of New Spain, and of the South Sea; and to compleat his Honour, falling Sick the Emperor went to see him. Then returning into the Indies; he retir'd to his own Estate, and apply'd himself to building of Ships, as he had promis'd to do, to discover other Islands, and Countries on the South Sea. After discovering California with a thousand Disasters, and the Expence of 300000 pieces of Eight, he came over to Spain to have his Expenses allow'd him; but was so far from getting his Mony, that he was forbid going over to the Indies, till he had stood Trial. At length returning with the Emperor from the Siege of Argier, he dy'd at Castilleja on the Sea Coast, near Sevil, on the second of December 1545, at the Age of 62. His Bones were convey'd to the Monastery of St. Francis in Mexico, as he had desir'd. He was of a proportionable Stature, a swarthy Complexion, a black Beard, and had the Scar of a Cut on his under Lip.

CH A P. V.

The Discovery and Conquests of Peru.

Pizarro's
discovery.

FRancis Pizarro* met not with so much Difficulty in Peru. He sail'd thither in the Year 1525, with two Ships fitted out by James de Almagro and Ferdinand Luque, a Priest of Panama, having the Governours leave. Landing

B b b b 2

when

when he had Sail'd 100 Leagues, he Gemelli. Fought the Inhabitants with much Bra-1698. very, and was wounded by them; but

Almagro, who had been with him in the Fray, lost an Eye; and then return'd to Panama for more Men. Pizarro continuing his discovery came to a Country all overflow'd, where the Inhabitants liv'd like Birds upon Trees. Being therefore in no Condition to do them any harm, he retir'd to the Island del Gallo; and Almagro went again for Recruits to Panama. Pizarro suffer'd much want in the Island; and sailing thence after Almagro's Vessel return'd, he stood towards Tangarara, and at Tumbez set ashore Peter de Candia, who afterwards return'd astonish'd at the Wealth of King Atabaliba. Upon this Information Pizarro return'd to Panama, and advising with Almagro, and Luque, resolv'd to go over to Spain to ask the Government of those Places he should Conquer. The Emperor besides the Government gave him the Title of Captain General and Adelantado, or Lord Lieutenant of Peru and New Castile; whereupon he overjoy'd at the Honour done him, return'd to the Indies with his Brothers Gonzalo and Ferdinand, and Francis Martin his Brother by the Mother's side; but instead of a kind Reception he found Almagro much offended, because he had not obtain'd any Honour of the Emperor for him. At length being reconcil'd, he had two Ships with a sufficient Number of Men. Not being able by reason of a Storm to arrive at Tumbez, he Landed in that Part which is properly call'd Peru. First he conquer'd the Island Puna, not far from the Shore, and then govern'd in the Name of Guascar Inga, Brother, but Enemy to King Atabaliba; and thinking it convenient to gain his Friendship, he sent him 600 Prisoners he had taken in Puna; yet this did not avail him, because Guascar was acquainted with his Design. This done he sail'd to Tumbez, and landed his Men; and because the Governor would not receive him Peaceably, he cross'd the River by Night in a Boat, and routed him. Pizarro allur'd by Atabaliba's Wealth, after plundering the Place, which he call'd St. Michael, set forward for Caxamalca; and being threatned on the way by the King, civilly answer'd, That he only desir'd to visit him from the Emperor, and so went on. Being come to Caxamalca, he fortify'd himself against the Will of Atabaliba, and then sent two Messengers to acquaint him with his Arrival at that Place. They brought back a very ill Answer, whereupon he prepar'd to give Battle, tho' much inferior in Power. The King being inform'd of the Rashness of the Spaniards, mov'd with all his Army towards Caxamalca. He was carry'd upon a Seat of Gold, adorn'd with Parrots Feathers. On his Head, which was Shav'd, he had a Woollen Crimson Cap, which show'd him to be King of Cuzco, and his Ears were almost rent with the weight of the Gold hanging at them. Being come to Caxamalca, and having heard of one sent from Pizarro, who advis'd him to pay Tribute to the Emperor; he was so much offended, that he presently began to shew himself an Enemy. Then the Spaniards fell upon the Peruvians on all sides, but more particularly upon the King; who after much Opposition, being at last pull'd by his Garment off his Seat, was taken. Atabaliba made Prisoner. Thus the Spaniards were soon Victors, and took all the Baggage, which was worth a Treasure; but Pizarro was wounded in both Hands. Atabaliba for his Ransom offer'd to fill a great Room with Silver and Gold, as high as Pizarro could reach with his Hand; and his Offer being accepted of, when his Victorious Commanders brought his Brother Guascar Prisoner, he commanded him to be kill'd. This Guascar had been appointed Heir of all the Kingdoms of Peru by their Father Guaynacapa; and to Atabaliba, who was the younger Brother, he left only the Kingdom of Quito; and this was the occasion of the War between the two Brothers. This was also the cause of Guascar's Death; for the other being then Lord of all, hoped to be able to pay Pizarro the promis'd Sum. But he was Punish'd after the same manner for his Barbarity; for having deliver'd the Ransom, instead of being set at Liberty, he was Strangled; in vain suing for Mercy, upbraiding Pizarro with breach of Faith, and desiring to be sent Prisoner to the Emperor. Thus a vast Country was subdu'd without any Bloodshed, both Brothers being Dead, and none opposing the Spaniards.

Began his Conquest.

The War with the Indians being at an end, it began among the Spaniards, through Ambition of Command and Hunger of Gold; for Pizarro fell at variance with Almagro, and at last strangled him, and beheaded his own Brother Ferdinand Pizarro. D. James de Almagro reveng'd his Father's Death, stabbing Francis Pizarro, bastard Son to Gonzalo Pizarro of Navarre,

Gemelli.
1698.

Navarre, at Lima in the Year 1541. This done he rais'd considerable Forces, and at length being in Rebellion came to a violent Death. The Emperor being inform'd of all these Disorders, sent four Oydores, or Judges, and Blasco Nunnez to be Viceroy, with new Laws and Ordinances; but the new Conquerors refusing to obey them, Rebell'd and made Gonzalo Pizarro their Commander. The Oydores seeing the Country up in Arms, Imprison'd the Viceroy, and took upon them the care of the Government. Some were for putting him to Death, and others for sending him into Spain to the Emperor.

In the mean while Gonzalo Pizarro made himself Governour of Peru, with absolute Power; but the Oydore Alvarez, who had been intrusted to carry the Viceroy into Spain, when they came to Guaura, set him at Liberty. The Viceroy now thought he had overcome all Difficulties; but Pizarro routed his Forces at Quito, and caus'd his Head to be cut off by a Black; the same he afterwards did to Vela Nunnez the Viceroy's Brother upon some slight Jealousy. The Emperor was much concern'd at the Imprisonment of the Viceroy, and Insolence of Pizarro; and therefore to redress these Disorders, sent D. Peter Gasca a Priest, with full Power, and Blanks subscrib'd, to make use of as he saw occasion.

Gasca went over in the Year 1546 with two Oydores or Judges his Friends, and very few others; and being come to Panama, writ to Pizarro, advising him to lay down his Arms and submit to the Emperor, who would pardon all that was pass'd, as might appear by his Majesty's Letter. These Letters had no good effect on Pizarro or his principal Associates; who joyning, to the number of sixty, answer'd Gasca, That they thought it not convenient for him to come into Peru, after so much Slaughter committed there, the Minds of the People being still very much exasperated; and that they would write themselves, and send their Deputies to the Emperor to justify their Proceedings.

Gasca perceiving there was nothing to be done by fair means, began to raise Men, and manag'd Peter de Hinojosa so dexterously, that he put Pizarro's Fleet into his Hands. This discouraging Pizarro's Party, many of them went over to Gasca, who by that means being grown formidable, went away into Peru. There after several Defeats given Pizarro, he at length took him Prisoner in the last Battle of Xaquixaguana. Gasca refer'd the Tryal of him and twelve others to the Licentiate Cianca, and the Marshal Alvarado, who pass'd Sentence of Death against them for high Treason. Pizarro was carry'd to the Place of Execution on a Mule, with his Hands ty'd, and a Cloak over him. His Head was carry'd to Lima, and set upon a Pole in the Market-Place, with this Inscription;

Pizarro taken and Executed.

This is the Head of the Traitor Gonzalo Pizarro, who join'd Battle in the Valley of Xaquixaguana, against the Emperor's Standard. Monday the 9th of April 1548.

After the unfortunate end of the first Conquerors of that Country, and the Imprisonment of the Oydore or Judge, Zepeda, for the other three who had seiz'd the Viceroy were Dead, Gasca apply'd himself to settle the Government; and thus a Churchman brought the War to that happy end his Predecessors could not attain to. He return'd to Spain in July 1550, and presented the Emperor with a Million and a half, for all which good Services he was made Bishop of Placencia.

The Civil Wars being ended with the Death of at least an hundred and fifty Captains, and other Commanders; the Souldiers carry'd on the Conquest, always following the rich Country, and leaving the Poor; so that at present the Crown of Spain is possess'd in America of a Country 9300 Leagues in extent, viz. 3375 Southward, and the rest Northward. It is to be observ'd before we leave this Country, that in Peru, for 500 Leagues in length, from Tumbez to Chile, and 15 Leagues in breadth, it never Thunders, Lightens nor Rains.

CHAP. VI.

The further Account of what hapned to the Author at Vera-Cruz before he Imbark'd.

Sunday the 10th, I return'd in the Evening to Vera-Cruz; and carrying the dainty Pheasants I had kill'd with me, din'd with the Governour on Monday

11th. • Tuesday 12th, I went again a shooting to the Farm call'd S. John, where besides the Garden abounding in all sorts of Fruit and especially of the Tart, I found

Gemelli.
1698. found a little Wood full of Birds and wild Beasts; and was courteously Entertain'd by the Owner. Wednesday 13th, I went out a shooting with a Mulato for my Guide, in a Wood by the Bank of a good River, where I kill'd some Royal Pheasants; and having shot down a wild Boar, the ignorant Mulato ran and catch'd him by one of his Feet, and the Boar turning, struck him through the Arm with his sharp Tusks. It is to be observ'd, that tho' the Boars of America, do not emit any Excrement at that Navel I said they have on their Back, a Span from the Tail; yet they send forth such a filthy Scent, that if it be not cut off as soon as the Beast is kill'd, it so infects all the Flesh, that there is no eating of it. I return'd home full of Garrapatas, a sort of Vermin bred in the Woods like Crablice, which from the Plants get upon People's Cloaths as they go by, and pierce into the very Flesh, so that it requires much Trouble and Dexterity to get them out.

Churches
and Monasteries.

Sunday 17th, I heard Mass in the Church of the Mercenarians, where there are thirteen Altars, but ill set off. The Monastery is very mean, but they have a fine Belfry. The Monastery of the Franciscans, which I saw Tuesday 19th, has large Dormitories, and the Church eleven Altars. The Dominican Convent is Poor, the Church small and has nine Altars. The Parish Church is call'd Nuestra Senora la Antigua, or our Lady the Anti-

ent. The Augustinians are so Poor that they have no Church, but only a little Chapple. The Hospital of S. Hippolitus is divided into two Parts, one for Men, and the other for Women; but both small.

Friday 29th, I went out to divert me, and hapning to shoot a Parrot, as he fell he cry'd out like a Man, as it were to call the rest to his Assistance, and they flew about in Swarms crying out, so that they seem'd to cloud the Sky. Then I shot two Royal Pheasants, a Cock and a Hen, for they always go together. The Cocks Feathers are all Black, except those upon his Belly, and a curious curl'd Tuft on his Head; the Hen is of a Cinnamon Colour. Those they call Gritones are no bigger than a Pheasant in Europe, and all black. Their Bones are venomous to Dogs. The wild Turkeys here are mortal Enemies to the tame Ones, and kill them whenever they can.

Being near the time of my Departure, D. Francis Loran, y Roda, Knight of the Order of Santiago or S. James, recommended me to the Captain of a Vessel that was to carry me to Havana, and gave me Letters of Recommendation to Captains of Galeons there, as also a Present in Money. D. Alonso de Penaloza, Captain of Horse, sent me another Present of Sweetmeats for my Voyage. I felt a fit of a Fever, and had a Mule stolen from me out of the King's Stables.

C H A P. VII.

The Author's Voyage to the Port of Havana in the Island of Cuba.

HAVING taken leave of the Governor and Friends, on Saturday the 14th of December, I went aboard the Vessel call'd the Sevillian, that came with Licence from Maracao, to joyn the Galeons at Havana, and Sail with them to Cadiz. The Governor added one Favour to all the rest, which was not to suffer my Trunks to be open'd at the Custom-House. About Noon we fell down along the Western Channel, close to the Castle, which is little and inconvenient as well for the Governor as Soldiers; keeping a very watchful Eye, because of the many Flats on all sides; and that it was but now newly settling after the North Winds, which hinder Ships getting out of the Bay of Mexico, whose Form is like a half Moon, and much more out of the Channel. There is another way in on the East side for small Boats. We got out about Evening and steer'd N. E. and by N.

Sunday 15th, we held on the same Course with the Wind at N. W. the lat. 20 deg. 12 min. Monday 16th, held the same Course, the Wind S. E. lat. 21 deg. 1 min. Tuesday 17th, we had a great Storm, which made the Captain Sick, much more the Passengers, and the same Wind continuing, we run to Northward to avoid certain Rocks, and then sail'd upon a Line for Havana, the lat. 22 deg. 5 min. Wednesday 18th, the Wind blew stormy at N. which made us run away to E. the lat. 24 deg. The same Wind continu'd Thursday 19th, and we kept upon the same Line; but Friday 20th, the Wind coming to S. we stood N. E. and by E. being in 24 deg. 3 min.
of

Gemelli. 1698. of lat. At Night we stood E. N. E. and so continu'd Saturday 21st, making much way. Finding 25 deg. 30. min. lat. which was enough to avoid the Flats, we stood for the Island of Cuba due E. Four hours after Night the Wind blew hard at N. W. with Rain, which made us steer E. and by S.

Sunday 22<sup>d</sup>. Tuny-Fish being seen, it was suppos'd we were near Land, lat. 25 deg. 26 min. Monday 23th, the Wind at N. we ran E. S. E. and then E. and by S. finding the lat. 25 deg. 20 min. At Night we were quite becalm'd; but Tuesday 24th, being Christmase Eve, the Wind came up at S. W. and drove us E. S. E. At Night we were again becalm'd; and Wednesday 25th being Christmase Day, the Wind blowing at N. E. we sail'd S. E. lat. 24 deg. 55 min. That Night no body slept, the Waves beat so furiously.

Thursday 26th, we steer'd E. S. E. the Wind at N. E. which drove us from the Land we were in sight of, and gave us a more restless Night than the last, lat. 23 deg. 17 min. The Wind coming about to S. we steer'd E. Friday 27th, we saw Land, and coasted along it all Day and Night, our Course E. At length we came to an Anchor near the Castle call'd del Morro, which is at the Mouth of the Harbour, for tho' we fir'd two Guns, the Castellan took no care to put out a Light to show the way into the Port.

Saturday 28th, a South Wind blowing out of the Port, would not permit us to get in till Noon, and that always upon a Tack; so that at last we arriv'd safe at Havana, after a Voyage of 300 Leagues. I lay aboard the Vessel, because there were no Inns a Shore. Sunday 29th, the Wind blew so furiously at North, that the Waves beat over the Castle de Morro, and had not we got in as we did, we had been in great Danger. Monday 30th, I landed and carry'd my Goods to a House I hir'd near the Hospital of S. John de Dios.

C H A P. VIII.

The Description of Havana, and Particulars of that Country.

Havana.

THE Havana is a little City, half a League in Compass, seated in a Plain, and in the lat. of 23 deg. 20 min. It is almost round, enclos'd with poor low Walls on the Land side, and defended on the other Part by the Water. The Inhabitants are about 4000 Souls, Spaniards, Mulatos and Blacks, who live most of them in low Houses. The Women are Beautiful, and the Men Ingenious. The Governor has also the Title of Captain General of the Island, and administers Justice with the Assistance of an Assessor, call'd a Lieutenant, who is appointed by the Council of the Indies.

It is very dear living there, for three Ounces of Bread cost fifteen Grains of Naples Mony, that is, about three Pence English; and half a Pound of Meat the same Price. A Hen is worth a Noble, and Fruit and other things proportionably, so that a Man can scarce live under two Pieces of Eight a Day, especially when the Galeons are there. Tho' the Climate is temperate, Wheat has not throve there for some Years, and the reason is not known; so that what comes from abroad to the Bakers is dearly paid for. But this want is in some measure supply'd by a Root call'd Jucca, whereof pressing it to get out a venomous Juice there is in it. They bake it upon little earthen Stoves, and this Bread serves not only the Poor, but the better sort who have large Families. This Root produces neither Leaves nor Seed; but they set bits of it in the Ground to grow again.

Jucca.

The Island is 300 Leagues in length from East to West, and about 30 in breadth. The Inhabitants are Poor having no Trade but Tobacco and Sugar. Blacks. All the Labour falls upon the Blacks, of whom their Masters exact four Royals a Day, and six when the Fleet is there, and at least three of the Women; now what can a miserable Black do who has two Masters, as often happens? In Peru the Masters Avarice is greater, for they send the Black Women to be got with Child like Cows, and if they prove barren they sell them.

The City Havana is encompass'd on two sides by its safe Harbour, which is so deep, that the Ships Anchor within a few steps of the Shore. It is defended by three Castles, the chief of them call'd del Morro, on the left Hand of the Mouth of it; the 2<sup>d</sup>, de la Punta, or of the Point, on the right; and the 3<sup>d</sup>, call'd only the Fort, on the right of the last; we shall

Genelli.
1698.

Indians of Florida.

I shall speak of them at large elsewhere. Friday 3d, I saw the little but neat Church call'd Santo Christo del buen viage, serv'd by secular Priests. Next Day that of the Recolets seated on the best Ground in the City, and in it 12 beautiful Chapels, and in the Monastery Cells for 50 Fathers. The Weather which had continu'd Serene and Warm as Summer, on Thursday 9th chang'd so Cold with Rain, that I believe the like has scarce ever been felt in a Place lying in 23 deg. and 2 min. of Latitude. Saturday 11th, a Boat arriv'd in 24 Hours from the opposite Coast of Florida, and set a Shore some Indians of Cuyo, Subjects to a Cacique whose Name was Charles. These, as well Men as Women, had no part of their Bodies cover'd, but only a Cloak before their Privities; and wore long Hair bound behind their Heads. They were Idolaters, of those that are given not only to Idleness, but to all abominable Vices. They were allow'd to Trade in hopes to convert them, because their Prince, or Cacique, had consented to receive 14 Franciscan Missioners into his Country. Their chief Commodity is Fish; some little Amber they find along the shore; Tortoise-shells, and a sort of Scarlet Birds to keep in Cages, for their Colour call'd Cardinals.

Monday 13th, a small Vessel from Jamaica, brought the News of the Peace concluded betwixt France and the Confederates. Wednesday 15th, I heard Mass in the Church of S. Clare, which has seven Altars well adorn'd. The Monastery will contain an hundred Religious Women and Servants, who are there Clad in Blew.

Thursday 16th, the Chests of Pieces of Eight began to be put aboard the Galeons, the Kings held 3000 each, and the rest 2000, in all amounting to thirty Millions, as well belonging to the King as Merchants, for Goods sold at the Fair of Porto Belo, carry'd on between the Traders of Sevil and those of Lima. The great Faith these Traders repose in one another, is very remarkable; for when once agreed about the Price, they interchangeably deliver one another the Bales of Goods, and Chests of Pieces of Eight, without seeing any thing of the Contents, but giving entire Credit to the written Particulars they deliver to one another; for afterwards the Bales and Chests are open'd in the presence of publick Notaries, and if they find any thing amiss, the Companies of Sevil and Lima are to make all good. This Year the Company of Lima Traders paid 5000 Pieces of Eight, for Goods found over and above in the Bales at the foregoing Fair. The same is practic'd at Acapulco, when the Galeon comes from Manila.

There was also deliver'd to the Master of Plate, (which is an Officer aboard the Galeons, who had charge of all the Plate and Jewels) aboard the Admiral, a Pearl weighing 60 Grains, shap'd like a Pear, by F. Francis de la Fuente a Jesuit, to be deliver'd to the King. This Pearl was taken at Panama, in the King's Island, by a Black belonging to a Priest; who being rich, would not sell it to the President of Panama for 50000 Pieces of Eight, nor to the Viceroy of Peru for 70000, both of them being to send it to the King; but said, He would carry it to his Majesty himself. Being come to Porto Belo with the Pearl, which he call'd la Perseguida, or the Persecuted, he there dy'd before he went aboard, and therefore committed it to the care of the afore-said F. Puente, who told me it was larger than that call'd la Peregrina, but somewhat duller. The Black had his Liberty for his Reward.

A rich
Pearl.

There went aboard the Galeons 20 Doctors of Peru, being the Sons of Spaniards and Indian Women, going to Court for Preferment, and the least that every one of them carry'd was 30000 Pieces of Eight.

Monday 20th, going abroad a shooting, I kill'd a great many of those Birds they call Cotorreras. Some of them have black and green Feathers, and others blew; others black and green Wings; their Breasts red, and half the Head white. They are not amiss to eat. Returning home I kill'd two Guacamaijas, which tho' they do not talk, are so finely Colour'd, that the best Pencil can scarce equal them. The Country is very delightful, being full of little Houses with Gardens and Farms, where there is no want of Indian Fruit. I found a sort of Snails very large, like the Sea Snails. Friday 24th, I saw the Church and Monastery of the Augustinians; the first has thirteen little Altars, the latter very poor Dormitories. Sunday 26th, I was at the Mother Church of the City, where the Bishop officiates with the Clergy belonging to it, his Residence being at Havana, tho' the Cathedral is at Cuba where the Canons reside. I spent some Hours on Monday 27th, with the Governor of the Island and several other Gentlemen, that delighted to hear me discourse of my Travels, and see the Curiosities

Cotorreras
and Guacamaijas
Birds.

riofities I had, among whom was D. Gemelli. Charles Sotomayor, Knight of the Order of Calatrava, and Oydore or Judge of Santa Fe, to whom an incredible Accident had hapned.

A very remarkable Passage.

This Gentleman went by order of his Court, to receive Informations against the Governor of Carthagera, for having deliver'd up that Place to the French, and carry'd along with him the Governor of Santa Marta to put into his Place. He going alone into Carthagera, because the Governor of Santa Marta who was more Crafty, remain'd without to see what the Event would be, began to proceed with more Rigour than was convenient, without showing his Commission; whereat the Governor of the Place being highly offended, as thinking he had defended it as became a good Souldier, and Man of Honour, that is, as long as it was practicable; he in the Night secur'd the Oydore, notwithstanding he lay'd Hand on his Sword, and call'd for Aid and Assistance; thus the Judge instead of Imprisoning was Imprison'd, and his Commission taken from him, instead of removing the other from his Post. That same Night, after he had been 24 Hours executing his Commission, he was put aboard a little Boat without any other Provision, but Bisket and some Fruit, not being allow'd to take his own Equipage. Thus the Governor of Carthagera sent him to the Governor of Havana, to be kept as a Disturber of the Peace, till the King were inform'd of the Matter. The Governor of Santa Marta, who was two Leagues off, hearing what had hapned, fled to prevent being seiz'd. The poor Gentleman was much concern'd at this Accident; notwithstanding the Governor, instead of sending him to the Castle, kept him in his own House with very civil Entertainment. This gave me an opportunity to acquaint him with my Misfortunes, tho' I had never been Imprison'd, but undeserv'dly Persecuted.

Tuesday 28th, I heard Mass in the Church of S. John de Dios, which is small and has nine Altars; the Monastery is also small, and the Hospital is for Souldiers, its Revenue is 12000 Pieces of Eight.

On Saturday the first of February, arriv'd the long wish'd for Vessel, with Provisions for the Fleet, being 1700 Quintals, or a hundred Weight of Bisket; six hundred Load of Meal, Fish and other necessaries for the Galeons.

Tuesday 4th, I went to the Hermitage of S. James, a Church built by the Bishop within the Walls of the City, for his own particular Devotion, well adorn'd, and with an Apartment for him to retire to sometimes. Wednesday 5th, I saw the Castle of the Point, which is very small, and has four Bastions. Monday 10th, going to visit the Castellan D. Antony de Roxas, I had the opportunity of seeing the Castle they call the Fort. Its Compass is small, but it has four good Bastions, and a Platform towards the Mouth of the Port, well furnish'd with Brass Cannon.

The Fort

Sunday 16th, the Admiral made Proclamation by Sound of Trumpet, That the Fleet should Sail on the 1st of the next Month, and that all Persons must be aboard on the 8th. Tuesday 18th, by his Order it was Prohibited upon Pain of Death for any Boat to go out of the Harbour, for fear the Enemy should have notice that the Galeons were ready to Sail; notwithstanding the Deputies of the Company of Sevil, not liking the Admiral, us'd all means to obstruct his Sailing. News had been brought before from Jamaica of the Conclusion of the Peace with France, and a Vessel from the Canary-Islands brought the Confirmation of it.

There are two particular Sorts of Fruit at Havana, which do not grow elsewhere. One is like a Hart, call'd Guanavana, Green without, and has some thorny Prickles; within made up of white Morfels of an unpleasant Taste, between Sweet and Sour, with some Stones. The Tree is as big as that which bears the Anonas. The other Sort call'd Camito, is exactly like an Orange on the outside, and within has a white and red Pulp of a sweet Taste. The Tree is as tall as a Pear-Tree, the Leaf on the one side is Green, and on the other of a Cinnamon-Colour. Of European Fruit there grow Quinces, Oranges, Lemmons, Pomgranates and other sorts.

Fruit of Havana.

The Mountains are full of Wild-Boars, Cows, Horses and Mules. Of Birds there are abundance, especially Parrots and Partridges, bigger than Quails, with blew Heads; and as for those that are fit for the Cage there is great plenty of those they call Chambergos.

Birds and Beasts

Friday 21st, there arriv'd a Bark from Matacumbe, a small Island on the Coast of Florida, with five Franciscans, who in November before had been sent for by the Cacique Charles, as Missioners; and were

Gemelli.
1699.

since expell'd Naked, for offering out of an ill tim'd Zeal, to make a Proceſſion in the Night before the Temple of the Indian Idolaters; who fled at firſt, but then came again Arm'd, and abus'd the Fryars, driving them out of their Country; ſo that they were forced to go away half Naked to Matacumbe, a Territory of Christian Indians.

“ Saturday 22d, the Captain of the Maeftranzas, that is, of the ſeveral Trades belonging to the Building of Ships, repreſented to the Admiral, That the Ships being higher Built than Men of War, it would be ſending of them to be loſt if they went out under-loaded, as the Deputies intended to do. Hereupon on Sunday 23d, there was a Council held of all the Sea-Officers, where they concluded that the Hold muſt be well ſtow'd, that the Veſſels might lie lower in the Water; a Determination of Judges who ſpoke for their own Intereſt; but that could not be approv'd of by the Council of the Indies, which had order'd that the Galeons ſhould not be loaded with Merchandize. The Admiral therefore, having on Munday 24th acquainted the Captains of the Galcons, and the Deputies of the Merchants, That it was convenient for the King's Service (or rather for their own) that the Galeons ſhould be more loaded, it began to be very diligently put in Execution on Tueſ- day 25th, the time appointed for ſailing drawing near.

Monday 3d of March, I ſaw the Caſtle Caſtle del Morro, built upon a Rock, on the left of the Mouth of the Harbour, which it defends with a Platform of 11 Pieces of Cannon, call'd the Apoſtles, which lie level with the Water; there are in all about 55 Guns in the Caſtle. The Ditch about it is cut out of the Rock and fill'd by the Sea. Abundance of the Birds they call Cardinals, being brought over from Florida, I ſaw the People belonging to the Galeon give ten pieces of Eight a piece for ſome of them, and fix for the worſt. Upon Computation they ſaid there had been 18000 Pieces of Eight laid out upon thoſe fooliſh Birds, notwithstanding the deplorable loſs of Cartagena, and the expenſive delay of keeping the Fleet three Years in America. Saturday 8th, Proclamation was made forbidding any that belong'd to the Fleet to ſtay in Havana upon pain of Death; and in the Evening a Cannon was fir'd to warn all Aboard.

D. Ferdinand Chacon having gencroſly given me my Paſſage gratis aboard his Galeon, he ſent on Sunday 9th for my Equipage. Monday 10th, ſeveral Grum-mets, who had receiv'd their Pay, ran away. Tueſday 11th, I took Leave of my Friends, and provided Sweetmeats for my Voyage.

C H A P. IX.

The Author's Voyage from Havana to Cadiz.

THE Fleet being under Sail I went aboard on Wednesday 12th in the Afternoon. Thursday 13th, the warning Piece being fir'd, all the Galeons weigh'd Anchor again, and the Admiral by Sun-riſing made way out of the Harbour. She touch'd upon ſome Flat, and it coſt time to get her off. Being out of the Harbour ſhe ſaluted the Caſtle del Morro with ſeven Guns. The Merchant Ships follow'd, and then our Galeon, which ſaluted that they call the Fort with ſeven Guns, and was answer'd with fix, and then the Caſtle del Morro with fix and was answer'd with the ſame number. We coaſted along all Day to give the Vice-Admiral and the Ship call'd Garai time to come up with us. *At Night it blew a Storm, which oblig'd us to lie upon a Tack.

Friday 14th, we were 20 Leagues from Havana, but the two aforemention'd

Galeons not appearing, we ſtood back again, and meeting the Garai, underſtood ſhe came out with the Vice-Admiral, but had parted in the Storm, which made us ſtand our Courſe again. A Woman being found Aboard in Mans Cloaths, and there being no poſſibility of ſetting her aſhore; ſhe was left among the other Women.

Saturday 15th, the Wind Eaſt, we ſteer'd N. N. E. the Lat. 23 deg. 40 min. Sunday 16, the Wind N. W. we ſteer'd N. E. and then N. N. E. Lat. 25 deg. which is the Latitude of the Point call'd Cabeza de los Martyres and Entrance of the Channel of Bahama, form'd by the aforeſaid Point and los Cayos, or little Iſlands. In this Place the Galeons the Year before were in ſuch a terrible Storm, tho' it was in September, that they had all like to have been loſt, ſome of them return'd to Havana Unmaſted, and others had much much adoe to clear the Water with several Pumps. About Evening, we discover'd the small Islands de los Caimanes. The Wind came to East, which made us steer N. N. E. and then North. Monday 17th, the Wind S. E. we steer'd the same Course. The lat. 26 deg. 30 min.

Gemelli.
1698.

At Night it blew hard, and fiercer on Tuesday 18th, at N. N. E. Lat. 27 deg. 40 min. The Night was as uneasy as the last. The Wind being N. E. on Wednesday 19, we steer'd N. N. W. and coming about at Noon to E. N. E. we alter'd our Course to N. The Lat. was found to be 28 deg. wherefore the Admiral gave notice by firing a Gun, that we were out of the Channel. This Channel being 80 Leagues in length, and between 18 and 20 in breadth, is very Dangerous by reason of the violence of the Current, and the great number of Islands about it, which is the cause that many Ships have been lost, believing they were out of it. When the Wind is fair, they run through it in little above 24 Hours; but it is absolutely impossible for Ships bound for the Indies, by reason of the Force of the Current.

Being come into the Golf de las Yeguas, or of Mares, we steer'd N. and be E. Before Sun-set, a Ship made a Sign that they saw Land, which made all sound, and they found first 25, and 30 Fadome. Thursday 20th, the Wind S. E. we steer'd N. E. the Weather being bad because of the Equinox. Friday 21st, we steer'd E. and by N. the Wind blowing hard at South, which parted our Ships, so that on Saturday 22d, of twelve, that we were at first, only 7 were to be seen. The lat. 28 deg. 30 min. because we had made but little way. Sunday 23d, the Wind blew hard at N. which made us run E. and by S. We were inform'd by one of the seven Vessels, that the Admiral with the rest of the Ships after the Storm, had steer'd N. E. whereupon our Galeon commanded as Admiral, lat. 29 deg. 45 min. The Wind being contrary, made us lye by all Night, and before Noon on Monday 24th, to run E. N. E. the Wind at S. E. Tuesday 15th, held on the same Course.

Wednesday 26th, the Wind came to S. W. yet we held the same Course, to get more to Northward; the lat. 31 deg. 20 min. At Night we made good way; but Thursday 27th, before Noon we were quite becalm'd.

Having lost sight of two Merchants Ships, our Captain D. Ferdinand Chacon, call'd the other Captains aboard him, and order'd them to follow his Flag, set up on the Mizzen, the Admiral, and Vice-Admiral, being gone from us, because some danger was fear'd on the Coast of Portugal, and appointed the best of the Merchants to Command as Vice-Admiral, since ours acted as Admiral, and this notwithstanding all Ships at Havana, have their Instructions how to Sail, in case they should be parted. The lat. 31. deg. 50. min. Saturday 29th, we sail'd E. N. E. the Wind S. S. E. Sunday 30th, steer'd E. and by N. and then E. N. E. the Wind at S. the lat. 33 deg.
Vol. IV.

Being near the Bermudas, which lye in 32 deg. 30 min. and 460 Leagues from Havana, the Souldiers and Gunners began to be exercis'd, for fear of meeting any Enemy. The Island Bermuda belongs to the English, is said to be very low, ten Leagues in length, and Fruitful, we left it to the Southward. Monday 31st, steer'd E. and by N. the Wind S. W. the lat. 33 deg. 40 min.

Tuesday the first of April, we held the same Course; the lat. 34 deg. 15 min. Wednesday 2d, the Wind at N. and the Vice-Admiral's Mast failing, we lay by for him to repair it. The Cold was very sharp, which made some Gentlemen, who were clad in Silk, and had no Cloaks, fare but hardly. The lat. being found to be 34 deg. 32 min. we steer'd E. and at Night the Wind failing us S.

Thursday 3d, the Wind being E. S. E. we steer'd N. E. and by E. and then E. N. E. Friday 4th, we made good way with the same Wind, and found the lat. 34 deg. 40 min. At Night the Wind blew hard, and the Sea beating in at the Portholes, abundance of Goods were wet. Sunday 6th, the Wind at N. W. and then at N. we steer'd E. N. E.; the lat. 35 deg. 40 min. At Night our Galeon gave notice to the rest, that he alter'd his Course, by reason of the contrary Wind; but it blowing fresh on Monday 7th, at S. we steer'd the same Course as before, as we did Tuesday 8th. Wednesday 9th, the Wind continuing, we sail'd E. and by N. the lat. 37 deg. 10 min.

Thursday 10th, we having notice by a Gun fir'd, that a Sail was seen; our Galeon made towards her, and found her Dutch, bound home from Chirazan. The lat. 37 deg. 30 min. we steer'd the same Course with the Wind at S. W. At Night we made much way, and the same on Friday 11th, the Wind being fair. Gemelli. Saturday 12th, before Day the Wind 1698. blew hard at S. then came to N. W. and was a great Storm at Night.

Sunday 13th, the Merchants endeavour'd to persuade Captain Chacon, that he might safely deviate from the King's Orders, which were to run up to 42 deg. of lat. since there was a Peace with France; and therefore the reason why that Course was appointed, had ceas'd; and the rather because the Merchant Ships being disabled, could not follow the Galeon in that Latitude, where the Storms are more violent. All the Pilots and Captains being consulted upon the Matter, it was agreed in favour of the Merchants, not to exceed 40 degrees of lat. about the Islands Cuervo, and Flores. Our lat. then was 39 deg. 10 min. Monday 14th, the lat. 39 deg. 11 min. we were all day becalm'd, as also on Tuesday 15th, till Afternoon; when the Wind came up at S. S. E. and we steer'd E. Wednesday 16th, in the Morning we ran E. with the Wind at S. but in the Afternoon lay by, by reason of the contrary Wind; as we did on Thursday 17th. Friday 18th, steer'd E. the Wind S. the lat. 39 deg. 30 min. Saturday 19th, held the same Course, with the Wind at S. S. E. Sunday 20th, kept upon the same Line with little Wind, the lat. 39 deg. 40. min. Monday 21st, ran E. and by N. the Wind S. the lat. 40 deg. 5 min. Tuesday 22d, the same Wind and Course. We first hear'd a Gun, and then saw the Auntient set up at the Stern of a Ship, that had made a-head to discover Land, which caus'd great Joy. Yet we could not make near to Land by reason of the Calm; nor on Tuesday 23d, because the Wind was contrary, wherefore we lay by, in sight of the Islands of Cuervo, and Flores, 480 Leagues distant from the Bermudas. That of Cuervo is not inhabited, but serves to graze the Cattle of the Portugueses, who live in the Island of Flores, which is no bigger, but more Fruitful. We being to pass thro' a Channel three Leagues in breadth, made by the two Islands, could not advance a Step all Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, the 24th, 25th, and 26th. This last day before Noon, we discovered a Sail, which prov'd to be an English Ship, bound for Jamaica, and confirm'd the News of the Peace. All the rest of the day, and Sunday 27th, we lay still in the lat. of 41 deg. At Night we steer'd S. and so on Monday 28th, till we came to 40 deg. 5 min. lat. Then we lay still without stirring, Tuesday 29th, and Wednesday 30th.

Thursday the first of May, the Wind blowing very hard, we lower'd our Main-top-mast. Friday the 2d, upon Observation, we found we were driving back against our Wills, towards the Indies, by reason of the contrary Wind, caus'd as the Pilots would have it by the last Quarter of the Moon. The same Wind blowing harder on Saturday the 3d, and not being able to lye by, we let it drive us to the S. W. What was a violent Wind before, grew up into a dreadful Storm; so that the Waves broke over the Galeon, and we being in danger of Perishing, there were nothing but Prayers, Sighs, and Weeping; but it soon pass'd over. Sunday 4th, tho' the Wind was abated, still it blew hard against us, which made us steer S. having upon Observation found the lat. 40 deg. 5 min. All the Ships were scatter'd in the Storm; and therefore we lay by for them, and to keep our Latitude. The Rain at Night laid the E. S. E. Wind, which had plagu'd us for 15 days; yet tho' the Wind blew fair at S. W. we did not Sail till Monday 5th, because of the Ships that were stray'd. Having discover'd 5 of them, we hoisted the Top-sail, and steer'd E. Being come near one another, we understood that the Vessel call'd the Nazarene, was cast away. They told us that being near to sink, because four Pumps could not keep her above Water, she call'd for help, and two other Ships making up to her, sav'd the Men and Money, and then fir'd her. God be Prais'd, I went not aboard her, as I had design'd.

We steer'd E. with the Wind at S. W. on Tuesday 6th, but that failing us at Night, and coming to South on Wednesday 7th, we ran E. and by N. A great shower of Rain in the Night, quite laid the Wind. Thursday 8th, we again discover'd the Islands of Cuervo and Flores, from which we had been drove a hundred Leagues, and holding on our Course S. E. and then E. found our selves in the self same place, where we had been 15 days before. Being now so near Europe, I began to find my self better, of the Flux that had troubled me five Years, caus'd by the mighty heat I had endur'd. The lat. upon Observation, was found to be 40 deg. 9 min. We were becalm'd till Midnight; but Friday 9th, we made way with the Wind at N. and

and again at E. S. E. At Night for fear of Land, we steer'd N. and by E. being in the lat. 39 deg. 50 min. Saturday 10th, steer'd S. S. E. the Wind being E. About Noon we discover'd the Island of Fayal, which they say is very Fruitful; the lat. 39 deg. 15 min. We coasted along the South side of the Island, because we could not on the North side, the Wind being contrary. After Mid-night we lay by, for fear of being a-ground. Sunday 11th, making much way towards E. S. E. with the Wind at N. E. we pass'd by the Island Pico, belonging to the King of Portugal, well inhabited, and Fruitful in Wheat, and several sorts of European Fruit. We were becalm'd at Night. Monday 12th, the Wind coming up at North, we steer'd E. and by S. and afterwards E. S. E. Tuesday 13th, sail'd E. and then E. S. E. the Wind coming to N. E. the lat. 37 deg. 20. min. Wednesday 14th, steer'd E. S. E. and E. finding the lat. to be 36 deg. 56 min. Thursday 15th, we made little way upon the same Point, the Wind being Northerly, and lay by at Night, because the Wind was contrary. Friday 16th, at break of day, we saw two English Men of War among us, bound against the Salle Pyrates. We lay by the lat. 35 deg. 30 min. Saturday 17th, we steer'd N. E. the Wind being E. S. E. and found the lat. 35 deg. 36 min. We made but little way, and Sunday 18th, the Wind quite fell, which gave opportunity for a Procession to be made aboard, and presently after it the Wind blew fair at S. which carry'd us E. N. E. Monday 19th, the Wind S. W. we steer'd E. N. E. to recover the lost Latitude, and because we made good way, the Captain recall'd the Order he had given of shortning the Mens allowance of Bisket, to six Ounces a day; the lat. 36 deg. About Midnight, the Man at the Helm cry'd out, that the Rudder touch'd ground, which put all into a great fright. Some said we were upon the Flats, but the Pilots deny'd it, saying the Flats were 52 Leagues, beyond the Island of St. Mary. Others said it had been an Earthquake, others that we had pass'd over a Whale, as she lay asleep; but hearing that the same had hapned to the other Ships, it confirm'd the Opinion of the Earthquake.

Tuesday 20th, it rain'd, and then the Wind came to N. W. and we steer'd E. N. E. At Night it blew a Storm, which made us lye under a Fore-sail, and it lasted till Wednesday 21st. After that we were becalm'd, and then drove forward by a strong S. W. gale. At Night it blew S. S. E. and we steer'd E. and by N. Thursday 22d, we steer'd E. N. E. the lat. 37 deg. 2 min. Friday 23d, we lay athwart the Wind without any Cloath abroad, because the Wind was contrary. The Pilots disputed about the distance from Land, and the most favourable Opinion was, that we were 50 Leagues from Cape St. Vincent. We continu'd in the same Posture, till Saturday 24th, at Noon; the lat. 37 deg. 40 min. afterwards we steer'd S. and by E. rather than lye always in the same place. Sunday 25th, the Order began to be put in Execution, to give every Man 6 Ounces of Bisket a Day, with a small measure of Water, which rather increas'd, than quench'd Thirst. At Night it pleas'd God to show his Mercy on us, sending a N. E. Wind which allow'd us to steer E. S. E. and Monday 26th, in the Morning we could lye E. and by S. the lat. 37 deg. 15 min. The same Course was held at Night, and Tuesday 27th till Noon; when finding the lat. 36 deg. 50 min. we steer'd E. the Pilot reckoning we were forty Leagues from Cape St. Vincent, and his Mate but thirty.

That Night, and all Wednesday 28th, we sail'd E. and by N. the Wind at N. N. W. a small Vessel keeping a-head and Sounding all the way, the lat. 36 deg. 40 min. Two hours before Sunset, we discover'd a small Ship, which told us she was French bound from Brest to the Island Madera. Soon after we saw four Vessels more, standing the same Course we did, whereupon our Captain caus'd the Guns (being about 50 Brass pieces) to be made ready, and the Deck to be clear'd of all Cabbins and other Encumbrance. There was much Confusion in stowing so many Chests, and Bundels, as lay about; then he furnish'd all Persons with Arms and Ammunition, and assign'd every Man his Post. At Night he kept Lights between Decks, and all his Crew in a readiness, having hear'd 5 Guns fir'd one after another, which gave Notice that the four Ships were close a Stern of us. All things being in Order, we expected the five Ships under our Convoy, and then held on our Course.

Thursday 29th, we sail'd E. and by N. and then E. N. E. the Wind at N. W. We understood those Ships were Friends, bound from the North for Cadix. No Observation was taken. Before Night we saw three Ships, which again put our Gemell.

1698.

we saw three Ships, which again put our Gemell.
1698. Galeon into an Alarm; but Friday 30th, being come nearer we found one of them was our Admiral, and the other two the Galcons of Ovilla, and Garay parted from us in the Storm above two Months before. The Merchant Ships saluted them with 5 Guns, were answer'd with 3, and return'd the like Number, then the Admiral gave one, and the Merchants did the same. We were inform'd that the Admiral coming out of the Channel of Bahama sprung her Fore-mast, and Main-top-mast, and had her Sprit-sail carry'd into the Sea by the violence of the Wind, and therefore had lain by eight Days to refit, being almost ready to return unto the Indies. We steer'd E. the Wind at W. the lat. 36 deg. 35 min. Saturday 30th, sail'd E. and then E. and by N. the Wind N. Finding the lat. upon Observation 36 deg. 11 min. and perceiving the Current had cast us off from 36 deg. 30 min. the lat. of Cadiz, we steer'd at Night E. N. E.

Sunday the 1st of June, when, according to the Pilot's Account, we thought our selves near Land, we saw nothing of it. We found the lat. 36 deg. 14 min. and soon after a Ship fir'd a Gun to give Notice they saw Land, which was very joyful News to us. We perceiv'd the Current set S. E. since we had got but three Minutes to Northward. Monday 2d, we could not approach the Land by reason of the contrary Wind, which was E. and therefore we steer'd N. We made little way that Night, and Tuesday 3d, were becalm'd, but before Noon the Wind came up at S. and set us forward for the Shore. The best was, that in three Days, nine Pilots, could not decide what Land it was, or how far from Cadiz, tho' it was their native Soil. Then we discover'd a Sail, which being call'd in by a Slat from the Admiral put up French Colours, and answer'd with a Gun. Then the French Man saluted with seven, and the Admiral answer'd with five. The French Captain presented the Admiral with some Refreshment, saying, he came out of Cadiz the Day before on purpose to meet him; because he was hourly expected in the City. He added he had that Morning spoke with the Captain of a Turkish Ship of fifty Guns, of whom he understood there were two more at Cape St. Vincent. The French Ship bore us Company (having 36 Guns) we steering E. and by N. and then E. N. E. Two Messengers were sent before in the Tender, with two Packets, one for the King, the other for the India House. We held on our Course towards Land E. N. E. and after Mid-night began to Sound, as is usual, to find out on what part of the Coast of Cadiz we were. Wednesday 4th, steer'd first E. N. E. and then S. E. to get into the Bay of Cadiz. We left the Land of Rota belonging to the Duke of Arcos on the left, and abundance of Ships that lay at Anchor in the Bay. At last, God be prais'd, we came to an Anchor near the Putales, having sail'd 460 Leagues from Bermudas, and 1300 from Havana in 84 Days. All Cadiz rejoic'd, forgetting the loss of several Millions by the Sacking of Carthage; not only the Houses, but the Steeples being adorn'd with Colours set up; and all the Shore cover'd with a Multitude of People come down to see us, the Bells throughout all the City Ringing to Eccho the People's Joy. Before the Anchors were dropt I went ashore in a Boat, leaving all my Equipage behind; knowing it could not be carry'd off till the Indulto was settled, which is a Composition for the King's Duties. I took a Room in an Inn to recover my self after my past Sufferings.

C H A P. X.

The Description of the Island and City of Cadiz, and an Account of what the Author saw during his Abode there.

Cadiz described.

THE Island of Cadiz was first call'd Juno's Island, on Account of a Temple there dedicated to her; after that it had the Name of Gadir, and Gades, and lastly corruptly came to be call'd Cadiz. The City is seated to the Northward of the Streight of Gibraltar, in 36 deg. 30 min. Latitude. The Port may be said to be one of the most frequented in Europe; it being a Place where Ships touch going to, or returning from the Levant, from the Coast of Africa, the East and West Indies, and those of the Streights bound into the Ocean. The City is in an Island; for on the East side, that is, towards the Continent,

Gemelli. 1699. W tinent, it has a Channel that joyns the Waters of the Bay with those of the main Ocean, over which is a most beautiful Bridge. Its shape is Irregular, the length East and West, and the breadth North and South; yet not above half a League in compass, and that not all enclos'd with a Wall. Tho' small, it is vastly Rich, and the Buildings, as well Publick as Private not inferior to many in Europe, but the Streets are ill shap'd and crooked. The Island, tho' but three Miles in length, is very plentiful, and supply'd with all sorts of Flesh, Fish, and Fruit, and most delicious Bread; all brought from the neighbouring Villages, but at a dear Rate; so that a Man cannot live under a-piece of Eight a Day.

Forts.

On the East side of it is a small Castle call'd St. Catherine; and two Forts call'd los Puntales upon the Bay; one of them on the Island Mata Gorda; the other near Puerto Real, or Port Royal, both of them encompass'd with Water. The Bay is about eight Leagues in compass, and deep enough every where; but the Dwellings all about, and the great number of Ships, that look like a Wood, make it very Delightful to behold.

The Bay.

D. Francis Gutierrez de los Rios y Cordova, Count of Fernan Nunnez entertain'd me nobly on Monday 9th, to hear me give an Account of my Travels, and engag'd me to make use of his Table during my Stay. Being there at Dinner on Tuesday 10th, News was brought us of the Arrival of the Tender belonging to the Galeons, with the News, That the Vice-Admiral was cast away five Leagues from Havana, through the Fault of the Pilot, who was fled, who lay by on the Coast for the Boat that was behind, and unadvisedly fell into four or five Fathom Water. This Account turn'd all the Joy of the People of Cadiz into Mourning, they having 12 Millions Aboard; there was hopes of recovering the Plate, being in such shoal Water, but the Goods were all spoil'd. I had us'd all Endeavours to come Aboard that Ship, but it pleas'd God for my Good, I did not prevail. Wednesday 18th, the Count carry'd me with him in his Boat to Port St. Mary, 2 Leagues from Cadiz. This Place and the Country about it belongs, to the Duke of Medina-celi. It is much larger than Cadiz, the Streets handsomer, as are also the great Houses. Lying West of the Bay of Cadiz upon an inlet of the Sea that runs two Leagues up the Country, to the Monastery of Carthusians, call'd Cartuja de Xeres, it is inhabited by very rich Merchants. Friday 20th, the Count carry'd me Aboard Monsieur Coetlogon, who commanded ten French-Men of War, and receiv'd us very Honourably, treating the Company with Coffee and Tea, which the Spaniards did not like. Thence we went out as far as the Puntales to see a Vessel come from the West-Indies, which to my great Satisfaction, as having some Concern Aboard, we found to be that call'd Espannoleta, commanded by John de la Vaca, which was thought to be lost, and worth half a Million. There we were inform'd that another small Vessel call'd the Sevillano was put into St. Lucar, they having been both 31 Days at Fayal, by reason of the contrary Winds.

D. Thomas Eminente having seen the Rarities I brought, presented me with a Mineral Stone, in which was a large Emerald, that I might add it to the rest of my Curiosities; a Generosity unusual in these Days, for which I own my self extremely oblig'd. The following Days I spent in taking Leave of my Friends, being to depart soon, as will appear in the next Book.

A Voyage round the World by Dr. John Francis Gemelli Careri. Part IV.

Containing the most Remarkable Things he saw in
N E W S P A I N.

B O O K IV.

C H A P. I.

An Account of what is most Remarkable in the City of Sevil, and the Author's Journey to Madrid.

Gemelli.
1699.

ON Wednesday the 2d of July, I set out for Port St. Mary, and took up my Lodging at the Flemmings Inn, who gave good Entertainment for nine Royals a Day; but I could have fasted all Day to hear him talk of his Quality. He drew out a greasy Parchment which he said was a Grant from King Philip the Fourth, and had cost him four Pistoles. But a Dutch Captain of a Ship made him Mad, ridiculing him, and saying, the Arms on the Parchment were none of his; and that, as he had bought it of some Sharper, so he cry'd it up to Sell it him for a piece of Eight.

Having hir'd a Calash upon Thursday 3d, for 12 Royals, I went in it through a well cultivated Country three Leagues to St. Lucar de Barrameda, a Town bigger than Cadiz, seated on the left-hand Bank of the River Guadalquivir, which makes it abound in all Things, and belonging to the Duke of Medina Sidonia. Here I took Boat, before Sun-set, and having run up about six Leagues with Wind and Tide, till about Mid-night, the Watermen cast Anchor, and we lay there the remaining part of the Night. Friday 4th, the Tide serving three Hours after Sun-rising, we went on again. This River, tho' winding, is smooth, and about 100 Paces over. At Night we came to a Village call'd la Puebla; and thence to Corea belonging to the King, not far from the other, both of them on the right side of the River, and 12 Leagues from St. Lucar. Two Leagues farther we came to Gelves, a Village belonging to the Duke of Veraguas, where we anchor'd, because the Tide was Ebb, and against us. About two in the Morning we advanced again with the Flood; so that an Hour before Day we anchor'd at the Golden Tower, where I was forced to give the Officers something that they might not Search my Trunks.

Saturday 5th, we got into Sevil, thro' the Gate of the Arsenal, where I gave the Officers half a piece of Eight to pass my Goods. Andrew Castagnola, a Genoese, courteously receiv'd me in his House, and after Dinner we went in a Coach and four Horses to take the Air in the Alameda. Here are long rows of Trees, and in the midst of them a Fountain, which serves to Water the Place every Night, and to fill the Trenches about it. At the Entrance into this Place there are two high, and ancient Pillars, with two Statues on them much impair'd with Age, one of which they say represents Hercules, and the other Julus Caesar; it is not known whether they were erected by the Romans, and I doubt of it very much, because of the Words Plus Ultra carv'd on them; unless perhaps they were not cut when the Pillars were erected.

The Alameda.

Sevil is seated in a Plain, in the Latitude of 37 Degrees, and 20 Minutes. It is almost round, and not much less than two Leagues in compass; so Populous that it contains about 42 Monasteries of Religious Men, and 36 Nunneries, and 12 Hospitals, besides the Parish Churches; and all those good Structures, as are the Palaces, and the Houses of the Citizens. But the Streets are not pav'd, narrow, crooked, and much like those of the Moorish Towns, which makes them very Inconvenient in Summer for Dust, and in Winter for Dirt, Dirt, besides their being so Intricate that Gemelli. a Stranger easily loses himself. There are 14 Gates in its low Walls; the most Remarkable of which is that of Xeres, at which King Ferdinand made his Entry, when he took it from the Moors. The Suburbs are those of St. Bernard, St. Benedict, St. Roch, Tablada, la Fuente del Arcobisipo, and others. On the right side of the River is another little City, call'd Triana, join'd to Sevil by a wooden Bridge. There is nothing in it Remarkable, but a Monastery of Carthusians, and the Palace and Prisons of the Inquisition. Sevil is nothing inferior to Madrid for bigness, or number of Inhabitants. The Men are handsomer than the Women, but very Proud.

Monday 6th, about Evening we went to see the Alcazar, or Palace of the Moorish Kings. About the first Court, which is large, are the Dwellings that serv'd for the Family; whence passing through a Portico supported by 32 small Marble Pillars, where they say was the King's Table, they go to the Baths. Then we came into the second Court, about which there are noble Apartments, in the lower Floor, which now serve for an Archive; and those above for the Governor of the City's Habitation; they all look Majestick, notwithstanding the carv'd Work, and Gilding appears to be made by a barbarous Hand. In the void Place about the Baths there are four squares of Orange-Trees, made as they say for the Diversion of Queen Mary de Padilla, Wife to King Peter, surnam'd the Cruel, who often us'd to Resort thither. Opposite to them is the great Gate that led to the Apartments. First there is a long Room or Gallery, which leads into such another, and that to a good handsome Chamber, out of which they go down to the lower Apartments. Here is a fine Court, in the nature of a Cloister, with 52 Marble Pillars, and about it seven State Rooms after the Moorish Fashion, curiously adorn'd with carv'd Work; what deserves to be particularly observ'd is a Cupula, and a State-Room, where perhaps the Royal Throne stood. The Work shews it was begun by the Moors, and finish'd and improv'd by the Spaniards. In the second Gallery there is an Iron Gate which leads first into a Square, in which is a Fish-Pond, or great Basou, with a Statue pouring out Water at several Parts; then there is a Way on the Right down two pair of Stairs into two Squares encompass'd with high and thick Mirtle-Trees. Here there are several Statues, clad in that same Green, and representing Musicians, with several sorts of Instruments in their Hands; on the Ground there are abundance of little Holes for Water to gush out to wash People as they go by. Further on still upon the same Level, on the right Hand there are two other Squares of Mirtle-Trees, artificially cut. Hence we pass'd into another wall'd Place, in which there are eight Squares with several Plants, about them good Hedge-Rows of Mirtle, and in the middle line Allies to Walk. There are two Fountains, one close to the Wall curiously wrought, the other under an Arch, with several Figures of Beasts and Men, one of them sounding a Trumpet. At the end of the Alley opposite to this Arch, I have spoke of, is a Door leading to a Fountain in Rock-Work, which was going to Ruin, for want of looking after; about it there are thick Squares of Mirtle. Going through another Door opposite to it is a little Summer-House cover'd with Porcellane, but ill order'd, and by it another Basou, with a Statue pouring out Water. Here are several Plats of Roses, and other Flowers. Adjoyning to this is another Orange and Lemmon Garden; and another of Greens parted by a high Wall. In this Place there are two rows of Arches, one upon another, with Iron gilt Balconies. All hitherto describ'd is enclos'd with high Walls, with square Towers at convenient distances.

Vol. IV.

Monday 7th, going about to view the City, I saw the Monastery of St. Paul of the Dominicans, not yet finish'd; the Plan is large, has great Pillars, which are to support the Arches of Dormitories for 150 Fathers. The Church is large, and has three Isles. Thence we went to the Franciscans, a Monastery remarkable, not for Beauty, but for Bigness, having several Cloisters, with a great number of Cells for 200 Friars. The Noviceship stands a-part in an Angle of the Orchard. The Church is not very big, but has many Chappels about it, which are like so many little Churches, especially those of the Biscainers, and Portugueses. On the side of the Church is a round Room, hung with Crimson Velvet, where the 24 Regidores, who govern'd the City meet with the Alcades and Jurados, who oppose them in such Things as are not convenient. The first of these sit upon Benches made fast on high about the Room; the others on Benches cover'd with Leather standing on the Floor; there is such another Room

Dominicans

Franciscans

D d d d

Gemelli.
1699.
*Mercenari-
ans.*

above Stairs for Winter. The Church of the Mercenarians, whither we went next, tho' small, is very beautiful; and the Monastery spacious with pleasant Cloisters adorn'd with Marble Pillars. This was the first built in Sevil, after Expelling the Moors in the Year 1249.

The Change.

Thence I went to the Lonja, otherwise call'd Casa de Comercio de la India, which is the Exchange; which is a large Structure arch'd and supported by Pillars of hard Stone. Here a Prior and two Consuls Administer Justice to Merchants under a Canopy in a stately Hall; and to Assess, and receive the Indulto the King demands upon the arrival of Plate Fleets; as also the Duties for other Expences. That Year, notwithstanding the Loss sustain'd at Carthagena, the Merchants were oblig'd to pay three Millions and a half at Portabelo, and the Consuls endeavour'd to make them pay a greater Sum.

*Archbi-
shop's Palace.*

Then we saw the Archbishop's Palace of an ordinary Structure. It has two Courts, and large Apartments, both above and below, fit for so great an Archbishop, whose Revenue amounts to 120000 pieces of Eight. The finest thing above Stairs is the Oratory; and in the Sacristy the rich Vestments, adorn'd with Gold, and artificially laid up in small Drawers.

Cathedral

The Cathedral, which is near the House, and the Model of all the Cathedrals in the Indies, may be call'd another St. Peter's at Rome, as well for its largeness, as because the Work about it is not yet finish'd after so many Years, being such as requires some Ages. A Square of Orange-trees, encompass'd with half Pillars with Iron Chains, leads to one of the five Gates on the sides of the Church, besides the three in the Front, which is not yet finish'd. This Church is about fifty Paces in length within, and proportionably broad, having five Isles, and handsome Pillars. It has 75 Altars, but the great one is of an incomparable Structure, being a Semicircle, with a way to it from the Choir, enclos'd with gilt Iron Banisters. They told me the Paschal Candle set up there on Holy Saturday, weighs 625 Pounds. The Choir is adorn'd with excellent Carving, and two good Organs. In the Chappel where the Body of the Holy King Ferdinand lies, on the one side is the Tomb of King Alphonso, who was chosen Emperor, and on the other that of Queen Beatrix. On the Tomb of D. Ferdinand Columbus, the Son of Christopher Columbus, the first Discoverer of America, are these Words.

A Castilla, y a Leon, Nuevo Mundo dio Colon.

That is, Columbas gave a new World to the Crowns of Castile and Leon. The divine Service is here perform'd by 95 Chapter Men, besides inferior Priests, Servants and Musicians, to the Number in all of 250, maintain'd according to their Quality with a Revenue of 80000 pieces of Eight. In the Sacristy, besides the Ornament of curious Carving and Painting, and precious Relicks, is a Silver Tabernacle, weighing 2650 Pounds; and a Brass Tenebra Candlestick of 2000 Pound, which they told me cost 30000 pieces of Eight, because of its excellent Workmanship. The Musick Books for the Service of the Choir cost 80000 pieces of Eight. They still shew the Key the Moorish King deliver'd to King Ferdinand upon the Surrender of the City. Adjoyning to the Sacristy is the Room before the Chapter, adorn'd with half Reliefs of Marble made by an excellent Hand. The Place where the Chapter meets is round, and arch'd, all hung with Crimson Velvet. On the side of the Church is the Oratory, for keeping the Blessed Sacrament to carry to the Sick. There are in it eleven Altars, and a good Sacristy, all adorn'd with fine Marble Statues of half Relief. This Oratory is serv'd by four Curates. The Tower of the Church is Majestick enough, Square, made of solid Stone curiously Wrought, and grows narrower still as it rises, being above 200 Geometrical Feet in height. Within it the Stairs are such that a Man may ride a Horse up to the Belfry, where there are 25 Bells, Great, and Small, and there are several Rooms for Servants. On the top of it stands a Statue of gilt Brass call'd la Giralda, which turns with the Wind like a Weathercock.

Next I went to see the House of the Venerables, or for Priests to retire to, which was then Building at a vast Expence. The Church is well enough adorn'd with gilt Images, and sundry Pictures; and the Monastery has a stately Cloister, with Marble Pillars. Without the City I saw the Hospital of the Charity. The House is well Built and Large, and there are good Beds in the Galleries. The Church tho' small, and but with 5 Altars, is remarkable for good Painting. Here I saw a fine Silver Tabernacle.

The House of St. Elmo is the Place where Boys are taken in to be Instructed in the Art of Navigation, there being a Ship in the middle of the Court, and then they are sent to the Indies. When they

Gemelli. they return, the Governors of the House receive them, and recover their Wages of the King, or Traders, as long as they will continue to live in that House, which is very large.

Aqueduct. Next, we walk'd about the Walls, as far as the Aqueduct, which, tho' Built, as they told me by the Romans, still conveys the Water to the City. Thence we went to the Prado, or Plain of St. Justa, and St. Rufina, the Protectresses of Sevil, because they suffer'd Martyrdom there, and then entred the City again at the Gate of Carmona. By the way I saw the Palace Built by the Duke of Alcala, when he return'd from his Travels, after the Model of Pilat's Palace shown at Jerusalem.

Courts. Tuesday 8th, I saw the Tribunals, and passing through a handsome Court, beset with beautiful Columns, with a good Fountain in the middle, found three Halls, two for Civil Causes, in each of which four Oydores or Judges meet; and the other for the Criminal, where three Alcades, and a Fiscal or King's Solicitor meet. A Regent, or chief Magistrate of Sevil, who is a Gown-Man, sits as President, sometimes in one, and sometimes in another, as he pleases, and therefore has his Apartment there.

India-House. Thence we went to see the Casa de la Contratacion, or India-House, in which there are three Halls, one call'd of Government, or the Chamber of Direction, in which sit a President, and some other Officers, all Sword-men; another in the Chamber of Justice, where are three Oydores, or Judges, and a Fiscal, or King's Solicitor; and the Third the Treasury, where others of the King's Officers meet. The President lives in this House.

S. Jerome. Wednesday 9th, my Friend and I went to the Monastery of S. Jerome. The most wonderful Thing there, is an Image of that Saint, made of Clay, about 180 Years since, with the Crucifix and Lion, by a Neapolitan; all so natural and artificial, that it looks as if it were really alive. Philip the 4th, of happy Memory saw, and would have had it for the Escorial; but the Fathers excus'd themselves, alledging the Difficulty of carrying such a brittle Thing so far. The Monastery is large; and the Church, tho' small, has seven Altars well adorn'd. Returning to the City we pass'd by the Monastery of S. Lazarus, and that call'd De la sangre, or of the Blood; the First for Curing of Lazars, the Second for other Distempers. This is a large

Two Hospitals.

Structure, erected by the Duke of Alcala, and there are in it stately Rooms, and a Court beset with Pillars.

Going over the Bridge we came to Triana, and thence to las Cuevas, or the Carthusians. Tho' the Monastery is large, and has stately Pillars, the Church is small, but well adorn'd. There are five Tombs in it, with curious marble Statues, of the Counts of Tarifa. In the Sacristy there are most precious Relicks, and Church Stuff of great Value. They show a Brass Piece, which they say is one of those given to Judas. In the Chapter there are two Statues of the aforesaid Counts, and on a beautiful Altar, one of our Blessed Lady well enough Carv'd. In another Room is the Tomb of the Archbishop Mena, Founder of the Place.

As we return'd Home late, I was show'd in the Street call'd El Can de leje, a half Figure of King Peter, whom they call the Cruel. Asking the meaning of it I was told, that he going about at Night Incognito, as he was wont to do, to spy what was doing about the City, quarrell'd with a Spanish Bravo, who would not give him the way, and had the Fortune to Kill him. The Body being found in the Morning, the King order'd the Murderer should be enquir'd after, and severely proceeded against. The Alcade was so diligent that he discover'd the Truth; and the King asking about it, he answered, he could proceed no further, because the Murderer was too Powerful. Being again commanded to proceed to the utmost rigour of the Law, whosoever the Person was, the Alcade caus'd the King to be Beheaded in Effigie, and in Memory therefore the half Statue was set up in the Street where the Murder hapned.

Thursday 10th, in the Morning, I went to the great Market, and there found a vast Concourse of Buyers and Sellers; and after Dinner to a Castle they say was Built by the Moors, now call'd S. John de Alfarache, half a League from the City. There is nothing to be seen, but the Place where it stood, on a Mountain, the Walls being ruin'd, but within them is a Monastery of S. Francis.

Sunday 13th, having taken leave of all Friends, I set out for Madrid, in a Coach hir'd for 54 Pieces of Eight, with D. Andrew Herrera, Vicar General of Quiso in Pern; F. Master Emanuel Mosquera, a Mercenarian of Papagan, and D. Paul de Offaetta of Lima. Going out

First Days
Journey to Madrid 5
Leagues.

of Sevil near Sun-setting, we came to Gemelli. Castel Blanco, by one in the Morning, 1699. having travell'd 5 Leagues, part Mountain, and part Plain. To be the more at our ease, we went to an Inn; but were uneasy enough, because of a Hellish Landlady, who would not find us Beds upon any Account, because we had sent the Coach Mules to another Place.

2d, day 7 Leagues. Monday 14th, we travell'd over a steep craggy Mountain. About Noon we rested on the Bank of a Rivulet, and moving thence came two Hours after Nightfall to Santa Olalia, the days Journy being 7 Leagues. Before we got in, the Coach overturn'd, and had like to have kill'd some of us. Our Supper was indifferent, but the Bed very bad.

Tuesday 15, we stay'd in the same Place to rest the Mules, and walk'd to divert us in the shade of a Poplar Grove, where were Walks for that purpose. The Host made us Pay dear for ill Accommodation, taking nine pices of Eight, for entertaining four of us.

3d, day 5 Leagues. Wednesday 16th, we set out betimes, and had two Leagues of good Road to Monasterio. This is the first Place of Estremadura, and belongs to D. Dominick Centorian. After Dinner, we went three Leagues down Hill, to Fuente de Cantos, a good Village, where there are two Monasteries of Nuns, and one of Fryars.

4th, day 6 Leagues. Thursday 17th, we travell'd 4 Leagues, all upon a Plain to Santos, a Town of the King's, well inhabited, where resting all the rest of the Day, we set out late to go 2 Leagues further to Villafranca. In these Inns, when Travellers have Paid for their Meat and Beds, they make them Pay for the Noise, tho' they were never so still.

5th, day 6 Leagues. Friday 18th, we did not set out till after Noon for Merida, six Leagues distant, whither we came about one in the Morning. We had a Scurvy Inn, because all the good ones were taken up, for the Ambassador that was returning from Lisbon. Merida is a Royal City inhabited by about 800 Families, among which, there are many of noted Nobility, by the Spaniards call'd Solariegas. The most notable thing here is a Noble Stone Bridge, half an Italian Mile in length, and broad enough for two Coaches to go abreast; over the River Guadiana. There is an Antient Castle, which did belong to the Conventual Priors of Leon, who on their Habit wear the Cross of St. James. There are also four Monasteries of Fryars, and four of Nuns. The common walking Place is not contemptible.

Saturday 19th, we set out late, and rested after two Leagues, at the little Village of St. Peter, whence going three Leagues further on a Plain Country, we came to Medellin, and two Leagues thence to Miajadas, both Places belonging to the Earl of Medellin. All the Inns were taken up for the Ambassador, so that we far'd ill.

Sunday 20th, We went after Dinner three Leagues to S. Cruz, where we lay till Midnight. 7th Day 3 Leagues.

Monday 21st, proceeded to Tordesillas, leaving Truxillo aside. We set out again after Dinner with violent hot Weather, and going up and down high craggy Mountains, the Harbour of Thieves, the Coach broke, and we were left in the open Air. As we were afterward, passing by Casas de Mirabete in the Dark, I broke my Gun, and had some other loss. Three Leagues further we cross'd the River Tagus over a great Stone Bridge, and went to lye at Almaraz. 8th Day 6 Leagues.

Tuesday 22d, the Coach being mended we set out in the Evening, and having travell'd two Leagues over a Plain well cultivated, in which there was a very good Village, went to take up our Quarters at Calçada de Oropeza. 9th Day 2 Leagues.

Here we continu'd all Wednesday 23d in the Morning, and then set out along a good Country full of Villages, and at the end of two Leagues pass'd through Oropeza, belonging to the Earl of that Name. It is seated on a Hill, the Walls about it are mean, but there are good Buildings in the Suburbs about it. Riding four Leagues further through a Wood, we came to Peter Venedo's Inn, where we found neither Beds nor Meat, that Place being always in danger of Highwaymen. In April the Year before, nine of those Stroulers had Rob'd and Bound about 40 Travellers. Having rested a little we went four Leagues further to Talavera, a Town well known for the excellent Earthen Ware made there, and containing about 8000 Families. The best Structures are 14 Monasteries of Religious Men and Women; for the Houses are Disorderly and not Uniform. There is a good walking Place with long Rows of Trees, call'd Nuestra Senora del Prado. 10th Day 10 Leagues.

Thursday 24th, we set out late, and having rode six Leagues over good Plains, lay at Santa Olalla, a Village belonging to the Count de Orgas. 11th Day 6 Leagues.

Friday 25th, continuing our Journey through Olive Gardens and good Villages 12th Day 6 Leagues.

ges, especially that call'd Noves, for six Leagues we, came to Casa Rubia.

1699. Saturday 26th, went four Leagues further and lay at Mostobes.

13th Day
4 Leagues.

Sunday 27th, travell'd three Leagues and arriv'd at Madrid, over the Bridge of Segovia. I took into an Inn in the Street call'd Calle de Silva, but then remov'd to that of Olivio alto.
14th Day
3 Leagues

CHAP. II.

The Description of the Royal Town of Madrid, and what is most Remarkable in it.

Madrid
describ'd.

THE Royal Town of Madrid is seated in a Champain, water'd by the River Mancanares. The Country about is uneven, some plain, some high and some low; but the Air is very good and wholsom, and tho' it be not in above 40 deg. and 40 min. Latitude, yet the Cold in Winter and the Heat in Summer are intolerable. The shape of it is almost Oval, little above a Mile in Length, and near five in Compass. It is grown up to this greatness from a little Town, since the Kings of Spain chose it for the Place of their Residence. However the Walls about it are low, and of Mud, with fourteen or fifteen Gates. The Streets are always very dirty, by reason of the custom of throwing all Filth out at the Windows. It is worse in Winter, because they carry many Hogheads of Water in Carts which they let out about the Streets to carry off the Filth, and sometimes it runs in Streams that stop the way, and poison with the Stink.

The Houses for the most part cannot compare with those of Italy, being generally ill Built with Timber Ribs. But as to Particulars, The King's Palaces are most magnificent, as well from the greatness of the Structure, as for the rich Furniture, curious Pictures, abundance of Fountains, Fishponds and Parks. Besides that where his Majesty generally Resides, there are those of Buen Retiro, the Escorial Pardo, Aranjuez and others, whereof having said enough in my first Travels in Europe, I omit to repeat the same in this Place. Among the chief Palaces of the Nobility that of the Duke of Uzeda is none of the worst, as well for Structure, as for the Embellishments of Marble; for which reason the late Queens Mother had pitch'd upon it for her Residence. All the Churches are well Serv'd and Adorn'd.

Among the publick Buildings the Plaza Mayor, or great Square is very graceful. It is a perfect Square and has several Avenues. All the Houses about it are built after the same Model 5 Stories high, with as many rows of Iron Balconies, all curiously made and uniform. In the Shops below under the Porticos, are all sorts of rich Commodities; and in the middle of the Square all that can be desired for eating. But it is then most beautiful to behold, when they have the Sport of Riding at Bulls, call'd by them Fuego de Toros, or Fiesta de Toros; because then it is all richly hung, and there are to be seen the King, the Ministers of State, Magistrates, Nobility, and choice Ladies richly Clad.

Provisions are so dear, that a piece of Eight a day, will scarce serve a Man. The Wine is bad, because they put Lime and other ill Things into it; but the Bread is excellent, and so is the Flesh of gelt Goats. Without the Town there is good Wine and cheap, because there it pays not the Excise, which amounts to more than the Price of the Wine.

I found two Fashions newly brought up, this last time I was at Madrid. The one is the keeping a great number of Footmen to run before the Coach; the other the wearing of Periwigs, by all sorts of People, so full of Powder, that it is no wonder Bread is dear.

Having visited D. John Francis Pacheco, Duke of Uzeda, and show'd him all my Curiosities gather'd in my Travels, upon Wednesday 30th, he to requite me, show'd me his Library, which for largeness, choice of Books curiously Bound, and for the rare Workmanship in Ebony of the Cases, all shut up with Crystal Glasses, is inferiour to none in Spain. In his Closet, besides choice Medals, he had abundance of Pictures of Kings, and Princes, some of them scarce known in Europe, and all adorn'd with Silver, Gold and Jewels. He told me the King had enquir'd after me, and would be glad to see my Curiosities. Having spent many Days in waiting upon Persons of Quality, who desired to hear some Account of my Travels, I went on Thursday

Gemelli.
1699.

Mercena-
rians.

Thursday the 14th of August, to see the Monastery of the Mercenarians, which is very Stately, and has three Dormitories one above another, for 150 Religious Men, and the Church is well adorn'd. Friday 15th, in the Afternoon there was a great resort to our Lady of Atocha, which Image is cover'd with Jewels, the Altar with Silver, and the Chappel painted by our famous Lucas Giordano. Saturday 16th, I heard Mass in the Parish of St. Martin of the Benedictine Fathers of Monte Cassino. The Church is not extraordinary; but the Monastery is large, and Magnificently built. Sunday 17th, I saw the profess'd House of the Fathers of the Society. The Church was not yet finish'd; but there were excellent Pictures in the Chappels that were compleat. Monday 18th, hear'd Mass at St. Phelipe el Real. The Monastery is of Augustinians, were small; but the Church is well set off. Tuesday 19th, I saw the Church of St. Andrew, which has a most beautiful Cupola, and Chappels and Altars well adorn'd; especially that where the Body of St. Isidorus lyes. Thursday 21st, I heard Mass in the Parish Church of St. Gines, which is very large, has good Altars, and is serv'd by many Priests. Monday 25th, I saw the King and Queen go out to take the Air by the River. The Ladies were clad almost after the German Fashion, and their Heads dress'd much after that manner. That day abundance of rich Household-stuff, was carry'd out of the King's Wardrobe, to furnish a House at Leganitos, where the French Ambassador was to be receiv'd, and entertain'd nine Days at the King's Cost. The Workmanship of the Plate was curious, but Old Fashion'd, and the Stones that adorn'd it all false, except some Turkey Stones. These things are always kept in the King's Wardrobe, and never made use of, but upon such occasions.

Hospital.

Tuesday 26th, I went to see the Hospital, where there are generally about a thousand Sick, attended very charitably. The Structure shows it is a Royal Work. Friday 29th, I went to St. Mary de Almudena, where is an Image of our Lady, all cover'd with rich Diamonds, Emrauds, and other precious Stones.

Escurial.

Wednesday the third of September, I went with D. Peter Chaves, who was to go with me into Italy, to see the Escurial, and din'd at Roxas, three Leagues from Madrid, whence we travell'd the other four Leagues, passing through Colmenarejo, and lay that Night at the upper Escurial. On Thursday the 4th, in the Morning the Father Rector appointed another Father to show us the Rarities of that Monastery. We came into the great Court through a noble Front of Massy Stone, over which is the Statue of St. Laurence; and proceeding thence into the 2d, found there beautiful Apartments about it, and a most curious Frontispiece over the Church-door, with six Statues of Prophets. The Church has three Isles, supported as is the Cupola by large Pillars of hard Stone. The high Altar is exceeding Majestick, and adorn'd with double rows of Pillars, of choice Marble, being 18 in number, which serve also to set off the curious Pictures. Going up 17 Steps of the same Stone, there appears a Tabernacle all garnish'd with Gold, and precious Pillars of Jasper, and within it another less Tabernacle adorn'd with precious Stones of inestimable value. On the side Walls are the Statues of Charles the 5th, and Philip the 2ds in fine Marble. On the left is the Oratory, where the King and Queen use to withdraw. All the Arches of the Church are painted by Giordano. The Father then show'd us a great silver Statue representing St. Laurence, kept in a Cupboard, with many Relicks of the most Glorious Saints of the Church.

The Church.

Hence we went down to the place where are the Tombs of the Kings, and Queens that are Fruitful, apart from that of the Barren ones, and Kings Children, and found it all cover'd with curious black Marble, like the Tombs of the Kings of Spain, here bury'd till this day. Then we went to see the Sacristy, and here were show'd Church-stuff, adorn'd with precious Stones, Gold Fringes, and Rich Embroidery. There is also a great Silver Tabernacle of extraordinary Workmanship, sent as a Present by the Emperor to the King of Spain. We saw an Antependium of Silver curiously wrought; a Mineral Stone with several large Emrauds in it, which serves as a Pax; and a Cross of Diamonds, Rubies, Emrauds, and other Stones of great value.

Pantheon:

Then we were carry'd into a little Room, where there were many Relicks, some Manuscripts of St. Teresa and other Saints, and a Pitcher or Stone Vessel, that will hold 20 Caraffas of Naples, in which they say our Saviour convert-ed Water into Wine, at the Wedding of

Cana

Caná in Galilee. The Chapter whether Gemelli. we went next is all set out with antient and choice Pictures. The Choir was of excellent Workmanship, and the Books of plain song belonging to it, the Fathers said cost 30000 pieces of Eight. There are also two great Organs, besides the small ones distributed about the Isles. Near the great Stairs we saw Giordano's best Picture, which is the Battle of St. Quintin.

After Dinner, we went to see the rest, and a Religious Man led us about the Church, within the Wall left open on purpose. All the Arches of it made large Chappels, like those of St. Sophia at Constantinople, and all of Carv'd Stone, as is the rest of the Church. Then we went into the Library, and saw a great number of Books of several Sciences in excellent Order; but they told me that several Arabick Manuscripts were gone, they knew not which way.

The Pictures in this Place are wonderful, being Painted by great Masters, but the most Stupendious thing is a Loadstone, that bears 24 Pounds of Iron, and is so active, that it Operates tho' a solid Body interpose. Yet what most amazes is, that it does not draw the Iron unless it be set length-ways with the North Point to it. We went up one of the Corner Towers to see the Chimes sent out of Flanders by the Count de Monterey, but they do not play exactly true. The King's Apartment is adorn'd with the best Pictures of the last Age, and from his Bedchamber, he can see the Tabernacle of the High Altar. There is a Way out of the same Apartment into the Oratory before mention'd.

In the Monastery are 14 Cloisters, with five rows of Dormitories one above another; but it is to be observ'd that in this Place there live three several Families of Religious Men, with their several Superiors, all Independent of one another. They are in all 200, maintain'd by the King, and well serv'd, for all the Inhabitants of the next Village are at their Service, being maintain'd by the Monastery. There are several Orchards of Fruit, and Flower Gardens, with Mirtles curiously cut, representing the King's Arms and other Figures; nor are the Crystalline Fountains less delightful. Besides the fine Mirtles in the great Cloister, there is a stately Capula of choice Marble in the middle; and Fishponds full of several sorts of Fish. There are also many Artificers adjoining to the Monastery, for its Service, and Apartments close by for the Courtiers, when the King is there. This was built by King Philip the 2d, in pursuance of a Vow made on the 10th of August, at the Battle of St. Quintin, where for the conveniency of his Army, he was forced to destroy a Church dedicated to the same Saint. The Work was finish'd in 32 Years, a short time for so great a Structure, that King laying out twenty Millions and half upon it; besides the yearly Revenue of 46000 pieces of Eight a Year, for maintenance of the Monastery.

Friday 5th, we return'd by the way of Roxas to Madrid, where being disappointed of going by the way of Alicant, as I had intended, I took two Places for 24 pieces of Eight, in the Coach for Pamplona, and having taken leave of my Friends, prepar'd for my Journey.

C H A P. III.

The Author's Journey from Madrid, to Toulouze.

1st, days
Journey 3
Leagues.

Monday the 8th of September, having perform'd my Devotions in the Church of our Lady of Bethlem, I took Coach after Dinner, and went three Leagues to lye at Rojas, where the Hostess made me pay dear for a poor Supper, and worse Bed. Setting out again at break of Day, I cross'd the River Guadarrama upon a good Stone Bridge, then pass'd through the Village of Torrejon, and came at the end of three Leagues to the City of Alcala, by the Latines call'd Complutum, in the Diocess of the Archbishop of Toledo, and a famous University. It is seated on a Plain near the River Henares, enclos'd by a low Wall, and has noble Streets, and good Houses and Shops. I went three Leagues further to dine at the little Village of Alcobera, and then three Leagues more to lye at Junquera, leaving behind Marciamalo in sight of Guadalajara. Junquera, belongs to the Duke of Pastrama, and the Country about it is so full of Rabbits, that they would scarce get out of the Road, as we pass'd by. On Wednesday 10th, when, having travel'd six Leagues, we din'd at Xadraque, and

2d, day 9
Leagues.

3d, day 9
Leagues.

and went three Leagues further to lye at the Village of Regulara, being tir'd with the ill Way, and Rain, which continuing we set out late, on,

Thursday 11th, and therefore were forced to stay and Dine at the Inn of Rio Frio, but two Leagues from where we lay, and then proceeded three Leagues still with Rain, to lodge at Barabona, but had ill accommodation, this being a wretched Village, reported to be inhabited by Witches.

Having travell'd two Leagues on Friday 12th, and pass'd through two Villages, we bated at Almasan, a Town belonging to the Earl of Altamira, enclosed with a Wall, standing on a Hill, and Water'd on one side by the River Duero, whence going three Leagues further we lay at Almaril.

Saturday 13th, after 5 Leagues riding, we din'd at Hinojosa; and then passing over high Mountains came to Agreda, the last City of Castile, seated not far from the Mountain Moncayo, which is ever cover'd with Snow, where we had a good Supper and Bed. Here we stay'd on Sunday 14th, till Noon, to show what Gold and Silver we carry'd for our expences, because it is not allow'd to export above a piece of 8 and half. I show'd what Gold I had, and Paid one in the hundred for it. Before we set out, I saw in a Monastery of Nuns, the Body of the B. Mary of Agreda held there in great Veneration. As soon as out of the City Gates, the Officers came upon us again, and I was forced to give them something, to avoid being stopp'd, but I would not give any thing to others, we met four Leagues further on the Frontiers. In this Place the three Kingdoms of Castile, Aragon, and Navarre meet, so that three Kings might here dine at one Table, and every one sit in his own Kingdom. When pass'd the Village of Centronito, we came into a warmer Country, and an hour after Night came to Curella, a Place of great Trade, Rich, and inhabited by a thousand Families; for tho' seated on a Mountain, it has good Vineyards and Gardens, and excellent Fruit.

Monday 15th, we lay in the same place.

Tuesday 16th, after two Leagues travelling, we cross'd the River Ebro in a Boat, and a League further came to Val-tierra. Three Leagues beyond that, we ferry'd over the River Aragon, which falls into the Ebro, and lay at Marfella a City near to it.

Wednesday 17th, we set out 2 Hours before day, and din'd at Tafalla four Leagues distant, a large City, enclosed with a Wall and belonging to the King. Then we pass'd through Barascin and other Places, in the space of two Leagues, and went two Leagues further of very bad Way, to lye at the Inn, call'd de las Campanas, or of the Bells, in the Village of Tieves.

Thursday 18th, having travell'd two Leagues, we came before Noon to Pamplona, and I lodg'd at a good Inn, in St. Nicholas's Street.

This City seated in the latitude of 43 degrees, is the Metropolis of the Kingdom of Navarre, and therefore the usual residence of the Viceroy, and of all the Courts. For Spiritual Affairs it has a Bishop, who at this time acted as Viceroy, till another were sent. This Bishop's Revenue is 22000 pieces of Eight, and he has a Palace better than the Viceroy's. The City stands upon an uneven Ground, at the Foot of the Pyrenean Mountains, and has some insensible rising Ground, and Plain. The compass of its Walls, which are almost an Octogon, is about half a League. The Houses are generally well built, and Provisions at a reasonable Rate. The Monasteries and Churches are not very Stately; the Cathedral is large, and has five Isles, but of smooth Stone, and is very Dark, the Cloister joining to it, is a handsome Structure. The Citadel is very large, and the Walls so thick, that two Coaches may go abreast on them. The Ditch is very deep, and the Place very strong, provided it be well furnish'd, with Men, and Cannon.

The Inhabitants of Pamplona, and generally all the Navarrois are affable, and lovers of Strangers, showing them much Respect as they pass through their Country, and preferring them before their own People, either in selling, or any other thing; and therefore any Man may Travel through the Kingdom, without apprehending to be affronted, or wrong'd. I found not so much difficulty in getting a Pass of the Bishop, acting as Viceroy, as in finding Horses, because it was Harvest time, and all the Beasts were employ'd in the Country. D. John Cruzat, Marquess of Gongora, and Governor of the City, remov'd this difficulty, ordering his Lieutenant to furnish me with Mules to pass the Mountains. I had brought this Nobleman News from his Brother, D. Fausto Governor of the Philippine-Islands, for which

9th, day
Leagues

10th, day
2 Leagues

Pamplona, describ'd.

Genelli.

1699.

4th, day 5
Leagues.

5th, day 5
Leagues.

6th, day 7
Leagues.

7th, day 6
Leagues.

8th, day 6
Leagues.

which he shew'd me extraordinary Civility.

1699- Having got Mules by means of the Lieutenant, for eight pieces of Eight each, to carry me to St. Jean de pied de Port, We set out on Friday 19th, at one in the Afternoon, and Rode three Leagues over the Valley, a Country well cultivated, and full of good Villages, to the Bridge of Suvert, where the Major of Pampelona, who is Governor, has a Guard, that examines all Passengers; here we took much Pains to climb a steep Mountain, and lay at the Village of Erro. On this Road there are but few that understand Spanish, all the Country People speaking the Gascon Language, so that the Muletier was our Interpreter.

Saturday 20th, we set out two Hours before Day, along a very bad and Mountainous Road, and leaving behind us at the end of a League, the Village of Espinol, and a League further Burgheto, where a Governor with a Guard keeps the Pass; about an hundred Paces beyond it, we came to the Village of Roncevalles, an excessive cold Place, and therefore the Houses there are covered with Planks that cannot be broke by the Frost. The Church belongs to the King, and there belong to it 12 Canons, who have each 300 Ducats a Year, beside the Demicanons. The Canons themselves fill up the vacancies among them, but the King has the nomination of the Prior. In this Church they shew two Clubs cover'd with Iron, us'd formerly in War, and one of the Stirrups of Orlando, the great Champion of France; the Slipper of Turpin the Historian, and Bishop of Paris, who came into Spain with Charlemagne, wore when he said Mass; the same Turpin's Tomb, in a place apart from the Church, where the famous Battle is painted, in which several of the bravest Men of France dy'd, as they were returning home with Charlemagne; and lastly their Tombs. Riding hence along a craggy dangerous Path, on the Mountain, and going down on the other side, such another way cover'd with Trees, in all two Leagues and a half, we cross'd a small River, which divides the two Powerful Kingdoms of France and Spain. A League from thence we came to St. Jean de Pied de Port, the Metropolis of the lower Navarre. It is well Wall'd, and has a small Suburb. Thro' the midst of it runs a Rapid River, which afforded us good Trouts for Supper. On the Hill that Commands

St. Jean de
Pied de Port.

the City, is a Castle regularly Fortify'd without, and good Houses within for the Garrison. We lay in a good Inn.

Sunday 21st, we hear'd Mass there, and saw the Women by reason of the Cold cover their Heads with Mantles, like those the Moors wear, and the Men with a sort of black Caps. I hir'd three Horses to go as far as Pau, for nine French Crowns.

Monday 22d, we set out and travell'd through a Country well cultivated, and Green, with Country Houses at convenient distances. We cross'd several Rivers on Bridges, and among the rest a great one, a League short of Navarrens, where the Bridge is shut up with Gates to make People pay for passing. Having rode seven Leagues, we took up in the Fortrefs of Navarrens, at the Customers House (as we had done at Pied de Port) who did not practise that strictness us'd, in other Parts of France, but pass'd my Trunks without opening them, taking my Word for what was in them. This Fort seated in the Province of Bearn, is Garrison'd by a Battalion of Foot, and by it runs a good River that abounds in Trouts. The King of France has not only made the way safe, but for the Travellers greater conveniency, has at certain distances, caus'd Poles, and Stones to be set up to shew the way, and the distance of Leagues; an Action worthy so great a Monarch.

Having paid the Duties of the Custom-House, I set out betimes on Wednesday 23d, and having pass'd over the River on a Stone Bridge to the Place of Arms, the Guard carry'd me before their Officer, who enquiring very Civilly, whence I came, dismiss'd me. The Road I travell'd, though Mountainous look'd like one continu'd Garden. After riding two Leagues and a half, I bated at Moneim, where an old Hostess made me pay dear for a bad Dinner. A League from thence we ferry'd over the River Gave, which falls into the Adour, and went to the Town of Lascar, where the States of the Province meet, to avoid contest about Precedence, in the Parliament of Pau. Besides the City in the Plain, which is open, there is another among the Mountains, but small and enclos'd with low Walls. Departing thence, we rode six Leagues further, and lay at

Pau, the Metropolis of the Province of Bearn. It is divided into the lower, which is Water'd by the River Gave, over which there is a Stone Bridge of a vast length; and the upper, where the Parliament resides, where there is a good Castle. Neither City is Wall'd; but the upper, has very good Houses and rich Shops. Its shape is long, and it may be said to have but one Street upon the level, for there is a descent to those on the sides. The Castle is well Built after the Antient manner, without any Modern Fortification. In the Court of it, there is noble Carving, and half Statues of exquisite Workmanship; especially a Shepherd, and Shepherds set in a Wall. They shew'd me Henry the IVths Royal Chappel, and the Room where he was Born, being on the West side over the Garden. The Allies in this Garden are all Arch'd over by the Trees, and thick Plants running up interwoven, and knotted together like Arbours. Thence I went into the 2d Garden adorn'd with Mirtle, curiously cut; thence into a Wood enclos'd with high Walls, in which there are two strait Walks of a vast length, shaded by tall Oaks; and thence to a Hill, to see another Garden, which was that great King's delight; but at present they are all ill look'd after.

Gemelli.
1690.

Returning home, I saw the Palace, where the Parliament meets, near the Castle. Here 52 Counsellors meet in four Courts, which are, one for Criminal Causes; one for the Revenue, or Exchequer; and the other two for civil Causes. Every Counsellor is allow'd by the King 100 Pistoles a Year, besides their Profits, but the Presidents have more. All these Places are bought for ever, and may be sold again with the King's leave.

A League from Pau is the City Morlans, the Antientest in the Province, and five Leagues from it the wholesome Waters of Bagneres; and at four Leagues distance, the miraculous Image of our Lady of Beteran. There are in Pau four Monasteries of Men, and two of Nuns.

Wednesday 24th, the Weather being bad, I did not Travel, but hir'd three Horses to Toulouze, for 15 French Crowns, and set out on Thursday 25th, Rode two Leagues through a Plain well cultivated Country, water'd by small Rivulets, to bate at the Inn of Bordes point, and thence three Leagues to lye at Tarbe, by reason of the bad way. Tarbe is a City seated in a Plain, and compos'd of several Parts, for there is a good Suburb at first coming in; then a Wall'd City; then another bigger than that, and Wall'd too; and lastly other Houses, continu'd for an Italian Mile in length. It is the Head of the Province of Bigorre, but Subject to the Parliament of Toulouze.

Friday 26th, I travel'd four Leagues through a well cultivated Country, always in sight of the high, and hoary Pyrenean Mountains, which divide the two greatest Monarchies in Europe, and din'd at Puidarias, thence four more to the Village of Lamette, and one more to lye at Bastaille.

We mounted at break of day on Saturday 27th, and Riding 3 Leagues, bated at Lombes, a wall'd Place, but small; and thence continu'd our Journey five Leagues further to Plaisance, where we took up that Night. There came with me from Madrid, a half Milanese of Spanish extraction, who lov'd Water as a Dog loves a Cudgel, so that he would be continually Drunk, and therefore could not sit his Horse going down Hill, nor Ride in the Night, so that he was often lost, yet I always found him in some Tavern, with a Pot in his Hand; so that I had excellent Company of him.

Sunday 28th, we set out by break of Day, and travell'd two Leagues along a plain cultivated Country, and so arriv'd at the Suburb of Toulouze, which is wall'd in. Here the Officers were satisfy'd with a Piece of Mony, and forbore opening my Trunks, and therefore without making any stay, having cross'd the Suburb, we went atoot from the Bridge, to the Cuckolds Inn.

Toulouze a City, Famous for its Parliament, and University, is seated in the lat. of 43 degrees, and 20 minutes, in an excellent Air, and may be call'd the greatest City in France, next to Paris, being half a League long, from East to West, and the third part of a League in breadth. In the Year 638, after the Building of Rome, Q. Cæpio destroy'd it, and carryed thence a vast quantity of Gold and Silver. The Walls at present are of Brick, with Towers after the antient manner, at proper distances, with a narrow, but deep Ditch about them. The Houses are indifferently Built of Brick, and the Streets well Pav'd. In short, to me it look'd like another Tauris in Persia.

Abundance of Gentry live in it, and generally the Inhabitants are well affected to Strangers, behaving themselves Honestly, Civilly, and Respectfully towards wards them, as is usual throughout France.

Toulouze.

Tarbe.

Gemelli. Provisions are cheap. The Bridge of 1690. Toulouze over the Garonne, is not inferior to any in Paris. It is two Musket shot in length, and broad enough for six Coaches to go abreast, all of good square
 Stone. There was another antienter Brick Bridge, which is gone to Ruin.
 The Garonne Springs in the Pyrenean Mountains, and is Navigable down to Bordeaux, where it falls into the Sea.
 A Mile from Toulouze, it meets with the Canal cut by the present King Luis the 14th. I could not well read the Inscription on the Gate upon the Bridge, because a Shrub was grown out from a Cleft, between the Marble Stones, which hindred my seeing the Letters; but what I could discern, was to this Effect.

Anno Restaur. Sal. 1668.

Qui dedit Oceano, docuit te dulce Garumna

Ferre Jugum, primus qui tuas compescuit undas,

Hactenus in viso jungens in littora ponte.

Hoc opus inceptum, desperatumq; pependit,

¶ Donec Ludovicum felicis secla tulerunt,

Qui tot — posset mirante Tholosa,

Tantam potenti cervici imponere molem.

The Sense in short is thus. Anno 1668. He that subdu'd the Ocean, first made the Garonne bear a Yoke; curbing thy Waves, and joyning thy Shores with such a Bridge as has not before been seen.
 This Work was begun, and given over in despair till happy times brought Luis.
 Who [here is a Casma] to the admiration of Toulouze, might lay so great a Weight on the Powerful Stream.

I went to hear Mass at the Dominicans, whose Church is Arch'd, and supported by Eight Pillars, which divide it into three Isles. In the middle of it is a curious high Altar and Choir. In the Sacristy they show'd me the Head of St.
Thomas of Aquin, upon a half Body of Silver. The Skull is seen by opening a Plate on the top of the Statue.

Thence I went to see the so Renowned Parliament, instituted by Philip the Fair, but found it shut up, that being Vacation time. After Dinner I went to the Town-House, where there are eight Magistrates who Govern the City, and wear a long Crimson Garment with wide Sleeves laced with Gold. The House is stately enough, the Walls all adorn'd with half Statues of Marble,

Vol. IV.

and the Rooms with rich Pictures of former Magistrates. In the first Room they show'd me Seats and Benches, on which they sit when they administer Justice.
 Here was the Picture of Luis the 14th
 King of France, swearing to the Parliament on his Knees, to keep their Privileges before he came into the City.
 In the next Room there were such Benches cover'd for them to meet in private, and good Pictures about the Walls.
 Going up to the Rooms above, I found in the first Room the Pictures of all the Famous Men that have been of Toulouze.
 In the next Antichamber, where the Assembly of the Deputies of the Province is held, there were Chairs and Benches orderly placed, for every one to take the Place that was due to him.
 Here is the Picture of Luis the 14th very Young, when he went to meet the Infanta of Spain his Queen,

Then I went to see the great Canal, made by as great a King, to open a Communication between the Mediterranean and the Ocean, cutting a Way through Mountains, levelling the Valleys, and forcing Nature to submit to Art. Several gatherings of Water, made on the Plain and Hills, supply the Canal. Banks thrown up, keep in the Water at certain distances, where the Ground is low;
 and thus the Boats go easily to Toulouze, and they go down to the Port of Set, four Leagues from Montpelier, where the Water of the Canal, falls into the Mediterranean; as the Garonne falls into the Ocean, after passing by Bordeaux.
 This River and Canal as has been said, make the Communication between the Mediterranean and the Ocean, to save Sailing quite round Spain, and part of France. Its depth is ten or twelve Spans, and the breadth about the length of two Pikes, so that it will not carry verry large Boats, and it often requires cleansing. At this time it was dry, to be cleans'd and made deeper.

Monday 29th, being Michaelmas day,
 I hear'd Mass in the Church of the Carmelites, where the Feast was celebrated.
 It has but one Isle, but there are two outlets near the Door. The Choir and high Altar, are in the middle, well adorn'd, as are all the Chappels. After Dinner I went to the Cathedral, which tho' it has three Isles, is not very good, both because it is dark, and because there are in the middle of it many little parting Walls, for all the

E e e c 2

seve

several sorts of Officers and Magistrates upon Festivals. The Archbishop.

shop's Palace is Convenient, but not Beautiful.

CHAP. IV.

The Author's Journey from Toulouze to Marseilles.

HAVING hir'd a Calesh for 19 Crowns to Montpellier, I set out on Tuesday the last day of September betimes, passing through the very large Suburb of S. Michael. After crossing the Canal several times upon Bridges for the space of three Leagues and a half of a good Country, I din'd at Baziege, and then travelling through many Villages came very late to Castelnau d' Ari, four Leagues and a half from Baziege. We Supp'd well for half a Crown a Head, being twelve at Table, and among them a Religious Man that Eat and Drank like an honest French Man. At this Place there is a gathering of Water for the use of the Canal, and two Leagues off another, call'd of Norouze.

Setting out early on Wednesday the first of October, I came at the end of three Leagues riding through a well Peopled Country to the Village of Alzone, whence after Dinner I went 3 Leagues further to Carcafonne. This Place is Wall'd, the Houses for the most part of Stone, and handsomer than those of Toulouze; the City is large, and has a considerable Trade, by reason there is good Cloth made call'd by its Name. All the Streets are good, but the Market-Place beyond them all. The Suburbs are large, and there is a long Bridge leads to one of them over the River Oodi, where is a spacious Citadel on the top of a Hill. The Bishop of this Place has 40000 Livres a Year.

Thursday 2d, before I left the City, I went to see the Cloth made, and found seven Looms, with two Men at each of them, because the Cloth was seven Quarters wide; in another Room they were sheering of it. Then going into my Calesh, after a Leagues Riding, I again cross'd the same River, upon a Bridge near the Village of Traves, and then the Canal several times, along which I saw many Men and Horses that drew along the Boats. We Din'd in the little Village of Piscia, three Leagues from Carcafonne, and then went three Leagues further along a stony Way, to lye at Poussol.

Friday 3d, at the end of three Leagues, we pass'd through Capestan, a large Place and wall'd (many Villages in France having either Walls about them, or some Castle to retire to) and over the River Oodi upon a Bridge. Then crossing the Canal again (which a League from thence runs along a Cavity cut for 100 Paces in the hard Rock) came to the City Beziers, seated on a Hill, and water'd on one side by the River Oodi. The City is longer than 'tis Broad, Fortify'd by Art and Nature, Populous, Plentiful and Rich, by reason it is within three Leagues of the Sea. There is a Garison in it of 800 Men. Four Leagues from it towards Perpignan, is a City not inferior to it call'd Narbonne, through which those that come from Catalonia generally pass. Moving four Leagues further after Dinner, we lay at the City of Perpignan, which is large, but of little Trade.

Saturday 4th, when we had rid half a League, we came to a Bank of Earth, two Italian Miles in length, raised at a vast expence, to make the way more commodious in Winter. In France they take great care of the High-Ways, and I observ'd them to be generally pay'd, from the time I came into it. Then we pass'd through the Town of Monfagne, a League from whence we set out, and then travelling at a small distance from the Sea, at the end of four Leagues Din'd at the Town of Gigian, whence advancing three Leagues more we came before Night to Montpelier. This City is the Capital of the lower Langudoc, as Toulouze is of the upper, and being seated on the top of a Hill yeilds a fine Prospect at a distance.

Sunday 5th, I went to see the Town-House, which is not so good as that of Toulouze. The six Consuls there are clad in Scarlet, but without Gold Fringes. Here was the King's Picture, sitting on a Throne, done by a Masterly Hand; he is holding out an Olive Branch to one of the six Consuls, who Kneels before him, to signify the Peace concluded that Year between him and the Confederates, as appears by an Ingenious but Haughty Inscription under it.

The Church of our Lady close by it, has no great matter of Ornament, no more than the Cathedral, and neither of them has but one Isle. The Bishop's Palace has been a great Structure, but being very antient, as is the Church, is gone to Ruin. Not far from thence I went out at the Gate of Payrou, lately rebuilt by the Consuls, and adorn'd on the outside with Trophies, masterly Carv'd, and with Arms of the Nations Conquer'd by France, with ingenious Latin Mottoes. The walking Place without this Gate is one of the finest Nature and Art could produce, had they vy'd to outdo one another; for the Eye is delighted with the Prospect of the Sea, and pleasant Fields of a long delicious Plain. The Walls of the City are high and strong, tho' antient, and encompass'd with a deep Ditch. The Houses are generally very good, three or four Stories high, like those in Naples, but cover'd with Tiles. The Streets are narrow and crooked, by reason of the unevenness of the Ground, and number of Inhabitants. The courteous Ladies are extraordinary Beautiful, and fair of Complexion. In other respects the City is Rich, because of its Trade, and in it are six Sovereign Chambers that govern all the Province.

of

After Dinner I took another Calesh for seven Crowns to Marseilles, and having gone four Leagues, lay at the Inn of Pontlunel, so call'd of Lunel, a neighbouring City, lying on the left Hand of the way, where the Hostelles treated me well. They wore a great Hood, as the Country-women do, to defend them against the Sun.

Monday 6th, having rid four Leagues, I Din'd in the City S. Gil. I would willingly have gone as far as Nismes, by the Latins call'd Nemausum, a City where they make good Serge, to have seen some Roman Antiquities there; as the Temple of Diana; la Maison Quarre, or the square House, built of vast Stones; and les Arènes, or the Amphitheatre for publick Shows; but being to go three Leagues, I chose rather to get soon to Naples. After Dinner, having rid a Mile, we Ferry'd over an Arm of the Rhofne, which divides Languedoc from Provence. One that waited there to receive the Customs, ask'd me whether I had any thing new in my Trunks, which ought to pay the King's Duty, and telling him there were seven Dozen of Fans, he very civilly dismiss'd me, without receiving that little which was due to him. He also advis'd me, when I came to Arles, to tell the Custom-House-Officers there, that the Officers on the Road had taken no Custom, because the Things were inconsiderable, and to make Presents; and bid me not show the Note I carry'd, for then they would oblige me to Pay. This Civility to Strangers is peculiar to the French; and I had such tryal of it, that in a Month's Travelling through France, my Trunks had never been open'd. Having paid 15 Sols for the Calesh passing the Bridge, we came to Arles, after three Leagues Riding. When I came to the Bridge of Boats 100 Paces in length, over the other Arm of the River Rhofne, which is twice as broad as that before-mention'd, the Officers ask'd four Sols Toll. The Rhofne is counted the greatest River in France, which after passing by Lions and Avignon, divides it self into two Branches, a League above Arles, and runs down into the Sea seven Leagues below it, at the Port of Bu, whence great Boats and Tartans go up to load with Wine and Corn.

Arles, a City seated in 43 deg. of lat. is an Archbishoprick, and has a good Trade, but is not very Rich. It stands upon a rising Ground, which makes it show slightly without, and it is reckn'd to be antienter than Rome. There is a Theatre in it, built by the Romans, but not so entire as that of Verona. The Walls about it, and the Houses are very good, but the Streets narrow, and the Town-House but indifferent.

Tuesday 7th, Travelling along the famous Aqueducts, at the end of four Leagues we came to the Inn of S. Martin de Crau, where we din'd well for 20 Sols a Head; then proceeding four Leagues further along a dry stony way, we came to Salon, a City in the Diocese of Arles, and therefore the Archbishop has there an antient large Castle on an Eminency. The Walls of the City are half ruin'd with Antiquity, and the Houses of a very indifferent Structure, without any Simmetry. They say the way call'd Via Aureliana, made by the Emperor M. Aurelius, from the Frontiers of Spain, as far as Rome, pass'd by this Place. There is nothing in it remarkable but the Sepulcher, or Tomb of Nostradamus, the famous Astrologer of the last Age, who is said to have foretold the Murder of Henry IV. King of France. It is in the Church of the Franciscans, on the left hand Wall entering the Gate, with this following Inscription.

Gemell.
1699.

D. M. Clarissimi Offa.

Michaelis Nostradami, unius omnium mortalium dicto digni, cujus pene divini calamo totius Orbis, ex Astrorum influxu, futur eventus conscriberenturi. Vixit annis 62, Mensibus 6, Diebus 17. Obiit solo 1566. Quietem posteri ne invideant. Anna Pontia Gemella Solonia Conjugi opt. V. F.

In the same Church is to be seen an Image of the Blessed Virgin, and the manner taking our Saviour down from the Cross, with seven Marble Statues, all the Work of some great Master.

Having travel'd five Leagues on a very bad Mountain Road, we Din'd on Wednesday 8th at S. Pon, a small Place in the midst of a Plain that reaches for several Leagues, all adorn'd with Country Houses belonging to the Inhabitants of Aix. After Dinner we went 4 Leagues further, and came to Marseilles two Hours after Night-fall. We lodg'd at the Deux pommes, or two Apples in the Street call'd le Cours. A League and a half short of the City, the Custom-house-Officers ask'd me whether I had any new Commodities; and telling them I had some Dozens of Fans to make Presents; one of them advis'd me when I came to the next Officers, which were half a League off to enter all I had, that it might not be seisd. I did so without paying any thing, nor did they ask any thing of me when I enter'd Marseilles, but only four Sols for opening the Gate, which was shut.

Marseilles.

Marseilles was built by the Phenicians on the Shore of the Mediterranean, in the Lat. of 42 deg. 40 min. and was very Famous in former Times for its Schools, which vy'd with those of Rhodes and Athens. At present it is one of the most celebrated Ports in the Mediterranean, tho' so shallow, that it must often be cleans'd to be capable of indifferent Vessels. The Compass of its Walls is not above two Italian Miles up and down. The Houses are very good, and 4 or 5 Stories high; the Streets bad, that is, Narrow, Crooked and Dirty, except that call'd le Cours. Here 'tis true the Houses are built Uniform and Proportionable, and there are orderly Rows of Trees for half a Mile; the empty space in the middle, enclos'd with Iron Chains and Benches made fast to keep out Cattle, and make it fit for the Men without any Molestation to take the cool Air under the Trees, and converse with the modest Women. The Port is defended by the Castles of S. John and S. Nicholas; as also by four small Redoubts upon many little Islands or Rocks, half a League distant, the biggest of which is call'd Castellon, where the Ships stay to keep their Quarentine, when they come from Places suspected for Infection.

Thursday 9th, I went to see the Darsene, where the Galleys are built. It is big enough to build as many as they please, there being long cover'd Walks for making of Cables, and two cover'd Docks to build two Galleys at once. That which they call the King's Arjenal, is very stately, and has a noble Pavillion in the middle for the Officers of the Galleys, and two Docks to build two Galleys, besides a vast number of Magazines for Timber, and an Armoury as they told me for 100000 Men.

The Cathedral stands near the Sea in the West Part of the City. It has three Isles, and the Chappels are well Contriv'd; but the Bishop's Palace, who is a Suffragan of Aries, has nothing remarkable.

Thence I went to see the aforementioned Castle of S. John, on the right hand without the Gate. It has a Platform with good Guns level with the Water, but the rest of it was ill provided, some having been restor'd from thence to the Duke of Savoy upon the last Peace. Being seated on a Rock two Parts whereof are encompass'd by the Sea, it has no Ditch but only on the Land side. About Noon 20 Galleys came in returning from the East, and from Naples, and these added to 21 more that were in the Port, were a pleasant sight. After Dinner I went over in a Boat to see the opposite Castle of S. Nicholas, on a Hill to the left of the Harbour. It has several good modern Works, and at the foot of them a great Platform rebuilt, with many Pieces of Cannon both above and below. Upon another higher Hill is a great Fort, call'd Nostre dame de Garde, which serves for a Land Mark to Ships at Sea.

In my return home I pass'd by the Town-House, which towards the Sea has a good Marble Front, and good Rooms within curiously Painted.

Being desirous to see Aix the Metropolis of Provence, I hir'd two Horses on Monday 10th, and rode thither after Dinner, along a dirty stony Way, yet pleasant by reason of the Mountains about it, and the Hills which are well cultivated

Garnelli.
1609.  cultivated and strew'd with abundance of Houses of Pleasure, belonging to the Inhabitants of Marseilles and Aix. I came thither late having travell'd five Leagues, and lay at la Selle d' Or, or the Golden Saddle. This City is seated on a Valley encompass'd with Hills, and tho' it be the Residence of a Parliament, a Chamber of Accounts, and a Generality; yet its Compass is not above two Italian Miles, enclos'd with indifferent Walls without a Ditch. The Houses however are beautiful, and four or five Stories high, like those of Marseilles; the Streets wide, strait and well Pav'd, some of them in the form of a Cross, like the Cassero at Palermo.

Saturday 11th, I saw the Cathedral, which is of the Invocation of S. Saviour, has three Isles, and is dark, and little adorn'd, as is usual in that Country. The Archbishop's Palace is large, but plain. I went to the new Church of the Jesuit, which is small, which was that Day bless'd by the Archbishop, and there were present the four chief Magistrates of the City, whom in Provence they call Procureurs du Pays, they wore a Belt of black Velvet, which the French call Coqeron, across from the right Shoulder hanging down under the left Arm. These sat on Benches, with Cushions and Carpets before them. The Town-house is a very good one.

Thence I went to la Place du Pre- cheurs, to see the Parliament. After Mass all the Members of it came into the Hall where I saw the President sitting in a long and wide Crimson Garment, turn'd up with Ermines, like a Royal Robe. On the same Bench sat six Counsellors clad in long black Gowns, gather'd on the Back, with a long Train and wide Sleeves. Their Caps were like those Priests wear, with a great Tassel in the middle. This Robe is common to the Procureurs and Advocates; but the Counsellors, tho' they may wear no other in Parliament, yet in ProceSSIONS and other publick Solemnities they wear a red One of the same make. A Clerk Clad after the same manner, read the Petitions, but he wore a Cap of Crimson Velvet laced with Gold. This Officer in French is call'd Premier Huissier. The Procureurs and Advocates, or Plead-ers, sat on Benches below the others, and were allow'd to be cover'd. Thence I went to see the other 5 Courts, one upon the same Floor, and four above Stairs. The Grand Chambre was best Gilt and Painted, and there was a Chair in it for the King, when he should please to be present. In these Courts are ten Presidents, and about fifty seven Counsellors are Sovereign Judges of all the Affairs of the Province.

After Dinner I return'd the same pleasant Way, and got into Marseilles betimes.

CHAP. V.

The Author's Voyage from Marseilles to Genoa, and the Description of that City.

I Would willingly have gone to see the Sainte Baume, or the Cave where S. Mary Magdalen is said to have liv'd thirty Years; but thinking every Hour an Age till I return'd into my native Country, I made the necessary Provision in haste, and on Sunday 12th set out for Genoa aboard a Tartan. We sail'd out of the Harbour an Hour before Sun-set, and coasting along the pleasant Shore between the little Islands, could advance but two Miles because the Wind was contrary, and Anchor'd that Night in a little Bay. After Midnight the Wind proving fair we sail'd again. And on Monday 13th, by break of Day pass'd by a Village they call La Citee, and being five Leagues from Marseilles, sail'd in sight of the Hill of Sainte Baume, where Pilgrims are not allow'd to eat Flesh. About Sun-set we were off of Toulon, and could see the Castle and several Country Houses. We held on our way all Night. And in the Morning on Wednesday 14th, were opposite to the Town of Hyer, and then run between the three Islands of that Name and the Continent. The Wind falling then we made but little way; but it came up again at Sun-set, and we made good way till two in the Morning, when because it blew hard we cast Anchor near Fort S. Magaret, to expect Day. This Fort stands in a small Island on the Coast of France, very fruitful in Wine.

Wednesday 15th, when Day appear'd we set Sail, coasting along in sight of Antibes, where there is a Castle and Garrison, and S. Laurence, where a Ri-

Gemelli.
1699. ver divides Provence from the Dominions of Savoy. We pass'd so close to Nizza, that we could plainly see it on the flat Shore, enclos'd by a good Wall;
as also its Fortress on the high and craggy Rock, rendred Impregnable by Art and Nature. We Anchor'd after running 180 Miles at Villafranca, where e-Villafranca. very Vessel going to or coming from the West is to pay two in the hundred. Vil-lafranca is a small Wall'd Town at the foot of high Mountains, without any Harbour, but only an open Road. It is defended by a Castle on the Shore, and a Fort built on the high Mountain
Albano, Garrison'd by the Duke of Savoy.

After Dining and paying the Duties,
we went aboard again, and hoisting Sail pass'd along before the little Castle of S. Spicio, and the Fort of Oviezza, seated on the top of a Hill, and belonging to the same Duke. We came two Monaco. hours before Sun-set to Monaco, where landing, I went up a steep way, about the middle whereof there is a Guard to the Town. Being come to the upper Gate I found another Guard, a Drawbridge and Ditch cut out of the Rock.
Here I entred through a great Gate to see the Prince of Monaco's Palace. The way to it is up two spacious Marble Stair-Cases made Semicircular, which afterwards meet in a stately long Gallery that leads to the Lodgings and Apartments, which for their Number, Magnificence and Furniture may serve several Princes together.

Monaco is a Very strong Place on a Rock, the Walls inaccessible on all sides, and with only one Gate, up to which there is a very unequal Way, as was said before; it is small, and has only one Monastery of Nuns of S. Teresa, because it is poor and cannot maintain Fry-ars. There are abundance of heavy Cannon besides the small, all well mounted. The Garrison consists of about 900 Men, pay'd by the King of France.
At Monaco they recover the Duty of two in the hundred only of the Ships that return from the West, whereas all pay at Villafranca,

Thursday 16th, we advanced betimes leaving on our left hand on a Hill the Village of Rocca Olcura, and others belonging to the same Prince, for ten Miles along a dry Country; and then began to coast along the Genese Shore, which begins at the City Ventimiglia;
yet all that Night could not get beyond
S. Remo, a Country abounding in Oranges, Lemmons and Olives.

The Calm held all the Night, so that on Friday 17th at break of Day we were opposite to the Village del Cervo. The Wind coming up against us, we were forced to lye tacking upon the delightful Coast of Genoa, where the industrious Genoeses make the barren Soil produce Fruit Trees. After Noon the Wind prov'd favourable, and carry'd us on a great way in sight of curious Gardens. Passing by the City of Albenga, we soon left Final behind with its two Castles, one on the Hill and the other on the Sea-Shore, where there was a Spanish Garrison; and then the City
Noli, which is large, and has high Towers upon the Houses of private Citizens, and at last came early to Savona, where we pass'd the Night. This City tho' small is Wall'd, and has a Suburb as big again as it, with as good Houses;
besides the delightful Country Houses about it, with fruitful Gardens, tho' almost contrary to Nature. The Churches of Savona are beautiful enough, as well for their Embellishments in Marble as for the Structure it self and Painting; especially the Duomo. The Castle stands upon the Shore, and has a treble Enclsure, besides several Outworks, and a deep Ditch cut out of the solid Rock. The Harbour tho' small is safe, but of difficult Entrance. Five Miles from the City is an Image of our Blessed Lady, famous for many Miracles. The Church belonging to it, besides its Priests and Religious Men, maintains about 700 Orphans of both Sexes. Savona is also famous for its curious Earthen Ware, exceeding all that is made in the State of Genoa. The Bishops of this City, of Ventimiglia and Albenga, have scarce a thousand Crowns a Year each, because their Diocesses are very small.

Having hir'd a Filucca, I set out from Savona on Saturday the 18th betimes, and passing by the neighbouring Town of Arbisola, the delicious Plain of Aren-zano, Cogoleto seventeen Miles distant from Genoa, Ultrì, and other handsome Towns on the Shore, with excellent Houses of Pleasure, as far as the Vale and River of Pofsevera, whose Mountains are nothing inferior to the delightfullest Parts of its Banks, came at length to Genoa before Noon.

Genoa lies upon the Mediterranean facing the South, in the Lat. of 43 deg.
40 min. and being seated on the side of a Hill looks from the Sea a noble Theatre. All the Buildings throughout its whole Compass of four Miles, are adorn'd

Gemelli.
1829.
dorn'd with excellent Marble; nor will those in time be inferior to them, which the rich Inhabitants will be daily erecting in the compass of 15 Miles, the Wall newly built has enclos'd. The worst is, that the Streets are Narrow and Dark. The Port is above a Mile in length, with a Light-House on the West End, and good Fortifications, under whose Protection there are two Docks, one for the Gallies, the other for the Wine Boats. In 935 it was burnt by the Saracens, and all the Inhabitants slain or made Slaves, but was afterwards Rebuilt much more nobly. It is call'd the Haughty, because the Nobility are so Proud and Intractable, having a great Conceit of themselves, tho' the little Dominion of their Common-wealth, does not extend to above 140 Miles in length along the Shore from East to West, and under 12 in breadth. Since the Scourge of the French Bombardment in 1684, they have erected two Platforms and planted good Guns on them, to keep off those Thunderbolts, which can humble the proudest Hearts. The Ladies are Beautiful and Witty, but their short way of speaking makes them ridiculous. The Men are extremely Frugal and inclin'd to Trade, which has gain'd them vast Wealth.

The Doge's Palace is one of the largest and most beautiful Structures in Europe; but not so much beautify'd with Marble as the private Houses of the Nobility. A few Steps led up out of a great Court into a noble Hall, without which are the two so famous Statues of Andrew d' Oria and John Andrea, the Deliverers of their Country. Adjoining to this Hall there are many Apartments with their particular Courts, beautify'd with Marble Pillars. Then going up two high Stair-Cases are the upper Lodgings, where is the Chamber of the great Council, for electing of the Doge, and by it the College for Matters of Government, where the twenty seven Senators and Agents (as they told me) meet, Clad in long Gowns almost like the French civil Magistrates; but the Agents cannot Vote in all Publick Affairs. In the opposite side are the Doge's Apartments, big enough, not only for him, but for any absolute Prince.

Towards Evening I went out of Town to see Prince d' Oria's Palace, standing on the Shore. It is well worth seeing for its noble Structure, Marble, Fountains, Gardens and rich Furniture.

Sunday 19th, I heard Mass in the
Vol. IV.

Church of the Dominicans, which has three Isles, supported on Pillars, and tho' large is not much beautify'd with Marble, as is the Cloister.

S. Ambrose belonging to the Jesuits, is built after the Model of their profess'd House at Naples, all lin'd with curious Marble finely wrought with large Pillars; but it is not so large as that of Naples.

The Duomo or S. Laurence's Church has a lofty noble Front of Marble of several Colours; it is large, and has three Isles form'd by eight Marble Pillars, but not so well beautify'd as is S. Ambrose.

The Palace of Eugenio Durrazzo has a noble Front, and eight good Pillars within the Court. A stately Stair-Case which parts in two, leads into spacious Apartments, all curiously adorn'd with Marble and Painting. And it may be truly said that the Palaces of private Men in Genoa are Royal.

The Church of the Barefoot Carmelites, where I went to Vespers, consists of but one Isle, and has a good Tabernacle of rich Marble and precious Stones. The most remarkable thing is the Chappel of the Franzoni on the left hand, all cas'd in pure black Marble, and particularly four Marble Pillars, twelve half Bodies of Brass, and a large Crucifix worth 10000 Crowns. On the right is the Chappel of the Durrazzi, beautiful, but not so rich.

Going thence I saw the College of S. Jerome of the Jesuits, not yet finish'd. However it is remarkable for the great quantity of Marble Pillars, that adorn the Front, and support the two Galleries, one above another; and I can affirm I counted 84 great Marble Pillars in the Cloister only. The Church is well set out, and the upper Hall for publick Disputations Embellish'd with good Pictures.

The Theater, where I saw a Play Acted, is small, with only four Rows of Boxes, and eighteen in each Row. The Price was half a Crown a Man.

Monday 20th, going to S. Ciro of the Fathers Theatins, I saw a most beautiful Church with three arch'd Isles, supported by sixteen great Pillars of white Marble. There are twelve Chappels, six on a side; and before them twenty four Pillars, and as many on the Altars, all of fine Marble of several Colours, besides other curious Works on the same Stone. The Tabernacle is of great value, the Choir beautiful, and the high Altar much more, for four Pillars of de~ ~ ~ licate black Marble. The Arch and Cupola is richly Gilt and Painted at a great Expence. In short no City in the World exceeds Genoa for Ornament of Churches, because of the admirable Marble which is not to be brought a great way.

Going out at S. Martha's Gate on Tuesday 21st, I went up the Hill to see the Albergo, which is one of the most magnificent and pious Works in the State of Genoa. Coming to this Place I perceiv'd, That the noble Venetians, as sparing as they are towards themselves whilst living, they are as bountiful to the Church dying, of those Goods they can no longer keep. This appears by the incredible and prodigious Charge, the Structure we now speak of must cost; because in order to finish it, besides the Structure erected they have been forced to level Precipices, and cut the uneven Rock smooth. Two spacious Ways lead from the first Gate to a Portico; and thence two other nobler Ways to the first Floor, where there are four Statues of the Benefactors of the Place, with Inscriptions; besides as many more upon the Stairs. The Walls within the Church are cover'd with choice Marble, with eight Statues standing upright, and a high Altar with seven Pillars, and an Image of the Blessed Virgin, Carv'd by a Master. Before we come to the Church, we see on the right hand several Galleries and Rooms, as also the Garden of the honest Women and Maids; for the Condemn'd and Penitent Women, live apart above the Church, that they may not delude the Maids. The Governess shewing me the Apartments told me there were in that Place 650 Women. From behind the high Altar and the first Portico there is a way up to several Apartments, one of Youths, another of old Men, and another of Children, where these work for several Uses of the House, and all these Apartments by reason of the height of the Place stand one above another, like a Scene of Perspective on a Stage, and it is a great Pleasure to view it from the Galleries. The whole is Govern'd with wonderful Order and Economy, Orphans and poor Children being there Maintain'd and Educated; and Portions given to Marry young Maids. At that time there were 1300 Persons maintain'd there.

Next I went to see the great Hospital, where about 400 Sick of both Sexes are maintain'd, and carefully attended with much Charity. In the first Gallery there is nothing beautiful but its length and extent, and this leads to another equal to it in bigness, which is the Women's Infirmary; with three other Apartments for Persons of Quality and young Girls. At the Entrance into the second Gallery is a beautiful Chappel, and two long Arches making a Cross, and another large one on the right hand of the Chappel.

The Senate being to meet I went thither, and saw at the end of a spacious Hall, a great Ring, with 28 Seats about it, like the Ring of the Royal Chamber at Naples. The Doge's Chair was somewhat above the rest under a Canopey. He was Clad in Scarlet, and the seven Senators about him, had long Gowns of black Damask, Caps like those Priests wear, and about their Necks old fashion Ruffs or Gorgets. When they had read a Petition, they all gave their Votes by way of Ballot. This Doge is chosen from among the Senators, and when he has Govern'd two Years, is dismiss'd by a Person appointed for that purpose, in these Words. Your Serenity has finish'd the time of your Government. Your Serenity must retire to your own House.

I heard Mass in the Church of S. Marthem, which is small, but has three Isles form'd by eight Pillars, and well adorn'd. The Parish Church of S. Luke tho' little and has but three Altars, is beautiful for its Marble Inside. The Banker's Exchange and the Merchants is great, but the Structure nothing Magnificent.

Wednesday 22d, I went to walk in Prince d' Oria's Garden, and took notice of a great Fountain, over which is a Neptune drawn on a Shell by three Sea-Horses, with several little Boys sporting about. The Palace is very spacious, and has a communication with the per Gardens by an Iron Bridge.

Hence I proceeded to see the Pharos or Lighthouse, in which at Night they set up 32 Lights, to direct the Ships that come into the Harbour. It is 600 Spans high or 450 Foot, as the Keeper told me, and a Stair-Case of 312 Steps, up which I could not get under half an Hour. It is Founded on a Rock, and about it, as well as along the Curtin, there are good Pieces of Cannon.

After Dinner I went to our Lady of the Vineyards, a Collegiate Church with three Isles, Arch'd and sustain'd by 20 Marble Pillars. All the Chappels are beautiful, with each of them two Pillars lars and excellent Painting, but the high Altar exceeds all the rest.

Gemelli. 1699. S. Francis's Church belonging to the Fathers of that Order, is large, and has three Isles divided by Pillars. On the right side there are six good Chappels, for those on the left are not yet finish'd.

Thursday 23d, I went to see our Lady of the Assumption, or of Carignano, a Collegiate Church, with twelve Canons, an Abbot and eighteen Chaplains; Founded by Bandinello Sauli, and rais'd to its present Grandeur by Francis Maria Sauli Doge. It is seated on a high Mountain, which has a Prospect of all Genoa and the adjacent Parts. The Church is rais'd upon four solid Pillars, which divide it into three Isles. In the Niches of the said Pillars are four noble Statues excellently Carv'd. The Eight Chappels are well beautify'd with Marble, as well as the high Altar. A convenient Stair-Case made within the Wall, leads up to the Cupula on the outside, whence all Genoa is seen from three several Galleries one above another.

Friday 24th, I went to see S. George's Hill, where the greatest Wealth of Genoa is. On the first Floor is the Custom-House, and above Stairs on the right Hand the antient great whamber, with fifteen Statues of noble Genoese, who have deserv'd well of their Country, placed about the Wall. The new Chamber, where sometimes the Parties concern'd meet to the number of 400, is larger, and about its Walls are sixteen Statues of good Marble, placed there in memory of good Citizens. Through this Chamber they go to that of the Magistrates, which are eight Senators, who decide all Causes relating to the Bank, and Duties of the City, sitting on Chairs cover'd with Crimson Damask.

Saturday 25th, I saw Prince d'Ors's Palace. It has a very curious Marble Front, and pleasant Gardens on the sides, and two Galleries, each adorn'd with eight Pillars. There are Stairs that look Majestick, which lead up to the Court; and from the Court another Stair-Case not inferior to the first, dividing it self into two Branches goes to the Lodgings above, of which it is better to say nothing than too little. The Court is beautify'd with twenty great Pillars, and twenty two more support the Arches of the second Floor.

At a small distance is the Palace of Brignole, the lower Arches whereof are supported by sixteen Pillars, the Stairs adorn'd with excellent Statues, and the Rooms richly Furnish'd.

Sunday 26th, I heard Mass at the Annunciada of the Franciscans, a fine Church with three Isles, divided by five Pillars of fine Marble on each side. The Arches are well Painted and richly Gilded. The Chappels on the left of the high Altar are finish'd, and all fac'd with curious Marble; the others on the right are not finish'd no more than the Front of the Church.

In the new Street there are no Houses inferior to those already mention'd. That of the Marques Balbi, which I saw Monday 27th, has twenty Pillars on the first Floor, going into a Garden full of Fountains, Statues and other Ornaments, as many more in the first Galleries of the upper Floor, and twelve in the second Galleries. The Furniture is vastly rich, as are the Pictures and Statues. This alone may prove as much as a thousand Words, viz. That the only Structure of the Palace cost 100000 Pieces of Gold. In this Marques's Book of Accounts, we saw in one Leaf, the Sum of five Millions between Debtor and Creditor. The Palace of Charles Balbi the Marques's Kinsman, is nothing inferior to his.

Tuesday 28th, I saw the Darsena or Place for the Galleys and Tartans of Wine. The Tartans are outwardmost, and further in five Galleys of the Republick, all of them shelter'd from any Wind.

Wednesday 29th, my Trunks being come by Sea from Cadiz, I put them aboard a Neapolitan Filucca to be carry'd to Naples, being resolv'd to go my self by Land, because of the ill Weather which had lasted many Days. Accordingly on Thursday 30th, I hired a Cales for Milan, and order'd my Affairs so as to depart.

CHAP. VI.

The Author's Journey from Genoa to Milan, and the Description of that City.

I Set out on Saturday the first of November, and after several times crossing the River of Polsevera, and enjoy'd the Pleasure of the Shore of S. Peter's Arena, I struck over barren Mountains, and having travell'd twenty Miles came

Vol. IV

Sunday 2d, I went on to Gavi, a frontier Town of the State of Genoa, and thence three Miles to Serravalle in the State of Milan. The Town is very small, and has a Castle on the Top of the Hill, with a small Garrison and a few Pieces of Cannon. The Country about is Pleasant and well Cultivated. At Night I return'd to Gavi.

Monday 3d, I hated at Novi, a Wall'd Town with a Castle on a Hill, and then proceeding on my Journey, at two Miles end'ntred the State of Milan, and Din'd at Tortona, fifteen Miles from where I fet out. This City is seated in a Plain, and enclos'd with a low Wall and Ditch; has a Castle on the Hill with a good Garrison; but the Houses are not handsome. Proceeding ten Miles further I pass'd through Voghera, a good Town, twice as big as Tortona, and four Miles beyond it lay at the wretched Inn of Purana.

Wednesday 4th, I set out betimes along a very dirty Road, and after five Miles Riding, ferry'd over the Po, and five Miles further over the Grevaln, and stay'd to Dine at Pavia, crossing the Tesin, which Waters it on a Bridge.

Pavia is a strong Place enclos'd with a broad wet Ditch, and good Outworks. The Castle looks more like a Palace than a Fortrefs, and within it is a good Armory, restor'd by Colonel D. Francis de Cordova. The City is Populous, Rich and Adorn'd with good Palaces. It boasts of greater Antiquity than Milan, and among others values it self upon holding out the memorable Siege laid to it by Francis I. King of France in the Year 1525. Its University is famous for having bred the famous Civilians, Jason, Baldus and the most learned Alciatus. The Monastery here of the Carthusians is one of the most Renowned in Italy, and not without reason for the excellent Picture in it. Riding ten Miles after Dinner, I pass'd through Binasco, and came betimes to Milan.

The City of Milan seated in 45 deg. of Latitude, is thought to have been built by the Gauls in the Year 395, after the building of Rome. It is above eight Miles in Compass, containing about 200000 Inhabitants, including the Suburbs. This Place is famous for four things, which are; The Multitude of People; the Magnificence of its Duomo or Cathedral, which is never without Workmen about it; its impregnable Castle; and the famous Library call'd Ambrosiana, given by the Cardinal Fre- derick Borromeo, Archbishop of Milan, and containing at least 30000 Volumes. By reason of the conveniency of its Situation, it has deserv'd from its Foundation to be the Residence of Princes and Emperors; Nerva, Trajan, Adrian, Constantius, Maximilian, Constantin, and others having liv'd here for a considerable time. When the Power of the Roman Empire declin'd, it suffer'd together with all Lombardy, or the Cisalpine Gaul, under the Cruelty of the Goths and Longobards; who being subdu'd by Charlemagne, it remain'd under the Jurisdiction of the western Emperors till 1162, when the Emperor Frederick lay'd it level with the Ground, and sow'd it with Salt. Being afterwards restor'd to its former Splendor, it continu'd as a Feof of the Empire under several Princes. Lastly, the Sforzas being expell'd by the French, and these overthrown at the Siege of Pavia by Charles the fifth's Generals, King Francis the first being made Prisoner; that same Emperor gave the Investiture of the State to his Son Philip the second King of Spain, under whose Successors it still continues.

Wednesday 5th, I went to see the Castle. The way into it is over two Bridges, and through three Gates, which led to a very spacious Place of Arms. Thence passing through another Gate, between the two strong Houses of the Dukes of Milan, there is a Court, with a Chappel in it, and the Governor's House; that is, the strong House on the right Hand of the Gate, whose Windows look upon the Place of Arms; for that on the left is taken up with the Ammunition, Armory and Hospital, and its Windows look towards the Wall. I was told these two Houses had been built there delignedly, that the two Dukes, who then were no good Friends, might not so much as look at one another. This Castle has six Bastions, with twelve Pieces of Cannon upon each of them, and six half Moons, and a wide deep wet Ditch. At the Entrance there are two high Towers with Brick Walls, about thirty Spans thick, and cas'd with hard Stone, Diamond-cut. On these and the Walls of the Curtins there are vast heavy Pieces of Cannon. This Castle is generally look'd upon as the best, the greatest and safest of all the Fortresses in Europe; and its Armory, tho' at present not so full, is reputed sufficient to Arm all Italy. They say it was built by Galeazzo Visconte, the second Duke of that Name, and afterwards wards improv'd by the Emperour Charles V. It stands on the west side of Milan and its Liberty extends half about within the City, in which Precincts no Officer can apprehend Malefactors, without the Constable of the Castle's leave.

At Night I saw a very wretched Play Acted at the Theater in the Governor's Palace, which has an hundred Boxes in four Ranks.

Thursday 6th, I went with D. Ferdinand Valdes, Constable of the Castle to see the Ceremony of the King's Birth Day at the Palace, and Prince Vaudemont's Furniture. Having pass'd the Hall and Antichamber, we came into another hung with Damask with Gold Fringes, and adorn'd with Looking-Glasses in Silver Frames, and other Things of Cristal. The next Room was hung with Crimson Velvet, the Edges embroider'd with Gold, and there was a State-Bed like a Pavillion, embroider'd about with Gold, and adorn'd with curious Eagles on the Top. Nothing in short, could be Richer or more Stately, tho' it had been set with Jewels. In the same Room there were several Tables cover'd with Silver and Looking-Glasses, with Frames of the same Metal. When the Hour of the Ceremony was come, the Constable order'd a Gentleman to carry me in his Coach to the Collegiate Church call'd La scala, whither he was to come with the Governor. Being at the Church, I saw the Prince come in a Coach and eight Horses, follow'd by two other Coaches and eight Horses, and one with six for his Retinue. The Præpositus and Canons went out to meet him at the Door with Holy Water, then accompany'd him to the high Altar, he being carry'd in an open Chair because he was Gouty. All the Officers Civil and Military were present, with the Prince's Courtiers richly Clad. The Footmen and Swiss Guards were also new Clad, some in Velvet, and some in green Cloth laced with Gold. The Governor took his Seat, as absolute Princes do on a Chair at the right side of the Altar, within a Damask Curtin above the Choir. The Præpositus fate over against him, three steps lifted up above the Floor, and said Mass in Pontificalibus. There were ten other Velvet Chairs with Cushions of the same, and Desks to kneel at, cover'd with Cloth, where fate first the Constable of the Castle, Colonel Cordova; next D. Ferdinand Valdez; the Marques de Burgo-mayne, General of the Forces and Grandee of Spain; the great Chancellor, and other Officers Civil and Military. The Governor was Incens'd, and had the Gospel and Pax brought him to kiss; the others were only Incens'd, and had the Pax. Then the Te Deum being Sung, all the Guns were Fir'd.

I return'd in the same Coach to the Palace; and going in at the great Gate (for before I entred at that of the Theater) saw other Apartments richly hung with Damask and Tapistry. The Prince Governor retiring into the further Chamber, dismiss'd the Company with much more Affability, than is us'd in other Places. I return'd thence with the Constable to the Castle, where the Rooms were richly Furnish'd with curious Tapistry, Silver ingeniously wrought, Scrutoires, and Pictures of the best Masters of past Ages. He led me into a Room within the Gallery, where formerly the Clock stood, and that look'd into the Parade. It was very light-som hung with rich Damask, and set out with other costly Furniture. Here a Table was cover'd, about which nine Men and a Lady being seated, many noble Dishes were serv'd in. After Dinner the Constable, because he could not go himself, appointed D. Francis Ramirez, Commissary General of Horse, to conduct me to Court to see the Solemnity. Being come into the Antichamber, we waited a long time among several Officers Civil and Military, and when the Ladies were come, the Prince was drawn out in a Chair upon Wheels, and stopping in the Antichamber, said, Come in Gentlemen; a piece of Civility I never saw any Man in his Post perform. We went with him into a Room hung with Damask, where the Ladies were sitting in rows, and at the upper end the Princess Governess, on another sort of Chair. The Prince went on as far as the Bed before-mention'd, and there discours'd with other Ladies, and they all present, being now and then treated with variety of Sweetmeats. An hour after we all went to the Boxes in the Theatre, and there heard a Consort of 50 Instruments placed on the Stage, and before it in a Semicircle, and then a Composition sung by four Voices, call'd, The Security of Piety; which was so far from answering the Sweetness of the Instruments, that it made every one wish it at an end. In the mean while there was a noble Collation of all-sorts distributed. I was carry'd home late at Night by the Commissary.

Gemelli. Hospital. 1699. Hospital. Saturday 8th, I went to see the great Hospital, founded by the Dukes of Milan, and may be said to be one of the best in Italy. It has a stately Front outwards, and within a great square Court, with double rows of Pillars, which support both the upper, and lower Arches; and both above and below, there are many Galleries for the Sick, who were then about 800, well attended; not to speak of several Stores, and Apartments for the dwelling of those who serve the Sick. They told me the Revenue of this Hospital was above 150000 Philippines. Half a Mile from the City, without the Roman Gate, they were making a Buryal place for those that dy'd in the Hospital, and the Work is so great, that they had already lay'd out 200000 Philippines upon it.

Lazaretto. Sunday 9th, I saw the Lazaretto, for People infected with the Plague, which is another great square Structure, two good Musket shot in length, with above 300 Rooms about it. In the middle of it is a Garden, let for 2000 Philippines a Year.

Monday 10th, in the Evening Peter Paul Caruaggio, Professor of Mathematics, carry'd me out in his Coach to see the City. After some time being drove about, we went to the Exchange, and to the Free Schools, which they say were founded by the Longobard Queens; and there he shew'd me the Chair, on which St. Augustin taught. Opposite to it we went into the College of the Noble Milanese Doctors, which is an excellent Structure founded by a Pope of the House of Medicis. None but Persons of Birth, are admitted into that College, and to them is referr'd the first Hearing of civil Causes by superior Courts.

Tuesday 11th, the Governor, Archbishop, and Officers Civil and Military, went to hear Mass and Sermon at the Duomo or Cathedral, that being the last of the nine Days Devotion to S. Charles. The Governor sat within a Curtin, on the left Hand of the Altar within the Rail, and the Princess in a sort of Pew. The Officers had not Chairs, as in the Royal Chappel, but Benches cover'd with Damask, and Cushions to kneel on. The Sermon, and Musick were very good. This Church being 200 Cubits long, and 130 in breadth, is counted the 8th Wonder of the World for its largeness, curious Marble, excellent Statues, and other rich Ornaments; tho' it is not yet quite finish'd, after so many Years, nor any Hopes that it will be soon compleated; notwithstanding the great Revenue left for its Fabrick. It has five Isles, divided by well wrought Marble Pillars, which hold up the high Arches, and which together with those of the high Altar, are in all 70. All the Structure both within and without, up to the very Roof, is adorn'd with excellent Statues of half length, and other choice Carving in Marble. By this you may judge what the Altars, and Chappels are; especially the high Altar, on which there is a rich Silver Tabernacle. The Churches in Milan are generally well serv'd, notwithstanding their great Number; for they told me there were eleven Collegiate Churches, 71 Parishes, and 74 Monasteries of Monks, Friars and Nuns, besides Hospitals.

In the Evening, going down into the lower Church of the Cathedral, I paid my Devotion to the Body of S. Charles, kept in a Crystal Shrine, with a silver Frame, within another of Silver, and gilt Brass, it was richly embellish'd with Gold within.

CHAP. VII.

The Author's Journey from Milan, to Bologna.

Wednesday 12th, I set out in a Coach for Bologna, paying a Pistol for my Place, and having gone ten Miles, much Snow falling, din'd at the Castle of Melegnano, and lay ten Miles further at Lodi, a Bishoprick, on the River Adda, defended by a good Castle.

Thursday 13th, I went 10 Miles, thro' a well cultivated Country, and dirty way to Casale, where I din'd, and then riding ten Miles further, came to Pia- cenza, Ferrying over the Po, hard by it.

Piacenza is seated on a Plain, and is about five Miles in compass. The Houses and Streets are very good, but ill Inhabited. In the great Market Place, there are 2 Brass Statues on Horseback, of excellent Workmanship, the one of Alexander Farnesius, the other of his Son Ranuccio.

Friday 14th, in the Morning I went to see the Palace, where the Duke of Par- emelli.

1699. Parma resides, when he comes to this City. It is Magnificent both for Structure and Furniture; and particularly in the Prince's Apartment, there are four Rooms hung with wrought Sattin, and the last with Cloth of Gold, with an extraordinary rich Bed. The lower Floor is hung with good Tapistry; and the Theatre by it, is as good as can be wish'd. The Cathedral has three Isles, with handsome Altars.

I set out late from Piacenza, and having travell'd 15 Miles along a well Pav'd Road, between pleasant Fields well cultivated, lay at the Inn of Grattarolo; there being no fording the River Stiron, because it was swollen, with the Rain fallen the Night before.

We set out betimes upon Saturday 15th, pass'd through the City Borgo, and having gone 15 Miles, at the River Taro, met such a Number of Coaches and Caleshes, that I was forced to wait four Hours, to get over the two Branches of that River, tho' there were two Boats, which had a Roman Testone for every one they Ferry'd over. Riding 5 Miles farther, we came late to Parma, where we should not have got in, had not the Duke, having been himself at the River, Order'd out of his own Goodness, that the Gate should be open'd.

Parma. Parma is in the latitude of 44 deg. 20 min. on a Plain, upon the Via Flaminia, and they will have it to be in such an excellent Air, that some of its Citizens have liv'd to 120, and even to 130 Years of Age. Its Buildings are Magnificent, the Churches well adorn'd, and the Streets wide, especially that call'd del Verze. The compass of it is about four Miles, and the River Parma runs through the middle of it, whence it takes Name. The Duke's Palace is large, and fit to entertain several Princes, and has good Apartments Embellish'd with excellent Pictures, and all sorts of rich House-hold-stuff.

Sunday 16th, I heard Mass in the Cathedral, which has three Isles divided by tall Pillars, but without much Ornament. The College is one of the finest Structures that can be seen, both within and without; being all painted like the Palaces opposite to it. There are Rooms enough for 260 Collegians of good Birth, and for the Professors, Officers and Servants. There are also two Theatres, a little and a great one, well Painted, as is the great Hall for Gentleman-like Exercises. The Publick Theatre is not very Magnificent, nor any of the best in Italy, being small, and having only five rows of Seats.

We set out late from Parma, and at five Miles end, passing over a Bridge, where every Traveller pays ten Pence, entred the Dukedom of Modena, and Riding ten Miles through it, among well cultivated Fields, diversify'd with Houses of Pleasure, came to Reggio. This City was Built on the Via Amilias, by Lepidus the Triumvir, who resided in it a long time. It is Famous for its great Fair, for its good Churches and Streets; and for the Palaces, that Embellish'd it, and among the rest that of Prospero Scarsuso, before which there are two most excellent Statues, of Hercules and Lepidus, fit to be placed in any Royal Gallery. The Church of our Lady of Reggio, call'd of the Fathers Servants, before which the aforementioned Fair is kept, has three Isles, of good Structure, with most beautiful Altars, especially that of the Blessed Virgin, which has curious Work in Marble, and is adorn'd with Silver.

Monday 17th, having travell'd nine Miles, we were stopp'd by the River Secchio, swollen by the Rain that fell in the Night, so that we were forced to stay till the Boat could be got ready, and Paid two Giulios a Man for our Passage. Then Travelling 6 Miles further, we came in good time to Modena. This City is seated in 44 degrees of latitude on the Via Emilia, which ran from Rimini to Piacenza; the Country is Marshy, having the River Panaro on the East, and the Secchio on the West. It is the residence of the Princes of the House of Este, under whose auspicious Government it enjoys that Peace, it formerly and after the Death of Cesar wanted a long time, through the Ambition of private Romans. It is enclos'd with a good Wall, and defended by a great Fort, Built after the Modern manner. Its compass is between three and four Miles; but there is nothing remarkable in its Houses, or narrow Streets, unless it be abundance of Dirt. In the middle of it is a very high Tower, made of course Marble, which is an Argument of the Antiquity of the Place. Nothing is yet finish'd of the Ducal Palace, but the left side, and yet it looks Great. The entrance is under a high Tower, into a Court set about with large Pillars, and passing thence into a less, there appears a spacious Stair-Case, adorn'd from top to bottom, with good Marble Pillars, which leads to a great Hall before the Gemelli. 1699. Tuesday, 18th, setting out betimes, at three Miles end I Ferry'd over the River Panaro, Paying a Giulio, and three Miles further, entred upon the Territory of Bologna, coming to Castel Franco, a Town consisting of one long Street, with good Shops; but there is by it a good Fort, with a Garrison of the Popes. Then going four Miles further, I din'd at the Inn of Samoggia, where the Post is; and ten Miles from thence, thro' a cultivated Country full of pretty Country Houses, came betimes to Bologna, and lay at the Pilgrim's Inn. Meeting here with the Messenger of Florence, who was to set out the next Morning, I resolv'd to go with him.

Bologna.

Bologna is seated in 44 degrees of Latitude, and on the Via Emilia as well as Modena. It is a City of great Antiquity, ennobl'd by the Archiepiscopal Dignity, and Residence of the Legate Apostolick; famous for its Univerlity, Beauty, Bigness, Wealth, Delightfulness, and number of Inhabitants, which amounts to 80000. The Buildings are of the best in Italy, all adorn'd with noble Porticos, through which the People may always walk under shelter. The Tower call'd Degli Asinelli is very wonderful, as well for its crooked Structure, as extraordinary Height. I pass by the rest in silence, having said enough in the First Volume of my Travels in Europe.

CHAP. VIII.

The Author's Journey from Bologna to Florence, and the Description of that City.

I Set out betimes on Wednesday 19, with the Messenger; and after riding 16 miles among the Appennine Mountains, whose steepness does not hinder the Country People from sowing a great deal of Corn upon them; we staid to dine at Lujano. Then continuing our Journey with a violent cold Wind that had like several times to unhorse me, entred upon the Dominions of the Great Duke, divided from the Popes by a Rivulet near the Village of Filicaia. We shew'd our Certificate of Health, which must of necessity be brought from Bologna at Pietramala; and at last came to Firenzuola, after 14 miles riding.

Thursday 20, we set out two hours before Day; the Wind blowing violent hard and cold, and with great trouble mounted the six miles to the top of the high Mountain Giogo, which to me seem'd like Aeolus his Court; all which way, at small distances there are small Houses of Country People, who lead a wild sort of Life. Then we went down six miles again to S. Peter a Seve, a Village defended by a Fort, and staid to dine at the Inn of the Bridge, where we had good Entertainment. Hence we rode six miles of good Way, all the road from Bologna to Florence being pay'd; then ascending a mile, and going down five, we came to the Gate of Florence, where my Trunks were narrowly search'd, and my Arms secur'd before I pay'd the Giulio for Entrance.

Florence is so beautiful, pleasant and well-built, that in the Opinion of so great a Prince as Charles the Fifth, it ought to be shew'd only upon Holy-days; for it exceeds the noblest Cities of Italy in spacious Streets, magnificent Palaces, Ornament of stately Churches, Magnificence of publick Structures, Squares, Fountains, and excellent Statues. It is seated in 43 deg. 20 min. Latitude, in a Plain encompass'd with Mountains; and is said to have been founded by Sylla's Soldiers in the Year 645, after the building of Rome. The Triumvirs made it a Colony; and after the declining of the Empire, and rise of the Longobards, becoming an Imperial free City; it so continu'd till 1530, when it was forced to submit to the Power of Charles the Fifth, who created Alexander de Medicis first Duke of Florence. Its compass at present is about 5 miles, well Wall'd, with a Ditch about, and a strong Castle, and inhabited by near 100000 Souls.

Friday 21, I saw the Collegiate Church of S. Laurence, divided by 14 Pillars into three Isles. Here is the Ducal Chapel founded by Ferdinand the Third, of whose Magnificence and Structure it is better to be silent than say too little. Of six Tombs only that are to be placed in it, only four have been finish'd in ninety Years, so curious and artificially are the precious Oriental Stones wrought whereof they are made; by which, a Man may judge of the rest of the Chapel. There is another, in which all the Subjects

Florence.

S. Laurence.

Subjects

Gemelli. Subjects of the Family are buried ; and in it are six Statues made by the Divine Hand of Michelagnolo, Buonorota, and three of his best Scholars.

Cathedral.

The Cathedral is adorn'd on the outside with a curious Front of Marble of several Colours, and a square Tower of a prodigious height. Within it is divided into three Isles by four Pillars cas'd with Marble. All about it there are excellent Statues, but the best are an Adam and Eve; one of our Saviour, and of God the Father; the Work of Baccio Bandinelli, a Florentine, placed in the Choir and on the High Altar. This Choir is an Oögon, beset with small Pillars, and other curious Works in Marble.

Opposite to this is the Church of St. John, built round in the form of a Cupola, with three Brass-gates of admirable Workmanship; over which there are nine Statues, three over each, six of Brass and three of Marble, all incomparably fine. In this Church are the Tombs of some Florentin Popes, and excellent Statues.

Going home I pass'd through the new Market, where the Gentry us'd to walk under a noble Gallery supported by 20 Marble Pillars.

After Dinner I went to the Piazza or Great Square, to see the Statue of Cosmo de Medicis on Horseback, all of Brass, exquisitely wrought; and then the Giant's Fountain, with 12 Brass Statues about it, and one in the middle of an excessive bigness. Before the Gate of the Old Palace, which was the House of the common Assemblies of the Commonwealth of Florence, are two great Statues; one of them being a great Masterpiece, is said to be Hercules. Within is a Court with nine Pillars that support a vast high Tower. In the room above are 16 good Marble Statues, and six great Pieces, on which the Conquests of Siena, Pisa, and other Cities of the State is painted by an able Master. Opposite to this Palace is another, where the Great Duke's Guards live; and in its Portico there are two curious Brass Statues, and one of Marble.

G. Duke's Gallery. Tho' I had twice before seen the Great Duke's Gallery, yet I would go again a third time. This is compos'd of rows of no way contemptible Building upon the River Arno, which runs through the midst of the City; in one of which the Duke's Artificers work, and he keeps his Armory; and in the other his Rarities are kept; both of them are set off with long rows of excellent Brass and Marble Statues. In the first room are the Pictures of the most celebrated Painters, drawn by their own hands; in the next, several Vessels of the finest China Ware, plac'd in excellent order, and in the middle a Table made of Touchstone, with most curious Workmanship of Flowers, Birds, and the like, of other sorts of Stones inlaid. In a place on the left hand coming from the Great Square, they shew thirteen Cupboards, full of Plate curiously wrought; one of Gold Plates, Dishes, and other Vessels; another with Gold and Silver Antependiums, made by Cosmo de Medicis in pursuance of a Vow, setting in them Diamonds, Rubies, and other precious Stones. In another there are several Horse Furnitures, all cover'd with precious Stones; in such another, a Chair adorn'd with Jewels, on which the Great Duke sits in publick upon S. John's Day, to receive Homage of his Subjects; and in the rest, Vessels of Gold and Silver of incomparable Workmanship, and other Rarities of inestimable Value. In another room they shew'd me a Tabernacle and Antependium, enrich'd to admiration with Oriental Pearls, for the service of the Chappel before-mention'd. In another room there were abundance of Antiquities in Brass, and Rarities brought from the Indies. A Pillar and a Table of very transparent Alabaster; a Lamp of Amber presented by the Duke of Saxony; a Picture in Mosaic Work, and other things of great Value.

Near this room is the Armory divided into Four Parts: In the first, there is Armour and Weapons defensive; in the two next, Fire-Arms, and others of extraordinary Workmanship, and the Skeleton of a Mare standing, whose Hair of the Main and Tail are shewn, being four Yards long. In the last, there are Horse-Furnitures and Turkish Arms wrought with Gold, Silver and precious Stones.

In the great Room is the so famous Statue of Venus, call'd of the Medicis, made in Greece, as is suppos'd 2300 Years since, with five other excellent Statues. Besides this, a Cabinet set with precious Stones; a Night-piece drawn by a Dutch-man, in which is painted a Woman with a Candle in her Hand, which gives it such a Light that it is wonderful; another Piece of Mosaic Work made not long since by a French-man; a large Head made of one only

Gemelli. Turkey Stone ; and abundance of other things worth observing, which I omit for brevity sake ; besides the Shape of the Great Duke's prodigious Diamond weighing 552 Grains.

Going into the other room, I saw most excellent Pictures ; a Table of Lapis Lazuli, ingeniously inlay'd with other Stones ; a Cabinet made in Germany, with wonderful painting on Lapis Lazuli, representing all the History of the Old and New Testament, and within it is kept great Curiosities in Wax, and white and yellow Amber.

In one of the other two Rooms, there are Pictures of great Value, and a Cabinet made of East Country Wood ; a small Table of Jasper Stone, with several precious Stones set in it ; and several embroider'd Chairs brought from Persia. In the other, there are Maps, Spheres, and other Mathematical Instruments ; and an extraordinary Loadstone, and a great piece of Lignum Aloes. The East Country Stones design'd to be curiously wrought, are below in a great Room, where are also the Skins of Elephants, and other strange Creatures.

Palace. Saturday 22, I went over a Stone-bridge to see the Great Duke's Palace, seated on the farther Bank of the River Arno. In the Court is a stately Fountain ; up the Stairs on the right hand, are the Princesses Lodgings, with curious Statues at the Entrance : On the left the Great Duke's, with Statues also, in whose second Room there is a way on the one side to his own Apartment, hung with Crimson Velvet, fringed with Gold ; and on the other, to the Prince's, hung with Tapestries. Then I went to the Garden, which is very large, and on the left hand found delightful Fountains, a Plat of Mirtle curiously cut, and a Park with a great Statue of the Goddess Ceres in the middle. On the right hand there were Coppes, and at the foot of the Hill a Fountain call'd The Island, in which there are excellent Statues, and close by Rooms with several Beasts, and Birds shut up in them.

Hence I went to the Church of S. Michael, which is a square Building very strong and high, all of Marble. Within it there are 14 excellent Statues, some of Brasses, and some of Stone, and four Altars curiously adorn'd. Returning home I met with a Florentin, who had but one Finger in each hand, and told me he had two Brothers born with the same Imperfection, and one of them had but two Toes on each Foot.

Sunday 23, I saw the Great Duke's celebrated Library, preserv'd in a large Room of the Monastery of S. Laurence. Over the Gate appears a noble Front, made by the direction of the renowned Statuary Buonarota. The chief value of the Library consists in above 3000 Manuscripts in several Languages ; and among the rest they told me, there was a Hebrew Bible, for which the Jews would have given the Great Duke 70000 Crowns, he having taken it from them. This precious Treasure of Manuscripts was gather'd by Pope Clement the Seventh of the House of Medici, he having the good fortune to get very many belonging to the Library of Constantinople.

CHAP. IX.

The Author's Journey from Florence to Rome.

HAVING hir'd a Calash to Rome for 12 Piastrs, I went along with the Messenger, who set out on Sunday 23 before Noon ; we travell'd along Hills and Mountains naturally barren, but made fruitful by the industry of the Florentines, who make use of all Excrements to improve the ground. Being pass'd the Castle of Barberino, where the Lords Barberinos of Rome have a Farm in memory of their Original, and making our whole Day's Journey 21 miles, we lay at Poggibonzi, a wall'd town.

He set out on Monday 24, five hours before Day, and riding 14 miles, came by break of Day to Siena. This antient City is longer than it is broad, seated on an Ascent, the Buildings few but good, the third part of it being full of Orchards and Vineyards. It is inhabited by a conspicuous Nobility, which in all times has produced Cardinals, and sometimes Popes. The Cathedral is cover'd both inside and outside with black and white Marble, besides many Statues and Carv'd Work. From the Gate appear three beautiful and spacious Isles, divided by above 30 Pillars, cas'd in black and white Marble. The Pulpit is held up up by 12 Columns, and all curiously carved about in Figures, nothing inferior to the curious Statues about the Church. The Font is in the fine Chappel of S. John Baptist. Adjoining to the Church, Opposite to it, are the Princes and Archbishops Palaces; and in the great Square, that of the Senate, with a Tower of a great height, and a handfom Fountain. We travell'd 18 miles after Dinner, through a well cultivated Country, tho' not plain, where we met extraordinary beautiful Country Women, with great Straw-hoods on their Heads. This Night we lay at the Castle of Turrineri, and the Inn which is the Post-house.

Tuesday 25, going out two hours before Day, we did nothing but go up and down Hills with Rain and Fog, and at the end of 18 miles came to the Inn of Raducosani, so call'd of the Village of that Name. The Rain continuing, we went down that high Mountain for six miles to the Valley and River of Riego, which we cross'd eight times, and not without danger, by reason of the Flood. A little further ends the Territory of the Great Duke at the River Centino, whence we went to lye at Aquapendente, the first City of the Patrimony of the Church, 14 miles from Raducosani.

Wednesday 26, After nine miles riding we din'd at the Town of Bolsena, not being able to go farther, because of the Cold and Snow that fell. This place is on the Bank of a great Lake, in which there are two Islands. Then passing thro' the City of Montefiascone, at the end of 18 miles more, we lay at the City Viterbo, which is three miles in compass.

Thursday 27, We first went 5 miles up a frozen Mountain, and at the end of as many more came shivering to dine at Ronciiglione, a good Town, seated on the Cliffs of a Mountain. Then we advanc'd 15 miles, and lay at the Inn of Bucurco, a bad place for Strangers.

Friday 28, Riding 15 miles, we came to Rome.

Rome, the Queen of Cities and Head of the World, is seated in Latium in 41 deg. 40 min. Latitude; tho' the Vatican Suburb is in Tuscany, and is water'd by the Tyber, which comes in at the North end and runs out at the South towards Offia. It is suppos'd to have been founded, and so call'd by Romulus, the Son of Rhea Silvia, descended from Eneas about the end of the sixth Olympiad, 753 Years before the Birth of Christ. Romulus at first wall'd in only the Palatine Hill; then that of the Capitol was added, and in following Ages it grew to that bigness, that in the Reign of the Emperor Aurelianus it was about 13 miles in compass. Augustus divided it into 14 Regions, or Wards. But why do I take upon me to speak of Rome, which by its Actions has rendred it self glorious and immortal throughout the World, insomuch that he scarce deserves the Name of Man, who has not some knowledge of its Prosperity and Adversity. It will suffice to say, that tho' it is not in its antient Splendor, yet the very Ruins testifie what it has been; and the modern Structures are not so mean, but that they render it preferable to any other the most famous City. For, where can there be found such magnificent Churches, such sumptuous Palaces, such noble Streets, such delightful Gardens, and such pleasant Fountains? Not to speak of the wonderful Painting and Carving. The Court may be call'd the Mistress of others in Europe, and is the best Theatre, on which that the Multitude call Fortune, acts her part, and shews her vicissitude. I will speak all its Glory in a word; It is the Seat of the true and lawful Successor of S. Peter; that is, the Head of the World, no less than it was in Passages; for it is not to be accounted a less Honour, but rather much greater, to rule the spiritual and nobler part of Man, than to subdue their Bodies by force of Arms.

CHAP. X.

The Voyage round the World concluded at Naples; with some Account of that City.

Saturday 29, I set out betimes, and travelling 20 miles lay at Velletri, a longish open City, seated on a Mountain. The Houses and Streets are convenient enough, and the Fountain in the Marketplace, with the Pope's Statue in Brass, is very beautiful.

Sunday 30, we paid a Giulio at the Gate for each Trunk; and riding 14 miles, staid to dine at Sermoneta, a Town

Gemelli. Town belonging to the Duke of that Name, seated on the top of a Hill, where we were forced to pay Toll again. Then we rode 13 miles on a bad way, and came to lodge at Piperno, a Town ill wall'd, on the sides of a Hill, which in former Ages made War upon Rome.

Monday the first of December, having travell'd 15 miles, we din'd at Terracina, the last City of the Pope's Dominions, enclos'd with an old Wall, and seated on the side of a Hill. Going 10 miles farther, we lodg'd that night in the City of Fondi in the Kingdom of Naples. It is famous for being the place of the Birth of Pope Soter, for being ruin'd by Barborassa in 1534, and for its Antiquity; for in the Year 421, after the Foundation of Rome, it was in amity with the Romans. It is reported, that Clement the Seventh, the Anti-pope, reided here sometime in the Reign of Queen Joanna the Second.

Setting out early on Tuesday the 2d, we came before Noon to Mola di Gaeta, known formerly by the Name of Formia. After Dinner we ferry'd over the River Garigliano, and having rode 18 miles, lay at S. Agata di Sessa. Short of the River are the Ruins of a very antient Theatre, and other Structures, ruin'd by Age; and at a small distance a very long Aqueduct, perhaps belonging to the antient Minturna.

Wednesday 3, we set forwards four hours before Day by Torch-light; and came to dine at the City Capua, near the River Vulturnus, whose Banks are join'd by a fine Stone-Bridge. This City is enclos'd with a good Wall, and defended by a Castle. Some think it was founded by Capis Silvius, King of Alba, and others of the Oscans, by whom it was call'd Osca. It was detested and reduced to Servitude by the Romans, for having entertain'd Hannibal, who was debauch'd by its Pleasures, and then came to be a Colony, tho' it had before vy'd with Carthage and Rome it self. It was destroy'd by Genfericus King of the Vandals, rebuilt by Narses, and again subverted by the Longobards. At present it stands on the ground, where the antient Casilinum is reported to have stood, and the Ruins of the Old One are to be seen two miles to the Northward on the Hill call'd Tifata. Riding eight miles after Dinner through delicious Plains, we came to Aversa, (thought to be built of the Ruins of Atella;) and four miles from thence I began to meet my Friends, who were come out to honour me; and after mutual Embraces we took Coach, and proceeding four miles farther, entred the long wish'd for City of Naples: And thus I finish'd my Journey round the World, having spent in it 5 Years 5 Months and 20 Days; upon the Festival of S. Francis Xavierius, the Apostle of the Indies, and Protector of Travellers. For the Reasons mention'd in the beginning of the Fifth Volume, I did not reckon Wednesday the 3d by Thursday the 4th of December 1698, and consequently 21 Days above the 5 Months. I spent above five Months in satisfying the Curiosity of several People; till they having enough of me, as is usual, I was deliver'd from their importunity.

Naples is seated upon that Bay made by the two Capes or Promontories of Minerva and Misenum, in 41 deg. 2 min. Latitude. On the East of it is Mount Vesuvius, and the fruitful Plains of Terra de Lavora, or Campania Felix. Towards the South it looks upon the Tyrrhene Sea, and looks like a great Shell enclos'd with fruitful and delicious Banks.

This City (according to the most probable Opinion,) was founded by Eumelius Phalerus, the Son of Alcon, who was one of the Argonauts, and consequently before the destruction of Troy. Parthenope, the Daughter of the King Ferra, coming hither out of Negropont with a number of Greeks, and being taken with the delightfulness of the Place, settled at Phalerum, and began to enlarge it, so that the City afterwards was call'd by her Name. Now beause Valleyus Paterculus, lib. 1. says, that Naples was built by the Cumani; I guess the antient Phalerum or Parthenope, to distinguish it from the new City, was afterwards call'd Paleopolis, (whatsoever Lipsius says of its being founded by the Cumani;) and of this place, I conceive the Historian spoke these words, Sed aliis diligenter Ritus Patrii mansit custodia. The others diligently kept up the custom of their Country. That is, the custom mention'd by Strabo, of Sports by Lamp-light, and the like. It is also to be observ'd from what has been said, that tho' Paleopolis and Naples were neighbouring Cities, and almost one same People; yet there was some difference as to their Manners; nor were they so near, but that there was at least a mile distance between them: For Livy tells us, that the Consuls L. Cornelius and Q. Publicius besieging

 Gemelli. 1699.  besieging Palepolis, a City in League with the Samnites about the Year 426, after the building of Rome, placed their Army between it and Naples, that the Neopolitans might not relieve it. 'Tis true, we cannot tell which are the Remains of Palepolis; but yet they are very blind who seek for them within the compass of Naples; as my learned Friend Dr. Matthew Egiccio, to whom I am oblig'd for these Conjectures, has much reason to say.

This City has run through several Forms of Government. At first it was under the Athenian Laws, whilst a Confederate of the Romans; but afterwards it submitted to their Powers, and receiv'd Laws as a Colony. The Empire being overthrown in 412, it suffer'd by the Goths, and in 456 by the Vandals. Then it fell under the Dominion of the Greek Emperors in 490, then under the Heruli, and after them under the Ostrogoths, from whom it was taken in 537 by Belisarius. After him Attila, King of the Goths, took and kept it 18 Years, and then it was again brought under the Greek Emperors by Narjes. It continu'd a long time in the nature of a Commonwealth, and held out a Siege against the Saracens, tho' reduc'd to great Extremities, most of the Inhabitants being destroy'd. At length in 1128, it submitted to Roger, the third Norman Duke of Aquileia, who had the Title of King given him by Anacletus the Antipope. The Norman Line being extinct, the Suevians came next in 1195, the last King of whom call'd Manfred being slain in Battel by Charles the First of Anjou; this same Charles was declar'd King of Naples by Pope Clement the Fourth; and some time after he shed all that was left of the Suevian Blood, causing the unhappy Conradin to be beheaded in the Market-place. Eight Kings of this Family ruled the Kingdom; and Joanna the Second being at last left Heiress, she adopted Alonso King of Aragon; who in 1442 having overthrown the Faction of Renee Duke of Anjou, took Naples by the way of the Aqueducts, and remain'd peaceably possess'd of it. Five of the Family of Aragon reign'd, till Frederick the last of them was expell'd by the French and Spaniards, who had agreed to his Ruin to divide the Kingdom. But there being no lasting Friendship between different Tempers, and Sovereignty being an indivisible Point; soon after, King Lewis the Twelfth, and King Ferdinand's Commanders fell at variance; and Gonzalo de Cordove, call'd the Great Captain, had the Fortune quite to expel the French about the Year 1503. Joanna, the Daughter of Ferdinand, and Mother to Charles the Fifth, inheriting, the Kingdom devolv'd to the House of Austria.

So many Wars and Changes of Government are the cause that the antient Naples is scarce to be found in the Modern; but having been often enlarg'd, it is now grown to that degree, that the compass of its Walls is almost ten miles; and that of all the Suburbs included is 21 miles and a quarter, containing above 500000 Inhabitants. It has nine Gates on the Land-side, and 16 towards the Sea. There are three Castles well provided with Cannon and Soldiers, for that of Capuana does not deserve the Name, and at present only the Courts meet there.

I should be furnish'd with the greatest Eloquence, to give an account of the excellency of the Country this noble City is seated in, and of the worth of the Inhabitants; but I am not capable of such an Undertaking: Besides, there is no antient or modern Writer that does not extol the Beauty and Fruitfulness of its Hills and Plains, the Delicacy of its Water, the Excellency of its Wines, the Rarity of its Fruit, the Plenty of Flowers, and in short all that is good dispers'd throughout the World, found together in this place; not to mention the Charms of its Gardens, and the Delights of its Posilipo. This is sufficiently evinc'd by its having been chosen for its Habitation by the dearest Sons of the Muses, as Virgil the Prince of Poets, Statius, Livy, Horace, Claudian, Silius Italicus, and many more in the following Ages; from them the Neopolitans seem to have inherited a natural Inclination to the most Noble and delightful Studies.

If we regard its Situation, the City looks like a noble Theatre rising gradually along the sides of the neighbouring Hills on the North-side of it; if the Streets, they are excellently pav'd with Pebbles, and wide enough; if the Pallaces and publick Buildings, there is a vast number of them, and all magnificently adorn'd with Gilding and Painting, not to mention their Symmetry and noble Architecture. On the other hand, no City in Europe has such noble Spirits, and Families so greatly descended, and it is hard to decide, whether there are more great Scholars, or Noble Men. So many famous Men have been bred up in

in its Schools, that of their Works alone might be made a large and compleat Library; were not there a great neglect in publishing the worthy Labours of the Learned, and yet for what reason no Man knows. It is an addition to its Praises, that even the Provinces subordinate to so glorious a Metropolis, do and Men brought forth Men, famous for Learning in all Ages; and not to mention Saturnus, born at Amiternum, now Aquila; Ovid at Sulmo; Ennius at Rudiae near Luciae; Nevius in Capua; Pacuvius at Brindisi; Horace at Venosa; Juvenal at Aquinum, and many more; Magna Graecia alone, now known by the Name of Calabria, may furnish a whole Volume. It is most certain, that if Italy is honourable for Wisdom, it thence took its Original: For, who is there that does not know, how far the Pythagorean Philosophy spread there, being call'd by another Name Italica? And if Pythagoras teaching at Cotrone, had sometimes 600 Scholars, and none was ever admitted to his School but what had a comely Presence, and a Genius fit for Philosophy, who can deny but that soon after, a great number of notable Philosophers liv'd about in our Villages? Cicero tells us, that Divine Wit instructed all Italy in all sorts of Learning: But if we attentively read the Famblicus Calcidicus, where he speaks of the Pythagorean Sect, we shall find it was almost all made up of People of Calabria. I will not argue, whether Pythagoras was born in Samos of Greece, as is generally believ'd, or in that of Calabria, as Theo-

doret affirms; tho' Plutarch makes him of Locris, perhaps because Samos was in the Territory of Locris. But no body can deny, that (not to mention others less famous,) these that follow were Calabrians of Reggio, viz. Teetetus, to whom Plato directed his Dialogue of Wisdom; Timeus, Master to Plato; Theogenes, the first Expounder of Homer; Aristides; Parmenides; Melissus; Archita; Zeno; and Zeleucus, the great Philosopher and Legislator; and also Xenocrates, an heroic Poet and Musician; Stesicorus, a Lyrick Poet; Alexides, another Lyrick Poet; Orpheus, the writer of the Argonautica, for Orpheus the Thracian, who flourish'd before the Trojan War, could not make mention of King Alcinous, who liv'd full 300 Years after; Menander the Comedian; and the famous Philolaus, whose Books were bought by the Divine Plato for 40 Mina of Alexandria. Of later times, what Country has not cause to envy Calabria, for having brought forth Cassiodorus, Gianus Parrasius, Coriolanus, Martrianus, Pomponius Letus, Berardinus, Antony Telesius, and Sertorio Quetrimani; and now in our Days Marco Aurelio Severini, and Tommaso Cornelio, the restorers of Learning and Philosophy? But perhaps I have proceeded too far upon this Subject, and I fear I may have tir'd the Reader with my unpolish'd Discourse. It is fit therefore, that since the Voyage round the World is now ended, he apply himself to more profitable Studies, and that I put a period to the Labour of Writing, which I look upon as not inferior to that of Travelling.

A N
A C C O U N T
O F T H E
S H I P W R E C K
O F A
D U T C H V E S S E L
On the Coast of the Ile of Quelpaert,

Together with the Description of the Kingdom of C O R E A.

Translated out of French.

THE P R E F A C E.

THIS short Relation was first Printed in Holland by the Secretary, as he calls himself of the Ship that Perish'd, and was one of those that escap'd, and after a long Captivity had the good Fortune to return Home. There is nothing in it that carries the face of a Fable, invented by a Traveller to Impose upon the believing World. Yet there are some Men, who will scarce believe any thing but what they see, and at the same Time will not stir an Inch from Home to be inform'd. These sort of Creatures, are not to be satisfy'd as to the Credibility of any thing beyond their own Capacities. But for those who only seek a reasonable Testimony and Probability to believe things, which in themselves are no way Irrational, it will suffice that when this Account was Printed, the eight Men mention'd at the end of this Journal, were all in Holland and Examin'd by several Persons of Reputation, concerning the particulars here deliver'd, and they all agree in them, which seems to render the Relation sufficiently Authentick. Besides as the French Translator observes in his Preface, there is nothing here asserted in the Description of Corea, but what agrees with what Palafox, and others that write of the Invasion of the Tartars, have said before. The Account tho' small, is curious; and it may be suppos'd this Secretary, the Author, was a Man of some Learning to be capable of Writing it, and not a meer Seaman, tho' to say the Truth it is plain, and of matters so obvious, and in so indifferent a Stile that it requir'd no great matter of literature to compose it, but only as much as would raise a Man above downright Ignorance. Thirteen Years residence in Corea, was time enough to have given a much more perfect Description, and many Men in that time would have made it more ample and satisfactory; but the Author gave what he had, and I suppose his Memoirs were small, and ill digested having leisure enough, but perhaps little Inclination to write in that miserable Life, as not knowing whether ever he should obtain his Liberty, to present the World with what he writ.

A N
A C C O U N T
O F T H E
S H I P W R E C K
O F A
Dutch Vessel, &c.

The Ships Departure from Holland.

WE Sail'd out of the Texel on the 10th of January 1653, in the Evening, with a very fair Gale, and after many Storms, and much foul Weather came to an Anchor on the first of June, in the Road of Batavia. As soon as we had refresh'd our selves there for a few Days, the Governor General of the India Company, Commanded us away to Tapowan, and accordingly we set Sail on the 14th of the same Month, in our Ship call'd the Sparrowhawk. We carry'd Aboard us Min Heer Cornelius Lesser, to take Possession of the Government of Tapowan, and Formosa, with their dependances in the Place of Min Heer Nicholas Verburge, who had resided there three Years according to Custom. We had the good Fortune to come to an Anchor at Tapowan, on the 16th of July. Min Heer Lessen immediately landed, and caus'd our Ship to be unloaded. Then having advis'd with the Council, he order'd us to Japan; in pursuance whereof having our Loading and Discharge, we put to Sea again on the 30th of the same Month. The next Day held fair till towards the Evening, when, as we were getting out of the Channel of Formosa, there arose a Storm, which increas'd all Night.

Storms.

On the first of August in the Morning early, we perceiv'd a small Island very near us; we us'd our utmost Endeavours to get under shelter of it, and find some Place to cast Anchor, for in most Parts of that Sea there is no Bottom to be found. However we compass'd our design tho' with much difficulty, because we were afraid to come near a floating Timber that burnt close by us. Our Pilot fortunately looking out, had discover'd that Island, otherwise we had been lost, for we were not above a Musket-shot from it. The Fog clearing up, and the Day growing bright, we found our selves so near the Coast of China, that we could easily discern Arm'd Men scatter'd along the Shore, expecting to make their advantage of our Wreck. But God be prais'd, they miss'd of their aim; tho' the Storm increas'd rather than diminish'd. There we continu'd all that Day at an Anchor in sight of them, as also the Night following.

Vol. IV.

The next day the Wind falling, we observ'd, that the number of the Chineses was much increas'd, which made us stand upon our Guard, resolving to remove further from them as soon as possible, but were hindred by a Calm, which lasted all day and the next night. The third day we perceiv'd the Storm had drove us 20 Leagues from our Course, so that we were again in sight of the Island Formosa. We ply'd betwixt that Island and the Continent, the Weather somewhat cold; and what troubled us most, was, that the uncertain Winds and 1653.

Hamel

Various Weather.

H h h h

Calms

Hamel.
1653. Calms kept us in that Channel till the 11th of that Month, when a South-west Wind grew up into a Storm, with a heavy Rain, and forc'd us to run North-East, and North East and by East. The three following days the Weather continu'd still more tempestuous, and the Wind shifted so often, that we were continually hoisting and lowering our Sails. By this time the frequent beating of the Sea had much weakned our Vessel, and the continual Rain obstructed our making any Observation; for which reason, we were forc'd to take in all our Sails, strike the Yards, and commit our selves to the Mercy of the Waves.

Shipwreck On the 15th, the Wind blew so boisterously, that we could not hear one another speak, nor durst we let fly an inch of Sail: And to add to our Misfortunes, the Ship took in so much Water, that there was no mastering of it. Besides, the Waves every moment broke in upon us in such manner, that we expected to perish every minute. That night our Boat and the greatest part of our Gallery were carried away, which shook our Boltsprit, and made us fear we should lose our Prow. All possible means were us'd to repair the Damage sustain'd, and prevent the ill Consequences it might produce; but in vain, for the gusts of Wind were too violent, and came too close one upon another, besides the breaking of the Waves which were ready to sink us every moment. At length finding there was no way to save our selves, but by abandoning the Vessel and the Companies Goods, we resolv'd to loose a Fore-top-sail, the better to avoid the greater Surges. Whilst we were thus employ'd, a Wave coming over our Stern, had like to have wash'd away all the Sea-men that were upon the Deck, and fill'd the Ship so full of Water, that the Master cry'd out, My Mates, cut down the Mast by the Board immediately, and recommend your selves to the Mercy of God; for if one or two such Waves return, we are all lost, and all our Skill and Labour will not save us. This was our Condition, when the second Glas of the second Watch being just running out, he that look'd out a Head, cry'd, Land, Land; adding, we were not above a Musket-shot from it; the Darkness of the Night and the Rain having obstructed our discovering it sooner. We endeavour'd to Anchor, but in vain, because we found no bottom, and the roughness of the Sea and force of the Wind obstructed. Thus the Anchors having no hold, three successive Waves sprung such a Leak in the Vessel, that those who were in the Hold were drown'd before they could get out. Some of those that were on the Deck leap'd Over-board, and the rest were carried away by the Sea. Fifteen of us got ashore in the same place, for the most part naked, and much hurt, and thought at first none had escap'd but our selves; but climbing the Rocks, we heard the Voices of some Men complaining, yet could see nothing, nor help any body, because of the darkness of the Night.

On the 16th, all of us that were in a condition to walk, went calling and seeking about the Strand, to see if we could find any more that had got to Land. Some were found scatter'd about, so that we made up 36, most of us dangerously hurt. Then searching the Wreck, we discover'd a Man betwixt two Planks, which had so press'd his Body, that he liv'd but three hours. It is needless to relate how sensibly we were touch'd at the loss of our Ship, and to see that of 64 Men only 36 were left in a quarter of an Hour. However, we went along the shore to pay the last Duty to those bodies the Sea had cast up. We found none but our Captain Egbertz of Amsterdam, stretch'd out on the Sand, ten or twelve Fathom from the Water, with his Arm under his Head, whom we bury'd. Having scarce taken any Sustenance for two or three days past, because there had been no possibility of dressing any thing, we search'd along the Sands, to see whether the Sea had not cast any of our Provisions ashore, but could get only one Sack of Meal, a Cask with some Salt-meat, a little Bacon, and what was best for the Wounded Men, a Hoghead of Claret. Our greatest trouble was, to contrive how to make a Fire; for having neither heard nor seen any living Creature, we concluded we were on a Desert Island. Towards Evening the Wind and Rain somewhat abating, we gather'd enough of the Wreck to contrive some Shelter for us, making use to that purpose, of the remainder of our Sails.

On the 17th, as we were lamenting our deplorable Condition, sometimes complaining that we saw no body, and sometimes flattering our selves with the hopes of being near Japan, where we might find somebody that would put us in the way to get to the Dutch Factory, our Ship being in no condition to be refitted; we spy'd a Man about a Cannon-shot

36 Men
got to Shore.

The Natives surround
them.

shot from us. We call'd and made Signs to him ; but as soon as ever he saw us, he fled. Soon after Noon we spy'd three more, one of them with a Musket, and his Companions with Bows and Arrows. Being come within Gun-shot of us, they halted ; and perceiving we made towards them, ran away, tho' we endeavour'd by Signs to shew them we desir'd nothing but Fire of them. At last one of us resolv'd to attack them ; but they deliver'd up their Arms without making any opposition, wherewith we lighted the Fire we wanted. These Men were clad after the Chinese Fashion, excepting only their Hats, which were made of Horse-hair, and we were much afraid lest they should be wild Chineses or Pirates. Towards Evening, there came an hundred Arm'd Men, clad like the others, who after counting of us, kept us inclos'd all the Night.

They find it to be the Island of Quelpaert.

On the 18th, we spent all the Morning in enlarging our Tent ; and about Noon, there came down about 2000 Men, Horse and Foot, who drew up in order of Battel before our Hut. Our Secretary, the chief Pilot and his Mate, with a Boy, went out to meet them. When they came before the Commander, he order'd a great Iron Chain to be put about the Neck of each of them, with a little Bell, such as the Belweather wears in Holland. In that condition they forc'd them to fall down, and prostrate themselves before that Commander ; all his Men at the same time raising such a shout, that we who were in our Hut, cry'd out, We are lost, and must prepare to be us'd after the same manner, which was immediately put in execution. When we had lain sometime flat on our Faces, they made signs to us to kneel. Being in this posture, they put some Questions to us which we did not understand, and we on our side did all we could to let them know, that we intended to have gone to Nangasaky in Japan. They were as far from understanding us, as if they had never known Japan ; for they call that Country Jee-nare, or Jirpon. The Commander perceiving, he could make nothing of all we said, caus'd a Cup of Arac to be fill'd to every one of us, and sent us back to our Tent. They that conducted us, to see what Provisions we had, found only a little Bacon and Salt-meat, which they shew'd to their Chief. An hour after, they brought us Rice boil'd in Water, and believing we were almost starv'd, would not give us much, for fear it should hurt us. After Dinner they came with Ropes in their hands, which very much surpriz'd us, imagining they intended to strangle us ; but our Fear vanish'd, when we saw them run altogether towards the Wreck, to draw ashore what might be of use to them. At night they gave us more Rice to eat ; and our Master having made an Observation, found we were in the Island of Quelpaert, which is in 33 degrees 32 Minutes of Latitude.

We call it Rick ; it is made either of Rice, or of the Coco-tree, and is strong.

Hamel.
1653

These People were employ'd all the 19th in getting ashore the sad Remains of our Wreck, drying the Cloaths, and burning the Wood to get the Iron, being very fond of that Metal. Beginning now to grow somewhat familiar, we went up to the Commander of the Forces, and the Admiral of the Island, who was also come down, and presented each of them with a Prospective Glass, and a Pot of Red Wine, with our Captains Silver Cup, which we found among the Rocks. They lik'd the Liquor so well, that they drank till they were very merry. They return'd us the Silver Cup, with many Tokens of Friendship, and we retir'd to our Tent.

The Natives gather the Wreck.

On the 20th, they made an end of burning all the Wood of the Ship, and saving the Iron ; during which time, a pleasant Accident happened. The Fire they made coming to two Pieces of Cannon which were loaded with Ball, they gave so great a Report, that they all fled, and durst not return a long while, or go near the Vessel, till we had assur'd them by Signs, they needed not to fear the like would happen any more. This day they brought us twice to eat.

Give the Dutch Meat.

On the 21st in the Morning, the Commander gave us to understand by Signs, that we must bring before him all that we had sav'd in our Tent, that it might be seal'd ; which was done in our Presence. Whilst this was doing, some Persons were brought before him, who had converted to their own use some Iron, Hides, and other things sav'd out of our Wreck, which they had still in their Possession. They were immediately punish'd before our Faces, to shew us their design was not to wrong us of any of our Goods. Each of those Thieves had thirty or forty Strokes given him on the Soles of his Feet, with a Cudgel as thick as a Man's Arm, and as tall as a Man. This Punishment is so severe, that some of their Toes dropt off. About Noon they made Signs to give us to understand, we must depart. Those that were well had Horses provided for them, and the Sick were carry'd in Hammacks. Thus we set forward, attended by a numerous Guard of Horse and Foot; and travelling four Leagues, came at night to a little Town call'd Tadiane; where after a slender repast, they carry'd us into a Warehouse much like a Stable.

They remove the Dutchmen.

They are carried to the chief Town.

The 22d in the Morning, at break of day, we set out in the same order, and travell'd to a little Fort, near which there were two Gallies. Here we halted to dine, and at night came to the Town of Moggan, or Mocxo, where the Governour of the Island resides. We were all conducted to the Square before the Town-house, where about 3000 Men were at their Arms, some of whom coming forwards, gave us Water to drink in Dishes; but they being arm'd after a dreadful manner, we thought they design'd to rid themselves of us. Their very Habit increas'd our Fear, for it had somewhat frightful, which is not seen in China, or Japan. Our Secretary, attended by the same Persons with whom he appear'd the first time before the Commander of the Troops, was carry'd to the Governour. When they had lain a while prostrate on the ground, a Sign was made to us to do the same, after we had been brought near a sort of Balcony which was before the House, where he sat like a King. The first thing he caus'd to be ask'd of us by Signs, was, Whence we came, and whither we were bound. We answer'd as before, That we were Hollanders, and were bound for Nangasaky in Japan; whereupon he gave us to understand, by bowing his Head a little, that he understood something of what we said. Then he order'd us to pass before him by four and four at a time; and having put the same Question to us all, and receiv'd the same Answer; he order'd us to be carry'd to the same House where the King's Uncle, who had attempted to usurp the Throne, had been confin'd, and dy'd. As soon as we were in, the House was beset with Arm'd Men, and we had a daily Allowance of 12 Ounces of Rice a Man, and the same quantity of wheaten Meal; but very little besides, and so ill dress'd that we could not eat it. Thus our common Meals were for the most part only Rice, Meal, and Salt, and we had nothing to drink but Water. The Governour seem'd to us to be a very understanding Man; and we often found afterwards, that we had not been deceiv'd in our Opinion. He was then threescore and ten Years of Age, had been born in the Capital City of the Kingdom, and was in good Esteem at Court. When he dismiss'd us, he made Signs, that he would write to the King to know what he was to do with us. It would be a considerable time before his Answer could come, because the distance was fourscore Leagues, whereof all but ten Leagues by Land, and therefore we begg'd of him to order we should have Flesh sometimes, and something else to eat. We also obtain'd leave of him for six of us to go abroad every day by turns, to take the Air, and wash our Linnen. Which was granted, to our great satisfaction; for it was very heavy to be shut up, and live on Bread and Water. He also did us the Honour to send for us often, and to make us write something before him, both in his Tongue and in our own. There we first began to understand some words of that Language; and he discoursing with us sometimes, and being pleas'd to divert us with some little Amusements, we began to conceive some hopes of getting over one day to Japan. He also took such care of our Sick, that we may affirm we were better treated by that Idolater, than we should have been among Christians.

The Governour's Goodness.

On the 29th of October, our Secretary, the Master, and Surgeon's Mate, were carry'd before the Governour, where they found a Man sitting, who had a great red Beard. The Governour ask'd us, Who we took that Man to be? And having told him, We suppos'd him to be a Dutch-man; he fell a laughing, and said, We were mistaken, for he was a Corefian. After some Discourse had pass'd between us, that Man, who till then had been silent, ask'd us in Dutch, Who we were, and of what Country? To which we answer'd, That we were Dutch-men, come from Amsterdam in the Service of the Company, and being bound by their Command for Japan, a Storm had thrown us upon that Island. That our Vessel being stav'd, we begg'd earnestly of God, that we might be sent on our way. Then we took the boldness to ask his Name, and what Countryman he was: To which he reply'd, That his Name was John Wettevree, born at Riip in Holland, whence he came as a Volunter in the Year 1626, aboard the Ship call'd the Hollandia, and that going to Japan in the Year 1627, aboard the Frigate call'd the Onderkeres, the Wind drove them on the Coast of Corea.

A Dutch-man brought to an interpreter.

Riip is a great Village in North-Holland.

Hamcl.
1653.

Corea. That wanting Water, and being one of those that were commanded ashore to get Provisions, he and two more had been taken by the Inhabitants. That his Companions had been kill'd 17 or 18 Years since in the Wars, when the Tartars invaded Corea. That one of them born in the same Town with him, was Theodorsick Gerardus, the other John Pieters of Amsterdam. Asking him further, Where he liv'd then, and what Accident had brought him into that Island? He told us, That his Abode was in the Capital City of the Kingdom of Corea, whence the King had sent him, to know what we were, and what brought us into his Dominions. He added, that during his long Residence in Corea, he had often ask'd leave of the King to go over to Japan, without ever obtaining any other Answer, than that he must never expect it, unless he had Wings, and could fly thither. That the Custom of the Country was to detain all Strangers that came thither, but that they want'd for nothing, being provided with Diet and Cloaths as long as they liv'd. Thus all the comfort he could give us, was, that we should be treated as he had been, if we were carry'd to the King. The joy of finding so good an Interpreter dispell'd our Melancholy, and made us forget all our Misfortunes. It was very surprizing, and even wonderful, that a Man of 58 Years of Age, as he then was, should so forget his Mother-tongue, that we had much to do at first to understand him; but it must be observ'd, he recover'd it again in a Month. The Governour having caus'd all our Depositions to be taken in Form, sent them to Court, and bid us be of good cheer, for we should have an Answer in a short time. In the mean while, he daily bestow'd new Favours on us, insomuch that he gave leave to Wettevree and the Officers that came with him to see us at all times, and acquaint him with our Wants.

A new Governour.

About the beginning of December, a new Governor came, our Benefactor's three Years being expir'd. We were much concern'd at it, as not doubting but that change might be Prejudicial to us. It would be a hard task to express how much Kindness and Affection he show'd us at his departure, insomuch, that seeing us ill provided against Winter, he caus'd two pair of Shooes, a Coat well lin'd, and a pair of Stockings of Skins, to be made for every one of us. Besides he treated us nobly, and assur'd us he was sorry it had not been in his Power to send us over to Japan, or to carry us over with him to the Continent. He further added, that we ought not to be troubled at his going away, because being at Court, he would use all his endeavours to obtain our Liberty, or to have us carry'd thither. He restor'd us the Books we had sav'd, with some other parcels of Goods, giving us at the same time a Bottle of preccious Oyl, which might be of use to us, for the time to come. The first thing the new Governor did, was to reduce our allowance to Rice, Salt, and Water. We complain'd to the old Governor, who was detain'd in the Island by contrary Winds, but he sent us this Answer, That his Time being expir'd, it was not lawful for him any longer to hear our Complaints; but that he would write to his Successor, and as long as he was in the Island, tho' sparingly, we were allow'd as much as might stop our Complaints.

After that good Lord's Departure, which was in the beginning of January 1654, we were much worse us'd than we had been before; for they gave us Barley instead of Rice, and Barley Meal instead of Wheat. Thus if we had a mind to eat any other Food, we must sell our Barley, and live upon the 12 Ounces of Meal. This hard usage forc'd us to think of making better use of our liberty of going abroad by six and six at a time, than we had done before. We were invited by the approaching Spring to make our escape, and the more, because the King's Orders did not come; and we were in danger of ending our Days in that Island in Captivity. Therefore, after long consulting together, how we might seize upon a Boat in a dark night; at length six of us resolv'd to execute this Design about the end of April: But one of the Gang being got atop of the Wall, to discover the Vessel we were to seize, he was unfortunately discover'd by some Dogs, whose importune Barking made the Guards more watchful, and us lose an excellent opportunity of making our escape.

About the beginning of May, our Master going abroad with five others, three of whom are still living, as he was walking, observ'd that at a little Hamlet near the City, there was a Barque well appointed, without any Body to guard it. He presently sent one of his Company to get a little Boat and some short Planks.

The Men hardly us'd by him.

Some attempt to escape, but are punish'd.

Flamel.
1653.

Planks. Then making every one of his Men drink a Draught of Water, he went aboard without taking care for any more. Whilst they were labouring to draw the Barque over a little Shoal that was by it, some of the Inhabitants discover'd their Design, and one of them running out with a Musket, went into the Water to oblige them to return; yet that did not hinder their getting out, except one, who not being able to get up to the others, was forc'd to go back to Land. The other five going to hoist Sail, both the Mast and Sail fell into the Water. They soon got them up, and setting every Thing right with much Labour, as they endeavour'd a second time to hoist Sail, the end of the Mast broke off short, and could not possibly be mended. All these delays gave the Natives time to get into another Barque, and soon overtook them, our Men having nothing to help them away. As soon as they came together, our Men nimbly boarded them, hoping to make themselves Masters of the Vessel notwithstanding their Enemies Weapons, but finding this Barque was full of Water and unfit for Service, they all submitted. Being brought a Shore they were carry'd before the Governour, who caus'd their Hands to be made fast to a great Log, with a strong Chain, and having laid them flat on the Ground, and brought all us before them well bound and manacled; they were ask'd whether they had done that Action without our knowledge, or whether we had been made privy to it; and they all positively asserting we knew nothing of it, Wettevree beforemention'd, was set to examine what their Design was, and they answering it was no other but to go to Japan. How durst you, said the Governor, attempt that Passage without Bread and Water? They answer'd, they had chose rather to expose themselves once for all to the Danger of Death, than to dye every moment. We were immediately unbound, but the six unfortunate Wretches had every one 25 Strokes on the bare Buttocks with a Cudgel a Fathom long, four Fingers broad, and an Inch thick, being flat on the side that strikes, and round on the other. These Strokes were so unmercifully laid on, that they who receiv'd them were forc'd to keep their Beds a Month, and we were all of us depriv'd of our Liberty, and strictly Guarded Day and Night.

They are convey'd to Court.

About the latter end of May orders came to carry us to Court, at which we knew not whether we ought to Rejoyce, or be Troubled Six or seven Days after they put us into four Boats with Fetters on our Feet, and one Hand made fast to a Block, to prevent our leaping into the Water, which otherwise we might easily have done, all the Souldiers being Seafick. After two Days struggling with contrary Winds, we were put back, and our Irons taken off; we return'd to our former Prison in the Island of Quelpaert. This Island which the Natives call Sebesure, lies 12 or 13 Leagues South of the Coast of Corea, and is about 14 or 15 Leagues in Compass. On the North side of it is a Bay, where several Barques lye, and whence they sail for the Continent; which is of very dangerous Access to those that are unacquainted with it, because of several hidden Rocks, and that there is but one Place where Ships can Anchor and Ride under shelter, for in all other Places they are often drove over to the Coast of Japan. The Island is all encompass'd with Rocks, but abounds in Horses and Cattle, which pay great Duties to the King; so that notwithstanding their Breeds of Horses and Herds of Cattle, the Islanders are very Poor, and despis'd by the Inhabitants of the Continent. In this Island there is a Mountain of a vast Height, all cover'd with Woods and several small Hills which are naked, and enclose many Vales abounding in Rice. Four or five Days after, the Wind came about, and we were Ship'd again betimes in the Morning with the same Precaution as before. Towards Night we drew very near the Continent, and having lain all Night in the Road landed the next Morning, where our Chains were taken off, but our Guards doubled.

Quelpaert describ'd.

In the Morning we had Horses brought to carry us to the City Heynam, and having been separated at Sea and landed in several Places we were very glad to meet altogether again at that Town. The next Morning having taken a very slender repast, we came to the Town of Jeham, where Paul John Cools of Piermerende, our Gunner dy'd, having never enjoy'd his Health since our Shipwreck. Next Day the Governor of the Town caus'd him to be bury'd, and we mounting a Horseback came at Night to the City Nadioo. The Day following we lay at Sanjiang, thence to Tongap, after crossing a high Mountain, on the top whereof is the Fort Ilpam-Sanjiang, which is very spacious. Thence we went to the

City

City Teyn, and the next Day we baited at the little Town of Kunige, and at Night came to the great Town of Chintio where the King formerly kept his Court, and where now the Governor of the Province of Thilado resides. It is a City of great Trade and very famous in that Country, tho' a Day's Journey from the Sea. Going thence we lay at Jesan, the last Town of the Province of Thilado; then at the little Town of Gunun, next at Jinsan, and lastly at Confio, the Residence of the Governour of the Province of Tiongfiando. Next Day we cross'd a great River and entred upon the Province of Sengado, in which Sior the Capital of the Kingdom is seated. After lying many Days in several Places, we cross'd a River as wide as the Maese is at Dordrecht, a League from whence is the City of Sior, where the King keeps his Court. We reckned 75 Leagues we had travell'd from our Landing to this City, all the way Northward, only a little inclining to the West. Being come to this Town they put us altogether into a House, where they left us two or three Days, after which time they put us into little Huts, three and three, or four and four, with Chineses that are settled there. Then they carry'd us all in a Body before the King, who examin'd us to all Points by the help of Wettevree. Having answer'd him the best we cou'd, we humbly beseech'd his Majesty, that since we had lost our Ship in the Storm, he would be pleas'd to send us over to Japan, that with the assistance of the Dutch there, we might one Day return to our Country, to enjoy the Company of our Wives, Children and Friends. The King told us it was not the Custom of Corea to suffer Strangers to depart the Kingdom; that we must resolve to end our Days in his Dominions, and he would provide us with all Necessaries. Then he order'd us to do such things before him as we were best skill'd in, as Singing, Dancing and Leaping after our Manner. Next he caus'd us to have Meat given us, which was well enough after their manner, and gave each of us two Pieces of Cloth to cloath us after their Fashion. The next day we were all sent before the General of the Forces, who order'd Wettevree to tell us, that the King had put us into his Life-Guards, and that as such they would allow us 70 *Catty*s of Rice a Month. Every one of us had a Paper given him, in which was set down his Name, his Age, his Country, what Profession he had follow'd before, and what he now was, all in their Character; Seal'd with the King's great Seal, and the General's, which is nothing but the Print of a hot Iron. Together with this Commission they deliver'd to each a Musket, Powder and Ball, with Orders to give a Volley before the General every first and fourth Day of the Month; to be always ready to march into the Field with him, whither the King went, or upon any other Account. In Spring and Autumn that General reviews his Troops three times a Month, and besides the Souldiers Exercise as often in private. A Chinese and Wettevree were appointed to Command us, the former as Serjeant, and the other to have an Eye over us, and to teach us the Customs and Manner of Behaviour of the Corefians. Most of the great Men being fond of Novelty, invited us to Dine at their Houses, to see us Exercise after our Manner, and to make us Shoot and Dance. But above all, their Wives and Children were eager to see us, because the meaner sort of the Island of Quelpaert had spread abroad a Report that we were Monstrous, and that when we Drank we were forc'd for to tuck up our Nose behind our Ear. These absurd Tales were the cause that the better sort of People at Sior were amaz'd to see us better shap'd than the People of their own Country. Above all they admir'd the Fairness of our Complexion, and did so throng to see us, that at first we had much a do to break through the Croud in the Streets, and we could not be quiet at home, their Curiosity was so great. At length the General put a stop to this, forbidding all Persons whatsoever to come near us without his Leave, and the more because the very Slaves of great Men took the Boldness to come and fetch us out of our Chambers, to make a Jest at, and divert themselves with us.

In August the Tartar came to demand the usual Tribute, whereupon the King was forc'd to send us to a great Fort, to be kept there as long as the Embassador was in the Country. This Fort is about six or seven Leagues from Sior, on a Mountain they call Numma Sansiang. It is three Hours work to get up to it, and is so strong, that the King retires to it in time of War, and most of the great Men of the Kingdom live there. It is always provided for three Years, and for a great Number of People. There we continu'd till the beginning of September, when the Tartar went away.

About

Hamel
1653.

Hamel
1653.

About the end of November, the Cold was so vehement, that the River, which is a League from the Capital City, as was said before, was Froze, and 300 Horses loaded pass'd over it. The General taking Compassion to see the Cold we endur'd, gave the King an Account of it, who order'd some Hides we had sav'd from our Shipwreck to be distributed among us, which were most of them rotten, allowing us to sell them, and buy something to Cloath us warm. Two or Three resolv'd with the Money they got by these Hides, to purchase to themselves a little Hut, choosing rather to endure Cold, than to be eternally tormented by their Landlords, who were continually sending of us to the Mountains, two or three Leagues distant, to fetch Wood. This Labour was intolerable, both by reason of the Cold, and because the Ways are bad and uneasy. The little Hovel they bought, cost them nine or ten Crowns, and the rest having cloath'd themselves the best they could, were forc'd to pass the remainder of the Winter as they had done before.

Two Dutch im-more the Tartar's assistance.

The Tartar returning in March, 1655. we were forbid, as before, under severe Penalties, going out of our Houses. The Day he set forward to return Home, Henry Fans of Amsterdam, our Master; and Henry John Ros, of Haerlem a Gunner, resolv'd to go meet this Embassador on the way, upon pretence of going for Wood. When they saw him appear at the Head of several Bodies of Horse and Foot, that attended him, they laid hold of his Horses Reins with one Hand, and with the other turning aside their Coreasian Habit, show'd him they were clad after the Dutch manner underneath. This at first caus'd a great Confusion among the Multitude, and the Tartar ask'd them earnestly who they were, but they could never make him understand them. However the Embassador order'd them to follow, and be where he was to lye that Night. Being come thither he made much inquiry whether there was no Body that could understand what they said to him, and having been told of Wettevree, he sent for him to come to him with all speed. That Interpreter having advertised the King, a Council was held, where it was resolv'd to make the Embassador a Present, to the end he should so stifle the Matter, that it might not come to the Chams Ears. Our two poor Wretches were brought back to Sior, and put into a Prison, where they soon after Dy'd, but we could never know whether a violent, or a natural Death, none of us having been ever allow'd to see them. As soon as this Business was noised abroad, we were carry'd before the Council of War, where it was ask'd, Whether we had any Intimation of our Companions Design? And tho' we could truly assert we had not, yet that would not save us from being adjudg'd to have every one 50 Strokes on the Buttocks, for not having given notice of our Companions going out. We had certainly receiv'd that Correction, had not the King remitted it, saying we were poor Wretches, cast into his Country by Storms, rather than any Design of Plundering. All the Penalty he laid on us, was sending us Home again, with an Injunction not to stir Abroad without his Orders.

In June, when it was thought the Tartar was to come, the General sent our Interpreter to acquaint us, that a Vessel was run a-ground on the Island of Quelpaert, and that Wettevree being too old to perform that Journey, those three among us, who best understood the Coreasian Language, must prepare to set out. In pursuance of this Order, the Assistant, the Pilot's Mate, and a Gunner were chosen, who set out two Days after to bring an Account of that Shipwreck.

The Tartar coming in August, we were commanded under Pain of severe Punishment not to stir out of our Quarters, till three Days after he was gone. The Day before he came we receiv'd Letters from our Companions by an Express, in which they gave us an Account, that they were confin'd on the Southermost Borders of the Kingdom, where they were strictly guarded, to the end that if the Great Cham had received any Intelligence concerning the two unhappy Fellows that were Dead, and should demand the rest, they might tell him they were all three cast away going over to the Island Quelpaert. The Tartar came again about the latter end of the Year, and we were by the King's Order strictly confin'd to our Houses, as we had been before.

Tho' the Tartar had sent twice into Corea, since the attempt unfortunately made by our two Companions, without making any mention of it; yet most of the great Men us'd all their Endeavours with the King to destroy us. The Council sat three Days upon this Affair; but the King, his Brother, the General, and some others were not altogether of that Opinion. The General was for making

All the Dutch ba-nish'd the Court.

making each of us Fight two Corshans, all with the same Weapons, pretending that to the King would be rid of us, and none would have it to say that the King had Murder'd poor Strangers. Some more charitable Persons, who knew we were kept shut up, and ignorant of what was doing, gave us this Intelligence privately. Hereupon Wettevree told us that if we liv'd three Days, we should in all likelihood live long enough after. Now the King's Brother, who was President of the Council, passing by our Quarters, as he was going to it, and very near to us, we had the Opportunity to cast our selves at his Feet, and implore his Favour, lying with our Faces prostrate on the Ground. This Sight mov'd so much Compassion in him, that for the future he Solicited our Affair so earnestly, that we owe our Lives only to the King and him. This giving Offence to many Persons, who might attempt other Methods to destroy us, for the preventing their wicked Designs, and to avoid our appearing before the Tartars, it was thought fit to banish us into the Province of Thilado, where we were to be allow'd 50 pounds of Rice a month, at the King's cost. Accordingly, we departed from Sior in March, on Horses provided for us, our Acquaintance bearing us company as far as the River, which is a League from the City. There we took our last leave of Wettevree; for from that day to this, we have never seen nor heard talk of him. We pass'd through all the same Towns we had seen in our way to the Court, and coming to lye at Jeam, we set out the next morning, and about noon arriv'd at a great Town called Diusiong, or Thillapening, commanded by a large Cittadel opposite to it. The Penigse, who is chief in the absence of the Governour, resides there, and has the Title of Colonel of the Province. To him the Sergeant that had the charge of us, deliver'd us with the King's Letters. He was immediately sent away to go fetch our three Companions that had been sent away the Year before, who were 12 Leagues off, where the Vice-Admiral commanded. We were all lodg'd together in a Publick-house, and three days after, those that were absent being brought to us, we were again together 33 of us, the miserable Remains of our Shipwreck.

Their Im-
ployment.

In April they brought us some Hides that had been left behind at Quelpaert, from which place we were but 18 Leagues, they not being worth sending to Sior. We fitted out selves the best we could, and laid up some small Provisions in our new Habitation. The only business we were charg'd with, was to pull up the Grass that grew in the Square before the Castle twice a Month, and to keep it clean.

Vol. IV.

Hamel
1653.

This Year 1657, our Governour being accus'd of some Misdemeanours, was forc'd to go to Court to clear himself, where it is reported he was in danger of his Life. But being well belov'd by the People, and favour'd by the great Ones on account of his Family, which was one of the noblest in the Kingdom, he came off so well, that his Honours were increas'd. He was very good to us, as well as to the Natives. In February came a Governour very unlike the other; for besides that, he found us more work, he would oblige us to go three Leagues off to the Mountain to fetch Wood, which his Predecessor had caus'd to be brought home to us gratis. But God be prais'd, an Apoplexy deliver'd us from him in September following, which no body was sorry for, so little was he lik'd.

In November came a new Governour, who took so little care of us, that when we ask'd him for Cloaths, or any things else, he answer'd, the King had given him no Orders as to that point, that he was only oblig'd to furnish our Allowance of Rice, and for other Wants it was our business to provide as we thought fit. Our Cloaths being now worn out with carrying of Wood, and the Cold beginning to pinch us, we resolv'd to cast off Shame among those People, and to beg, making our Advantage of their Curiosity, which led them to ask us a thousand Questions. Accordingly, that we might get something to cloath us, and not be forc'd to run half a League for a handful of Salt, we presented a Petition to the Governour for his leave to beg, representing that we could not possibly get our Living any longer by carrying Wood, because we were naked, and our Labour would yield us nothing but a little Salt and Rice; Therefore we humbly pray'd, he would permit us to go abroad in our turns. He granted it; and we made such good use of this Favour, that in a short time we were provided against the Cold.

They beg.

At the beginning of the Year 1658, the Governour was call'd away, and his Successor afflicted us with new Croſes. He forbid us going abroad, and told us that if we would work for him, he would give each of us three pieces of Cotton-

I i i cloth.

 Subſiſtence during that long Captivity.
 Hamel. The following Year 1656, we loſt our 1653. Protector and good Friend; for his time expiring, the King honour'd him with a better Employment. It is incredible how much good he did to all ſorts of People indifferently during his two Years Government; and accordingly he was entirely belov'd both in the City and Country, and the King and Nobility had a great eſteem for his Wiſdom and good Behaviour. Whiſt he was in his Poſt, he repair'd publick Structures, clear'd
 the Coaſts, and maintain'd and increas'd the Marine Forces. The King was ſo well pleas'd at theſe Actions of his, that he prefer'd him to the prime Dignities at Court. We were without a Governour for three days after his Departure, for it is enough, if he that quits has his place ſupply'd the third day by his Succeſſor; theſe three Days being al-low'd the new Governour, that by the Advice of ſome Diviner, he may chooſe a happy Minute to enter upon his Government. As ſoon as install'd, he thought it not enough to uſe us with all the ſe-verity the baniſh'd Governour had done, but would oblige us continually to mould Clay, which we refus'd to do, alledging that his Predeceſſor had not impos'd any ſuch Labour upon us; that our Allowance being ſcarce enough to keep us alive, it was but reaſonable to allow us what time we had to ſpare from our own Affairs, to get ſomething to Cloath us, and ſupply our other Wants; that the King had not ſent us to work, or if we muſt be ſo us'd, it were better for us to quit his Allowance, and deſire to be ſent to Japan, or ſome other place, where there were any of our Nation. All the Anſwer was, ordering us to be gone, threatning he would find a way to make us comply. But he was luckily prevented; for but a few days after, he being in a very pretty Veſſel, ſome Fire accidentally fell into the Powder, and blew up the Prow, killing five Men. Here it muſt be obſerv'd, that thoſe people keep their Powder in a Powder-room before the Maſt. The Governour believing he could conceal that Accident, gave no account of it to the Intendant of the Province; but he was miſtaken, for the Fire was ſeen by one of the Spies the King keeps on the Coaſts, and even in the Heart of the Country, to be in-form'd of all that happens. This Spy having acquainted the Intendant with it, he ſent an account of it up to Court, whither the Governour was immediate-

Dutch
 hardly u'd.

ly ſummon'd, and by Sentence of the Judges receiv'd fourſcore and ten ſtrokes on his Shin-bones, and was baniſh'd for ever. Thus in July, we had another Governour, who behaving himſelf towards us in all reſpects as the laſt had done, requir'd of us every day an hundred Fadom of Mat. We gave him to underſtand that was impoſſible to be done, and made the ſame Remonſtran-ces to him as we had done to his Predeceſſors. This mov'd him no more than it had done them; for he told us,
 That if we were not ſit for that ſort of work, he would find other Employment for us, which he had done, but that he fell Sick. His rigidneſs made us conclude, that our Miſfortunes were beyond redreſs, becauſe new Officers rather add new Burdens, than take off thoſe that are already laid on. Thus, beſides our own Affairs, we were oblig'd to pull up the Graſs in the Square of Penigle, and then to go cut, and bring home Wood fit for Arrows. Theſe Conſiderations made us reſolve to take the advantage of our Tyrant's Indispoſition, and to get a Barque at any rate whatſoever, chooſing rather to hazard all than to groan any longer in Captivity among Idolaters, and bear with all ſorts of Wrongs they would offer us.
 For the compaſſing of our Deſign we decreed, to make uſe of a Coreſian our Neighbour, who was very familiar with us, and whom we had often reliev'd in his Diſtreſs. We propos'd to him to buy, or cauſe a Barque to be bought for us, pretending we wanted it to go beg Cotten in the neighbouring Iſlands, promiſing him a good ſhare when we came again. He perform'd what he was inſtructed with, bargaining very boldly for a Fiſher-man's Barque, and we preſently gave him the Money to pay for it. The Seller perceiving it was for us, would have gone from his Bargain, at the inſtigation of ſome that told him, it was to make our Escape, and if we did ſo he would be put to death. This was really true; but we offering to pay double the Value, he conſented, making more account of the preſent Profit than of the Miſchief that might enſue. As ſoon as the two Coreſians were gone, we immediately furniſh'd the Barque with Sails, an Anchor, Rigging, Oars, and all things we thought neceſſary, in order to ſet out at the firſt Quarter of the Moon, that being the fitteſt Seaſon.
 We kept two of our Companions, whom their good Fortune had brought to

They contrive their escape.

Their Departure.

to visit us, and who wanted not much courting; and understanding that John Peter of Ories, an able Sailer, was at Simschien, we went to desire him to come to us, telling him all things were in a readiness. The Messenger missing of him at Simschien, went to look for him at Namman, which is 16 Leagues farther, and brought him away, having travell'd above 50 long Leagues in four days. The day and hour being appointed to depart, which was the fourth of September; as the Moon was setting, tho' our Neighbours had conceiv'd some Jealousie, yet we forbore not at night after eating a bit of what we had, to creep along under the City Walls to carry the rest of our Provisions, being Rice, Pots of Water, and a Frying-pan. The Moon being down, no body saw us. The first thing we did, we went over into a little Island, which was within Cannon-shot, where we fill'd a Cask we found in the Barque, with fresh Water. Thence, without making any noise, we made our way before the Vessels belonging to the City, and just opposite to the King's Frigats, making out as far as we could into the Channel. The Calm which had continu'd till then, ceasing, there started up a fair Gale, which invit'd us to hoist Sail, as we did, heartily calling upon God to assist us, and resigning our selves up to him. On the fifth of September in the Morning, when we were almost out of the Channel of the Island, a Fisherman hail'd us, but we would not answer, fearing it might be some advanc'd Guard to the Men of War that lye thereabouts. At Sun-rising the Wind fell, which oblig'd us to lower our Sails and Row, to get farther off, and prevent being discover'd. About Noon the Weather began to freshen, and at Night we spread our Sail, directing our Course by guess South-East. The Wind growing fresh at Night, we clear'd the Point of Corea, and were no longer apprehensive of being pursu'd, and the Wind holding all night we made much way.

Island of Firando.

The sixth Day in the Morning, we found our selves very near the first of the Islands of Japan; and the same Gale still favouring us, we came, without knowing it, before the Island of Firando, where we durst not put in, because none of us had ever been at Japan, and we were unacquainted with the Road. Besides, the Corefians had often told us, that there were no Isles to coast along in the way to Nangasaki. We therefore pass'd on to come up with an Island that lay farther off, which appear'd to us very small and near to us, and accordingly we left it astern that night.

Hamel. 1653.

The seventh Day we held on our Course with a cold Wind, and uncertain Weather, running along abundance of Islands, which seem'd to us to be numberless; and being possess'd there were no Islands to be left behind, we endeavour'd to get above them. At night we thought to have touch'd at a small Island, and would have rid it out at Anchor there, but the Sky seem'd to look Stormy; but we perceiv'd such abundance of Fires all about, that we resolv'd to continue under Sail, going before the Wind, which was very cold.

The eighth in the Morning we found our selves in the same place, whence we set forward at Night, which we attributed to the force of some current. Hereupon we resolv'd to stand out to Sea, but we had scarce sail'd two Leagues before there started up a contrary Wind, and blew so hard, that it forc'd us in all hast to seek the shelter of the Land; and the Weather still growing more boisterous every moment, after crossing a Bay, we came to an Anchor about Noon, without knowing what Country we were in. Whilst we were dressing some small matter to eat, the Natives pass'd backwards and forwards close by us, without saying any thing, or making any stay. About Evening, the Wind being somewhat fallen, we saw a Barque come with six Men in it, who had each of them two Knives at their Girdle. They row'd close by us, and landed a Man opposite to the place where we were. This made us weigh and set Sail as fast as we could, making use of our Oars at the same time, to get out of the Bay as soon as possible, and gain the open Sea. But that Barque prevented us, for setting out in pursuit of ours, it soon overtook us. True it is, if we would have made use of our long Bamboos, we could easily have prevented their coming aboard us; but seeing several other Barques set out from the Shore full of Men, who by the description we had heard of them, must be Japaneses, we troubled our selves no farther. They hailing us, and asking us by Signs, whither we would go? We let fly the Colours with the Arms of Orange, which we had provided for that purpose, crying, Holland, Nangasaki. Hereupon they made Signs to us to strike our Sail, and go Ashore, which we presently sently did. Then they carry'd one of our Men into their Barque, and plac'd the rest in order before one of their Pagods.

The Dutch carry'd Ashore.

Hamel.
1653.

Being come to an Anchor, and having plac'd Barques about ours to guard it, they took another of our Men, and carry'd him to the first they had drawn out, asking them several Questions, but neither understood the other. Our arrival alarm'd all the Coast, and there was not a Man to be seen, but was arm'd with two Swords, but what satisfy'd us was that they endeavour'd to shew us Nangasaki, and seem'd to tell us there were some of our Nation there. At Night a great Barque that brought the third Man in Dignity of the Isle of Gotto, came aboard us. That Gentleman perceiving we were Hollanders, gave us to understand by Signs, that we had six Ships at Nangasaki, where he hop'd to be with us in four or five Days, if we desir'd it. He signify'd to us that we were in the Island of Gotto subject to the Emperor, and to satisfy his Curiosity desiring to know whence we came, we had a great deal of Trouble to give him to understand that we came from Corea, and that it was thirteen Years since we had been Shipwreck'd on an Island belonging to that Kingdom; that we desir'd nothing so earnestly at present, as to get to Nangasaki, to some of our Country-men, and that to gratifie this our Inclination we had expos'd our selves in a poor Barque, in a Sea unknown to us, where we had sail'd 40 Leagues without a Compass, to reach Japan, not regarding all the Corefians had said to persuade us that the Japoneses put all the Strangers that came into their Country to cruel Deaths.

We continu'd the three following Days well guarded in the same Place aboard our Barque, whither they brought us Water, Wood, Flesh, and gave us a Mat to cover us from the Rain, which fell in great abundance all that time.

On the 12th, they furnish'd us with Provisions to go to Nangasaki, and that same Night we Anchor'd on the other side of the Island, where we spent the Night.

On the 13th that Gentleman we mention'd before weigh'd Anchor, being attended by two large Barques, and two little ones, he carry'd some Letters for the Emperor, and some Goods. Our two Companions were in one of those great Barques, and did not come to us again till we were at Nangasaki. About Evening we saw the Bay of that City, and at Midnight anchor'd before it, where we found five Ships of ours. Several Inhabitants of Gotto, and even some of the chief Men, presented, and did us many Kindnesses, without taking any thing of us.

On the 14th we were all carry'd Ashore, where the Companies Interpreters receiv'd us. When they had writ down all the Answers we made to their several Questions, they carry'd us to the Governour's House, and about Noon we were brought before him. When we had satisfy'd his Curiosity, he much commended our Action, in overcoming so many Dangers and Difficulties to recover our Liberty. Then he order'd the Interpreters to conduct us to our Commandant, Min Heer William Volguers, who receiv'd us very kindly. Min Heer Nicholas le Roy, his Deputy was also very Friendly, and so was all the Nation in general. When we went thence they caus'd us to be Habited after our own Fashion.

They arrive at
Nangasaki

On the First of October, Min Heer Volguers left the Island, and on the 23d sail'd out of the Bay with 7 Ships. The Governour of Nangasaki, who would have kept us a Year, caus'd us to be brought before him on the 25th of the Month, and after examining us over again, restor'd us to the Companies Director, who lodg'd us in his own House, whence we sail'd some Days after for Batavia. Where we arriv'd on the 20th of November, and at our landing deliver'd our Journal to the General, who after a very favourable reception, promis'd to put us Aboard the Ships that were to sail from thence on the 28th of December. These Ships, after some Storms, arriv'd at Amsterdam on the 20th of July, 1668. where we return'd Thanks to God for having deliver'd us from a Captivity of 13 Years, and 28 Days, beseeching him to have Mercy on our poor Companions, who were left behind. Here follow the Names of those that return'd Home, and of those that were left in Corea.

The Names of those that return'd from Corea.

Henry Hamel of Gorcum, Secretary to the Ship, and Author of this Account.
Godfrey Denis, of Rotterdam.
John Piters, of Uries in Friseland.
Gerard Jans of Rotterdam.
Matthew Tbocken of Enchuysen.

Gotto
Island.

Cornelius Theodorick of Amsterdam.
Benet Clerc of Rotterdam.
Denis Godfrey of Rotterdam.

Henry Cornelius of Utrecht.
John Nicholas of Dort.
Jacob Fans of Norway.
Anthony Ulders of Embden.
Nicholas Arents of Ost-Voren.
Alexander Bosquet a Scotch-man.
John of Utrecht.

Hamel.
1653.

The Names of those that remain'd in Corea.

John Lampe of Amsterdam, Assistant.

The Description of the Kingdom of COREA.

Situation.

Here he allows but 15 Leagues to a Degree.

THE Kingdom known to us by the Name of Corea, and by the Natives call'd Tiozenconk, and sometimes Caoli, reaches from 34 to 44 Degrees of North Latitude, being about 150 Leagues in length from North to South, and about 75 in Breadth from East to West. Therefore the Corefians represent it in the shape of a long square, like a playing Card. Nevertheless it has several Points of Land which run far out into the Sea.

Division.

It is divided into 8 Provinces, containing 360 Cities and Towns, without reckoning the Forts and Castles, which are all on the Mountains.

Coasts.

This Kingdom is very dangerous and difficult for Strangers, who are unacquainted with its Coasts to Land, because it is much inclos'd with Rocks and Sands. Towards the South-East it is very near Japan; there being but 25 or 26 Leagues distance betwixt the Town of Pousan in Corea, and that of Osacco in Japan. Betwixt them is the Island Suiffima, which the Corefians call Taymusto. It formerly belong'd to them, but they exchang'd it for that of Quelpaert, in a Treaty of Peace concluded with the Japoneses.

Bounds.

On the West, this Kingdom is divid- ed from China by the Bay of Nan- king, but is join'd to it on the North by a long and high Mountain, which is all that hinders Corea's being an Island. On the North-East, it is bounded by the vast Ocean, where there is every Year great number of Whales taken, some of them found with the French and Dutch Harping-irons, those People using to follow that Fishery. There are abundance of Herrings also catch'd there in December, January, February and March. Those taken the two first of these Months are as large as ours in Holland, but what they catch afterwards are smaller, and are like those in Holland, call'd Frying Herrings, which are eaten in March and April. Hence we infer that there is a Passage above Corea, Japan and Tartary, which answers to the Streights of Weigats. For this reason we often ask'd of the Corefian Scamen, who use the North East Sea, what Lands were beyond them, and they all told us they believ'd there was nothing that way but a boundless Ocean.

Fishery.

Those that go from Corea to China, Imbark in the narrowest Part of the Bay; for the way by Land is too troublesome, by reason of the difficulty there is in passing the Mountain, especially in Winter because of the excessive Cold, and in Summer because of the many wild Beasts. It is easie to pass over on the North side in Winter, the Bay being generally Froze over hard enough to bear. The Cold is so intense in Corea, that in the Year 1662, we being in the Monasteries on the Mountains, there fell such a wonderful quantity of Snow, that they made ways under it to go from House to House, and to go upon it they wear small Boards like little Battledoors under their Feet, which hinders their sinking, and yet is no Obstruction to going up or down. This we forgot to insert in the Journal. By reason of this excessive Cold those who live on the Northern Coast feed only upon Barley, and that none of the best; for no Rice or Cotten can grow there. Those that are best to pass there have their Meal brought from the South. The poorer sort there have no Cloaths but what are made of Hemp and pitiful Skins. But to make amends the Root Nisy grows there, which they give to the Tartar for their Tribute, and drive a great Trade with it to China and Japan. The rest of the Coun-

Product.

Hamel
1653.

Country is fruitful, and produces all things necessary to support Life, especially Rice, and other sorts of Grain. They have Hemp, Cotton, and Silk-worms; but they know not how to work the Silk. There is also Silver, Lead, Tyger's Skins, and the Nisyr-root, not to speak of Beasts and Fowl, and several other things. They have store of Horses and Cows, and make use of Oxen to till the Land, and of Horses to travel, and carry Goods from place to place. There are also Bears, Deer, Wild Bores, Swine, Dogs, Cats, and several other Creatures. We never saw any Elephants there, but Alligators or Crocodils of several Sizes, which keep in the Rivers. Their Back is Musket-proof, but the Skin of their Belly is very soft. Some of them are 18 or 20 Ells long, their Head large, the Snout like a Hog, the Mouth and Throat from Ear to Ear, the Eye sharp but very small, the Teeth white and strong, plac'd like the Teeth of a Comb. When they eat they only move the Upper Jaw. Their Back-bone has 60 Joints, on their Feet are long Claws or Talons, their Tail is as long as the Body; they eat either Fish or Flesh, and are great lovers of Man's Flesh. The Corefians often told us, that three Children were once found in the Belly of one of these Crocodils. Besides these, there are abundance of Serpents and venomous Creatures. As for Fowl, they have Swans, Geese, Ducks, Herons, Storks, Eagles, Faulcons, Kites, Pigeons, Woodcocks, Magpies, Daws, Larks, Lapwings, Pheasants, Hens, and plenty of them all, as well as other sorts, not known in Europe.

Absolute Monarchy

Corea is subject to a King, whose Power is absolute, (tho' he pays an Acknowledgment to the Tartar;) and he disposes of all things as he pleases, without asking any bodies Advice. There are no Lords of peculiar places, that is, who are Proprietors of Towns, Islands, or Villages, and all the Great Mens Revenues arise out of those Estates they hold during pleasure, and from the great number of their Slaves, for we have known those that had two or three hundred. So that the Lands and Employments the King bestows on any Man, revert to him after his Death.

Martial
Government.

For Martial Affairs, the King keeps abundance of Soldiers in his Capital City, who have no other Employment than to keep guard about his Person, and to attend him when he goes abroad. All the Provinces are oblig'd once in seven Years, to send all their Free-men to keep Guard about the King for two Months; so that during that Year, it is constantly under Arms, to send all the Men in their turns to Court. Each Province has its General, who has four or five Colonels under him, and each of these as many Captains depending on them, and each of these is Governour of some Town or strong Hold; insomuch that there is not a Village, but where at least a Corporal commands, who has Tithing-men, or Officers over ten Men under him. These Corporals are oblig'd once a Year to deliver to their Captains a List of what People are under their Jurisdiction; and by this means, the King knows how many Men he may reckon upon when he has need. Their Horse wear Cuirasses, Head-pieces, and Swords, as also Bows and Arrows, and Whips like ours, only that theirs have small Iron-points. The Foot as well as they, wear a Corselet, a Headpiece, a Sword and Musket, or Half-pike. The Officers carry nothing but Bows and Arrows. The Soldiers are oblig'd to provide fifty Charges of Powder and Ball, at their own cost. Every Town in its turn, furnishes also a number of Religious Men, drawn out within its own Liberties, to guard and maintain the Forts and Castles at their own Expence; these being in narrow Passes, or on the sides of Mountains. They are counted the best Soldiers, and obey Officers chosen out of their own Corps, who observe the same Discipline as the other. Thus the King knows to a Man how many there are fit to serve him. Those that are 60 Years of Age, are discharg'd from Duty, and their Children supply their places. The number of Free-men who are not in the King's Service, nor have not been, together with the Slaves, makes about half the People in the Country. If a Free-man lyes with a Woman-slave, or a Man-slave with a Free-Woman, the Children born of them are slaves; and those whose Father and Mother are both Slaves, belong to the Mother's Master. Corea being almost encompass'd on all sides by the Sea, every Town is to maintain a Ship ready rigg'd, and provided with all Necessaries. Their Ships have generally two Masts, and 30 or 32 Oars, to each of which there are five or six Men, so that each of this sort of Gallies carries about 300 Men for Rowing and Fight. They carry some small Pieces of Cannon, and abundance

of

 she is bury'd alive up to her Shoulders, in a High-way that is much frequented, and by her is laid an Axe, with which all that pass by, and are not noble, are oblig'd to give her a Stroke on the Head till she is dead. The Judges of the Town where this happens, are suspended for a while, the Governour is taken away, and it is made subordinate to another Government, or at best only a private Gentleman is left to command in it. The same Penalty is inflicted on such Towns as mutiny against their Governours, or send false Complaints against them to Court. The Man that kills his Wife, and proves he had cause so to do, as for catching of her in Adultery, or any other hainous Fault, is in no danger for so doing. If the Woman so kill'd was a Slave, the Penalty is to pay three times her value to the Owner. Slaves that kill their Masters, are cruelly tormented to death; but they look upon it as nothing for a Master to kill his Slave, tho' it be upon a slight account. Thus they punish Murder. After they have long trampled on the Criminal, they pour Vinegar on the putrify'd Carcass, which they then pour down the Offender's Throat through a Funnel; and when he is full, they beat him on the Belly with Cudgels till he bursts. Thieves are trampled to Death; and though this be a dreadful Punishment, yet the Corefians are much addicted to stealing. If a single Man is found abed with a marry'd Woman, he is stripp'd naked to a little pair of Drawers; then daubing his Face with Lime, they run an Arrow through each Ear, and fasten a little Drum on his Back, which they beat at all the Cross-streets to expose him to Shame. This Punishment ends in 40 or 50 Strokes of a Cudgel on the Man's bare Buttocks, but the Woman receives them with Drawers on. The Men are naturally very amorous, and so jealous, that they seldom, and with much difficulty allow their best Friends to see their Wives. If a marry'd Man be taken lying with another Man's Wife, he is to suffer Death, and chiefly among Persons in high place; and the Criminal's Father if living, or else his nearest Kinsman must be the Executioner. The Offender is to choose what Death he will die; but generally the Men desire to be run through the Back, and the Women to have their Throat cut. Those who by a time appointed do not pay what they owe to the King, or private Persons, are beaten twice or thrice a Month on the Shin-bones, which is done till they can find means to discharge the Debt. If they die before they have satisfy'd the Creditor, their nearest Relations are bound to pay for them, or suffer the same Punishment, so that neither the King nor private Persons ever lose what is due to them. The slightest Punishment in that Country, is to be Bastonado'd on the bare Buttocks, or on the Calfs of the Legs, and they look upon it as no disgrace, because it is very common, and they are often liable to it for only speaking one word amiss. Inferiour Governours and subordinate Judges, may not condemn any Man to Death without acquainting the Governour of the Province. No Man can try Prisoners of State without the King be first inform'd. As concerning their Punishments, this is the manner how they Bastonado on the Shin-bones: They tye the Criminal's Feet together on a little Bench four Fingers broad, and laying such another under his Hams, to which they are fast bound; they strike betwixt these two Bindings with a Stick as long as a Man's Arm, somewhat round on the one side, and flat on the other, two inches broad, and about the thickness of a Crown-piece. This sort of Laths are generally of Oak or Alder, wherewith they must not give above 30 Strokes at one time, and then two or three hours after, they repeat them till the whole number be given according to the Sentence. When the Offender is to be beaten on the Soles of the Feet, he is made to sit down on the ground; then having bound his Feet together by the great Toes, they rest them on a piece of Wood they have betwixt their Legs, and beat them with a Cudgel as thick as a Man's Arm, and three or four Foot long, giving as many Strokes as the Judge has order'd. The Bastonading on the Buttocks is thus: The Men being stripp'd, they make them lye on the ground with their Faces down, and bind them to a little Bench. The Women have a pair of wet Drawers left on; and in this posture they beat them with a larger and longer Lath than those before mention'd. An hundred Strokes are equivalent to Death, and many die of them, and some even before they have receiv'd fifty. When any are adjudg'd to be beaten on the Calves of the Legs, it is done with Rods or Wands, as thick as a Man's Thumb. This Punishment is common to Women and young Apprentices.

apprentices. Whilst all these sorts of Punishments are inflicting, the Criminals cry so lamentably, that the Spectators seem to suffer no less than the Offenders.

Religion.

As for Religion, the Corefians have scarce any. The common sort makes some odd Grimaces before the Idols, but pay them little respect, and the Great Ones honour them much less, because they think themselves to be something more than an Idol. To prove this, when any of their Kindred or Friends dies, they all appear to honour the Dead-man at the Offering a Priest makes before his Image, and frequently travelling 30 or 40 Leagues to be present at this Ceremony, whether to express their Gratitude to some great Man, or to shew the Esteem they have for some Learned Religious Man, and that they preserve the Memory of him. On Festivals the People repair to the Temple, and every one lights a bit of Sweetwood; then putting it into a Vessel for that purpose, they go offer it to the Idol, and placing it before him, make a low Bow, and depart. This is their Worship. For their Belief, they are of opinion, that he who lives well shall be rewarded, and he who lives ill shall be punish'd. Beyond this, they know nothing of Preaching or of Mysteries, and therefore they have no Disputes of Religion, all believing and practising the same thing throughout the Kingdom. The Religious Men offer Perfumes before an Idol twice a Day, and on Festivals; all the Religious of a House make a Noise with Drums, Basons, and Kettles. The Monasteries and Temples, which the Kingdom swarms with, are for the most part on the Mountains, each under the liberty of some Town. There are Monasteries of 5 or 600 Religious Men, and at least 4000 of them within the Liberties of some Towns. They are divided into Companies of 10, 20, and sometimes 30, and the eldest Governs, and if any one does not do his Duty, he may cause the others to punish him with 20 or 30 Strokes on the Buttocks. But if the Offence be heinous, they deliver him up to the Governor of the Town they belong to. It being lawful for any Man to become a Religious, all the Country of Corea is full of them, and the more, because they can quit this Profession when they please. However, generally speaking, these Religious Men are not much more respected than the Slaves, because of the great

Taxes they are oblig'd to pay, and the Work they are forc'd to do. Their Superiours are in great Esteem, especially when they are Learned; for then they are equal with the Great Men of the Country, and are call'd the King's Religious Men, wearing their Order over their Cloaths. They have the power of judging as subaltern Officers, and make their Visits on Horseback, being very well receiv'd and entertain'd in all places. They must eat nothing that has had Life; they shave their Heads and Beards, and are forbid conversing with Women. If any of them breaks these Rules, they give him 70 or 80 Strokes on the Buttocks, and banish him the Monastery. When they are first shav'd, or soon after, they give them a mark on the Arm, which never wears off, and by that those are known who have once been Religious Men. They work for their Living, or use some Trade; some go a begging, and all of them have some small Allowance from the Governour. They always keep little Children in their Houses, whom they very carefully teach to read and write. If these Children will be shav'd, they keep them in their Service, and have all that they can earn, till the Master dies, which makes them Free, and Heirs to all their Goods. For this reason, they are oblig'd to wear Mourning for them as for their Father, in return for all the Pains they have taken to instruct and bring them up. The Monasteries and Temples are built at the publick Charge, every one contributing proportionably to what he is worth. There is still another sort of People like these Religious Men, as well in regard of their Abstinence, as their serving the Idols, but they are not shorn, and may marry. They believe by Tradition, that once all Mankind had but one Language, but that the design of building a Tower to go up to Heaven caus'd the confusion of Tongues. The Nobles frequent the Monasteries very much, to divert themselves there with common Women, or others they carry with them, because they are generally deliciously seated, and very pleasant for Prospect and fine Gardens, so that they might better be call'd Pleasure-houses than Temples, which is to be understood of the common Monasteries, where the Religious Men love to drink hard. In our time there were two Monasteries of Religious Women in the City of Sior, in one of them there were none but Women of Quality, in the other Maids of the common sort. They Hamel. were all shorn, and observ'd the same 1653. Rules and Duties as the Men. The King and Great Men maintain'd them;

Hamel.
1653.

 but three or four Years since the King now reigning, gave them leave to marry.

Houses.

Having spoke of the Government and Ecclesiastical Affairs, I will now descend to private Matters. The Houses of the Corefians of Quality are stately, but those of the common sort very mean; nor are they allowed to build as they please. No Man can cover his House with Tiles, unless he have leave so to do; for which reason, most of them are thatch'd with Straw or Reeds. They are parted from one another by a Wall, or else by a row of Stakes, or Pallisades. They are built with Wooden Posts or Pillars, with the Interval betwixt them fill'd up with Stone up to the first Story, the rest of the Structure is all Wood daub'd without, and cover'd on the inside with White Paper glw'd on. The Floors are all vaulted, and in Winter they make a Fire underneath, so that they are always as warm as a Stove. The Floor is cover'd with Oil'd Paper. Their Houses are small, but one Story high, and a Garret over it, where they lay up their Provisions. The Nobility have always an Apartment forwards, where they receive their Friends, and lodge their Acquaintance, and there they divert themselves, there being generally before their Houses a large Square, or Bass Court, with a Fountain, or Fish-pond, and a Garden with cover'd Walks. The Womens Apartment is in the most retir'd part of the House, that no body may see them. Tradesmen, and the chief Townsmen, generally have a Store-house adjoining to their Manlion-house, where they keep their Goods, and treat their Friends with Tobacco and Arac. There are virtuous Women among them, who are allow'd the liberty of seeing People, and going into Company, and to Feasts, but they sit by themselves, and opposite to their Husbands. They have scarce any more Household Goods than are absolutely necessary. There are in the Country abundance of Taverns and Pleasure-houses, to which the Corefians resort to see common Women dance, sing, and play on Musical Instruments. In Summer they take this Recreation in cool Groves, under close shady Trees. They have no particular Houses to entertain Passengers and Travellers, but he who travels, goes and sits down, where Night overtakes him, near the Pales of the first House he comes at, where tho' it be not a great Man's House, they bring him boil'd Rice, and dress'd Meat enough for his Supper. When he goes from thence, he may stop at another House, and at several. Yet on the great Road to Sior, there are Houses, where those that travel on Publick Affairs, have Lodging and Diet on the Publick Account.

Kindred are not allow'd to marry Marriages within the fourth Degree. They make no love, because they are marry'd at 8 or 10 Years of Age, and the Young Maids from that time live in their Father-in-laws House, unless they be only Daughters. They live in the Husband's Father's House till they have learnt to get their living; or to govern their Family. The day a Man marries, he mounts on Horseback attended by his Friends, and having rode about the Town, he stops at his Bride's Door, where he is very well receiv'd by the Kindred, who take the Bride and carry her to his House, where the Marriage is consummated without any other Ceremony. Tho' a Woman have bore her Husband many Children, it is in his power to put her away when he pleases, and to take another; but the Woman has not the same privilege, unless she can get it by Law. A Man may keep as many Women as he can maintain, and repair to them at all times without scandal. But at home he keep only his Wife, the others are about the Town, or in Houses apart from his. Yet the Noblemen have two or three Women besides their Wife in the House, however there is but one that rules, and has the management of all things. The others have each a distinct Apartment, whither the Master of the House goes when he pleases. To say the truth, they make no great account of their Wives, and use them little better than Slaves, turning them away for the least Faults, and sometimes on bare pretences, and then they force them to take their Children, who those poor Wretches are bound to maintain. This liberty of putting away the Mother and Children, is a means to make the Country very populous.

The Nobility, and all Free-men in Education general, take great care of the Education of their Children, and put them very young to learn to read and write, to which that Nation is much addicted.

They

They use no manner of rigour in their method of teaching, but manage all by fair means, giving their Scholars an Idea of Learning, and of the Worth of their Ancestors, and telling them how honourable those are who by this means have rais'd themselves to great Fortunes, which breeds Emulation, and makes them studious. It is wonderful to see how they improve by these means, and how they expound the Writings they give them to read, wherein all their Learning consists. Besides this private Study, there is in every Town a House, where the Nobility, according to ancient Custom, of which they are very tenacious, take care to assemble the Youth, to make them read the History of the Country, and the Condemnations of Great Men, who have been put to Death for their Crimes. To perfect them in their Learning, there are Assemblies kept yearly, in two or three Towns of each Province, where the Scholars appear to get Employments, either by the Pen, or by the Sword. The Governours of Towns send able Deputies thither to examine them, and choose the best qualified; and according to the report made to them, they write to the King. The greatest Men in the Kingdom are there, whether they are in Post or not. Their Employments are bestow'd on those that are thought worthy, and the King orders their Commissions to be issu'd out. The old Officers, who till then have only had Civil or Military Commissions, at this time use all their endeavours to be employ'd in both Professions, to increase their Revenue. The aspiring to these Honours is often the ruin of the Candidates, because of the Presents they make, and Treats they give, to gain Reputation, and obtain Votes. Some there are also that die by the way, and most of them are satisfy'd with getting the Title of the Employ they aim at, thinking it honour enough to have been design'd for a Post.

Parents and Children.

Mourning.

Parents are very indulgent to their Children, and in return are much respected by them. They depend upon one another's good Behaviour; and if one of them withdraws after an ill Action, the other does the like. It is otherwise with the Slaves, who have little care of their Children, because they know they will be taken from them as soon as they are able to work, or do any business. When a Free-man dies, his Children mourn three Years, and during all that time, they live as austere-

ly as the Religious Men, are not capable of any Employment, and if any of them is in a Post he must quit it. It is not lawful for them during that time to lye with their Wives, and if they should have any Children born during the Mourning, they would not be accounted Legitimate. It is not permitted them to be in a passion, or to fight, much less to be drunk. The Mourning they wear is a long Hempen Robe, without any thing under it but a sort of Sackcloth wove with a twisted Thread almost as thick as the Twine of a Cable. On their Hats, which are made of green Reeds wove together; instead of a Hat-band they wear a Hempen Rope. They never go without a great Cane or Cudgel in their hand, which serves to distinguish who they are in Mourning for, the Cane denoting the Father, and a Stick the Mother. During all this time, they never wash, and consequently look like Mulattoes.

Hamel.
1653.

As soon as one dies, his Kindred run about the Streets shrieking, and tearing their Hair. Then they take special care to bury him honourably in some part of a Mountain, shewn them by a Fortune-teller. They use two Coffins for every dead Body, being two or three Fingers thick, shut close, and put one within the other to keep out the Water, painting and adorning them as every one is able. They generally bury their Dead in Spring and Autumn. As for those that die in Summer, they put them into a thatch'd Hut rais'd upon four Stakes, where they leave them till the Rice-harvest is over. When they intend to bury them, they bring them back into the House, and shut up in their Coffins with them their Cloaths and some Jewels. In the Morning at break of day, they set out with the Body, after a good Repast, and making merry all the Night. The Bearers sing, and keep time as they go, whilst the Kindred make the Air ring with their Cries. Three days after, the Kindred and Friends of the Party deceas'd, return to the Grave, where they make some Offerings, and then they eat together, and are very merry. The meaner sort only make a Grave five or six foot deep, but the Great Men are put into Stone Tombs, rais'd on a Statue of the same Substance, at the bottom whereof is the Name carv'd, with the Qualifications of the Party there bury'd, mentioning what Employments he enjoy'd. Every Full Moon they cut down the Grass

W
Hamel.
1653.
W

Grafs that grows on the Grave, and offer new Rice there. That is their greatest Festival next to the new Year. They reckon by Moons, and every three Years they add one, so that the third Year has 13, whereas the other two have but twelve Moons each. They have Conjurers, Diviners, or Sooth-sayers, who assure them whether the Dead are at rest or not, and whether the place where they are bury'd is proper for them, in which Point they are so superstitious, that it often happens they will remove them two or three times. When the Children have fully perform'd the Duty they owe to Father and Mother by means of this tedious Ceremony, if they have left any Estate, the eldest Son takes possession of the House that belongs to him, with all the Lands depending on it. The rest is divided among the other Sons, and we never heard that the Daughters had any share, because the Women carry nothing to their Husbands but their Cloaths. When a Father is fourscore Years of Age, he declares himself incapable of managing his Estate, and resigns it up to his Children, who maintain their Father, and always pay him a great deal of respect. When the eldest has taken possession of the Estate, he builds a House at the Publick Expence for his Father and Mother, where he lodges and maintains them.

Disposition of the Corefians.

The Corefians are very much addicted to stealing, and so apt to cheat and lye, that there is no trusting of them. They think they have done a good Action when they have over-reach'd a Man, and therefore Fraud is not Infamous among them; yet if a Man can prove, that he has been cheated in a Bargain of Horses, Cows, or any other thing whatsoever, he may be righted tho' it be three or four Months after. Nevertheless they are silly and credulous, and we might have made them believe any thing we would, because they are great lovers of Strangers, but chiefly the Religious Men. They are an effeminate People, and shew very little Courage and Resolution when they are put to it. At least we were told so by several credible Persons, who were witnesses to the havock the Emperor of Japan made in their Country when he slew their King; not to mention what Wettevree so often told us about the irruption of the Tartar, who coming over upon the Ice, possess'd himself of the Kingdom. He assur'd us, as one that had been an eye-witness to the whole, that more Co-

refians dy'd in the Woods, whither they fled, than were kill'd by the Enemy. They are not asham'd of Cowardize, and lament the misfortune of those that must fight. They have often been repuls'd with loss when they have attempted to plunder some European Vessel that has been cast on their Coast, being bound for Japan. They abhor Blood, and fly when they meet with any. They are much afraid of the Sick, and particularly those that have contagious Distempers, and therefore they presently remove them, whether they are in the Town or Country, and put them into little Straw-hovels in the middle of the Fields. There no body talks to them, but only those that are to look after them, who give notice to Passengers to keep off, and when the sick Man has no Friends to take care of him, the others rather let him die than they will come near him. When there is a Plague in one Town, or Village, the Avenues to it are shut up with a Hedge of Briars and Brambles, and they lay some on the tops of the Houses, where there are any Sick, that all People may know it. They might when they are sick, make use of the Simples that grow in their Country, but the People are not acquainted with them, and almost all the Physicians are employ'd by the Great Ones, so that the Poor who cannot be at that charge, make use of Blind Men and Conjurers, in whom they once repos'd such great confidence, that they follow'd them every where, cross Rivers and Rocks, and particularly into the Temples of the Idols, where they call'd upon the Devils. But this Custom was abolish'd by the King's Order in the Year 1662.

Before the Tartar subdu'd this Kingdom, it was full of Luxury and Debauchery, the Corefians whole business being eating and drinking, and giving themselves up to all Leudness. But now the Tartars and Japoneses tyrannize over them, they have enough to do to live when a Year proves bad, because of the heavy Tribute they pay, and particularly to the Tartar, who comes three times a Year to receive it. They believe there are but twelve Kingdoms or Countries in the whole World, which once were all subject, and pay'd Tribute to the Emperor of China; but that they have all made themselves free since the Tartar conquer'd China, he not being able to subdue them. They call the Tartar, Tiekse, and Orankay; and our Country

Nam-

Nampankouk, which is the name the Japoneses give to Portugal, and therefore not knowing us they give us the same Name, having learnt it within these 50 or 60 Years, since when the Japoneses taught them to plant Tobacco, to dress and make use of it, for till then it was unknown to them, and they telling them the Seed of it came from Nampankouk, they often call the Tobacco Nampankoy. They take so much at present, that the very Children practise it at four or five Years of Age, and there are very few Men or Women among them that do not smoke. When first brought them, they bought it for its weight in Silver, and for that reason they look'd upon Nampankouk as one of the best Countries in the World. Their Writings give an account, that there are fourscore and four thousand several Countries; but most of them do not believe it, and they say, if that were so every little island and Sand must pass for a Country; it being impossible, say they, for the Sun to light so many in a day. When we nam'd some Countries to them, they laugh'd at us, affirming, we only talk'd of some Town or Village; their Geographical Knowledge of the Coasts reaching no farther than Siam, by reason of the little Traffick they have with Strangers farther from them. They have scarce any Trade, but only with the Japoneses, and with the People of the Island of Ceuxima, who have a Storehouse in the South-West Part of the Town of Pousan. They supply Corea with Pepper, Sweet-wood, Alum, Buffers-horns, Goats and Buck-skins, and other Commodities, which we and the Chineses sell in Japan. In exchange, they take the Product and Manufactures of the Country. The Corefians have also some Trade at Peking, and in the Northern Parts of China, but it is very chargeable, because they only go thither by Land, and on Horse-back. None but the rich Merchants of Sur trade to Peking, and are always three months at least on the way. This whole Trade is in Linnen, or Cotton-cloth. The Great Ones, and chief Merchants buy and pay for all with Money, but the meaner sort deals only with Rice and other Commodities by way of Barter.

There is but one sort of Weight and Measure throughout the Kingdom, but the Traders abuse it very much, notwithstanding all Precautions and Orders of the Governours. They know no Money but their Casis, and those pass only on the Frontiers of China. They pay Silver by weight in little Ingots, like those we bring from Japan.

Their Language, their way of Writing, and their Arithmetick, are very hard to learn. They have many words to express the same thing, and they sometimes talk fast, and sometimes slow, especially their Learned Men, and great Lords. They use three several sorts of Writing, the first and chiefest like that of China and Japan, which they use for printing their Books, and for all Publick Affairs. The second is like the common Writing among us. The great Men and Governours use it, to answer Petitions, and make Notes on Letters of Advice, or the like, the Commonalty cannot read this Writing. The third is more unpolish'd, and serves Women and the common sort. It is easier to write in this Character than the others, Names and Things never before heard of, being noted down with very curious fine Pencils. They have abundance of old Books, both Printed and Manuscript, so choicely kept that none but the King's Brother is trusted with them. Copies of them with Cuts, are kept in several Towns, that in case of Fire they may not be quite lost. Their Almanacks are made in China, they themselves wanting skill to make them. They print with Boards or Wooden Cuts, and lay one Cut to each side of the Paper, and so strike off a Leaf. They cast Accounts with little long Sticks, as we do with Counters. They know not how to keep Books of Accounts or Shop-books, but when they buy any thing, they set down the Price under it, and write on it what they made of it, and so find what profit or loss.

When the King goes abroad, he is attended by all the Nobility of the Court, wearing the Badge of his Order, or some piece of Embroidery before and behind, on a Garment of Black Silk, with a very broad Scarf, a great Body of Soldiers following in good order. Before him go Men on Horseback and others on Foot, some of them carrying Colours and Banners, and the others playing on several Warlike Instruments. They are follow'd by the Life-Guards, which are made up of the chief Burgers of the Town. The King is in the middle, carryed under a very rich Gold Canopy, and proceeds with such silence, that the least Noise is not heard. Just before him goes a Secretary of State, or some other great Officer, with 1653.

Hamel,
Writing

Printing.

Arithmetick.

Manner of the King's going abroad.

a little

Tobacco.

Trade.

Weights and Measures.

Hamel
1653. a little Box, into which he puts all the Petitions and Memorials private Persons present upon the end of a long Cane, or which they hang along the Walls or Pails, so that they cannot see who prefers them. Those that are appointed to gather them, bring them to the Secretary, who puts them into the little Box, and when the King returns to his Palace, they are all laid before him to decide what is to be done, which he performs, and his Orders are executed out of hand, no body presuming to contradict them. All the Doors and Windows of the Houses in the Streets through which the King passes, are shut, and no body does presume to open the least cranny of them, much less look over the Wall, or over the Pails. When the King passes by the great Men or Soldiers, they must turn their Backs to him, without daring to look, or so much as cough. Therefore upon these occasions, most of the Soldiers put little Sticks into their Mouths, that they may not be accus'd of making a noise. When the Tartar's Embassador comes, the King goes in Person with all his Court out of Town to receive him, waits upon him to his Lodging, and in all places every body does him as much or more honour than to the King. All sorts of Musicians, Dancers, and Vaulters, go before him, striving who shall divert him most. During the whole time the Tartar is at Court, all the Streets from his Lodging to the Palace are lin'd with Soldiers, who stand within 10 or 12 Foot one of the other. There are two or three Men who have no other Employment but to pick up Notes thrown out of the Tartar's Window to be carry'd to the King, who desires to know what the Embassador is doing at all times. To conclude, that Prince studies all ways to please him, endeavouring by all manner of courtesie to make him sensible of the respect he bears the Great Cham, that he may make a favourable report concerning him to his Master.

A N
A C C O U N T
O F A
V O Y A G E
F R O M
Spain to Paraquaria;

Performed by the Reverend Fathers,
Anthony Sepp and Anthony Behme,
Both German Jesuits,
The First of Tyrol upon the River Eth, the Other of Bavaria.

Containing a Description of all the remarkable Things, and the Inhabitants, as well as of the Missionaries residing in that Country.

Taken from the Letters of the said Anthony Sepp, and Published by his own Brother Gabriel Sepp.

Translated from the High Dutch Original, Printed at Nurenberg, 1697.

Advertifement to the Reader.

THE Reverend Fathers Anthony Sepp and Anthony Behme, with several other Zealous Jesuits, being inflamed with a holy Zeal for the propagating of the Catholick Faith in far distant Countries; resolved with a great deal of Chearfulness to leave their Native Country. And Travelling into Spain, took upon them the holy Function of Missionaries, for the Conversion of the Infidels, and Instruction of the already Converted Indians in Paraquaria, a Province of the Western America. After their Arrival at Buenos Ayres, the said Father Sepp having thought fit to send an Account of this Voyage, together with a Description of that Country, its Inhabitants, Manners, Government, &c. in two Letters sent into Germany; The same were thought absolutely Worthy to be Publish'd, for the many remarkable Things contained therein, and scarce known before in these Parts.

A N
A C C O U N T
O F A
V O Y A G E
F R O M

Spain to Paraquaria ;

Perform'd by the Reverend Fathers,

Anthony Sepp, and Anthony Behme ;

Both German Jesuits, &c.

C H A P. I.

An Account of Father Anthony Sepp, of the Society of Jesus. His Voyage out of Spain to Paraquaria, and his Arrival at Buenos Ayres, with a short Description of that Place, and its Inhabitants. Dated at Buenos Ayres in Paraquaria, upon the River call'd Rio de la Plata in America 15th of April, being the Holy Easterday, 1691.

WE embark'd the 17th of January, on St. Anthony's Day at Cadiz, and arriving the 6th of April at Buenos Ayres, were received there with such Demonstrations of Joy, as is scarce to be express'd ; because the Inhabitants of this Place (which is no bigger than a Country Town) had not seen any Ships from Spain for 3 Years last past ; whereby they were reduced to that Extremity, that they had scarce a Shirt left to shift themselves with ; so that our Vessels sold a Yard of Linnen Cloth at 20 Dollars and 25 Dollars, &c. a vast Profit indeed, it being computed that at the Rate they sold their Commodities of Iron, Copper, Linnen-

Vol. IV.

Cloth, &c. they were worth at least twelve Millions of Reals.

Concerning my other Sufferings in this Voyage, I will write more at large another time. I will only tell you, that without God's peculiar Mercy, out of 40 Missionaries that were aboard these Vessels, not half would have reach'd the American Shoar, as being altogether unacquainted with such harsh Diet as our covetous Captain was pleas'd to afford us ; which was very hard Bisketful of Maggots, because it had been bak'd 2 Years before ; about a Pint of ill scented and corrupted Water a Day, and a small quantity of Flesh ; but so full of Maggots, that without the utmost necessity, we could not so much as have look'd

L I I I 2

Sepp 1691.

look'd upon, much less have eaten it.
Sepp,
 1691.

I being the eldest of the Missionaries, had the advantage of a Cabin, of about 6 Foot long; and 3 broad, but the rest of the Missionaries were forced to take up their Quarters in the Fore-castle of the Ship, exposed to the Injuries of the Weather and Air, and for an additional Plague were constantly incommoded with the stench of the Hen's Dung, which were kept thereabouts, and of which 10 commonly died in a Day; not to mention what other Hardships we were expos'd to, our Cloths being all tattered and torn, and it being part of our Daily Employment to keep our selves tolerably free from Vermin. After all these Tryals of our Patience, we arrived in America, at which I could not refrain from Tears, and upon my Knees gave Thanks to Almighty God, for his Deliverance from so many Dangers and Troubles.

Thus much of our Voyage: I will now give a brief Account of Paraguaria and Buenos Ayres (reserving a more perfect Description thereof for another Occasion.) Buenos Ayres is a small Town seated upon Rio de la Plata (the Plate River) which at its Mouth, where it exonerates it self into the Sea, is at least 60 German Miles broad, and consequently resembles rather the Sea, than a River; its Water is accounted very wholesome, and to promote Digestion, we drink every Day of it, even after eating much Fruit, without the least detriment. Their thatch'd Houses, or rather Huts of Clay, have no more than one Floor, and scarce ever last above seven Years. However about five Years ago, our Fathers have found a way of burning of Lime, and making of Tiles, wherewith they have covered their College, and are building now a Steeple of Brick, and hereafter intend to build also the Church and the College of the same Materials.

Hereabouts are no Trees, such as our Elms, Firrs, or such like, fit for Fuel, but whole Woods of Peach, Almond, and Figg-Trees, the Wood whereof is used in the Kitchin. These they Propagate by putting only the Kernels into the Ground, which grow up to admiration, and produce Fruit the first Year. I gathered this very Day some Figs from a Tree, the Trunk whereof was bigger than I could grasp with both Arms. The Grounds are here so rich of Pasturage, that you shall see 13000 or 15000 Oxen feeding together so that when you want a fat Ox, you have no more to do than to go only in to the Field, throw a Rope about the Horns, bring him Home and kill him for your use. Our College sold once 20000 Oxen at a Time, for 12000 Crowns; they are very Tall, and generally White, and valued only for their Hides, all the rest, except perhaps the Tongue, being left generally a Prey to the Birds, and wild Dogs, which flock together sometimes to the Number of 3000 or 4000, and if they meet with nothing else, do great Mischief, and devour the Calves, which are as big here as a moderate Heifer with us.

Of Partridges they have such prodigious Quantities, that you may kill them with your Cane or Stick as you walk along, they being as tame and as large as our Pullets. Their Bread is made of the best Wheat, as white as Snow, but not Salted, Salt being very scarce among these Indians, and consequently but rarely used.

The Inhabitants hereabouts as well Indians as Spaniards, are Roman Catholics. The First live for the most part upon Beef, which they eat without either Bread or Salt, and half Raw; they go into the Field, and having thrown the Rope about an Ox's Neck, they Hamstring him with a Knife; then they kill him by thrusting a Knife into the Neck Joint, cut off the Head, and take out the Entrails, all which they throw away as useless; and this they do in less than half a quarter of an Hours time. In the mean while that their Comerades are employed in making a Fire, these cut off large Slices from the Ox's Ribbs, or wherever they like it best, and putting them upon Wooden Sticks, toast them a little over the Fire, and so devour them before they are scarce heated thro'. Sometimes they lay a whole Quarter of an Ox to the Fire, but cut it off and eat it whilst it is on the Spit: Thus have I seen two of these Indians devour an Ox in two Hours time, I mean the Flesh (for they throw away the Head, Feet, and Entrails) so that they seem to contend in this Point for the superiority with Caligula, Manimus, Apicius, and Tripbo, famous Gluttons among the Antients, the last of which killed an Ox with his Fist only, and eat him alone afterwards the same Day.

The better to digest so vast a quantity of half raw Meat, some throw themselves immediately after into cold Water, stark naked, to retain the natural Heat within their Entrails, to promote digestion. Others on the other Hand, lie upon the Ground with their Stomachs downwards in the hot Sand; here they Sleep till they think they have well enough digested their last Meal, and then go to Work again as before. This Gluttony produces Worms in their Bowels, progenerated from the vast quantity of raw and indigested Meat, so that they seldom attain to the 50th Year of their Age.

As for the rest of the Inhabitants of Paraquaria they are very good Christians, and acknowledg no other Superiors, but the Missionaries, whom they reverence like Fathers, as they are indeed obliged to them for every thing, their Education, Clothing and Food; they are very apt to imitate any thing that is laid before them; I have seen some Writing of theirs as exact as the best Print. They make Clocks and Trumpets, not inferior to any in Germany; but value Musick above every thing else. When I shew'd them some of my Compositions and Musical Instruments, I brought along with me out of Europe (tho' I am but an indifferent Musician) they were ready to adore me. At the time of our Arrival we were met by about 60 Indians, playing upon their Pipes and American Horns, one of them keeping the Time by the Motion of a kind of a Flag, after a very ridiculous manner. I presented these Musicians with some Toys, such as Looking-glasses, Needles, Fish-hooks, Glass-beeds; Agnus's Dei, small Pictures, &c. which they valued beyond Gold and Silver. But my Paper beginning to fail me, I will only tell you, That I, with 20 Missionaries more, are to leave Buenos Ayres before long, in order to go deeper into the Country, into divers Cantons, of which there are 24 in this Province; each of them having 5000, some 8000 or 9000, others near 15000 Inhabitants, each under the tuition of two Missionaries, who are to provide not only for their Souls, but also for their Bodies, by allotting each Family their due Share of Meat, Bread, Flower, &c. without which they would devour all at once. No more at this Time. I recommend my self, &c.

Sepp,
1691.

CH A P. II.

A particular Description of Father Anthony Sepp's Voyage out of Spain into Paraquaria, taken out of his second Letter dated in the Canton of Japegu, in the Province of Paraquaria on the 24th of June, 1692.

The JOURNAL.

IT having pleased the Almighty God to make me an unworthy Instrument in the Conversion and Instruction of the Pagans of America, he was pleased thro' his Mercy to conduct me thro' many Tribulations and Dangers from Cadiz to Buenos Ayres, where I arrived safely on the 6th of April, 1691. I left Trent the 9th of July 1689. and travelled thence to Genoa, not without great Danger from the Bandits; thence embarking for Cadiz, I arrived there the 11th of September, being forced to stay a whole Year at Seville for the departure of the Ships bound for Buenos Ayres. I reimbarc'd again on the 17th of January 1691. at Cadiz for the prosecution of our intended Voyage thither. Aboard these Ships were 44 Missionaries of divers Nations, Spaniards, Italians, Flemmings, Sicilians, Sardinians, Genoeses, Milaneses, Romans, Bohemians and Austrians. I was a Native of Tyrol, and my Companion Father Anthony Adam Behme a Bavarian; of whose extraordinary Zeal in his new Mission, for the Conversion of a certain Nation call'd Tares, wherein he underwent great Hardships, and was likely to have offer'd up his Blood for the Glory of Christ, by the Hands of a Pagan Barbarian, who had infallibly kill'd him, had his bloody Design not been prevented by a certain new converted Indian, belonging to my Flock, I say of all this I shall have occasion to say more hereafter.

Our Squadron consisted only of three Ships, of betwixt 50 and 60 Guns each. The Capitaina or Commodore's Vessel call'd De Sanctissima Trinitate, Commanded by Don Antonio de Retana; the Almiranta de Christo Nazareno, by Don Antonio Gonzalez, and a Pink call'd Matre Dolorosa, Commanded by a certain Biscayan, as were indeed the other two Commanders. We embark'd aboard the the Almiranta, in Company of the 3 Governours of Buenos Ayres, Assumption and Chili, with their Ladies and Families, besides divers Factors, Merchants, Barbers, Negro Slaves, 200 Soldiers, 100 Seamen and others; but before we entered the great Atlantick Ocean, all the Fathers Missionaries, went over to the Matre Dolorosa, where the Captain allow'd me no other Place to lie in than a narrow Cabin about 5 Foot long, and not above 2 and a half broad; and my beloved Companions Place, I mean Father Anthony Behme and another Austrian Father's were so short, that all that while they were not able to lie streight in it; some other Fathers who were not quite so tall as he, would have changed Places with him, but he would not put the least Inconvenience upon them to ease himself. There was a little Window to let in the Air, but this being shut for the most part, to keep out the Sea Waves, we spent our time in Darkness; besides which the scent of the Water in the Ship was so nauseous to us, that we were ready to be suffocated with it, and were on the other Hand no less pester'd with thousands of Mice and Rats, some whereof were not much less than Cats, and made a most terrible Noise. The smell of the Onions and Garlick, and of stinking Tobacco, of about 600 Pullets, 280 Sheep, and 150 Hogs, which were not far from our Quarters, were no small addition to the rest of our Troubles. To add to our Affliction we had for our Diet nothing but stinking Meat, and Biskets full of Maggots, the first having been Salted a Year, and the last Baked two Years before our departure, and kept by the Captain; his Covetousness was in some measure punished by the loss he sustained daily in his Poultry and Sheep, of the first of which died 6 or 8 a Day, and a pestiferous Contagion reigning among the Hogs aboard, most of them were thrown over-board. How often have we been glad to catch the Rain Water, sent us from Heaven, in Sheets, Hats and Vessels, with a great deal of Thankfulness? I will not mention here the Trouble and Vexation we endured from the Vermin; how often I have been glad to make use of the Cables instead of a Pillow, to patch my torn Cloths, with my own Linnen, and such like other Inconveniences, these being but Trifles in comparison of the rest of our Sufferings; the best was, that all this was in some measure recompensed by a prosperous Gale and Voyage, which brought us without any sinister Accident, to our desired Port.

The 18th of January being still in sight of Cadiz, the Fathers of the Jesuits College there came aboard us, to bid us adieu; we were not a little delighted with the vast Number of small Vessels, some of which came often aboard us, to sell us some Fruits, and other Refreshments, whilst others passing in sight of us, wish'd the Captain, Governours, and us a happy Voyage, in their usual Sea Language; such as Dios Cavalleros, Adieu Gentlemen; a Dios buen Viage, Adieu, a good Voyage; buen Passage, a happy Passage; Vent in poppa, a fair Wind; Mar bonanza, a quiet Sea, &c. We answer'd them with our Drums and Trumpets, and the Fire of our Cannon and small Arms.

Being got out of Sight of Cadiz the 19th, I observed the Body of the Sun exactly at its setting, and that of the Moon exactly to appear much larger than ever I had observed it in Germany. The 20th we made 60 Leagues with a fair Wind. The 21th, 22th, 23th and 24th of January a brisk North Wind carried us directly within 30 Leagues of the Canaries or Insula fortunata; which lie 100 Leagues from Cadiz. The 25th being the Day of the Conversion of St. Paul, the Sky began to be darkened with Clouds about Midnight, which was soon after followed by so terrible a Tempest, that the Captain and whole Ships Crew cry'd out Misericordia, Misericordia, giving all over for lost; however it lasted not long, the Fury of the Tempest being somewhat allay'd by break of Day, and the Clouds soon after dispersed by the Sun Beams. We received no other Damage in this terrible Tempest, accompany'd with Thunder and Lightning (a most terrible and dismal Thing at Sea) than that one of our Ships had her Mast brought by the Board, which our Captain wisely prevented in ours, by furling its Sails in good time; one of the best remedies, to divert the Fury of this otherwise irresistible Element.

Our Procurator had brought along with him a Sanctify'd Bell as we call it, and Kaloke by the Americans, unto which they attribute this Vertue, that as far as its Sound reaches, no Thunder or Lightning can do any Mischief; for which reason we took care to have it rung at this time of Danger. The Original of its Vertue must be traced as far far as Mexico, where they say, was formerly a Bell of a vast Bulk, which as often as it Lightned and Thundred, rung of it self, and as far as the Sound thereof reached, no Thunder-bolt was ever known to fall; afterwards it was thought fit, to cast many Bells of the Mettal of this great Bell, which are given as a singular Present to Persons of Quality; and ours is one of the same kind, every Procurator who goes from the Indies to Rome, having such a Bell allowed him, to protect him in his Voyage.

The 26th of January having pretty well refitted our Ship, we prosecuted our Voyage, the Capitaine leading the Van, which was followed by the Almirante; but the Pink being heavier loaden, and pretty much damaged in the last Tempest, remained behind, for 6 or 7, and sometimes 8 Leagues, yet within sight. Thus we continued our Course the 27th, 28th, and 29th. The 30th by break of Day, a Seaman placed on the Main-top-sail-mast, cry'd with a great deal of Joy, Cavalleros, Tierra, Tierra, Land, Land, Gentlemen; It being a constant Custom aboard those Ships, for him that keeps watch on the Main-top-sail-Mast, to look about him continually with a perspective Glass, and at the sight of Land, or any Ships, to give notice thereof to the Ships Crew; who, if they prove Ships, set up a red Flag, and discharge as many great Guns as there are Ships seen; the same is done by all the other Ships, of the same Squadron, with such exactness, that if a Captain fails in this Point, he is obliged to pay a considerable Fine.

The 30th of January, as we told you before, we discovered Land, which proved the high and famous Rock call'd the Peak of Teneriffe, which appear'd all bare without any Trees, and covered on the Top with Snow. This Peak is well known to the Mathematicians in their Observations. The 31st, coming to the noted Canary Isles, at 28 Degr. and 7 Degr. from Cadiz, we pass'd betwixt the Isles of Teneriffe and Palma, the first to the left, and the other to the right of us, there being Seven of them in all, but Teneriffe and Palma are only well Peopled, where the Franciscans have a stately Convent; and the Canary Sack is preferr'd by the Spapiards before all other Wines; they are also famous for a certain kind of Singing Birds, call'd from thence Canary Birds. In the Isle of Palma that brave Father

Ignatius Azebedius obtained the Glory of Martyrdom, with Thirty of his Companions.

February the 1st, we proceeded in our Voyage with a brisk Gale, which lasted all that Night. The 2d, being Candlemas-Day, a certain Father, a Fleming by Birth, made his last Vow. We celebrated this Day with a Consort of Musick, but the boistrousfness of the Sea not permitting me to play on the Theorbe, we were forced to be contented with the Harmony of the Trumpets, and the thundring of our great Cannon, which were discharged upon this occasion. The same Day a certain Negro Slave belonging to the Governour Don Augustin de Robles, was also initiated with the Holy Baptism. The 3d we reach'd the Tropick of Cancer, sufficiently known by its excessive Heat, which generally reigns there; but we happening to be blessed with a cool North Wind at that time, found it as pleasant as the most delightful Spring Season in Europe.

The 4th, abundance of Flying Fish followed our Ship for a considerable time in the Air, till at last they betook themselves to the Water again. The Seamen, for Diversion sake, tyed a strong Thread on a Cane, with a Hook at the end, and a white Feather instead of the Floating Wood; the flying Fish mistaking the same for Whiteings, and snapping at them with much eagerness, were thus catch'd by the Hook.

The 5th of February being the Feast of the Japonesse Martyrs, a Novice entred himself into our Society, and made the usual Vow; and the Missionaries took the Holy Sacrament.

The 6th we pass'd with a prosperous Gale the Hesperides Insula, or Isles of Cape Verde, so call'd from their constant verdure, which continues throughout the whole Year, notwithstanding their Situation, under the Torrid Zone. It is an unwholsome Place, by reason of the venomous Vapours which arise from the many Pools and Fens; some Years before 8 Missionaries, with some Soldiers and Seamen, went A-shoar here, and eating too greedily of the Coco-Nuts, Water-Melons, and Oranges that grow here, paid for it with their Lives; for which reason strict Orders were given, that no Body should go A-shoar here. We happened to have aboard us certain Negroes, that were Natives of this Country, two of which I instructed at the same time to sound the Trumpet; These

These told me divers odd Stories of their Country, viz. That they had a Negro Bishop among them, and divers Canons <sup>with</sup> were likewise Negros, and also many <sup>div</sup> Priests; but that the <sup>25</sup> ~~Eschons~~ the Jesuits College (belonging to the Portugueses) were Blanks. This he told us because the white Colour was in no great esteem there, the greatest Blackness being accounted the greatest Beauty among them. This Day we observed in our Garden (which we had brought out of Spain to transplant into Paraquaria) the Narcisse-Flower to Blow, and a Muscadine Vine begin to Bud. The Jessamine continuing still in Blossom.

The 7th, 8th, 9th, 10th, 11th and 12th, we sail'd forward very briskly, and found our Selves at 6 deg. on this side the Line or Equator, the North-Star and Ursa Major being scarce any further observable to us. The 13th, 14th and 15th, we saw divers Sea-Monsters, and among the rest a certain large Fish flying near the Ship, like an Eagle. Our Ship's Crew catch'd another Fish not unlike a Wolf in his Head, Ears and Haic, but the Body like a Fish. After Dinner the Seamen being in a merry Vein, threw out a Chain, at the end of which was fastned a Leaver weighing at least 6 Pound weight. A sudden Rejoycing being heard among the Ship's Crew, the Governors, the Ladies, Missionaries and Merchants came running upon the Deck to see what the matter was, when they found that eight of the stoutest Seamen were drawing a certain large Fish into the Ship not unlike an Ox.

The Governor of Buenos Ayres having a mind to give us a Diversion, order'd the Captain to call his three great Dogs he had brought away with him, which being done, they were not very forward to approach this Sea Monster till being set on, they at last ventur'd, when this Sea Ox defended himself so well by striking with his Tail at the Dogs, and sometimes wounding them with his Teeth, that they were forc'd to give it over; and the Cabin Boys and some Sea Men came with their Weapons to make an end of him, which they did accordingly, boil'd and eat him; we had our share also, which I and Father Behme lik'd very well. There was a thing very observable in this Sea Ox, viz. That to his Skin all over his Body adhered vast numbers of small Fish, which were not his young ones, but such Fish as being sensible of their Enemy who Preys upon them, had fastned themselves there to avoid his Fury. Nothing is more common than to see the Dolphins play in the Atlantick Sea.

The 16th, we began the nine Days Prayers in Remembrance of the Indian Apostle St. Francis Xaverius. The 17th 18th and 19th, the Heavens blessed us with very seasonable Showers of Rain, to our no small Refreshment, our Water aboard the Ship beginning already to taste very ill, and what was worse we had no more than two small Measures allowed of it a Day; you may be sure that every Body was busie enough in catching what Water they could in Sheets, Table-Cloths and Hats, and you might see the poor Souldiers and Seamen catch it in their Shoes; and it was pleasant to see even those few Sailers that were left, to open their Wells, and to catch the Raindrops with a great deal of eagerness.

The 20th we perceived divers small Fires, like Ignes fatui, the reason whereof is not so easily to be found out at Sea as on Land. The 21st we came within a League of the Equinoctial Line, which we pass'd by the 22d of February early in the Morning. We were not a little surpris'd to find the Air so Temperate and Delightful, like the Spring Season; whereas commonly by reason of the nearness of the Sun, the Heat is very excessive under the Line. Ships are often Becalm'd for 60 or 70 Days, and every thing seems to change its Nature: The Water putrifies, Flesh stinks, Fleas, Lice and other Vermin dye: The Scent of Spices and Balsams vanish, and abundance of People are pester'd with a kind of Vermin in the posterior Parts, which if not taken care of in time prove mortal; Lemon-juice is the best Remedy against them. A Distemper and Remedy perhaps not much known to some European Physicians. Some of our Missionaries began to be infested with them, but were timely Cured. My Companion Father Behme was troubled with the Tooth-ach, but no sooner we were pass'd the Line, but it ceased. I for my part was very well during the whole Voyage, being not in the least troubled with Vomiting, as I was in the Mediterranean Sea in my Voyage from Genoa to Cadiz, but was extremely hungry and could have eat heartily, had I known where to come at it, the Salt Vapours of the Sea being extraordinary good to create an Appetite and to help Digestion. We

We were not unmindful that among our Friends in Europe, this was the Merry Thursday as they call it, which they spend in Feasting, but we found that our African Almanack did not agree with theirs, our Pots and Dishes being quite empty. Father Behme and I were got into the Acquaintance of divers Dutch and Hamborough Merchants at Cadiz, who tho' Lutherans invited us often to Dinner, and shew'd us many other Civilities; among them Mr. Buermeister a Hamborough Merchant was very kind to us, and at parting presented us with two Muscovite Hams, telling us that he believed they might stand us in good stead in our Voyage, which proved true enough, we having preserved them hitherto for the last extremity; but being more unwilling not to let pass the Merry Thursday unremember'd, we invited all the Bohemian, Flemming, Austrian, and some Italian Missionaries to partake of our Hams, which they did, and we eat them merrily, tho' without Bread, Wine or Water; to add to our Mirth, I play'd several Tunes upon the Theorbe, and Father Behme and I diverted them with some pleasant Tunes upon the Flagelet.

The 23d and 24th the Night Wind continuing we were advanced a Degree to the South side of the Line; it being St. Matthew's Day, all the Missionaries, Brothers and Novices took the Sacrament. The same Morning hearing a more than ordinary Noise upon the Deck, and enquiring the reason thereof, I was answered, that they had seen St. Thelmus on the top of the Mast. You must know that this St. Thelmus a Dominican being accounted a Patron of Seafaring-Men, is Reverenced by them every Morning and Evening. Now it often hapning that certain fiery Meteors appear at Sea like the Ignes fatui by Land; the ignorant Seamen cry out immediately St. Thelmus, falling upon their Knees, and saying certain Ejaculations to divert the Danger of an approaching Tempest, which they say is portended by the appearance of St. Thelmus; tho' in all our Voyage to Buenos Ayres we met with no considerable Danger, nor lost as much as one Man at Sea; whereas not long ago in a Voyage to the Philippine-Islands, the Squadron that went from Cadiz, threw above 500 dead Carcasses over Board with a Cannon Ball ty'd to their Bodies, under the Discharge of one great Piece of Artillery, the usual Ceremony used at Burials at Sea.

The 25th and 26th we met with very unconstant Weather, sometimes it Rain'd, sometimes it Thunder'd and Lightned, and not long ~~pro~~ perhaps the Sun rejoiced us again for a small time with her pleasant Sun Beams; a thing very common betwixt the Tropics, especially within two Degrees on both sides of the Line; whereas beyond the Tropics the Sea is generally so caly and free from Tempests, that the Spaniards have given it the Name of Mar de las Damas, or the Lady's Sea.

And upon this occasion I ought not to be unmindful of my Promise, made in my Letter from Sevil to the Fathers of our Society, concerning the Needle of the Compass, viz. To give them a true Account whether the Needle of the Compass under the Line, does change from the North were it stood before, to the other North Pole on that side, after they are pass'd the Equator. Concerning which I will tell you, that according to my own and Father Behmes, and divers other Missionaries Observations, that the Needle does not in the least change its Positions, and shews the North as well here in Paraquaria as in Europe, the whole difference being not real, but only in respect of our own acceptions; for what they call the South in Europe, is the North with us here; and as the South wind is the warmest with them, so is it the coldest here. The Northwind is cold in Europe and warm here. The heart of our Winter is about Midsummer, yet without Frost or Snow, a thing so little known among these Indians, that they can't tell whether it be black or white: And in December and January, when all is cover'd with Snow and Ice in several Parts of Europe, we enjoy here the most delightful Fruits of the Summer. In short he that call'd America the World turn'd topsie turvy, was not much in the wrong of it.

But we must return to our Voyage. The 27th of February at 2 deg. of Southern Latitude, we began our Voyage not with Muscovy Hams as we had done the Thursday before, but with stinking Beef and Water, yet we were merry with this slender Fair. After Dinner I visited the Sick, and gave them some Almonds and some confited Aniseeds, which I had brought along with me from Cadiz for my own use. After I had made them a short Sermon upon Patience, I presented to them the Image of our Lady of Ottingen, which they

An Account of a Voyage

And with a great deal of Devotion. ~~On~~ <sup>On</sup> the 1st of February we began our Voyage. ~~Also many~~ <sup>Also many</sup> ~~divers~~ <sup>divers</sup> ~~by Birth~~ <sup>by Birth</sup>, a Person who for his Gravity and whole Behaviour resembled St. Xaverius, and most of the Spanish Missionaries, Brothers and Novices had been continually troubled (ever since their coming from Cadiz) with the Sea Distemper or Vomiting; which not only continued but increased daily; the reason whereof I attribute to nothing else, than that this was the first time of their going to Sea, which being plainly observable in those Missionaries that were aboard us, that came from Germany, the Netherlands and Italy, and had before pass'd over the Mediterranean into Spain, were not so much afflicted with it. Our greatest trouble was that we had nothing wherewith to Comfort them, for our Pullets were all dead as well as the Sheep, and there remained 12 Hogs, so lean and tough, and the Basket so full of Maggots, that they were very unfit Food for a sick Stomach. The Ships Crew had a kind of hard black Bisket, such as they feed the Galley Slaves with aboard the Gallies; these being without Maggots, Father Anthony Behme and I eat them with the same satisfaction now as if they had been the best French Bread. How often did we wish at this time for the Scraps which we had seen in our College under the Table?

The 1st of March we began to perceive the Tempests and sudden Hurricanes which had pester'd us so frequently about 3 deg. in Latitude of the Line, betwixt the two Tropics to change remarkably; the Weather being much more settled, towards the Evening we saw an entire Rainbow quite across the Sky, resembling our Rainbows, except that we perceived more of the Blew mix'd with the other Colours.

The 2d of March we sail'd along the Coast of Parnambuco in Brasil, where Father Anthony Vieraone of our Society, a Portuguese by Birth, and formerly Chaplain to Queen Christine of Sweden, lives in the Jesuits College. The same Night Don Antonio Gonzalez Capt. of the Almirant evacuated a Stone as big as a Pigeons Egg. The 3d at Sunset a strange Indian Bird settled upon our Mast, accounted a Sign that we were within 30 Leagues of the Shoar of Brasil, because the Birds seldom venture further at Sea, where they have no Trees by the way to rest upon. His Tail was like that of a Dragons, the Wings no bigger than those of an ordinary Cock; the Head like that of a Turkey, and the Bill like that of a Snipe. The Governor of Ruenos Ayres let fly at it with his Fusée, but the Shot not being strong enough to penetrate thro' the Feathers, he escaped with life.

The 4th being the first Sunday in Lent, we had a Sermon, which we continued for 8 Days successively, where the Governors and Ladies were always present. The 5th we found our selves at 8 deg. towards the Tropic of Capricorn, and tho' we had the Sun Vertical (because it made not the least shadow about Noon) we were not troubled with any excess of Heat. The 6th 7th and 8th, nothing of moment hapned except that now and then we were refresh'd with a welcome Shower of Rain. The 9th, the Tropic of Capricorn began to shew his Horns, but was no less favourable to us than the Cancer, we being not molested with Heat. The 10th proved a very clear Star-light Night, and among other Stars we then observed the Pole Star or Polus Antarcticus, the Peacock, the Apis Indica, the Chameleon, Nubicula Major and Minor, with several other Stars, not to be met with in our celestial Globe, as being as much unknown to the European Astronomers, as divers Places and Rivers are to the Geographers, and therefore left out in their Maps.

The 11th, we saw some Sea Pigeons, 4 of which settled on our Masts; we kill'd 2 of them, and they were not unlike our Pigeons. The 12th being the Day of Canonization of St. Ignatius and Xaverius, we received the blessed Sacrament. I visited the Sick, and presented them with what Refreshments I had. The 13th at one a Clock in the Afternoon we pass'd the Tropic of Capricorn, 23 deg. from the Equinoctial Line, and by entering the temperate Zone, advanced toward the River de la Plata.

Much might be said of the temperate Zone, were it not beyond my purpose: I will only tell you that it has got its Name from its most excellent temperature of Air, being neither too Hot nor too Cold, neither too Moist nor Dry; of which we found the happy effects, all our Sick beginning to mend from this time, except the lately Baptized Negro who continued very ill; I offered him the Image of our Lady of Oettingen, exhorting horting him to trust to her Goodness for Relief, which he did, and kiss'd it with a great deal of Satisfaction; and recovered not long after. The 14th being Becalm'd we catch'd several Fish, very different from ours in Europe. In the Belly of one they found a whole Waistcoat, in another an Arm of a Man. I spent the greatest part of this Day in Instructing four Negro Boys belonging to the Governor of Buenos Ayres to Sound the Trumpet, which cost me no small Pains; however before the end of my Voyage they had learn'd to Sound about 6 or 7 Tunes.

The 15th, Don Antonio de Retano, Captain of the Capitana, came aboard us to give our Captain a Visit, which was return'd afterwards by our Captain. They saluted one another every time with 8 Cannon shot. In the Evening I explain'd to some of the Negro Women certain Points of the Christian Religion, giving them an account of certain Miracles perform'd by our Lady of Ottingen, the Image whereof I shew'd them; they Kiss'd and Reverenc'd it, and finding them very desirous to keep it, I presented them with some others, which Father Behme and I had caused several hundred to be made of Earth at Sevil; they valued this Present above all the Gold and Silver I could have given them.

The 16th and 17th the Wind being somewhat slackened, we diverted ourselves again with Fishing, and one of the Cabin-Boys laying unadvisedly hold of the Fish, he fastned his Teeth into his Hand, and held so fast, that his Teeth could not be disengag'd till they cut off the Head. The 18th being the 3d Sunday in Lent, we were allarm'd with a Cannon shot, but having sent a Boat to the Capitana to learn the reason, we found that it was only the usual Ceremony made at the Burial of a deceased Seaman, whom they had thrown over board with a Bullet ty'd to his Neck. The only Person who lost his Life in the whole Voyage, he being not very well before we left Cadiz. The Baptized Negro begins to mend every Day; of which I desire an account may be sent to the Reverend Fathers, Jesuits, Philip Scuch Preacher, and Joseph Adelman, two great Admirers of this Image; as also to the Masters of the Tartian Scholars, and to all our Companions, especially to Father Felixfueger; to satisfy them that our Lady of Ottingen does not cease to perform Miracles, even among the Indians in Paraguaría. For the Image which I have sent to be set up in our Church, and reverence and Present with proper votions: Nay a certain Indian for a small drawn Two, no ill Copies after it, which I have presented to Father Behme, who does Wonders with them among the Barbarians call'd Taros, for such as are Baptized Reverence them with bended Knees, make the Sign of the Cross before them, nay bring their young Babes to the Chappel (made of Straw and Clay) where one of them stands in order to kiss this Holy Image; all which together with the indefatigable Care of the said Father Anthony Behme (of which more hereafter) I look upon as a happy Prefage of the entire Conversion of these Barbarians; whose Case I desire may be recommended to the fervent Prayers of those of our Society in Europe, who thereby will have a share in those Blessings that attend the Office of a Missionary.

But we must return to our Ships. The 19th being the Feast of St. Joseph the Foster Father of our Saviour, I did read Mass and attended all the Fathers, Brothers and Novices at Dinner, it being my turn so to do. A little before Sunset the Dogs began to Bark and Play very Merrily, beyond what we ever observed them to do before; the Captain told us that it was an infallible Sign that we were not far from Land, which the Dogs by their quick Scent could discover at a great distance; we soon found that he was not deceived in his Guess, because soon after we got sight of the Isle of St. Thomas on the Coast of Brasil. The 20th our Muscadine Vines in our little Garden aboard us, began for to cast their Leaves. The 21st being St. Benedict's Day, I said Mass instead of another Father, whose turn it was; in which as well as in every Mass that ever I said, I bid them adieu. I constantly included in my Prayers Rudo, Father Alphon'o, and my Sister Mary Benedicta, with all the Brothers and Sisters in their respective Convents; I desire to be remembred to them. The same Evening I Preach'd to the Ship's Crew, Negros and other Passengers, my Pulpit being only some Cables wrapt together; and the Seats of the Auditors, the Anchors belonging to the Ship. I enlarg'd upon the Life of the Holy Father Benedict, concluding with a moral Exhortation to follow his Holy Footsteps. After Sermon I told them

Several remarkable Things of the two Monasteries of St. Mary's Hill, and of the Holy Cross of Loben, of their Original and Situation upon high Rocks, of their several Rules and Discipline; and how I had a Brother in one and a Sister in the other of these Convents; who I was sure would offer their Dayly Prayers for my safe Passage over the wide Sea. Tho' I spoke to them in Spanish, in which I am not very perfect, yet they did hear me with the same attention as if I had been born a Spaniard; and I always found that when I spoke to the Indians concerning Germany, and such like far distant Places, they were as attentive to it, as the Europeans when they hear of the Indian Affairs.

The 22d. they catch'd a Fish weighing no less than 90 Pound weight. It was of a green Colour, with Gold Colour'd Spots, the Flesh was very sweet and mellow. The 23d we were forced to laveer, by reason of the contrary Winds, so that we could not make above half a Degree that Day, tho' at that rate of Sailing there goes sometimes 24 nay 30 Leagues to a Degree, whereas otherwise it is reckoned no more than 15. The 24th being St. Gabriels Day, we received the Communion again, and the 25th being the Day of the Annunciation of our Lady, it was celebrated with four Masses, the Discharge of all our Cannon, and by displaying all our Ensigns and Flags, and a Consort of our Musical Instruments, viz. The Pipe, Theorbe, Trumpets, Drums and Hautboys. The Ship's Crew Danc'd in the Evening to a Drum and Pipe. Soon after divers Herons and Birds of Prey flying over our Ship, we look'd upon them as certain Messengers that we were not very far from the Shoar, to the no small Satisfaction of us all. Nothing can be more natural for Men, than to long for that Element which has given them Life and Being. I spent part of the Evening in giving good Instructions to the Negroes aboard us, and in exercising the young Ones at the Trumpet, who began by degrees to Sound some few Tunes. The Capitana gave us the Signal by a Cannon shot, and sent us Word by a Boat that they had Sounded the Bottom, and found 70 Fathom Water; for whenever any Ships approach the Shoar, they are sure to Sound the Bottom by a certain Piece of Lead dip'd in Suet or white Wax, fastned to a Rope of many Fathoms long, which as soon as it touches the Bottom, they draw up again, and by the Colour of the Earth that sticks to it, judge whether the Ground be Earthy, Rocky or Sandy, the last being the best for Anchorage.

We discovered at the same time a remarkable difference in the Colour of the Sea-Water, which appear'd not quite so Blew as before.

The 26th we had a favourable Gale, which made the whole Ship's Crew, but especially us Missionaries, full of hopes to reach the desired Shoar before long. The 27th the Capitana gave us the usual Signal with a Cannon shot and the white Flag, that they had seen Land; the Almirante did the same soon after, and was follow'd by the Pink. Our Explorer on the Top-Mast discovered the Land without the help of a Prospective Glass, to the right hand of us towards Brasil, immediately after break of Day, and it is incredible with what Joy every Body clim'd, some upon Ladders, others on the Masts, to take part in so agreeable a sight; some were cleaning their Prospective Glasses, whilst others were endeavouring to discover it with their Eyes; among these was Father Behme, who being very quick sighted, cry'd out about Noon, Land, Land good Fathers, and not long after every Body had a plain sight of that so long wish'd for Continent of America; which made us fall on our Knees to offer our Thanks to God Almighty for his Mercy, in bringing us so near to the desired Port.

We found the Depth here of about 30 Fathom, at 24 deg. of Southern Lat. and 26 min. about 7 or 8 Leagues from the Mouth of the River de la Plata. At the same time we saw two Clouds in the South, very high in the Hemisphere, which we had first discovered, and constantly kept sight of ever since we approach'd to the Line, but only just above the Horizon. Our Captain told us that these two Clouds were the surest Guides to Ships bound for Paraguaría; and I remember that as soon as the Captain saw them, before we pass'd the Line, he told us, Be joyful good Fathers, here are our infallible Guides, these two Clouds will shew us the way to Paraguaría, and rest as soon as we come there. Which in effect proved true, not that these Clouds did drive before us, but they standing vertical over Paraguaría, and being in sight of us, we had no more to do than to steer our Course directly towards them. We saw in those Southern Parts divers new Stars, such as Dorado, Xiphias, call'd the Gold Fish; Noah's Dove, the Paradise Bird, the Phoenix, nix, the Pica Brasílica, Indus Sagittiferus, with divers others.

The 28th of February we advanced to the Mouth of the River, which at the Entrance is no less than 70 Leagues over; and were told that the River of the Amazons in Brasil was much broader than this. We had much ado to find the right Channel, and were fain to take in most of our Sails, for fear of touching upon the Sands. The Water continued Salt, as I found by experience, but the Colour was changed from Blew and Green, into a whitish Colour not unlike the Rivulets. After much Rain, to the right of us, we had the Cape of St. Mary, where we could plainly see the Tower, built by the Spaniards after the Discovery of Paraguaría. Then we pass'd by the Isle call'd De los Lobos, from the vast number of Sea-wolves which are seen hereabouts. We saw a great number of them with Heads like Dogs, and Hair on their Backs instead of Scales, and they howled like our Wolves. But we came not in sight of the Cape of St. Anthony.

Thence we had still 60 Leagues to Buenos Ayres, which was at 38 deg. Southern Latitude, just as Cádiz at 35 deg. of Northern Latitude. We saw hereabouts vast quantities of white wild Pigeons. About Noon we came to the Isle Meldonado; and a Rumour being spread in Spain, that the Portugueses had taken the Post and Fortified themselves in that Island, the Governour of Buenos Ayres (pursuant to his Orders received from his Catholick Majesty) went a Shoar in the said Island with some Gentlemen and Souldiers, to know the Truth thereof; they took a view of the whole Island, and found neither Men nor the Footsteeps of Men, much less any Houses or Fortifications; but prodigious numbers of fat Oxen, Cowes, Calves and Horses, the Grass being so high, that it almost covered the Cattle, notwithstanding they were very large. They kill'd an Ox, which they brought along with them besides several other Things; but the Ox was so big, that they were fain to cut him into Quarters before they could carry him into the Long-Boat.

They brought also along with them divers sorts of Flowers, of which they had made Garlands and put them on their Hats. The Governor after his return aboard the Ship told us, that near the Shore upon a Rock, there stood a wooden Cross, set up doubtless by the Spaniards, as a Token that they were the first Discoverers of it. The Flowers they brought along with them were unlike some of our European Flowers. One had some resemblance to our Gilliflower, another to our Saffron, and another to that of our Wild-Sage. But what surpris'd me most, was a certain Flower (such a one as I never met with before in all my Life) having a thorny Crown, a Launce, 3 Nails, and the Characters of Ropes upon its Leaves; which for that reason I gave the Name of the Passion-flower. After this Day we always came to Anchor at Night, not daring to Sail in the Night time for fear of missing the Channel, which has on both sides most dangerous Sand Banks, thinking our selves now much more safe than in the open Sea. We all rested very well, and the 30th by break of Day, weigh'd our Anchor, and with all the Sail we could make pass'd by the Isle de los Flores, so call'd from its abundance of Flowers. I spent part of the Day in instructing a Negro Boy who was afterwards Baptized at Buenos Ayres.

April the first, I found by that Water wherewith I wash'd my Face, that it had very little of the brackish Taste left, which put us in hopes that we might Drink fresh Water by Noon, which hapned accordingly; and it would have done ones Heart good to see how every Body did run to satiate himself with the most delightful Draught of fresh Water, which went down with more pleasure at that time, than the best of Wines could have done at another, notwithstanding it was not very clear. We found twenty Fathom Water.

April 2d, I told you before that this River is full of Sand Banks, to avoid which 4 Men were constantly employed to Sound the Depth by the Plumb, and according as they found the Earth, which stuck to the bottom of it, either Sandy, Clay or Marshy, they cry'd at every turn, 20 Fathom, Clay Ground; 18 Fathom, Sand; and so forth, so that by the special Care of our Captain, we pass'd on very happily without striking upon the Sand Banks.

April the 3d, a large Bird of Prey settling upon the Mast of our Ship, the Governor of Buenos Ayres shot a Bullet into his Carcass, which was too strong for his Stomach to digest; he had most terrible large Claws. Soon after we catch'd a pretty small Bird with our Hands. It was of a Sky-Blew Colour all over the Body except the Head, where

An Account of a Voyage

It had a red Tuft ; it made not the least Noise when it was catch'd, and was presented with the Governor's Son. The same Day our Captains dispatch'd Don Pietro de Castro, in a Yacht to Buenos Ayres, to give notice of our Arrival.

The 4th we were within 20 Leagues of Buenos Ayres, yet could not see it; we spent that Day in clearing the Ships, put up our Flags, covered the Galleries with Scarlet Cloth, and opened the Port-holes for the Cannon, to give the usual Salute at our arrival in the Port. The Governours, Merchants, Factors, Passengers, Soldiers, and in short all the Ship's Crew, even to the Cabin-Boys, put on their best Apparel, to make the best appearance they were able at their arrival in the Harbour; among which the Equipage of the Governour of Buenos Ayres, and the Ladies, together with the Flags, Ensigns and Ornaments of the Vessels made a most glorious Shew, the last appearing upon the Water like so many triumphant Castles. The poor Missionaries were the only Persons, who in their Habits had not the least share in all these Preparations, their Cloths being very old, especially mine, and those of Father Behme, who being made a Year before the rest, were so tattered that they would not hold a stitch; and therefore wore our Night-Gowns over them.

The 5th immediately after Sun-rising, we got sight of the so much desired Port of Buenos Ayres, as the Spaniards call it, from its most excellent temperature of the Air, throughout the whole Year. Towards Evening we saw two Boats, with two Pair of Oars each, to make the best of their way towards us: In one was the Son of the Governour of the Place, accompany'd with three of the chief Officers, to welcome the new Governour, and in the other the Procurator, or Chief of our Society in Paraguaria, to do the like to the Missionaries aboard, and to regale us with divers Sorts of Provisions and Refreshments; or, to speak in plain Terms, to Feed the Hungry. The Father Procurator brought along with him 4 Sheep, and 2 Calves, but we refusing to eat Flesh in Lent, bestowed the same upon the Hungry Soldiers; of American Fruits they brought us Muskmelons, Apples, Melons, and Water-Melons, call'd Sandias by the Spaniards, some Onions and Garlick, 20 Wheaten Loaves of the best Sort, a small Barrel with the best Honey, a Basket of Sweet-Meats, preserved Lemons and Citrons, &c. all which how welcome it was to our Hungry Stomachs we will give you leave to guess; the other Boats having brought also such like Refreshments for the Governours and Ladies, they were no less pleased with them than we, after so tedious and troublesome a Voyage.

The 6th of April we arrived happily in the Port Buenos Ayres; where all that Day nothing was to be heard but the Thunder of our Cannon, the Noise of our Trumpets, Drums and Pipes; Here they saw our Flags and Ensigns display'd, on the Shoar several Companies of Horse and Foot, a vast Number of Indians with their Musical Instruments, abundance of Negroes, to bid us welcome; and to render our Arrival the more Conspicuous, many of the Indians came running with full speed, and thronging through the Crowd to Kiss our Hands, so that I could not refrain from Tears, but upon my Knees implored God's Mercy to assist me in my intended Design of bringing many of these innocent People to the Knowledge of the Gospel: Thus surrounded by a vast Multitude of these Americans, and accompanied by the Father Provincial Gregory de Gresco, and the rest of the Fathers of our Society, we pass'd from the Gate straightways to the Church, where we Sung the Te Deum, with a great deal of Devotion, the Bells ringing all the while all over the Town. Thus having given you the best Account I could of our Voyage, pursuant to my Promise at our Departure, I will now proceed to our Journey from Buenos Ayres, into the Cantons of the Indians; in hopes that you will in consideration of the weight of the Matter, pardon the unpoliteness of the Style

C H A P. III.

An Account of another Voyage performed by Father Anthony <sup>proc. May,</sup> 1691. from Buenos Ayres, for 200 Leagues up the River <sup>of</sup> Uruguay, to the Cantons of the Indians.

BUT before I Embark a second time, I think it not amiss to give you a short Description of Buenos Ayres, not questioning but tho' the same has been done more at large before by other Historians, yet what comes from the Hand of a Friend, who lives upon the Spot, will be look'd upon as more sure and acceptable, than what comes from Strangers, that have been no Eye Witnesses of what they publish to the World. Being arriv'd the 6th of April, 1691. (as we told you before) at Buenos Ayres, our Father Provincial thought it highly necessary, that the 44 Missionaries, which had endured so much Hardship in so long a Voyage, should have a Month allowed them for the recovery of their Strength, which was much impaired by so many Fatigues, some being so much altered in their Complexions, that they appear'd as meagre and pale as Death it self.

His first Care was, to endear himself to us by all imaginable Acts of Charity; he provided Food and Drink, Cloathed and received us with all the marks of Kindness and Liberality in his College, where we did not want any thing the Place afforded; as on the other Hand such of our Missionaries as were able employed the approaching Holy Week in hearing Confession, and giving Absolution to the Spaniards living at Buenos Ayres, no Indians being permitted to inhabit the Town; for the whole College here (tho' next to that of Corduba in Tucuman, the biggest in these Parts) consisting only of eight Fathers and one Brother, including the Father Provincial and his Deputy, had their Hands full, in the Daily performance of their Duty.

This Province exceeds in bigness all Germany, the Netherlands, France and Italy taken together, not in the Number of Cities, for such it has none; not in Colleges, for of these there are no more than 80, and in them only 160 Persons, but in its vast extent, and the great distance of our Colleges from one another, some of which are 100, 200, 300, nay 500 or 600 Leagues asunder. There is one continued Plain of 200

Leagues long betwixt Buenos Ayres and Corduba in Tucuman; in these 200 Leagues you see not so much as one Tree, yet nothing but the best Pasturage in the World, full of fine Cattle, such as Oxen, Cowes, Calves and Horses, all which, as they belong to the first that catches them (there being neither Village, nor House, nay not so much as a Shepherd's Hut to be seen in the whole Plain) so you may take them by Thousands, and dispose of them at pleasure. But we must not venture too far into this spacious Field, for fear of losing our little Town of Buenos Ayres; which has no more than two Streets built crosswise; it lies at 35 Degr. towards the Antarctic Pole (of Southern Latitude) as Cadiz in Spain stands at 35 Degr. towards the Arctic Pole (of Northern Latitude:) It is a very healthful Place, as its name intimates; under the Government of a Spanish Governour, which is changed every five Years. It has 4 Convents, viz. of the Franciscans, Dominicans, Trinitarians and Jesuits; who all live here in a great deal of Poverty, by reason of the great Scarcity of many Things requisite for the conveniency of Human Life. The Houses and Churches here are not built of Brick, but Clay, not above one Story high; and this not so much for want of Stone, but of Lime and Mortar; the burning of which has been but lately set up here, as well as the making of Tiles and Bricks some Years before. They have since that time began to build a Steeple of Brick, which is near half finished, and intend soon to begin a new Church of the same Materials. The Jesuits themselves are the Architects, and the Work-men, certain Indians, sent thither from the Cantons in the Country. The College, and some few Houses are also covered with Tiles, but the rest only with Stone.

The Castle it self, where the Governour resides, is only of Clay, surrounded with an Earthen Wall, and a deep Trench, defended only by 900 Spaniards; tho' in case of necessity, above 30000 Indian Horse might be arm'd out of the several Cantons, and these 1691.

Sepp,

not unskilful in the use of Fire-Arms and Swords, in which they are instructed by the Missionaries, as also how to draw up Squadrons and Batalions, and to act both Offensively and Defensively as the Europeans. Not to speak here of their own Arms, as Bows, Arrows, Slings, &c.

The Ecclesiastical Government here is composed of one Bishop only, and three Canons, whose Revenues in all do not amount to above 3000 Crowns per Annum; which according to a true Computation, does not amount beyond half the Sum, considering that Silver is cheaper here than Iron; for you may sell a two Penny Knife here for a Crown, an ordinary Hat, such as you Buy in Germany for 2 Shill. for 10 or 12 Crowns; a Gun, of about 10 or 12 Shillings Price, for 30 Crowns, and so in proportion; because these Things are often not to be bought for any Money here.

On the other Hand Provisions are dog Cheap; an Ox, or rather to speak more properly, a fat Cow (for they don't value the Flesh of Oxen) they buy for 2 Reales de Plate, or 10 or 12 Pence, a good Horle for 2 Shill. and for less, because I have seen 2 good Horses given for a Knife not worth 6 Pence in Germany, and a good Ox for a few Needles; but of this more hereafter.

About Buenos Ayres you see whole Woods of Peach-Trees, neither have they any other Fuel, but the Wood of Almond and Peach-Trees; these they propagate by putting only the Kernels into the Ground, which bear Fruit the next Year. But Chest-nuts and Hasel-nut-trees will not thrive so well here. They tell you an odd Story in Spain, concerning the Origin of the Peach-trees, viz. That when the African Moors invaded Spain, they brought along with them vast Quantities of Peach-stones to plant in Spain, the Fruit whereof being Poisonous in Africa, they did not question but it would have the same effect in Spain; by which means they hoped to root out the Spaniards; but that, contrary to Expectation, the said Fruit proving quite otherwise in the Spanish Soil, the Spanish Missionaries brought abundance of these Stones into Paraguay, where they were planted, and propagated to a prodigious Number: This Country also produces the most delicious black and white Figs; I remember that a poor Negroe, a Slave belonging to the College, went in the Easter Holidays along with me into a Wood, where he got upon a Tree, and gathered me as many as he pleased; I offered him a Spanish Half-penny for his Pains, which he refused, till I forced him to take it, wherewith he thinking himself as rich as Craesus, he returned me a thousand Thanks, and told me, that if I would but give him the least notice, he would fetch me as many Figs as I pleased.

All this while, our chief Recreation consisted in giving them an account of the Affairs of Europe, especially concerning the Hungarian War, the Siege and Relief of Vienna, the taking of Buda and Belgrade, the Conquest of Transylvania, and such like; sometimes the Discourse would run upon the Actions of Lewis XIV. King of France, sometimes about the Divisions raised by Father Fontaine in that Kingdom; all which being Novelties to them, they were extremely pleased with our Discourse.

But the Father Provincial, and the Father Procurator Ignatius de Trios, (who has brought this Letter as far as Rome,) not thus satisfied, would needs have me make a tryal of my Skill in Musick; so that to satisfy their Curiosity, I was forced to play before them upon the great Theorbe which I had bought at Augsburg, and upon the lesser Theorbe bought at Genoa; at which they seem'd much surprized: Father Anthony Behme and I, gave them also a Consort of the Flute, upon the Violin, and a little stroke upon the Trumpet Marine, which I got made at Cadiz; all which they were much delighted with, tho' I must confess my self but a very indifferent Artist.

I made also a Present of certain The- ses and other Trifles, to the Provincial and his Deputy, and gave to the rest of the Fathers a few Earthen Images of our Lady, which were received and valued by them beyond Gold or Silver: For, it is to be observ'd, that in this Country the smallest Present of this Kind is fit for a Provincial, who will think himself as much obliged upon such an account as if in Europe you presented him with a piece of the best Miniature; the reason whereof is, that the Merchants who traffick into these Parts, thinking it not for their purpose to trouble themselves with the selling of Pictures, Images and Beads, the same are scarce ever brought hither but by the Missionaries, and consequently highly valued by the Inhabitants: Father

Behme,

Behme, my Companion, did in like manner give them sufficient proofs of his Liberality; He presented that Father Provincial with a wooden Cross, on which were no less than seven Sun-dials neatly done, and to the rest of the Fathers he gave some lesser Crosses, which he had bought at Cadiz and Sevil.

By such like Presents, tho' of little intrinsic Value, we so gain'd upon the Affection of the College, that they began to be very inquisitive, of what part of Germany we were, and would often wonder what was the reason that they had not hitherto had so much as one Missionary out of Germany in those Parts; which was indeed no more than the Truth. I told them that the only reason I knew of, was, That there being but few Jesuits Colleges in that Part of Germany which is immediately subject to the Emperor, they could furnish but few Missionaries. Unto which they reply'd, That the whole Empire being subject in some measure to that Emperor, and the Spaniards making no difference betwixt the Nations of the several Provinces of Germany, (provided they were not of the French Faction, a Nation ever hated by them,) and that there was at that time a most strict Alliance betwixt the Emperour and the House of Bavaria by the Marriage of that Prince with the Emperor's Daughter, they could scarce conceive how so many Colleges could not furnish some Missionaries for the Indies.

I had no other Answer to make, than that my first alledged reason, being an Opinion generally received in Germany, I had taken all possible pains to undeceive them, in that point since my departure thence, and that I had written on purpose to my Friends from Sevil, that they were in an Error as to this point: A Bavarian, Suabian, Swiss or Palatin Missionary being as well qualified for that Station, as a Native of Tyrol, or Vienna it self; which has been sufficiently verified since, by the trust reposed in Father Anthony Behme, (tho' a Bavarian;) by the Superiour of our Order. Unto which we might add, that since our coming thither, the Natives seem to be more fond of us than the rest. But we must return to our Story. After we had rested our selves for a Month at Buenos Ayres, the Father Provincial sent most of the Missionaries lately come from Spain to Corduba in Tucuman, for the conveniency of their Studies, most of them being but Novices, and the rest Students of Philosophy and Divinity. But the most of the Missionaries as they were no Spaniards, and most of them arrived to a good Age, he dispatch'd to the several Cantons upon the River Parana, and Kinguas, deeper into the Country. We pass'd up the River in the following manner:

Three hundred Indian Christians were appointed with certain Vessels to carry us up the Stream; but before we embarked, it will be requisite to give you a Description of these Vessels, which are call'd Canoes by the Spaniards. They take the Trunks of two large Trees, about 70 or 80 Foot long, and 3 or 4 Foot diameter; these two Trees they fasten together, like our Float-Woods, yet at the distance of a Pace from one another; this Interstice they fill up with Canes of about 12 Foot in length, and 2 Foot in depth; and upon it erect a certain Hut of small Canes and Straw, sufficient to contain conveniently enough 2 or 3 Persons; the Sides are commonly of Straw or Cane, covered with the same, over which they lay an Ox's Hide. On one side it has a little Window, and on the other the Door, made likewise of an Ox's Hide. In these Huts the Missionaries divert themselves during the Voyage, with as much satisfaction as if they were in a Palace, and perform the same Religious Exercises, as if they were in one of their Colleges, without the least Interruption; the Indians rowing very orderly without the least Noise, so that you shall scarce hear them speak a word all Day long.

We embark'd in these Canoes (2 or 3 in each) the 1st of May, 1691. about 2 or 3 Leagues from Buenos Ayres, because the Missionaries are always careful, not to let the Indian Christians come as far as to that Place, where these simple People would be soon corrupted and infected with the Vices of the Spaniards. Thus we were row'd up the Stream by 24 Men in each Canoe, and soon after pass'd by several Islands on both sides of us, very delightful for the vast Number of their Palm, Laurel, Lemon and Citron Trees; surpassing in natural Beauty all the Gardens of Europe, nothing being so much to be lamented, as that all these Islands (of which there are no less than 60) which might serve Princes for Gardens, should be uninhabited, and be Receptacles only for wild Beasts.

Sepp, -
1691.

Of Fishes, and those of a delicious Taste (but having not the least resemblance to ours, except some few small ones) this River affords such vast Quantities, that you need no Hook nor Rod to take them, but only to hold out both your Hands, nay they will leap into your Boat, where you may catch them with ease.

After we had for 8 Days row'd up the Stream of the Rio de Plata, which henceforward is call'd Rio Paraguay (Rio signifying in Spanish as much as a River) we left Rio Negro, i. e. the Black River to our Right, and Rio Terzero on the Left, and afterwards quitting likewise the River Paraguay (which has given its Name to Paraguaria) entered the River Uruguay to the Right, having its course 300 Leagues thence towards the side of Brazil; upon this River, viz. 200 Leagues from Buenos Ayres, are seated 14 of the Indian Cantons, and 12 more upon the River Parana, deeper in the Country on the right Hand; whereof Father Scherer having publish'd a Map, I will accordingly direct your way by the same.

First therefore look for Buenos Ayres, and leaving the Cape of St. Mary to the right, follow the tract of the River upon which it lies, where you will meet with another River not named there, which is the River Uruguay, about the same bigness with the Danube near Vien-na, upon which I now live in the first Canton, from whence I writ this Letter. Here you will find in the Map, St. Nicholas, higher up St. Xavier, and still higher St. Sacramentum, St. Joseph, &c. Where is to be observed, that Father Scherer being not able to insert all the Names by reason of the narrow compass of the Map, he mentions St. Nicholas in the first Place, upon the River Uruguay, whereas it is the 7th in order. For Japay, where I live is the first, next Messus Paraguaria; Seven Leagues thence Serutz, then de Sancta cruce, and 20 Leagues further St. Thomas, from St. Thomas of Borgia, next to that Apostoli, La Conception and so forth.

The 15th of May we took a Walk along the Banks of the River and adjacent Woods; we found near the River Side abundance of fine Stones, which if polished would resemble our precious Stones; we also saw a kind of Vessel, naturally bak'd by the Sun, of Sand, and as bright within as if it had been glased by a Potter: In these the Indians keep their Drink in the hottest Season, and hanging it in the Night Time in the Air, it keeps the Water as cool, as if it had been set in Ice. We also found here divers Pieces half Wood half Stone, and divers Pieces of Citron Peel and Flesh Putrify'd, which seem to shew a Putrifying Quality in this River.

The 20th, a considerable Number of Barbarians approaching our Vessel, we sent our Interpreter to know what their Business was, they told us that they had brought 20 Horses to sell, so we landed, and having ask'd the Price of the Horses, we produced our Needles, Knives, Fish-hooks, Tobacco, Bread, and the Powder of certain Leaves of a Tree growing in Paraguaria, which they look upon as extraordinary wholsom, and put it in their Drink (of which more anon) these Trifles, which in all cost not above a Crown, were changed for 20 Horses; and they were besides so well pleased with their Bargain, that they went away whistling, a certain Sign of their Satisfaction.

He that was their Chieftain, and is commonly a Sorcerer, (whom they call Cazique) was clad only in a Doe's Skin, hanging down from his Shoulders, the rest had only a Piece of Skin wrapt about the middle, hanging down before, as far as to the Knees; the Boys and Girls were stark Naked; upon the Head they have nothing but long Black Hair, as strong as Horse-Hair; in their Ears they have Holes, in which they hang either Fish-bones, shining like the Mother of Pearl, or a coloured Feather ty'd to a Thread. The Boys and Girls had likewise white Fish-bones or Feathers, which they wore on their Chins, in Holes made for that purpose; they also wore Feathers of divers Colours ty'd in a String round their Necks. The Men are much of the same Size as the Europeans, but not quite so tall, with thick Legs and large Joints: Their Faces scarce differ from one another, being rather round than oval, but flat, and of an Olive Colour. They were arm'd each with a Bow, and a whole Handfull of Arrows, these being accounted the most courageous and most addicted to Sorcery among these Barbarians. And these are the same Tares, for the Conversion of whom Father Anthony Behme was sent thither, and lives among them to this Day, not without a great deal of Difficulty and Danger; they having more than once attempted his Life.

Some

Some of the most robust among them had several deep Seams on their Bodies; these Wounds they give themselves in their tender Age, without the least repining, and wear them afterwards as a mark of their Courage. The Women appear more like Devils than rational Creatures; their Hair hangs loose over their Fore-heads the rest twisted in several Locks covering their Backs to the Hips; Their Faces are full of Wrinkles, with their Arms, Shoulders and Breasts naked; their Ornaments about the Neck, Hands and Arms, are certain Fish-bones, made like Scales of Mother of Pearl, or large Scales of Fish; the Wife of the Cazique wears a triple Crown like the Popes, made of Straw; their Children they wrap as soon as they are Born in a Tyger's Skin, give them Suck only for a short time, and afterwards Feed them with half raw Meat, out of which they suck the Juice.

The Men have a Custom at the Death of their nearest Kindred to cut off a Finger every time of the left Hand; and if one of their Daughters dies (provided she be Handsome) they make a Feast, and drink round out of the Skull.

The 22th we went ashore again to purchase some Meat of these Barbarians; not above 18 Paces from the Bank-side we saw their Huts of Straw, without any Roofs fix'd upon the bare Ground; all their Household-stuff consisted in a few Tompions, hellow'd out, which they use as we do our Copper and Earthen Vessels, and a few Sticks instead of Spits; their Bed was a Tyger or Ox-Hide, spread upon the Ground, except that their Cazique had a Net fastned at some distance from the Ground, on two Trees, for his Bed, the better to secure himself against the wild Beasts and Serpents; there being a considerable Number of us, they began at our approach to quake for fear like an Ash-leaf, but no sooner did they see us produce our Needles, Fish-hooks and Bread, but they did run towards us with open Arms, and we exchanged for as much fat Cow's-Flesh for our 300 Indians, and as much Veal for our own use as we had occasion for all that time.

In the mean while having cast my Eye upon a little innocent Boy, that had taken hold of me, and considering with my self, what Pity it was that so innocent a Babe should be left among these Barbarians, and in time become a Sacrifice to the Devil, I told the Father that if he would consent to the Sale of the

Vol. IV.

Child, I would Cloath him, and take Care of him as long as I lived; he consented, so my next Addressees were to the Mother, whom I tempted with Bread, Needles, and Tobacco, to part with the Child, but she answering me, that she had a peculiar Kindness for this Child, but would consent to let me have one of the rest; I pitch'd upon a Girl, which she seem'd pretty well satisfy'd with; but when she saw me produce the Needles, Tobacco, &c. her Heart began to fail, and her natural Inclination overcoming all other Considerations she recall'd the Bargain, so that I was fain to rest satisfy'd; but however made her a small Present of some Trifles, to engage her against another occasion.

The 23th, after I had said Mass, Father Anthony Behme and I erected a Wooden Cross upon a Hovel, near the Bank-side, with this Inscription, Germania; to intimate, that we were not without hopes of settling one time or other the Gospel here; and tho' some of our Company could not forbear to smile at it, and said among themselves, These are indeed good simple Germans; yet were we not altogether deceived in our Hopes, for within the Year God was pleased so to Bless the Endeavours of Father Anthony Behme, that not far from this Place he erected a kind of Canton for the Converted Indians, with a small Chappel dedicated to St. Joachim, as we shall see more at large anon.

The 24th of May, the Meat which we had bought of the Indians, being almost consumed, we mounted the 20 Horses, we had purchased, and riding for about half an Hour into the Country, over the most fertile Meadows in the World, met with abundance of fat Cattle, whereof we took 6 of the fattest Cows, and 4 Calves, which we kill'd upon the Spot, and having thrown away the Entrails, Head and Feet, cut them into Quarters, and so carried them to our Boats: It is almost Incredible, how nimble the Indians are in Catching, Killing and Quartering these Beasts; but they are no less nimble in Eating them, without Salt or Bread, and more than half raw, a Custom not easily to be abolished among them, tho' I have often attempted it; for I remember, that several times I have sent some Meat Boil'd after our way to some Indians that were Sick, which they received thankfully, but afterwards gave it to the Dogs, and return'd to their own Diet.

N n n n 2

The

Sepp,
1691

Sepp, 1691. The 25th we saw coming down the River a Boat like ours, which afterwards proved to belong to Father Joseph Seravia, a Missionary of the Canton of St. Cruce; he had 20 Musicians with him, who welcom'd us with their Instruments in the Name of all the rest of the Cantons; he also presented us with 90 white Loaves, 2 small Barrels of Honey, preserved Peaches, Lemons, Citrons, Apples, Water-Melons, and such like American Fruits, which came in very good time, ours being most spent before; this was the first Missionary we met with, being an antient Person, and very venerable for his Gray Hairs, and the Service he had done in taking care of 8000 Souls, without a Companion; it was upon this Score, that he was ravish'd to hear, that 44 Missionaries were lately arrived from Spain, not questioning but that he should soon have an Associate, which happened accordingly.

Just before Night, I agreed with the said Father, to Sing our Lady's Litany among the Barbarians, which I did accordingly, and could scarce refrain from Tears, when I saw some of the Indian Children that came along with him, to Sing with a great deal of Joy, to the Praise of the Mother of God; we continu'd to do the same every Night, before we went to Rest, and were infinitely pleas'd to see even the Barbarians flock to us, and to hear us with a great deal of Attention and Decency.

The 26th we came to a certain Cataract or Water-fall in the River Uruguay, where the Water rushes with such Violence from the Rocks, that we were forced to take our Boats to Pieces with incredible Difficulty, the Trees which Compos'd them being 60 or 70 Foot long, and 3 in Diameter, notwithstanding which they carried them and all the other Materials over these narrow Rocks in less than 6 Hours, and soon set them together again, in the same manner as we have described them before.

This Cataract and the Ridge of Rocks over which the Water passes, seems by Providence to be fix'd here for the singular Advantage of the poor Indians, against the Avarice of the Spaniards, who meet here with their Ne plus Ultra, as not being able to go further with their Ships; which is the reason that hitherto they have been confined to Buenos Ayres, and never been able to settle in these Cantons, which were otherwise sufficiently inviting to them, by reason of the vast Profit they would draw thence. And happy it is for the poor Indians, who being a simple Nation, would otherwise be soon infected with the Vices of the Spaniards, who besides this would make them their Slaves, they making not the least account, whether they are Christians or Pagans, but treat them promiscuously, rather like Dogs than Men.

C H A P. IV.

Containing an Account of the Arrival of Father Anthony Sepp, and Father Anthony Behme in Japegu, the first Canton of the Indians, Dedicated to the three Wise Men from the East; and of the Troubles and other Difficulties attending the Office of a Missionary in these Cantons.

After we had happily pass'd the before-mentioned Cataract, we continued our Voyage for some time still against the Current, till at last the 1st of June (just a Month after we left Buenos Ayres,) we began to come within Sight of Japegu, the first Canton upon this River, Dedicated to the three wise Men of the East, at 26 Deg. and 7 from Buenos Ayres. As we were infinitely rejoiced at so agreeable a Sight, we express'd our Satisfaction, by covering our Straw Huts with the green Branches of Trees; and adorning the Doors with such Lemons and Citrons, as we had left; we drew up our Squadron of Boats into a half Moon, and by the sound of our Drums and Haut-boys (of which each Boat had one) gave notice to all the adjacent Cantons of the Converted Indians (the Houses, Churches and Steeples made a most glorious Shew in so desolate a Country) of our Approach before they could see us.

We advanced in the same Order June the 2d, directly opposite to the first Canton, and were no sooner espied by the Inhabitants, but they express'd their Joy, by their usual Acclamations; Jepuan! Jepuan! You may guess how pleasing ling a fight it was to us, to see the People in vast numbers leave their Huts, some on Horsback, some on Foot, others with their Bows and Arrows, others almost without their Cloths to flock to the River side, not excepted even the Boys and Girles, and Aged Persons, who all would partake of these Demonstrations of Joy at our Arrival.

But what not a little surpris'd us, was, that among all this Croud, we saw not as much as one Indian Woman kind above 7 Years of Age; some thought them less curious, others attributed their Absence upon this solemn Occasion, either to Fear or Modesty; but found our selves extreemly mistaken in our guess, when we were told that they were all repair'd to Church to return Thanks to God for his Mercy, in protecting the Missionaries in their Voyage hither; but we will leave them to their Devotion and return to the River, where the Father Procurator and Father Superiour strove to outdo the Indians in all the Demonstrations of the most sincere Joy and Satisfaction that could be imagined. They had sent two well equipp'd Boats like Gallies to meet us, lined on both sides with Firelocks; these two made a mock Engagement, discharging their Muskets briskly at one another, under the Sound of Drums, Trumpets and Hautboys, whilst some Indians diverted us with Wrestling together in the Water, till at last winding about, they gave us a triple Salvo and joyn'd with ours.

On the River side we saw the Father Procurator, and Father Superiour at the Head of two Troops of Horse, and as many Companies of Foot, all Indians but Clad after the Spanish Fashion, and Arm'd with Cymetars, Muskets, Bows, Arrows, Slings, &c. Four Entigus did their utmost in shewing us their Skill in managing their Colours; as four Trumpets, and some Hautboys animated the People, and saluted us at our Landing. We had no sooner set foot a Shore, but embracing one another, we march'd in good Order thro' a green Triumphal Arch towards the Church, being follow'd by some thousands of Converted Indians, where being Welcom'd by the Ringing of the Bells, and entring the Church with a singular Gravity and Devotion, we found the Indian Women still at their Prayers, and that with so much Fervency, that not one among them stir'd as much as her Head, or cast her Eyes at us as we came into the Church.

We began the Laudate Dominum omnes gentes, which being done the Corregidor or Chief of the Indians received us in the Name of the whole Nation with a short but very good Speech, the like did one of the Indian Women; and that very elegantly, if we may credit what the Father Superiour, (who is well versed in the Paraquaria Language) assured us.

Thus we spent that Day and the next following in Mirth and Jollity. In the Evening we were invited to see four different Dances. The first was performed by eight Boys, managing their Pikes or Lances with great dexterity whilst they Danced. The second was by two Fencing-Masters. The third by six Seamen. And the fourth by six Boys on Horseback. All these were Indians, but Clad after the Spanish Mode, and that with so much Curiosity, that they might have not been ashamed to appear before Persons of the first Rank in Europe. They afterwards gave us the diversion of a kind of a Tournament on Horseback; it being then Night, they had illuminated the Place with Ox Horns fill'd with Suet, they having neither Oyl nor Wax here.

The 3d of June being White-Sunday, all the Missionaries said the first Mass in the Indian Church here; returning their most humble Thanks to God Almighty, for having made them his Instruments in the Conversion and Instruction of these poor Indians, and imploring his Mercy to enable them to go through with so great a Work, especially in the attaining of the Language of the Natives; among which that of the Paraquarians is the chiefest, having for the rest not the least resemblance to the Spanish, German or Latin; being a peculiar Language, as may be by the enclosed Table, containing the Pater Noster and Ave Mary in the Latin, Spanish and Paraquarian Languages, with some few Rules for the Reading of it, as it was Copied by an Indian.

Sepp
1691.

Pater-Noster & Ave Maria
In Lingua
Paraquariensi, Hispanica & Latina.

1691. Santa Cruz
Ra angaba reche
Or amora rey mba-ragui.
Orepiciro epe
Tupa Oreyara,
Tuba, hac Taira
hae.
Espiritu santo rera pipe
Amen, Jesus.

Ore ruba.

Ore ruba
Ibape ercibae
Imboyero bia ripiramo Ndercta maranga tu toy-
co Tou ndereco maranga tu-orche Tiyaye nderimimbotara.
Quie ibipe.
Ibape yyaie nabe.
Orerembui
Aranabo guara
Emee curi orebe
Ndeny ro
Oreynangai pabae upe.
Orere recumengu ahara up
Oreny ro nunga
Hae eipotareme.
Angaipape ore
Orepiciro epecant
Mbae pochia gui
Amen, Jesus
Tupa rander aro Maria Ndere ni he Tupa graciche Tupa nandeyara
Ndeirunamo oyco Ymombeu catupiramo
creico
Cuna pabeagni Ymombeu catupiramo
abe oyco
Ndemembira Jesus.
Santa Maria.
Tupaci maranymbae
Enemboe ndemembiraupe
Ore ynangaipa bae rehe
Ang, hac oremano motaramo abe.
Amen, Jesus.

Por la senal
Dela santa Cruz
De nuestro enemi-gos
Libra nos Senor
Dios nuestro
En el nombre del
Padre
Y del Hijo
Y del Espiritu santo
Amen, Jesus.

Padre nuestro.

Padre nuestro
Que estas en los Cielos Santificado Sea el tu Nombre
Venga a nos el tu
Reyno
Hagase tu voluntad
Asi en la tierra
Como en el Cielo
El pan nuestro
D cadu dia Da nos lo oy
Y perdona nos
Nuestras deudas
Asi como nos otros Perdonamos.
A nuestros deudores
Y no nos dexes caer
En la tentacion
Mas libra nos de mal
Amen, Jesus
Dios te salve Maria Plena de gra-tia
El Senor
Es contigo Bentida tu eres
Eetre todas las mugeres
Y bendito es el fru-
to.
De tu vientre Jesus
Santa Maria
Madre de Dios
Ruega per nos otros
Pecadores
Apra, y en la ora de nuestra muerte
Amen, Jesus.

Per Signum Sanctæ Crucis
De inimicis nostris
Libera nos
Deus noster,
In nomine
Patris
Et Filii, Et Spiritus Sancti,
Amen.

Pater-noster.

Pater-noster
Qui es in Cœlis, Sanctificetur
Nomen tuum.
Adveniat regnum
tuum.
Fiat voluntas tua,
Sicut in Cœlo,
Et in terra.
Panem nostrum quotidianum
da nobis hodie.
Et dimitte nobis debita nostra, sicut & nos dimittimus
debitoribus nostris.
Et ne nos inducas
in tentationem,
Sed libera nos a malo,
Amen.
Ave MARIA,
gratia plena,
Dominus Tecum:
Benedicta tu
in mulieribus:
Et benedictus fructus
ventris tui Jesus.
Sancta Maria,
Mater Dei,
Ora pro nobis Peccatoribus, nunc & in hora
mortis nostræ,
Amen.

• Hæc Lingua componitur ex meris particulis. Literas F. L. duplex R R. non habet. Loco Futitur P. hinc Musici non dicunt: Ut, Re, Mi, Fa, sed Pa. Ut, Re, Mi, Pa, Sol, La. Loco L. utitur R. simplici. Pronuntiationes habet tres non ita faciles, his Signis notatas Primum est gutturale, & semper ponitur supra i, pronuntiaturque intra os retrahendo linguam, & quasi aerem attrahendo, ut ibi terra, y aqua; ibæ, cœlum. Secundum signum ponitur supra vocales a, e, i, o, u, non tamen semper, & pronuntiatur totum in naribus, ut Tupa, Deus, quasi intra u & p esset m Tupa. Tertium est difficillimum, formari namque debet in gutture simul & naribus, ut: amoiro, incito; alterum ad iram: aroyro, contemno. Hocque signum sæpissime integrum sensum mutat: Sic Tupa cum pileolo gemino significat Deus: Tupa sine pileolo significat Lectum, in quo Indi dormiunt, quod est rete ex duabus arboribus suspensum. Lineola supra n pronuntiatur in naribus sicut Italicum gna, ut: cuna, mulier, quali cugna. Ya, ye, yi, yo, yu: Velut Cha, che, chi, cho, chu, lene, ut yara, Dominus: nan de yara, noster Dominus, yu acus. Præterea notandum, quod vocabula debeant pronuntiari cum accentu in ultima, nec non cum aliqua asperitate gutturali Helvetica: quam me Lucerna olim apprehendisse plurimum modo juvat.

Sepp
1691.

Declinatio Nominis:

Nominativus. Abare, Hic Sacerdos. Gen. Abarembae, Res Sacerdotis. Dat. Abare upe, Sacerdoti. Accus. Abare, Sacerdotem. Voc. Abare, o Sacerdos. Abl. Abaregui, vel, agui, de Sacerdote. Abare pipe, cum Sacerdote. Abarepe, in Sacerdote. Abare rehe, pro Sacerdote.

Jorge Chapare gibuta heyta, Musicus, 1692.
yo peyare Junii.

The same Day the Father Superiour did allot to each of the new Missionaries his Place. My Lot was to stay in the first Canton, call'd Japeya, Dedicated to the Three Wise Men of the East, the Patrons of Germany, and the City of Cologne. Father Anthony Belme was sent to St. Michael, a hundred Leagues from hence. The two Bohemian Missionaries one to St. Anne, and the other to Ad reductionem Corporis Christi, a hundred twenty one Leagues from hence, the rest to other Places, but all using the same Language. And upon this occasion I cannot but give some account of the present Condition of our Cantons (call'd by us Reductions, because they were reduced to the Catholick Faith by the Missionaries) or Districts or Towns, which you please.

Of these there are in all twenty six, each of which is provided with two Missionaries if possible, tho' of late Years by reason of the slow supplies of Missionaries from Spain, they have been said to be contented often with one; sometimes they have also a Brother for an Assistant. Each of these Cantons contains generally 3000, 4000, 5000, 6000, and sometimes a greater number of Souls. • All such as are capable of receiving the Communion, come to Confession at least 4 times a Year; besides which the Missionary must Baptize the Children, give the extreame Unction to Dying-Persons, Pray with them, and last of all Bury them: His Business is also to Marry such as intend to enter into the Matrimonial State, after they have been three times Proclaimed in the Church; to Catechise the Children; to say the Ave Mary and Litany Dayly before the old Ones, who are so simple and forgetful, that if you should neglect them but one Day, they would not know how to make the sign of the Cross. Every Sunday and Friday the Missionary is obliged to Preach and say high Mass; during Lent he must give them a kind of Sermon three times a Week, and take care of the Processions. All this would be passable enough were it not that at the same time they must act the part of a Clerk, they must take care of the Church Ornaments and Plate, and keep it clean, unless they will have it brought to the Altar Nasty and Dirty; these poor Wretches being not capable of managing these Things.

Every Missionary besides his Ecclesiastical Function, is also under an absolute necessity here of acting the part of a Steward, not only for himself, but likewise for all the Indians under his Jurisdiction. To be short, he must be Cook, Nurse, Doctor, Architect, Gardner, Weaver, Smith, Painter, Baker, Pot-

Scpp, 1691. Potter, Tile-maker, and every thing, that may, or is necessary in any Common-wealth: This may seem incredible to some People, but is nevertheless the naked Truth, the Indians being naturally so Stupid, that unless, as for Instance, I don't my self bring what quantity of Salt I think fit into the Kitchen, and plainly shew my Indian Cook, how much of it he must put into such a Pot, and how much into another, he would certainly put it all (tho' never so much) in one, and leave the rest unseasoned; and all the Remedy you have, is, that if you cannot Eat it, he will, and tell you afterwards, he could find no Fault in it; nay, what is more, if I expect to have my Victuals dress'd any ways cleanly, I must take care to have the Vessels brought every Day into my Chamber, and look into them my self before they are used, without which you would certainly be Poisoned with Nastiness.

Next to my Apartment I have a Garden, divided into several Partitions, one whereof is my Flower-Garden, another my Physick-Garden (for they know not what a Physician or Apothecary is) another my Kitchen Garden, besides an Orchard and Vineyard. In the Kitchen Garden grow all the Year round, divers Sorts of Salet Herbs, Endive, curl'd and not curl'd, Cichory-Roots, Parsnips, Turnips, Spinage, Radishes, Cabbages, Carriots, Beet-Roots, Parsly, Ani-Seed, Fennel-Seed, Coriander-Seed, Melons, Cucumbers, and divers sorts of Indian Roots; in my Physick Garden I have Mint, Rew, Rosemary, Pimpinell, Sweet-Marjoram, &c. my Flower Garden produces white Lilly's Indian Lilly's, yellow and blew Viols, Poppies, and many sorts of Indian Flowers.

In my Orchard I have Apple and Pear Trees, and Hasel-nut-trees, but these two last will bear no Fruit here, tho' they grow very lofty; Peaches, Pomegranates, sweet and sower Lemons, sweet and sower Citrons, Vanillies, and divers other Indian Fruits.

My Vineyard has so many Vines, that sometimes it may produce 500 large Casks of Wine in one Year, but this Year I have scarce had Grapes enough for my Table; the Reason is, the vast multitude of Pismires, Wasps, wild Pigeons, and other Birds, which have devoured all, tho' I have constantly kept 8 Indian Boys on purpose to cleanse them of the Pismires; add to this the North Wind, which has blown continually all this Year; a slender Recompence for the Pains I have taken, in Pruning, Shaving, and attending the Vines; but Patience!

However these frequent Miscarriages in the Vines, make the Wine here a dear Commodity, a Cask being sold sometimes for 20 or 30 Crowns, a great Price for such an unwholesome Wine as this, which is not to be preserved without a great deal of Lime, without which it would turn to Vinegar in a little time; this makes us use the Wine very sparingly, and sometimes not a Drop in six Months, it being sometimes so scarce, that we shall not have enough for the Communion Table.

The Missionary is also obliged to be both Physician and Apothecary, and both order and administer Vomits, Purges, Venisections, or what else seems to be requisite for the Recovery of the Patient; nay what is worse, he must be head Nurse, for tho' they have Four appointed on purpose in each Canton, yet are they so void of Sense and Judgment, that without constant overlooking they soon would send the Patient to the other World.

The best of all is, that these Indians are not subject to many Distempers; the Worms are their chiefest Plague, occasioned by the vast quantity of half raw Meat, they eat Daily, which being ill digested corrupts in the Bowels, and generates Worms, and these the Bloody Flux, which puts an end to their Lives, especially if it happen to be Cold Weather, of which these Indians are extremely sensible; tho' their coldest Season, even in June is scarce so Cold as with us in April. To remedy this Evil, nothing is more proper, than to give a Vomit made of Tobacco Leaves, all bitter Things being at mortal Enmity with the Worms; after the Vomit we take some Cow's Milk, into this we squeeze the Juice of a sower Lemon, put some Rew and Mint into it, after all is well mix'd, squeeze and strain the Liquor from it, and so give it the Patient.

Scarce any other Distemper is known here, except that now and then the Spotted Fever reigns among them, which about four Years ago carried off above 2000 Persons only in our Canton; Providence, as it seems, having thought fit not to afflict with many Distempers a wretched Nation that is destitute of all sorts of Remedies. For, Cinnamon, Nutmegs, Macé, Saffron, Ginger, Cloves, Rice, Antimony, Theriaca and Methridate, as well as other Medicinal Herbs and Compositions, are not as much as known known here; nay, even Salt is a very scarce Commodity with us, especially if our usual Supplies from Spain happen to fail: Hence it is that the Indians use no Salt either with their Meat or in their Bread, tho' they else are very eager after it and will have it if they can come at it. For my part, I find that Custom may bring a Man to any thing, for I begin to love their Bread tolerably well, and find no great difference betwixt that and ours, viz. Hunger is their nicest Cook. Most of their Cantons are seated upon an Ascent, for the convenience of carrying off the Rains and other Waters into the River on which they lye; which is much of the same bigness with the Danube, and the Water thereof so wholesom, that you may drink of it as much as you please, even after Melons, Peaches, Figs, &c. without receiving the least harm.

CHAP. V.

Description of the Cantons or Towns inhabited by the Converted Indians in Paraquaria.

These Cantons, as we told you just now, are generally seatd upon an Ascent near the Rivers Uruguay and Paraka, some of which contain 700 or 800, others 1000 Families and above, so that comprehending Father and Mother with all their Children, (which are very numerous,) you may safely reckon 6000, 7000 or 8000 Souls to a Canton. Near the Church of each Canton is a Square Market-place 400 foot long, and as many broad, the rest being divided into Streets like our Towns in Europe; but the Houses are very different, being no more than Huts erected upon the bare Ground, the sides whereof are only of Clay, and the Roofs covered with Straw, except some few that of late Years have been covered with Tiles: Windows and Chimneys are not in use among them; hence they are constantly so full of Smoke, that I have been in danger of losing my Eyes by it, when I have been frequently visiting the Sick. These Huts are not divided into Chambers, Kitchens, or other Apartments, all these being comprehended in one Room, their Cellar being a hollow Pumpkin in which they keep their Water for drinking: Those that value themselves above the rest, make use of a Nett fastned to two Trees, instead of a Bed; but the poorer sort are contented with a Tyger's Skin or Ox Hide spread upon the Ground, without Pillars or Bolsters, instead of which they make use of a Stone or piece of Wood. Their Kitchen Furniture consists in two or three Pots or Pans; the Hand serves instead of a Spoon; the Teeth in lieu of Knives, the five Fingers for Forks; their Drinking Vessel is a Silver Pumpkin, the Fire-hearth is under the Bed, there they fasten the Net at night, then spit the next Stick they meet with; and whilst their Meat is a roasting, they eat it off continually in Slices; tho' some only hold it a little over the Flame, and so eat it without farther Ceremony.

The Door of these Huts is of an Ox-hide, about six Spans high and three broad; this brings you into the place where Father, Mother, Sisters and Brothers, Children, and Grand-children, pigg all together in one Room; besides, three or four Dogs, and as many Cats; whence you may guess what a Scent there must arise from such a Mixture in so narrow a compass, which strikes the Nostrils of the poor Missionaries, when they come to do their duty among them, beyond what can be imagined or express'd, for all which they have no other comfort than to see these poor innocent Wretches expire, with all the Signs of an entire Resignation that can be imagined; It is rarely to be seen, that during their Distempers, they discover the least Symptoms of Impatience, no Sighs after their Wives and Children, no Desires after Treasures, nor Troubles how to pay their Debts, no regret of leaving their Friends; for as they scarce ever take care of these things in their Life-time, so they seldom disturb their Rest when they are to leave this World.

When a Virgin has attained the 14th Year of Age, and a Boy 16, they are marriageable, and we seldom stay longer, for fear of worse consequences; it having been found by Experience, that when the Maidens and Young Men continue in a single State for any considerable time, they have found means to pair them-themselves. The Objection which in other places is made against such young Marriages takes no Place here, where there is no dispute about Dowry or Settlements, or which way they will maintain themselves; all this they leave to God Almighty, and our Care, they never applying themselves to any Trade or Profession. So that upon Marriage it is the Missionary who provides the Hut, it is he who provides the Wedding Cloths, viz. 5 Yards of coarse Woollen Stuff for each; a Bed they never want, Ox's Hides being cheap enough; and the Wedding Dinner is made with a fat Cow, which is likewise presented by the Missionary.

Their Marriage Agreement consists only in two Articles, viz. The Woman promises to fetch what Water the Husband wants, from the River, in lieu of which he engages to furnish the Kitchen with Fuel. We allow them no Musick nor Dancing at their Weddings, but so soon as they are Married, and have heard Mass, the Bridegroom goes his ways, and the Bride hers; and if the Missionary has presented them with a fat Cow, a little Salt, and a few Loaves, they invite the Parents to Dinner, and so make the best Cheer they can. There is one Thing peculiar in their Marriages, viz. that here the Man does not Woe the Woman, but on the contrary the Woman the Man; in this Case the Maid comes to the Missionary, and says, Pay, i. e. Father (for so they call us) I have an Inclination to Marry such or such a one, if you will be pleased to give your Consent; whereupon the Missionary sending for the Person, says, my Son (for so we call them) such or such a one is desirous to be Marry'd to you, are you contented she should? Unto which if he reply's Yes (as they seldom do otherwise) then the Match is made, and wants nothing but the Priest's Blessing.

Let us now take a view of the Churches. Each Canton has a very handsome lofty built Church and Steeple, with 4 or 5 Bells; one, and sometimes two Organs, a high Altar, richly gilt, besides two or four Side Altars; a richly gilt Pulpit, divers painted Images, done by the Indians, and that tolerably well; Eight, Ten, and sometimes more Silver Candlesticks; Three, Four, or Five Silver Chalices; Three or Four Pair of Silver Offering-Vessels; Three Silver Crosses, and a large Silver Ciborium. The Chalices are not gilt here, but of the natural Colour of Silver, as they use them in Spain; all the Antependia, and other Ornaments belonging both to the Altar and the Priest's Vestments, are as Rich and neatly kept as any in Europe.

Every Saturday we Sing the Litany of our Lady, and every Sunday a Sermon, and high Mass, when our Musicians entertain the Congregation with their Musick, which they begin to perform tolerably well.

I don't question but that several of our Friends, such as Father Glette, and my two Brothers Paul and Gabriel Sepp, when they hear you read this Passage will be apt to ask you, who it is that Composes these Psalms, Litanies, Hymns and Masses; who is it that has taught the Indians to Sing, who to play on the Organs, and to sound the Trumpets and Hautboys? Unto which I answer, that the same Missionaries, who taught these poor Wretches the Rudiments of the Christian Religion, to say Our Father, to bake Bread, to Paint, cast Bells, Organs and Trumpets, and to make Clock-works; the same I say have instructed them in Musick; which was first introduced here by some Netherland Fathers, who with incredible Labour taught these indocible People to Sing, and composed certain Pieces, not according to Art, but such as their natural Inclination led them to: The same was improved afterwards, by a certain Spanish Missionary, but after the old way, without a Base, without Measure; of Double, or Triple Notes, they know not the least; nay, even not the Spaniards themselves to this Day, as I observed whilst I was at Cadiz and Sevil. Thus I saw my self obliged to begin with them, quite after another and new Method, and to teach, old Gray Hair'd Fellows, the Ut, Re, Mi, Sol, La again. By which means I have (tho' with incredible Labour) instructed Six Trumpets (of whom each Canton has Four) Four Organists, Three Theorbists, Thirty Hautboys, and Fifty Voices (besides other Instruments) to Play and Sing most of my Compositions; which has got me such a Reputation with the other Missionaries, that they send continually to me some of their Flocks, with Presents of Honey, Preserves, and Fruit, to court my Friendship, and to have them instructed in Musick; and, to Speak without Vanity, has purchased me the singular Esteem of the Indians.

Upon

Upon this occasion I can't but intreat you dear Fathers Ignatius and Paul, and other Friends who have been formerly my School-fellows, to have pity of a poor Missionary at so vast a distance, and of so many Musicians under my Care; to send me over some Mission Pieces, which I desire should be no other than the Vespere, Missa, Breves, Breviores, Brevissima, as also the Litany of the Composition of Mr. Melchior Glettle, Director of the Mission in the Cathedral of Augsburg; and these I don't desire to be new ones, but others tho' half torn will serve my Purpose as well; for I intend to have them copy'd by the Indians, which they do very well, and with great exactness, all the Books we send to the other Cantons being transcrib'd by them.

In requital of this Kindness, I will oblige my self and sixty Missionaries besides, that we will say sixty Masses for him, who will be at the charge of Buying them, and twenty more for him who will take the trouble to send them, tho' as to the refunding of the Money there is no great difficulty; for what ever is laid out upon this Account is therein fully repaid by our Father Procurator here to the Father Procurator at Munich; which had I known it before I left Germany, I would have provided my self with several Things in Germany for my and the other Missionaries use, which will stand us in great stead now in Paraquaria, and would not have amounted to above 10 or 15 Crowns there; a slender Addition to the Sum of 80000 Crowns bestowed upon that Mission, whereof I was an unworthy Member. I must confess that my Father Procurator here, has given me several Reprimands upon this Account, which however is not so much to be imputed to my Neglect, as want of knowledge of the State of Affairs here. As for the Direction, you need send them only to Genoa or Rome, but best of all to the Father Procurator in Rome, who will take care to send it to the Procurator of Paraquaria, or the Father Procurator of the Indies; but if any of our Society in Germany should come this way as Missionaries, it were so much the better, and they might bring divers other useful Things along with them.

But I have dwelt too long among the Musicians, it is time to return to the Description of our Canton.

The 2d of June 1691, as I told you I arrived at Japegu, after a Voyage of a Month from Buenos Ayres, upon the River Uruguay, being no less than 200 Leagues. Japegu is the first of the 26 converted Cantons, seated at 29 degrees upon an Ascent of a Hill near the River Uruguay; a Place which seems by Nature chosen for its Situation, for the delight of the Inhabitants: To the East it has the before-mention'd pleasant River Uruguay, the Waters whereof excel for clearness and wholesomeness all the Rivers of Europe; being cleansed and purified by the Roots of an incredible number of Trees, which for 400 Leagues together stand on both sides, upon the very brink of its Banks; as likewise by the vast quantity of Gravel and Pebble Stones, over which it carries its Silver Stream; for which reason it is our constant Table Drink, and we use it in great quantity even after the eating of Melons, Cucumbers, Figs, Peaches, and such like Fruits, without any harm.

This River produces vast store of Fish, which the Indians catch sometimes with their Hands only; and for want of Fish-Hooks (which are very dear here) they catch them with a large Nail bent at the end. Among all the Fish I ever saw here, I met but with one European kind call'd Bocado by the Spaniards, but they are larger here, dark, yellow, and well tasted; As for *Carp*s, Pikes, Eels, Gudgeons, Flounders, and such like European Fishes are not to be seen in this River; but many very delicious Fish of the Indian kind, among which the King's Fish is one of the choicest, tho' but small, and taken only in Winter; It has no Bones.

Abundance of most delightful Islands are to be seen in this River; there lies one directly opposite to our Canton, infinitely pleasant for its Woods and Trees, which afford a most agreeable Shade, and the Ground produces the best kind of Melons, it being not above a Stones cast from the Shore; I often divert my self here with my Disciples, to take the cool Air, and with a set of Musicians. The Situation of this little Isle is so extraordinary Pleasant, that the best Painter in Europe would have Work enough to make an exact Draught thereof.

On the other three sides, viz. to the South-west and North, this Canton is surrounded with the most fruitful Pasture Fields in the World of a vast Extent, and stor'd with an incredible number of Cattle. Stables are things unknown here, as much as the mowing of Grass, or making of Hay, because the Cattle feed all the Year round up to the Knees in 1691.

Sepp
1691

Sepp,

Grafs, without being watch'd; Theft being either not understood, or at least not practis'd among these Indians. So that if I have occasion for Milk, I have no more to do than to send my Boy into the Fields, who Milks one of the Cows, and brings me as much Milk as I desire in a hollow'd Pompion; as the Cooks in the Kitchen use Scollop Shells instead of Ladles.

The worst is, that these Fields are infested with vast numbers of Tygers, which come sometimes in whole Troops, and devour the Calves, but seldom the Oxen and Cows, because they will often make their Party good with them, and their Flesh is not so tender; But if the Tyger happen to catch an Ox alone, he leaps upon his Back, and Points him in the first Joint of the Neck, and afterwards tears it open with his Claws; when he has a mind to a Calf, he watches it, as it lies upon the Ground, and advancing softly bites off the Head at once, and sucks out the Blood through the Neck.

The Tygers are not only very hurtful to the Cattle, but also very dreadful to the Inhabitant, who know of no other Enemy but this; they seldom are far from their own Canton, except when they Travel with the Missionaries; upon which occasion they defend themselves against the Fury of the Tyger by making a Wood Fire all round the Place where they rest either by Day or Night, by which means they keep off the Tyger, who dreads nothing more than Fire. But if they happen to fall asleep, and the Fire goes out, the Tyger will be sure to watch his Opportunity, and lay hold of him that comes next to him, as it happened to a poor Indian, who among the rest conducted me hither from Buenos Ayres; and a Boy belonging to Father Anthony Behme had likewise not long ago the Misfortune to be seized upon by a Tyger (tho' not many Paces from his Hut) who tore his Flesh to that degree, that his Life was despair'd of, but by the singular Care of Father Behme, he escaped with Life.

The Tygers will sometimes come over the very Fences of the Gardens, and thence into the Houses; I remember that one time a Tyger got into one of the Indian Huts, where there were only some very young Children playing together, the Father and Mother being abroad in the Field; the innocent Babes taking it for a great Dog, laid their Hands upon the Tyger's Head, and courted him like they would have done a Dog, at which the Tyger wagging his Tail, went away without doing the least Harm to the Children, making the best of his way over the Fence, and cross the Field, for fear of meeting with some of the old Indians, who are Dexterous, beyond what can be imagined in killing even the fiercest Tygers, which these Creatures being sensible of, seldom Attack any of them, unless it be by Surprise, and from behind.

A Brother of our Society walking one Day in my Garden with nothing but a Stick in his Hand, a Tyger which got near the Fence, attack'd him, and as these Creatures are very nimble, leap'd sometimes before, sometimes behind, endeavouring to lay hold of him with his Paws, but the Brother defended himself so well with his Stick, that the Tyger beginning to despair of the Victory, thought fit to make off again over the Fence. Such like Accidents are frequent here, and it is very remarkable, that it was never known that either a Father Missionary, or a Brother was hurt here either by a Tyger, or any kind of Serpents, of which there are many here.

Venison we have also in great plenty, such as Deer, Harts, Wild Boars, Goats and Gembs; but the Indians seldom eat the Flesh, and catch them only for their Skins sake. Among the Wild Fowl we abound especially in Partridges and Wild Pidgeons; The first are so numerous and tame that you may knock them down with a Stick, so that my Boys bring them home sometimes by Dozens: And the Pidgeons are easily catch'd by Snares, which I have shewn the Indians how to lay, they being naturally too Simple to think upon any thing of that Nature, but used to be contented to Shoot at them with their Arrows; These they catch as often as they please, so that if another Missionary comes this way, I can soon Accommodate him with a Pidgeon roasted or boiled, with a Salat dress'd with Hony instead of Oil and Vinegar (both which we want here) and a Bottle of our most delicious River Water; This was the Entertainment I gave lately to our Friend Father Anthony Behme, as he pass'd this way in his Journey to his Mission.

Oxen, Cows, Calves and Horses are here in such prodigious Quantities, that in some Places the Fields are covered with them, as far as your Eye-sight will reach; and that of the best kind, which having

having no Proprietor, are Dog-cheap here, as wanting only to be fetch'd, in which the Indians are very Expert; and when they have brought a Cow to the Missionary ready kill'd, he gives each his Share twice a Day: For a little inconsiderable Knife you may Buy or Exchange a very good Horse, a Bridle (if the Bit be of Iron) being valu'd here beyond three Horses; they don't Shoe their Horses here, partly by reason of the softness of the Ground without Gravel, being all over covered with Grass, partly by reason of the scarcity of Iron, a good European Horse-Shoe being worth six Horses here.

Some of our Canton did not long ago travel 2 Days Journey deep into the Country, to fetch Provisions for the use of our Canton for this Year; within less than 2 Months they brought together 50000 Cows, and might have brought 100000, if we had wanted so many; what I have said of this Canton is to be understood of all the rest, being 26 in all; all the trouble is in keeping so vast a Number of Cattle together, whilst they are bringing of them hither, in which these Indians are also very well versed.

Hence the Reader may judge of the immense Quantities of Cattle in the Fields of Paraquaria: The three Ships wherewith we came from Spain, carried back at their return, no less than 30000 Ox-Hides, which stood them in no more than the Charge of Killing, each Piece of which they sell again in Spain for 6 Crowns; and among all these there was not one Cow's Skin. Thus the Spaniards have also their Gold Mines in these Parts, tho' Gold and Silver is a Thing unknown here, all their Dealing being by way of Exchange, and the Bargain soon made; for our Indian will tell your Merchant, for so many Yards of Linnen Cloth, I will procure you so many Oxen and Cows; for your Knife you shall have my Horse.

These Parts of the Indies are not destitute of Silver Mines, viz. in the Mountains of Poreff, but they are 600 Leagues deeper into the Country; notwithstanding which what Silver is brought from thence, is valued below the rate of Iron, Woollen and Linnen Cloth, Hats, Stockings, Needles, Knives, Fish-hooks, Bras and Tin Vessels, &c. all which are brought to Buenos Ayres from Spain, but sometimes not above once in 8 Years. Formerly they used also to bring Tiles, but since we have begun to make some of our own, I have no less than 6 long Streets in my Canton, the Huts whereof are covered with Tiles.

A Missionary in these Parts, must submit to all Functions, the Indians being so Stupid, that they are not capable of undertaking the most frivolous Thing, without a plain Direction. Whence it came that it was a Question among the first Missionaries sent hither, Whether these People were capable of receiving the Sacrament or nor.

But as Stupid as they are at Inventing, so happy they are in imitating, provided you give them a Model; thus if you shew one of these Indian Women a Piece of Bone-Lace, she will unrip some part of it with a Needle, and will make another after it, with so much exactness, that you shall not know one from the other. We have two Organs, one brought from Europe, the other made here so exactly, after the First, that I my self could scarce discern the difference. I have a Missal Printed at Antorff, which is imitated in Writing by an Indian, with that nicety, that they are scarce distinguishable. We have Trumpets and Watches made here, not inferiour to those of Nurenburch and Augsburgh, and some Pictures, excellently well Copy'd. In short they will imitate any thing very nicely, provided they have the Model constantly before their Eyes, without which they cannot advance one Step, their Intellects being so Stupid, that they can't form to themselves in the least any Idea of a Thing, unless it be before them.

But we must return to the Fruitfulness of this Country. They abound likewise in Cocks and Hens, Pigs, Lambs, Goats and Sheep; the Canton of St. Thomas had a few Years ago, no less than 40000 Sheep; and there is scarce a Canton but what has 3000 or 4000 Horses. The Mules are here preferr'd before Horses; for a Horse, if dear, you may purchase for the value of a Crown in Tobacco, Needles, Knives, Fish-hooks, &c. But they will not let the Spaniards at Buenos Ayres and Sancta Fee, have a good Mule under 14 Crown Pieces, tho' among themselves they dispose of them at half the Value. One Sheep, Lamb, or Kid is worth three Oxen or Cows here, by reason of their Wool; they have also whole Fields full of Cotton, but no Hemp or Flax, which makes an Ell of Linnen here to be sold at three, four, and more Crowns. The Albe which I officiate in at Easter, being 1691.

Sepp,

Sepp 1691.

ing of Cambrick, edged with Bone-Lace, stands me at Buenos Ayres in above 120 Crowns. Hats used also to be excessive dear here, before one of our Missionaries shew'd the way of making them to these Indians.

The Grounds are very Fertile here, and produce a hundred-fold Crop, tho' they are miserably Manured, and scarce ever Digged. They Sow nothing but Turky Wheat, which they pound to Meal in a Mortar (Mills being not known here) this they either Boil with their Meat in Water (but without Salt) or else they make certain Cakes of them, which they toast upon the Coals, they having no Baking Ovens. If I happen to give a Piece of our white Bread to an Indian they rejoyce at it beyond what can be imagined, and they will give 2 or 3 Horses for such a Loaf; which they might have cheap enough, were it not for their own Laziness; for America being bigger than all the other three Parts of the World, and no Propriety here in Land, they might have as much of it as they please, whereas now they will not Cultivate but a few Rods each, for their own use, and this they are scarce brought to without Blows.

Their Plow is not of Iron (which is too scarce here) but only of Wood, which does not reach above 3 Inches deep into the Ground, which is sufficient to bring forth a plentiful Crop; the Missionary of a Canton has commonly above 40 or 50 Acres sow'd with Wheat, whereof he gives now and then 2 or 3 Measures to some of the Indians for Seed, but they commonly put it in their Belly, instead of the Ground. It may truly be said of these Indians that they follow our Saviour's Rule, not to be concerned for the next Day; for, if I happen to allot a Cow to a Family, enough to serve them 3 or 4 Days, they will often eat her in One, and come the next Morning for more, so that we are forced to give to the Father, Mother, Son and Daughter, and to the young Children, to each his Piece of Flesh of 5, 6, 7, nay 8 Pound, and that twice a Day; for if they had it at once, they would eat it all at Noon, and want more by Night; for they are so Voracious, that the Mother will snatch the Meat from her Child, and eat all that comes in sight of them; for which reason each Missionary has a great Barn, into which he forces them to lay up a certain proportion of Corn, which he gives them back at Seed Time. Notwithstanding which they sometimes deceive the Missionary, or rather themselves. It is to be observed that their Seed Time is in June or July, when the Missionary allots each Indian 2 or 3 Oxen to Plow with-all. One of these Indians after a quarter of an Hours Plowing, began to grow weary of the Sport, and finding himself and his Wife very Hungry, they agreed to kill one of the Oxen, which they did accordingly, and having quartered the Ox (as they usually do) they put them on a Wooden Spit, and (for want of other Fuel) made a good Fire with the Plow, throwing into it some of the Suet to encrease the Flame, and to dispatch the Work, roasted and eat them. The Missionary perceiving the Smoak in the Field, began shrewdly to suspect the Truth, and making the best of his way to the Field, he soon saw by the Bones, that he had not been mistaken in his Guess; he fell a Chiding the Indian, who gave no other answer, but that he being both Tired and Hungry, he had made bold with the Ox, begging the Good Father to give him another, which he was glad to do, unless he would see him and his Family want Bread all the Year after. Such like Things often happen to the Missionaries, these Indians being naturally so Lazy, that often (unless compell'd thereunto by Blows) they will not carry in their Turky Wheat after it is ripe.

You wonder perhaps which way they can be compell'd by Blows; this is done in the same Manner as we do our Children, only that instead of Birch, we make use of a Scourge; this is performed by some Indian or other, who gives the Delinquent 24 or more Stroaks, according to the Missionaries Order. This Correction they take very patiently, without any Cursing or Swearing, nay without making the least Noise, and if they happen to make any Exclamations, it is by the Name of Jesu Maria; the Correction being over, they kiss the Missionaries Hand, and return him Thanks into the Bargain; their Love and Respect being such towards their Missionaries, that they take every thing without the least regret at their Hands, which being imprinted in them from their tender Age, they can never shake off afterwards.

Perhaps you may be curious to know in what Dress the Missionaries appear here; their Leather Shooes are fastned with a Leather Bottom, without Heels; and their Stockings are likewise made of black black Sheeps Leather. Our Cassock is Black, and made after the same Fashion as we wear in Germany, except that it is not open before, but has a Seam down to the bottom, without Lining, Pockets, or Border, made out of black Linnen Cloth. The Gown (which we use likewise in the House) is Chestnut brown with long hanging Sleeves reaching to the Ground: The Novices wear altogether Brown Cloths, with a Leather Girdle about the Waste; we don't carry our Beads on the Girdle, but hanging down from about them, in the same manner as all the Indians of both Sexes wear it. Our Shirts are of Callico; for the rest the same as in Germany. Upon the Head we wear a kind of Bonnet, as you have seen them represented in the Plays, for the High Priests of China. We keep our Heads and Beards shaved, and the Priestly Coronet (which the Indians make for me after a certain Model) is something bigger than ours. Whenever I go abroad to visit the Sick, or to Administer Baptism or the Holy Communion in the Huts of the Indians, I carry a Cross instead of a Cane, which for that purpose stands always ready at the Door of my Apartment, wherewith I have kill'd many a Serpent and other Vermin, without receiving the least detriment: Before I conclude I will give you likewise a short Account of our Daily Transactions, which are so troublesome, that what is performed here by one or two Missionaries, would be sufficient to employ Seven or Eight in another Place, there being 7000 or 8000 Souls, to be provided for by his Care, both in Spiritual and Temporal Matters, the eldest of them being as ignorant as Children, in Matters relating to the providing for their Families, which is the perpetual Care of a Missionary.

Every Morning, an Hour before break of Day, one of my Boys awakens me, and sets up a Candle, we having no Oil for Lamps, the Venerable in the Church being supply'd with Tallow. After I have Dress'd my self, I salute the Blessed Sacrament, and perform my private Devotions at Church; then I go to Confession, if there be two Missionaries in one Place, and the Bell rings to the Ave Mary, and the Holy Mass. This done I Pray a quarter of an Hour in private, and afterwards sit to hear Confession every Day. Then I instruct the Children in the Catechism, Visit the Sick, and if occasion requires, hear their Confession, Administer them the Holy Communion, and Extream Uction; and if it be not too late, proper Medicines: And as scarce a Day passes, but that one or other Dies, I have Dayly Burials. After the Sick, I Visit the several Offices; first the School, where Boys are instructed in Reading and Writing, and the Girls in Spining, and Needlework; I also Visit my Musicians, the Singers, Trumpets, Haut-boys, &c. Some Days I instruct certain young Indians in Dancing, who are made use of at certain Feasts, where they are richly Attired, and Dance in the Church, as it is practised in Spain, the simple Indians being extremely taken with these Ornaments in our Religion, which raise in them a high Esteem and Affection. After these I go among the Work-men of divers Sorts, to the Brick and Tile-Makers, the Bakers, Smiths, Joiners, Carpenters, Painters, but above all, the Butchers, who kill betwixt 15 and 20 Oxen every Day.

If I have any spare time, I take a turn in the Garden; about half an Hour before 10 a Clock, I take care that the Sick have their Dish with Milk and white Bread, and perhaps some Meat, to be carried to them by their Nurses. About half an Hour before 11 the Boy rings the Bell to the Examen Conscientie, when I lock my self into my Room for a quarter of an Hour, and afterwards go to Dinner.

One of the best taught of my Boys reads a Chapter in Latin out of the Bible, and a Passage out of the Saints Legend in Spanish; another reads to me the Martyrologium appointed for each Day, whilst 6 others attend, bring and carry what is desired, and are ready at a Wink; after Dinner I give each of them a Piece of white Bread, and upon Holidays perhaps some Cake, or a Piece of Pastey, which they receive with a great deal of Thankfulness. If there happen to be two Missionaries in one Canton, they spend an Hour after Dinner in Discourse. Half an Hour after 12 the Litany of all Saints is said in the Church, and what spare time is left after that till 2, I bestow in what I please; such as making of Images, Composing some Musick Pieces, &c. About 2 a Clock the Bell rings, to summon every Body to his usual Employment; then I again Visit the Sick, and supply them with what they stand in need of: At 4 a Clock we have Prayers, and afterwards say the Litany. Then we Bury the 1691.

Scpp,

the Dead, which happens Dayly. About 7 a Clock I go to Supper, and spend an Hour after to divert my self. After which I come again to the Examen Conscientiæ, and having prepared my self for the next Days Meditation, go to Rest, which is however frequently interrupted by the urgent necessity of the Sick, unto whom I must Administer the Sacrament.

Every Sunday and Friday there is a Sermon, and High Mass said; on every Holiday, Prima Vespera; every Sunday at 3 a Clock I Baptize Infants; of these I have Christened several Hundreds in a little time, some of which are dead, others alive. Every Monday I Marry such of the Indians as desire it, and this very Day I have Married no less than 8 Couple. Each first Day of the Month, we say Mass for the deceased Indians, and remember the Saints placed in that Month; the Number of Penitents is so great here, and of the Fathers Confessors so small, that we hear Confession, and give Absolution all the Month. But the Paper beginning to fail, I will recommend my self and my Flock to the most fervent Prayers of my dearest Friends and Country-men. The whole preceeding Treatise being a faithful Abstract of such Letters as my Brother Anthony Sepp, of the Society of Jesus, has transmitted to me from Paraguaria into Germany, I thought fit to Publish, for the Glory of God, and the general Benefit of Mankind; Promising, that whatever hereafter shall be sent to me from thence, thought worthy the publick View, shall be communicated by the Press.

Advertisement concerning the Fragment of the Discovery of the Islands of Salomon.

Little can be said relating to this Fragment of the Discovery of the Islands of Salomon, the Thing being so short that the Reader may soon satisfy his Curiosity in viewing the whole. I do not find any Account who the Author was, and tho' doubtless the Relation must be taken from some of the Discoverers, yet the Methodizer of it; was certainly none of them, because he all along speaks in the third Person, as one no way concern'd. If we may be allow'd to guess, 'tis likely the Account was given or left behind by one Quiros, whom at the latter end he brings in making Interest to the Viceroy of Peru to be furnish'd with Ships and Necessaries to continue that Enterprize, and shewing Reasons that induce him to it. The time of making this Discovery was in the Year 1595, for the Relation tells us, That the Arrival at Manila was in February 96; without naming the Century, which we know could not be the 17th, besides that it speaks of an Indian they found who had been Pilot to Sir Thomas Candish, who was in the South Sea not long before. The Description is of some few Islands in the South Sea, small in compass, but well inhabited, whereof yet they had not any perfect Knowledge, as having only touch'd at some of them, and seen others at a distance. Then follow some Particulars of the Islands call'd De los Ladrones, and the Indians inhabiting them; the rest is only their Sufferings and Distress till they arriv'd at Manila: And lastly some Reasons given by one Quiros for going again upon the same Discovery. For more Particulars I must refer the Reader to the Fragment it self.

Discovery of the Island of Salomon.

—making as if they would throw them. Others cast Stones with Slings. One of these wounded a Soldier after it had hit the side of the Ship. Our Men would have fir'd their Muskets, but the Powder would not take because it had rain'd. It was worth observing with what Noise and Cries the Indians came on, and how when they saw Aim taken at them, some hung by the Canoes, others sunk behind their Companions. The desperate old Fellow was Shot with a Bullet in the Forehead, and drop'd down Dead, and eight or nine with him, and some being wounded, the rest began to stand, the Ships still continuing under Sail. Three Indians came out hollowing in a Canoe. One of them had a green Bough, and something white in his Hand, which was look'd upon as a Signal of Peace. It was thought they would have had them go to their Harbour, but they did not, and they went away leaving some Coccoes.

This Island seems to be about ten Leagues in compass. That part they saw of it is clear, and open, high and mountainous along the Shore. The Port is on the South side; it is in the Latitude of 10 Degrees, and 1000 Leagues distant from Lima. It is very Populous, for besides those that came out in the Canoes, the Shore and Rocks were throng'd. Mindana knew it not, and being convinc'd of it, said, those were none of the Islands he came to find out, but a new Discovery. A small distance from this they saw three more. The first of them the Adelantado call'd St. Peter. It is about ten Leagues North and by West off the Magdalene; they knew not whether inhabited or not, because they did not approach it. The Extent of it about four Leagues, very woody, level, and not high. Another was discover'd which they call'd La Dominica, it lies North-west of that of St. Peter, is about fifteen Leagues in compass, about five distant from the other, and lies North-east and South-west. It appear'd Pleasant, having fine Plains and Hills, on which appear'd Tokens of much Wood. It seem'd to be well Peopled. The other which was call'd St. Christina, lies South of La Dominica, and to appearance was nine Leagues in Extent; it is but a little Description of four Islands.

Colour of the Indians.

Their Strength.

The Discoverers Land in an Island.

above a League from La Dominica, the Channel clean, and soundable. The Adelantado call'd all the Islands together Las Marquesas, or the Marchionesses, in honour of the Marquess de Cannete, and as an Acknowledgment of the many Favours receiv'd of him in the dispatch of his Business. They sail'd backwards and forwards seeking a Port in the Island Dominica. Several Canoes with Indians came out, some darker colour'd than others, and by their Cries seem'd to desire the same the others had done. Among them was a comely old Man, who had a green Bough, and something white in one Hand. He was calling just as they tack'd about, and believing the Ships were going off, he began to cry out the louder. He made Signs even with his Hair, pointing to the Land with them, and with his Finger. The Adelantado was inclinable to go thither, but it could not be done, because it was East, and the Wind blew fresh from that Point, besides that there was no safe Harbour to come to an Anchor in, tho' the Frigate sought it close to the Land. Here he said there was abundance more People whom they had seen from the Ship, and added that an Indian came aboard, who with much ease lifted up a Calf by the Ear. Four handsome Indians were got aboard the Comadore, and having been there a while, one of them snatch'd up a curious Bitch, and giving a Shout, they all boldly leap'd into the Sea, and swam away with her to their Canoes. The next Day, being the Feast of St. James the Apostle, the General again sent the Colonel with twenty Men in the long Boat to fetch Water, or find out a Harbour in the Island of St. Christina. He went, and being come to an Anchor in a Port landed with his Men in good order, and Drum beating. He went round a Town, the Indians never offering to stir; then he halted, and call'd to them, and about 300 came to him. Our Men drew a Line on the Ground, making Signs to them that they must not come over it, and asking Water of them, they brought it in Cocos, with some Fruit. The Indian Women came out, and the Soldiers affirmed that many of them were extraordinary Beautiful, and made no difficulty of sitting down by them. The Colonel bid the Indians go fill some Jarrs of Water, they made Signs for our Men to carry them, but at the same time fled with four of them, for which reason they were Canoa'd. On the 28th of July the Ad- lantado came to an Anchor in a Port the Colonel had found, and Landing, carry'd his Wife, and most of the Men to hear the first Mass said by the Vicar, at which the Indians were present Kneeling, very Silent and Attentive, quietly doing all they saw the Christians do. A beautiful Indian Woman sat down nere the Lady Elizabeth to Fan her, and she seeing her Hair so very Fair endeavour'd to have some of it cut off, but perceiving she avoided it, they forbore, for fear of angring her. The General in His Majesties Name took Possession of all four Islands, view'd the Town, sow'd Indian Wheat before the Natives, and having convers'd with them amicably, went aboard leaving the Colonel ashore with all the Soldiers. No sooner was Mindana gone, but they fell together by the Ears, such are the Consequences of ill Government. The Indians threw abundance of Stones and Darts, which hurt one Soldier in the Foot, but did no more Harm. That done, they fled to the Woods with their Wives and Children. Our Men pursu'd firing at them till they got into the shelter of the Trees. They went up to the tops of three high Hills, where they intrench'd. Morning and Evening they all at once made a regular harmonious Noise which Eccho'd in the Dales. Then they hollow'd to one another, shew'd an Inclination to do Mischief, throwing Darts and Stones, but all to no Purpose. The Colonel placed Guards upon three several Avenues, to secure the Town and Shore, where the Women were Diverting themselves, and the Men taking in Wood and Water for the Ships. The Indians perceiving how little harm their Weapons did, and the great Loss they sustain'd from the Firearms, endeavour'd to come to an Accommodation. This they made appear, because when the Soldiers went over their Lands, they came out lovingly to meet them, offering them clusters of Plantans, and other sorts of Fruit. They seem'd to miss the Conveniency of their Houses, for by Signs they enquir'd when they would be gone. Some of them came to the Guards bringing such as they had to Eat, which they gave freely, especially one good likely Indian, with whom the Chaplain contracted great Friendship, and they call'd one another Comrades. He taught him to Bless himself, and say Jesus, Mary. In the same manner the others convers'd with their new Friends. Every one had one whom he sought out when he came, and would

Amit
with t
Indians

They f at Var-ance.

Reconcil'd again.

fit

fit down with him. They ask'd of one another by Signs how they call'd the Heaven, Earth, Sea, Sun, Moon, Stars, and other Things they saw, and they seem'd to be pleas'd in their Answers. The last Words they said at parting were Friends, Friends, Comrades. The Indian, we said, was Friend to the Chaplain, came to the Guard, and was carry'd aboard that the General might see him. He went merrily along, saying Friends. The Adelantado receiv'd him with much Kindness and Affection, offer'd him Sweetmeats and Wine, but he neither Eat nor Drank. He began to take notice of the Cattle, and to appearance gave them Names, observ'd the Ship, Rigging, Masts and Sails, went down under Deck, and noted all Things with more Curiosity, than could be expected from an Indian. They desir'd him to say, Jesus, which he did, and seem'd well pleas'd. Then he press'd to be set ashore, and he was so Friendly, that when he understood the Ships were about departing, he express'd Sorrow, and would have gone away with them. The Island St. Christina is well Peopled, somewhat high, has Vales and Hollows where the Indians dwell, the Port they call'd, De la madre de Dios, that is, Of the Mother of God. It is on the West side, in nine Degrees and a half of Latitude, shelter'd from all Winds. The shape of it is like a Horseshoe, the Neck or Entrance very narrow. At the Mouth there is 30 Fathom Water clear of Sands, 24 in the middle of the Harbour, and 12 close to the Shore. A Rock on the South side upright next the Sea, serves for a Land-Mark to it. At the top of all is a sharp Clift, besides others there are, and on the North side a Hollow. There appear out at Sea five several Groves facing the Harbour, and a Ridge of Hills which divides two Strands, with a Spring of excellent Water, which falls from the height of a Man and a half, as thick as ones Wrists, and by it a Brook as good as that, running close to a little Town of the Indians, so that the Spring, Brook and Town are together on the Shore, at the foot of the Hill on the North side. On the South side there are some Houses among Trees, and on the East some Rocks and Cliffs whence the Brook flows. Most of the Indians in this Island, did not seem to be so white as those in the Island call'd the Magdalen. They use the same Language, the same sort of Weapons, and Canoes, which serve them near at hand. Their Town is like two sides of a Square, the one North and South, the other East and West, with the Avenues well pav'd, the rest like an open Place encompass'd with thick Trees. They are built like double Galleries, the Floor higher than the Street. Abundance of People seem'd to lie in each of them, because there were many Beds. Some had low Doors, others had all the Front open. They are made of Timber interwoven with great Canes, whose Hollow is as big as a Man's Arm, and they are above an Ell long in the Joynt. They affirm, the Women have most beautiful Faces, delicate Hands, a good Shape, and slender Waste, many of them far exceeding the most accomplish'd Women at Lima. They were white enough, from the Breast downwards clad with a sort of Tunicks curiously Wove of delicate fine Palm-tree Leaves. At a distance from the Town was an Oracle, or Place of Worship Palisadoed about, and the Entrance on the West side, almost in the middle of it a House with the Door to the North, in which were some Mishapen wooden Figures, and some eatable Things offer'd there; among the rest a Hog, which the Soldiers took down, and being about to take away other Things, the Indians hindred them, making Signs that they should not touch them, and shewing that they had a respect for that House and Figures. Without the Town they had some Piraguas, a sort of Boats, long, and handsomely wrought out of one piece of Wood, with a sort of Keel, Head and Stern, rais'd with Boards, fast bound with Ropes they make of the Coconuts. Each of them will carry betwixt thirty and forty Men to Row. Being ask'd by Signs, what use they put them to, they gave to understand they went in them to other Parts. They Work them with little Hatchets they make of Fish Bones and Snails, or rather Fish Shells, and sharpen them on great Stones for the purpose. The Constitution, Health, Strength, and Corpulency of those People, shews the goodness of the Air they Live in. Cloaths could be well born with Day or Night, the Sun was not very troublesome, some great Rains fell, there was never any Dew, but a dry Air, insomuch that whatsoever they left wet over Night on the Ground was dry in the Morning without being hung and laid out, but it is not known whether it were so all the Year. There were Swine and Hens like those in Spain. The Trees we mention'd were in the

Vol. IV.

P p p 1

Square;

St. Christina
Island
describ'd.

Indian
Boats.

Square, bore a sort of Fruit, as big as a Boys Head; its Colour when Ripe is a light Green, and a very deep Green when Sour. The Shell is mark'd with cross Streaks like a Pine Apple, its shape is not altogether round, but is somewhat sharper at the other end than at the Stalk. From the end there runs in as it were a Plug, or Core, and from that there spread several Webs. It has neither Stone, nor Kernel, nor any thing to throw away, but only the Shell, and that is thin, the rest is a solid Mass with little Juice in it when Ripe, and less when Green. Abundance of them were eaten Ripe and Green, and they are so Delicious that the Men call'd them white Meat, a dainty Spanish Dish made of the Brawn of Fowls. It was look'd upon as Wholsome, and very Nourishing. The Leaves the Tree bears are very large, and sharp pointed like the Papayas. There is another sort of Fruit enclos'd in Prickles like Chestnuts, but its Kernel is as big as six Spanish Chestnuts, and tastes much like them. They are shap'd like a plain Heart. There are Walnuts about the bigness of ours, and much like them in Taste, their Shell is very hard, and all of a piece without any joyning. The Kernel is not interwoven with the Shell, but so loose that when crack'd it drops out whole. They eat and carry'd away a great many, and at last found it was Oily. On the Shore they saw Spanish Pompions sow'd, and among them some Flowers, beautiful to the Eye, but without any Scent. Nothing can be said of the Inland, because no Body went up it; but by what they saw, the Souldiers affirm'd all the Groves were of Fruit Trees. Whilst the General was in the Island, he had the Galliot refitted, because one Day before it came to an Anchor it was foul of the Commadores Boltsprit, and in great Danger. He order'd Wood and Water to be taken in, the Ships to be made ready, and the Men to come aboard. Before they set Sail, he erected 3 Crosses in several Places, and Carv'd another on a Tree with the Day and Year when it was done. On the 5th of August they weigh'd, and Sail'd away in quest of the Islands they were to Discover. They held their Course West and by South, the Wind at South, and veering to East South-east, running, by their reckoning, 400 Leagues, East and by South, and West and by North. After three or four Days sail, the Adelantado said, they should that Day see the Land they sought. All the Men were pleas'd with this News, but tho' they look'd out, they saw none in many Days after, which discourag'd the Souldiers, for the longer they were out, the shorter their Water and Provisions grew, having been extravagant upon hearing the Land was nigh. Irresolution and Despair began to prevail, and few were untainted, nor is it to be admir'd, for such undertakings require Men enur'd to Sufferings and patient in them.

On Sunday the 20th of August, after running 400 Leagues, at break of Day, the Ships found themselves near four little low Islands, the Shores Sandy, and cover'd with abundance of Palm and other Trees. The extent of them all four seem'd to be eight Leagues, little more or less. They stand almost square, close to one another. On the East-side of them lye certain Banks of Sand, South-west and North-east, for which reason there is no coming at them on that side. In the Channel that runs to the South-west there appears a Cape. The General call'd them St. Bernard's Islands, because Discover'd on his Day. They would have endeavour'd to find a Harbour, but at the request of the Vicar it was not done. It was not known whether they were Inhabited, tho' those in the Galliot said they had seen two Canoes, but it was only a fancy. They are in the Latitude of 10 Deg. and 20 Min. South, their Longitude 1400 Leagues from Lima.

Having left these Islands the Wind held always at South-east, and sometimes there fell short but heavy Showers of Rain. The Clouds were thick and of several Colours, appearing in various Shapes, and many Hours were spent in observing them. Sometimes they were settled so, that it was a whole Day before they dispers'd, which made them jealous they were near Land, being towards that part that was unknown. They held on their Course Westward, that is, West North-west, and West South-west, always keeping in such Latitude as the Adelantado directed, which was never to exceed twelve deg. nor be under eight, so that they kept betwixt ten and eleven. On Tuesday the 29th of August, they saw a little low Island, quite round full of Trees, and hemm'd in along the Shore with Ridges of Rocks above the Water. Its Compass was about a League, the Latitude 10 deg. 40 min. the distance from Lima 1535 Leagues. It was call'd the Solitary Island, because it stood alone. The Adelantado order'd the two small

Vessels

Discover four 1-lands.

Hold on their Course.

The Discoverers sail away

Vessels to seek some Harbour, to take in Wood and Water, the Vice-Admiral being in great want. They came to an Anchor in 10 Fathom Water, and hail'd the Admiral to stand to Sea, because all the Shoar was full of great Rocks, which were to be seen. Sailing over them and founding as they went, sometimes they found 10 fathom Water, and sometimes found no ground with 100. It was frightful to see the Ship over so many Rocks. All diligence was us'd to get out to open Sea, as they did.

The Admiral bore patiently with all the Men's muttering and despair, endeavouring what he could to prevent any publick, or private Sins, he study'd the Peace of all Persons, giving a good Example, with his Beads in his Hand at all times. Every day he caus'd the Salve Regina to be said before an Image of our Blessed Lady of Solitude. He had Evensong sung Solemnly, and kept Holydays, putting out the Colours and sounding warlike Instruments, reproving those that Swore, charg'd the Souldiers to exercise their Arms, and every Afternoon review'd them, put his Hand to every thing that was to be done aboard the Ship, tho' it were the most laborious Work. On the 7th of September they sail'd before the Wind, which was a stiff gale at South-east, under a Top-sail reef'd, due West. The Sky appear'd very thick ahead, for which reason the Master Pilot sent out the Galliot and Frigate ahead, one in sight of the other and of the Galeon. He order'd them, if they discover'd Land, or Shoals, or any thing else to give notice of, they should make a signal with two Lights, and he would answer in the same manner, but Fear prevailing they fell a Stern. Thus they sail'd in dread, under such apprehensions as that Night suggested. About nine the Vice-Admiral came up, and about 11 on the Larboard side, they discover'd a great thick Cloud, covering all the Horizon on that side. They that were upon the Watch doubted whether it was Land, but were soon undeceiv'd by a heavy shower of Rain that fell presently after. As soon as it was over they plainly Discover'd Land, from which the Admiral was not above a League. Being assur'd it was Land, they Proclaim'd it with the usual Joy, and all came out to see it. The Galeon took in her Sails, and lying athwart the Land, made Signs to the other Ships, only two answer'd, the other was not seen. Day appear'd and discover'd towards the South-west, a Point of Land, Plain, Large and Black, being cover'd with Trees; and looking about they could not find the Vice-Admiral, which was a great Trouble to all the Men. Day-light also Discover'd a high Hill like a Sugar-Loaf, all smooth; and another little Hill towards the South-east, which appear'd to be three Leagues in Compass, and is eight from the Island. It has no Harbour, nor any other Place to land, being all rocky and bare without Trees, or any thing green, but a dry Colour'd Earth and Stones. There are some Clefs in it, particularly two on the West side, out of which and the very Top of the Hill, there gushes out much Fire and Sparkles, with a great Noise. It had a very handsom Head, which a few Days after the Ships got into Harbour, broke off and flew with so terrible an Earthquake, that tho' the Anchoring Place was ten Leagues off, it was heard, to the great Terror of the Men, and made the Ship shake. From that time forwards there were great Thunderclaps within it every now and then, and for the most part when it gulch'd out Fire, after which there came out such quantities of thick Smoke, as seem'd to ascend up to the Heavens, and then follow'd a rumbling Noise. The Admiral order'd the Frigate to sail round the fiery Mountain, to see whether the Viceadmiral, happening to fall to the other side of it, lay there under shelter, ordering him to come away to the Island they had Discover'd. Being pretty near it there came out a small Boat with a Sail, and after it a Squadron of 50 more. The People in them, halo'd and made signs with their Hands, as if they hail'd the Ship, who did the same, but not without apprehension. When the Vessels came close, it appear'd the Men in them were Cole black, and some a little clearer, all of them with curl'd Hair, some white, some fair, and of other Colours, it being certainly Dy'd; half the Head shorn, and with other Distinctions, their Teeth colour'd Red. They were all Naked save their Privities, which were cover'd with a sort of soft Stuffs. Most of them were stain'd with a Dye blacker than themselves, and others with other Colours. There were streaks to be seen on their Faces and Bodies, their Arms were several times wound about with black Withes, and about their Necks many Strings of small Beads of Bone, Ebony and Fishes Teeth. About several Parts of them hung abundance of some little and some big Plates Land discovered again.

A burning Island.

Other Indians, their Colour and Weapons.

or flat Pieces of Mother of Pearl. The Canoes were small, and some of them link'd two and two together. Their Weapons were Bows and Arrows with sharp Points of burnt Wood. Others were Pointed with bearded Bones, and some with Feathers; the Points seem'd to be infected with the Juice of some Herb, but not very hurtful. They had also Stones, Macanas, which are their Swords made of a heavy sort of Wood, Darts of Hard Wood with three Rows of Beards, and the spear Part above a Span in length. A-cross them like Shoulder Bats, hung Budgets of Palm-Tree-Leaves well made, full of Bisket, which they make of Roots, all of them were eating of it as they came, and freely gave Part. As soon as the Adelantado saw the Colour of their Skins, he concluded they were the People he look'd for, saying, This is such an Island, or such a Land. He spoke to them in the Language he learnt the first Voyage, but they neither understood him, nor he them. They stopp'd to view the Vessels, and went about them as if they had been Chattering. No persuasions could prevail with them to come aboard, but having talk'd to one another they stood all to their Arms, a Tall, Old, Lean Indian who was formost seeming to persuade them so to do. They presently bent their Bows to let fly, the old Man talk'd to them, and they clapt themselves down again; they gave the Word about, and could not resolve what they were to do. At length they concluded, and giving a shout let fly many Arrows, which stuck in the Sails and other Parts of the Ships, but did no harm. Upon this the Soldiers who were in a readiness, had Orders to Fire upon them. One was Kill'd, many Wounded, and the rest fled in great Confarnation. They Cruiz'd up and down seeking a Harbour, which they all were impatient for, having suffer'd much, and believed they should be eas'd of all their Troubles if they could but land. The Frigate return'd without finding the Viceadmiral, which increas'd their Sorrow and Apprehensions. The three Ships came to an Anchor at the Mouth of a Bay, under the shelter of certain Flats. The Anchors were a-peck, and the Water flowing about ten at Night, the Galeon dragg'd hers with very great Danger of being a-ground on the Sands. The Admiral ran out to encourage his Men, who were in great Disorder and Confusion, the Danger being at hand, and the Night making it more dreadful. At last the Anchors were weigh'd, and letting fly the Sails, the Ship with much difficulty got out to Sea. At break of Day the Adelantado went aboard the Galliot to seek out a Port. The Master Pilot found one, tho' small, lying North-west of the burning Mountain, shelter'd from the South-west Wind, with 12 Fathom Water, a Town, River, Ballast, Wood and a good Airy place. It being then late, they came to an Anchor at one of the Points that jetted into the Sea, a Serjeant with 12 Musketers went a shoar to secure the Port. The Indians belonging to a Town that was hard by, came out and ply'd them so violently with their Arrows, that they were forced to take shelter in a single House they found. The Ship fir'd two Guns, which put them to flight, the Boat going off to fetch the Men. All that Night they ply'd it out at Sea, and the next Day, the Adelantado found a still Harbour, shelter'd against all Winds. There they came to an Anchor in 15 fathom Water, the bottom owfy near to the Land, where was a River and Towns, which sounded all Night with the noise of Dancing, and Musick after their manner, beating Sticks one against another, and Tabors. Abundance of Indians came to see the Ships and Men. Most of them had red Flowers on their Heads and in their Noses. With much persuasion some of them came aboard the Admiral, leaving their Arms in the Canoes. Among the rest came aboard a handsome body'd Man, and of a good Aspect, a brown Complexion, lean and somewhat grey Hair'd. He seem'd to be about 60 Years of Age, on his Head he had some blew, yellow, and red Feathers, in his Hands a Bow and Arrows pointed with Bone curiously wrought. On his sides were two Indians of better Quality than the rest. This they found was some Person of Note among them, as well by the difference of his Garb, as by the Respect the rest paid him. He enquir'd by signs, who was chief of the new Comers. The Adelantado receiv'd him with great demonstrations of Affection, and taking him by the Hand, signify'd that he was Commander. The Indian said his Name was Malope, the Adelantado answer'd his was Mindana: Malope understood it, and answer'd, applying the Name he had heard to himself, that he would be call'd Mindana, and the General should take the Name of Malope. Having made this exchange he seem'd very very well pleased, and when they call'd him Malope would signify it must not be so, but Mindana, and pointed to the Adelantado, saying he was Malope. He also said he was call'd Taurique, this Name seeming to import as much as Cacique, or Commander. Alvaro de Mindana put a Shirt on him, and gave him some other Things, of small Value. The Soldiers gave the other Indians Eathers, little Bells, Glass-Beads, bits of Silk and Cotton, and Cards, all which they hung about their Necks. They taught them to say Friends, Friends, crossing their Hands and Embracing one another in token of Peace. They presently learnt, and practis'd it often. They show'd them Looking-Glasses, shav'd their Heads and Beards, and par'd the Nails of their Hands and Feet, at which they were much pleased, earnestly begging the Razors and Scissers. They also endeavour'd to see what was under the Cloaths, and being satisfied, did the same Monkey Tricks, like those in the first Islands. This lasted four Days, they going backwards and forwards, and giving such as they had to Eat. One Day Malope came as he did very frequently, expressing the most Friendship of any, his Town being near to the Place where the Ships lay at Anchor. Fifty Canoes joyn'd him, all of them with their Arms hid in them, expecting their Malope, who was Aboard the Admiral; and because a Soldier took up a Musket, he went away to his Boats, no Perswasions being of force to prevail with him to stay, but got him to Shoar, follow'd by all his People. There was another number of People on the Shoar, by whom he was receiv'd with great Demonstrations of Joy, and they seem'd to consult together; that same Afternoon the Indians remov'd all they had in some Houses near the Shoar, to Malope's Town. At Night they made great Fires on the other side the Bay, which lasted almost till Morning. It was look'd upon as a Signal of War, which was confirm'd by the Jealousie the Canoes had caus'd that Day, running hastily from one Town to another, as it were to make ready, or carry Advice of some Matter.

Vice-Admiral lost.

Indians come aboard.

An Indian changes Names with the Spanish Commander.

The Indians fall out with the Spaniards.

A Skirmish with the Indians.

Next Morning the Galliot sent its Boat a-shoar for Water, which was at Hand, and as they were Shipping it, some Indians who lay in Ambush fell upon the Men, Shouting and Shooting, their Arrows, following them to the Boat, where the Musketeers firing on them they halted. The Wounded Men were taken care of, and the General immediately ordered the Colonel to Land and do them all the harm he could with Fire and Sword. The Indians made a stand, and Five being Kill'd the rest Fled. The Spaniards went off without loss, having cut down some Palm Trees, and burnt Houses and Canoes.

This same Day the Adelantado sent Captain Laurence in the Frigate with 20 Sailers and Soldiers, in quest of the Vice-Admiral: He had Orders to Sail about that part of the Island they had not yet seen, till he was at the Place, where Night came upon them, when they discover'd the Land, and that when he was there he should sail away from West to North-west, which was the Course the Vice-Admiral could stand, to miss that the Admiral took, and to observe what he could discover in his way. He also order'd the Colonel to be ready with 40 Men, to go in the Morning early, as he did, to certain Huts that were near a Hill, to take revenge on the Indians, for shooting at his Men, and to endeavour by the Harm he did to them to prevent greater Mischief. He came to the Place without being discover'd by the Natives, secur'd the Avenues, beset their Houses, and set Fire to them, attacking Seven that were in them. They seeing themselves hard set by the Fire and Enemy, made as brave a Defence as they could, but being overpower'd ran desperately upon the Spaniards Weapons, without valuing their Lives. Six were Kill'd, and the Seventh made his Escape much Wounded. The Colonel went off with his Men, among whom Seven were wounded with Arrows.

The Spaniards Burn and Spoil.

After Noon Malope came down to the Shoar, for the Towns and Canoes that had been Burnt were his, and with a loud Voice call'd the Adelantado by the Name of Malope, and striking his Breast, call'd himself Mindana. Then he embraced himself, and complain'd, pointing to the Harm they had done him, making Signs that they were not his Men, but the Indians on the other side of the Bay that had Shot our Men, and bending his Bow, gave to understand, that they should all joyn in taking Revenge, and he would be aiding to it. The Adelantado call'd him, being desirous to appease him, but he came not till next Day, when much Friendship was express'd on both sides.

Indians Sue to be reconcil'd.

On S. Matthew's Day they set Sail from this Harbour to another larger and more convenient, which they found half a League higher within the same Bay. As they were sailing towards it Captain Laurence return'd, and brought an Account, that as he sail'd about the Island according to his Orders, he found in the same Line North and South as the Bay lay, another not Inferior to it, better Peopl'd, and more full of Canoes. He also said, he had seen beyond that two other little Islands, near the great one, both of them very well Peopl'd; and that eight Leagues to the South-west they discover'd another Island, that seem'd to be no less than so many Leagues in compass, and that nine or ten Leagues West North-west of the Place, where Night overtook them, when they discover'd Land, he had found 3 Islands Inhabited by Mulattoes of a clearer sort of Complexion, and full of Palm-Trees, with abundance of Ridges of Rocks, running West North-west, and Channels betwixt them, which they did not see the end of; and to conclude, that they met with no Foot-steps of the Ship they fought after. The Ships came to an Anchor in the second Port, the Indians thereabouts making great outcries all the Night long, as if they had sported or scoffed, very often plainly repeating the word Amigos, that is, Friends. In the Morning about 500 Indians came to the nearest Shore, shooting abundance of Arrows, and casting Darts and Stones at the Vessels, but perceiving they fell short, many of them ran into the Water Breast-high, and others Swam, coming up so close, still shooting, that having got hold of the Buoys they were making to Land with them.

The Adelantado perceiving their Boldness, Commanded Captain Laurence to go out with 15 Men in the Boat to engage them. Those that carry'd Bucklers cover'd them that Fir'd and Row'd; yet they shot two, and had hurt more but for that defence, some of the Bucklers being struck through. The Indians fought scatter'd and running, but with such Resolution as made it appear the Spaniards had met with Men that would defend what they had. This lasted as long as they were not sensible of the Harm our Fire-Arms did, but being undeceiv'd by the Death of two or three, and wounding of others, they left the Shore, carrying away their Dead and Wounded Men.

Next Day the Colonel being a-shore he propos'd to his Men to unwood a Place near a great Spring, in order to build a Town there. All of them did not like the Place, believing it would be unhealthy. Therefore some of those that were Marry'd went Aboard to acquaint the Admiral with the Colonel's Design, and desire him to go a-shore and give Orders that they might settle in one of the Towns belonging to the Indians, for that the Houses being built, and the Ground about it beaten, it must be fitter than the Place pitch'd upon. The Adelantado landed, held a Council, and most of the Soldiers being miraculously. Indians came off from the Islands in their Boats, some with Sails, and some without. Not being able to get over the Rocks, they got out upon them, and from thence made Signs with their Hands to come to them. In the Afternoon one Indian alone in a small Canoa came out at the end of the Flats, made to the Windward, keeping at a great distance, and therefore it could not be discern'd whether he had any Beard, the Islands of the Bearded Men being thereabouts. He seem'd to be a well shaped Man, naked, and had long Hair hanging loose. He pointed to the Place from whence he came, and pulling a white thing he brought in Pieces, eat it, then turn'd up Coco-shells as if he Drank. They call'd him, but he would not come. This Island is in 6 large Degrees of North Latitude, is almost round, about 30 Leagues in Compass, and not very high. It is well Wooded, and on the Sides of the Hills there are abundance of Roses, and much Till'd Land. Three Leagues almost West of it are four bare Islands, and a great many more close to it, all of them hemm'd in with Rocks. This seem'd to be clearer on the South side.

Here it breaks off abruptly, and so begins again.

Another Island.

They held on their Course North North-west, and on Monday the First of January found themselves in 14 Degrees of Latitude. They steer'd away due West. The Wind was large and blew fresh, and on Wednesday the 3d of the same Month at break of Day, they had sight of Two of the Islands de los Ladrones, which they fought after. One of them was Guam, and the other Serpana. They sail'd along between them, lying North-East, and South-west, through a Channel 10 Leagues in length, which

These Islands De los Ladrones.

Superstitions of the Islanders.

which lies close to Guam. Here a Man fell overboard as he was trimming the Top-sail; there was but one Fishing-Line in all the Ship, and somebody had put it over just where the Man hapned to fall, he laid hold of it, and was sav'd, giving Thanks to God for so great a Deliverance. It will be an Excuse for giving some Lines in this Book to Things of small Moment, to say as the Antients did, that little Things have, I know not what that is Divine, which tho' all Men perceive, yet none can comprehend. Therefore it is, they often draw the Attention of those who see or hear them in such manner that they take a liking to them without any other Recommendation or Encomium. Such a one is the Description of Countries, Habits and Manners of the Natives, tho' he that is curious, when he meets with it, may reckon it among the most material of that Sort, as well on account of the Pleasure its variety produces, as for the Instruction and Benefit reap'd by it.

The Ship being in sight of Guam, abundance of Canoes began to come off from it. These are small Boats made of a certain Wood as light as Cork, only one Indian goes in one of them, and tho' it has a Mast, Sail, Yard, Tackles, Halliards and Helm, he Steers with one Hand, and with the other, Hoists, Lowers and Trims his Sail, having one of the Tacks fastned to each Foot, and so veers out or hales to as occasion serves. Both Ends are Heads, and as soon as the Sail is slipt round, they make way without bringing about the Vessel. They are very swift, and when a Wave breaks, and fills it full of Water, the Man casts himself into the Water like a Fish, overturns the Boat, and so clears it of all the Water. The Boat being clear, he gets in at one Side; being come to Shore he takes his Vessel on his Back, and leans it against a Tree, on which he has his Habitation, like a Bird, living upon the Fish he takes. Thus he lives, tho' Barbarously, yet happy in being a Stranger to the fall of Court Favourites, and to the Favours of the World, such as Wealth, Honour, and Preferments, Imaginary Blessings and chimerical Delights. Many of those Boats came to the Ships Side, with such Fruit as the Country produced, as Cocoës, Plantans, Comboyes and Sweet Canes, besides several sorts of Sea-fish, which they catch with their Hands, among the Clefts of Rocks, without any other Tackling, insomuch that no Fish is safe from their Nimble-ness but the Cayman or Crocodile, the Shark and Maella. These they Worship as Deities, and on account of the harm they do them, and the dread they have of them, they offer to them part of the Product of the Earth in the nature of Tithes. They lay the Offering in a Canoa, turning it to Sea under sail without any Body in it, by which means it soon overfets and sinks. The People of these Islands are of a dark Complexion, neither Men nor Women wear any Cloaths, but they are mighty Hairy, large Limb'd, very Strong and their Skin so hard, that they run naked and bare Legg'd, through Thorns and Briars, and over Rocks and Stones as swift as Stags. They use no sort of Mony, despise Gold and Silver, for which reason Strangers could not deal with them, but by bartering for Iron, which they value since they have known the Spaniards, seeing it cut down Trees, and hew Timber. They chiefly covet Axes and Knives, because those they used before were made of Pibbles and Flints, wherewith they made their Boats and other Things. Several times when Seamen and Soldiers went A-shoar upon these Islands for fresh Water, they found, as has been said, Houses of these Indians built upon Trees. There were also some Huts upon the Shoar, and Sailors through Covetousness having often search'd both of them, found nothing but Oziers across them, on which many Leg-Bones and Skulls of Men were Strung. These are Bones of their Fore-fathers, which such Brutal People Worship as Gods, because they know no other, except the Sun, Moon, Alligators and Sharks, in whom they suppose the Souls of the departed to be. In order to give dead Bodies honourable Burial they flea them, and burning the Flesh, put the Ashes of it into a Jar of Tuba (a sort of Wine they make of the Coco-Tree) and shaking it about, drink it off among them. They only save the Bones for the Kindred to hang about their Houses, and keep their Friends always near them. As long as they live they lament their Dead upon certain Days and Nights, at Hours appointed. To this purpose there are abundance of Mourners, to be hir'd, but they mourn for one another either for Interest, or out of Friendship. He that has lamented for his Neighbour, is to be paid when he has occasion, either by coming in Person to Mourn, or hiring one to do it. They observe these Obsequies, which are pleasant enough, for they Eat and Drink plentifully, they last about a Week at a time, the business of the Day being Drunkenness, and Weeping of the Night. Every one Mourns an Hour in his turn, and amidst his Tears relates the Life and brave Actions of him or them he bewails. He relates his Infant Behaviour, and so on as he grew up, describing particularly his Stature, Shape, good Qualities, Valour, and all that may be for the Honour of the dead Person. If any thing in his Relation be comical, he bursts out a Laughing as heartily as he Wept before; all that are present Laughing out so loud, that they cannot hear one another. When the Laughing Fit is over, after Talking and Drinking a while, for this they never omit, the Lamentation begins again. On the other side when they hint at any sorrowful Passage, all the Standers by shreik as loud as they can, and there uses to be 200 of them together.

A notable Accident.

In the Year 1668. two Companies going over to the Philippine Islands, one of them Commanded by John Lopez de Aguirre, and the other by Laurence Chacon; it happened that some Men going A-shoar upon this Island of Guam, for fresh Water and some Fruit, a Spaniard of about 20 Years of Age, went up from the Shoar to seek some Fruit, and entering into a Grove found a little Savage about 14 Years of Age. The Stranger seeing such a Boy naked, and without any Weapon, was not afraid, tho' he was unarmed himself, not designing to go far from his Companions. The Islander drew near, and Embracing the Soldier, fawn'd upon and seem'd to shew Friendship, as if he were very glad to see him. Then he shew'd him where there were Plantanes, and so they continued some time, without any Jealousie on the Spaniard's side. When they were a good distance from the Guard, the Savage again Embraced the Soldier, and was carrying him away with much ease under his Arm into the thick of the Wood, holding so fast that he could not break loose, neither durst he call out to his Companions, for fear the Savage should make the more haste, and because he carry'd him away Laughing, and as it were in Jest. As they kept along in the same Path among the Trees, there happen'd to come towards them four Spaniards, who had gone up the Wood to find something to shoot. They all stood, hearing the Noise the Barbarian made among the Bushes, and presenting their Pieces that way they heard the Noise, as supposing it was some Deer or Bufalo. They were much surpris'd to see the two Men, and that their Country-man strugled to get loose. The Savage seeing them, let him go, and run and hid himself in the Wood, the Prisoner remaining among his Friends, by whom, and his Captain, he was reprov'd for going away from the rest alone and without Arms. Five Years after this Accident, D. Martin Enriquez, Viceroy of Mexico, order'd John Lopez de Aguirre, as he pass'd by those Islands to carry away with him one or more Savage Boys, to be instructed in the Faith, and learn Spanish, that when they return'd to their Native Country they might serve as Interpreters, and teach the Natives the Faith and Language. The Captain us'd all his Endeavours, and could get only one Savage Youth, whom he carry'd along with him to Manila, where he was Baptiz'd. It hapn'd by good Luck to be the same we spoke of above, and he talking one Day with the same Soldier, they remember'd one another, and were afterwards great Friends. After repeating the whole Passage, he own'd his Design was, when he had got him to his Cottage, to suck his Brains, drink up his Flesh, reduced to Ashes, and adorn his House with his Bones.

The Ship holding on its Course towards the Philippine Islands, left the Islands De los Ladrones astern, without touching at them, tho' it had need enough, having no Tackle to launch the Boat, or Ship it again. She sail'd on due West, till upon Friday the 12th of January, when they found 13 Degrees of North Latitude. The Master or Pilot having never been in those Parts, sail'd upon Information, without any certain Rule, seeking Cape Spiritu Santo, or of the Holy Ghost, which is the first part of the Philippine Islands. On Sunday at break of Day they discover'd the top of a high Hill. They all rejoiced as if they were already arriv'd at a Place of certain Rest. Most of the Men were so spent they could hardly stand upon their Legs, and so thin that they look'd like Death it self, so that it was become a Saying among them, that they would carry off nothing but the bare Skeletons well prop'd up. Abundance of Rocks and other frightful Discoveries, every Moment interrupted their Joy, being hourly in eminent Danger of their Lives. They lost sight of the Hill by reason of the

The Discoverers in Distress put into Cape Spiritu Santo.

Fog,

Fog, their Sorrow increas'd and they began again to mutter against the Master, or Pilot, whose fair Speeches avail'd him little, no more than his Skill. They discover'd the Land again where it made a Cape. It being somewhat to Windward, they put a Bonnet upon the Sail, and lay as close to the Wind as possibly they could, intending to run along the Shoar, founding all the way and ready to drop Anchor when they found conveniency, and do as they thought most expedient. They hoisted the main Yard, but the Halliards giving way, it came by the board, and the Men who were before out of Heart, so entirely despair'd, that they would not look to save themselves. At last good words, and certain Flats they discover'd to Leeward, prevailing, the Yard was hoisted, and fixed to the Mast with Ropes to stay it, The Ropes broke and the Yard came by the board again; good words were of as much use as Hands to hoist it again. The Sea had run high that Night, and did so still, and the Ship sailing hard upon the Wind, it rack'd her so much that almost all the Tackling gave way, but especially that belonging to the Foremast, insomuch that it had only one of the Ropes of the Shrouds left on each side, and look'd so naked, as if it would have spent itself the very next time the Ship beat, but it was good and strong. The Ship and Men were much in the same condition, and it pleas'd God to look down upon them in his Mercy, and to order it so that as they were standing in for a Bay, the Wind came about large, so they got into it, through a Channel enclos'd with Rocks at the mouth of the same Bay. By this time 3 Indians came in a Boat to view the Ship, and took their Post to Windward without speaking one word. Aboard the Ship there was a Souldier that spoke the Language of the Philippine-Islands, tho preting to know something of the Voyage, he had like to have been the ruin of all the Crew. He spoke to them in that Language, and the Indians being satisfy'd the Ship belong'd to Christians, drew near, and went aboard to shew the Anchoring place they were looking after. They came to an Anchor in the midst of the Bay in 14 Fathom water. One of these Indians spoke several Languages, and another of them, as he said was the same Sr. Thomas Candish carry'd away with him, when he sail'd that way to shew him the Channels amidst those Islands. Being ask'd what Land that was, they said it was Cape Espirito Santo, or of the Holy Ghost, and that the Port and Bay was call'd of Cobas. This account gave new Life, to those who an hour before look'd upon themselves as dead Men, which made many express their inward Joy with outward Tears. The Indians went away to their Town, and others came in their place, one of them carrying a long Rod of Justice, which together with a Cross they saw on the Shoar, convinced the Men they were Christians and Friends. They brought Fowls, Swine, Palm-tree wine, abundance of Cocos, Plantans, Sweet Canes, Papayas, Roots, Water in Pipes, Wood, and all such relief, as People in that distress stood in need of. All was bought for Royals, Knives, glass Beads, which they value above Silver, so that for three Nights and three days the fire in the Cookroom was never out, nor did they cease Cooking and Baking, minding nothing but eating. This excess was very prejudicial to the Sick, for being us'd to eat very little, and now using no moderation, 3 or 4 of them dy'd of it. In this Bay which lyes in 12 degrees and 50 minutes of North latitude, they continu'd a fortnight. At length after much debate about Sailing, without refitting the Ship, they set forward on the 29th of January. At five in the afternoon the Island of St. Bernardine was far astern of them. Night overtaking them near another call'd Capul, they met with furious Eddies and Currents, which brought the Ship quite about, and had she not answer'd the Helm well, must have run ashore. Next day some Indians came out in Boats they call Barangays, from a Port call'd Nibalon in the Island Luzon, bringing abundance of Fowl, Swine and Fruit, but little was purchas'd because there was little left to give for it. They sail'd on, keeping the Island in view amidst many others, at Night by guess, and passing through several Places, in which afterwards skilful Pilots admir'd they had not been all lost, there being abundance of Flats that way, but they never saw any, so that it was God's Providence preserv'd them. On Thursday the first of February, being come to the Place they call Galban, the Governess sent her two Brothers with seven Men more in the Boat, on pretence they were going ashore for Provisions. They waited its return all day, but it came not, being gone to Manila fifteen Leagues distant from that Place, over a narrow neck of Land the Island makes

Vol. IV.

They put to Sea again for Manila.

Get an Indian Pilot.

there to give Advice of the Ships coming. Next Morning about break of day the Ship appear'd enclips'd amidst Islands, seeing no way to get out, without its Boat, and very bare of Provisions, what they got at the last Port being spent. They saw a great many Indian Boats, but they all fled from the Ship, tho' they made signs to them, because, that not being the Season when the Ships use to go from New-Spain, they took that to be an English Ship. The trouble Hunger caus'd, was increas'd by seeing no way for the Ship to get out. Thus they mov'd every way as much as the Calm would permit, and at last discover'd a narrow Channel, about a Stones throw over. The Wind freshning altern they struck into it, and running between the Island they call Casa, and that of Luzon, close under a Point, call'd Azufre, or Sulphur, they got out into more Sea-room, being a large Bay call'd Bonbon. By this time they discovered two Caracoas, which are large Indian Boats. Forty Indians row'd in each of them, twenty on a side, with long Skoops. They made a sign to the headmost of them with a small Flag. It stood off and would not stay. They stood right upon the other, which fearing to be foul, came to, and drew aboard with a Rope they threw over to it. They ask'd the Master whence he came, and whither he was bound. He answer'd from Manila, which was 20 Leagues from that Place, and was bound for Cebu, the first Town the Spaniards built in those Parts, and is 100 Leagues distant from Manila. They ask'd for an Indian Pilot, the Ship being that Night to pass over the Flats they call of Tulei. It was agreed he should have 3 Pieces of Eight for his Pains. The Night was spent very watchfully, and in the Morning they discover'd the mouth of the Bay, drawing near to it close under the Land of the Island of Fortune. The Wind was not fair, the Mouth of it lying W. and the Breeze coming from the North-east. At the Mouth of the Bay is an Island call'd Marivelez, where there is usually a Spaniard stands Centinel, with some Indians to Row, and swift Boats, to go see what Ships come in, and carry quick advice to the Governor of Manila. There is also a small Mount or Rock lying North and South with Marivelez, which they call El Frayle, or the Friar. These two Islands make three small Channels, and they began to tack to get in at that which lyes between

See the Port, but are kept off by the Wind.

Marivelez, and el Frayle. The Ship having none but the two Main-sails, and the Men being spent with labour, they advanced little or nothing and sometimes fell off considerably. Thus they spent three days tir'd to Death, and in despair to see that for want of fetching up that Island, they were depriv'd of the satisfaction of coming to rest at Manila. They were still in Pain, expecting every Tide, reckoning when it would be Flood to carry them in, but that being irregular the hour never came. The Sailers bid the Master, or Pilot run the Ship aground, for they had labour'd sufficiently, perhaps it was because they saw Land on both sides, and the Smoke of Manila. They did the work of the Ship, as if it had been rather a compliance than Duty. All their aim was to run aground, alledging that since they were so near a Christian Country, it was better the Ship should be lost alone, than so many Men in her. The Water and Provisions were now quite spent, and all they had too much of was the brisk contrary Gale. This made the Master express more concern to the Seamen, and therefore he bid them take notice that all the Coast was inaccessible and the Sea ran high, besides that they had no Boat, nor Provisions, but many sick Men, that in the weak condition they were in, it was impossible they could hold out many hours, much less days. He said it was a shame it should be said of them that they had endeavour'd to save themselves, because they were strongest and could swim. He encourag'd them, saying they had brought that Ship from such remote Parts, thro' Seas never cut by Ship, and therefore they that had so bravely endur'd the most, ought not now to boggle at the least. He declar'd it was not to be born, that they should lose the Honour of so strange a Voyage at the very entrance of the Port, from whence they were observ'd. He added, that had they brought the Ship well condition'd, full of Provisions, the Men in health, and well pay'd, they had deserv'd very little commendations; but all things being quite otherwise, they now merited the greatest Praise. By this time they discover'd a Barangay making all possible speed towards the Ship. When near, they discover'd four Spaniards in it, and eight Indians that row'd. One of them was the Centinel at Marivelez, whose Name was Alonso Albarran; he came with the Governor's Master of the Household strels.

Great d

Islands of Salomon.

hold sent by him with two Soldiers to condole with the Lady Elizabeth for her Misfortune, bringing a Letter containing many honourable Offers. The Sight of the four Spaniards rais'd the Hearts of those disconsolate Men, as may well be imagin'd, considering their Circumstances. They were handed up and most lovingly receiv'd. They went about carefully viewing all the Men, and seeing so many Sick, so many with Sores, so Ragged, Poor, and Distressed, only said, God be prais'd, God be prais'd. Albarran went down betwixt Decks to see the Hospital, and when the sick Women saw him, they cry'd out; What do you bring us to Eat, for we are ready to run Mad with Hunger and Thirst. He comforted them with Hopes of fresh Provisions that were a coming, and so went out upon Deck, astonish'd at what he had seen. At length God sent them all Blessings together, that Tack the Ship made up with Marivelez, whence the Lady Elizabeth sent a Soldier, with her Answer to the Letter she receiv'd from the Governor, and he went away in the Barangay. Soon after they discover'd another, in which came the Chief Alcayde of that Coast, with the Governess's Brothers, bringing a great deal of new Bread, Wine and Fruit, given them in Manila. As it was dividing, the greatest Persons did some Actions misbecoming them, but who can forbear in a time of so much want? Next Day there came a good large Boat, loaden with Fowl, Calves, Hogs, Bread, Wine, and Greens. It was brought by James Diaz Marmolejo, by the Governor's Order; it was divided bountifully among all the People.

The Ship drew nearer to the Harbour still upon the Tack. One Pinao, Mate to one of the King's Ships, came to help with a Boat full of Seamen, all Clad in Silks of several Colours. The Captain of the Port was on the Shoar with his Colours flying, and all the Sca-faring-men drawn up at their Arms. As soon as the Anchor was dropt, they saluted the Royal Standard with all the Canon and small Arms. The Ship answer'd the best it could, and came to an Anchor on the 11th of February, 1696. In their desired Port of Cabite, two Leagues South-west of the City Manila, the Capital of the Philippine-Islands, in 14 Degrees and a half of North Latitude, with fifty Persons less than they brought from Santa Cruz, who all Dy'd by the way. The Ship being at an Anchor, other Persons came aboard, who charitably brought so much Bread and Flesh, that now there was to spare. Next Day in the Morning a Colonel came from the Governor D. Luys Perez de las Marinas, a Rigidor or Alderman from the Common-Council of the Town, and a Clergy Man from the Chapter of the great Church, to receive the Lady Elizabeth. They presently carry'd her off to the King's House at the Port, saluting her again as she landed. After Dinner they carry'd her to the City, where she made her Entrance by Night, and was receiv'd with Flambeaus. The sick People being taken out of the Ship, were convey'd to the Hospital, the Widows to the Houses of Persons of Note, and all of them afterwards Marry'd to their Satisfaction. Those that were recovering, and the rest of the Soldiers were quarter'd in private Houses, and those that were Marry'd went to House-keeping. So that they were all of them lovingly receiv'd and entertain'd by the charitable Inhabitants of Manila. Soon after, ten Dy'd, and Four betook themselves to Religious Orders. The Frigate never came home; there was an Account that it had been found with all its Sails abroad, the People Dead, the Vessel rotten and run Ashoar. The Galliot arriv'd at an Island call'd Mindanao, in ten Degrees of Latitude. As they sail'd without knowing what way to take among those Islands, they were reduced to such want, that they went Ashoar upon a small Island call'd Camaniquin, where they kill'd and eat a Dog they found. They accidentally met some Indians, who directed them to the Harbour, where there were Fathers of the Society of Jesus, and they sent them to the Corregidor or Governor of those Parts. He sent 5 of them Prisoners to Manila, the Captain having made his Complaint to him that they had mutiny'd, with a Letter to Dr. Antony de Morga, Lieutenant General of that Government, in which were these Words: Here arriv'd a Galliot, whose Captain was as Impertinent as his Discourse. I ask'd him, whence he came, and he told me that he had been with the Adelantado Alvaro de Mindana, who sail'd with four Ships from Peru, to make the Islands of Salomon. This one arriv'd here, and bearing his Majesty's Colours, I receiv'd it, as was proper. If the others happen to go thither, you will have a better Account of this Affair. The Soldiers were not prosecuted, as was said,

A Boat comes to them from the Shoar.

They go into the Harbour

What became of the Galliot.

A Discovery of the only because the Captain with his Galliot forsook the great Ship.

This was the end of that prodigious Voyage. If I have been too tedious in giving an Account of it, the Strangeness of it may be my excuse, since neither that of Ulysses, nor that of Gama were equal to it, and yet both of them deserv'd Poems compos'd by those two most noble Poets the Greek and the Portugues. But because it might seem superfluous to have said so much of an undertaking to appearance unfortunate, it will be fit to give an Account of the benefit accruing from it, and shew what future Advantage Heaven was pleas'd should be the Consequence of the present Loss, to the greater Honour and Glory of God, and of the Viceroy, his Instrument.

One of the Discoverers returns to Peru.

Quiros, after waiting upon the Lady Elizabeth from Manila to Mexico, where she stay'd at that time, went away to Lima, where he made Interest with D. Luis de Velasco, the Marquess's Successor in the Government of Peru, to be furnish'd by him with Ships, Men, and other Necessaries to continue the Discovery they had begun, and as he said to plow up the Waters of the unknown Sea, and seek out the undiscover'd Lands under the Antarctic Pole, the Center of that Horizon. He presented two Memorials containing the Motives that inclined him to this Undertaking, expressing himself much to this effect.

His Reasons for proceeding again upon the Discovery.

That part of the Moon, which is darkned when she is Eclipsed, being the part of a Circle, proves that the Body of Earth and Water which causes it is round. About this Body is an imaginary Line, long, without breadth or depth, which encompasses and divides it into two equal Parts, one whereof is call'd the North, the other the South. At this Equinoctial Line commence the Degrees, reckoning from 1 to 90, which is the furthest extent of Latitude, towards either of the Poles. Towards the North all is already discover'd to 70 Degrees, the remainder from thence to 90, tho' it were discover'd, seems uninhabitable, because of the extream Cold, the inequality of the Day and Night, and other Inconveniencies. It is well known, that in several Parts already sufficiently discover'd, the People live in Caves, and use much Art to support Life against the Hardships of the Weather. Towards the South there are Discoveries, as far as 55 Degrees, beyond the Streight of Magellan, and to 35 the Latitude of the Cape of Good Hope, or somewhat above 40, which Ships make to Weather it. These two Points of Land, with their Coasts, and the Coasts opposite to them are already tully known. It now remains to discover the remaining part parallel with this, and in less Latitude Westwards, up to 90 Degrees, to know whether it is Land or Water, or what quantity of each. The Adelantado; Alvaro de Mindana, as he was sailing in the Year 1695. towards the Islands of Salomon, which he said lay between 7 and 12 Degrees of South Latitude, and 1500 Leagues from the City of De los Reyes, found Four small Islands together, Inhabited by so good a sort of People, that none of those yet discover'd can equal them, but are for the most part ill-look'd Indians, indifferently shap'd, and dark Complection'd, such as we see in Peru, the Firm-Land, New-Spain, Nicaragua, the Philippine-Islands, and other Parts. These Islands are between 9 and 10 Degrees of Latitude, 1000 Leagues distant from the City De los Reyes, 650 from the nearest Coast of New-Spain, and 1000 from New-Guinea. The usual Breezes there are Easterly, for which reason to return from them to Peru or New-Spain, a Ship must run upon a Bowling, North or South, to meet without the Tropicks, those they call general Winds, and to this purpose it is requisite to have proper Instruments for Navigation, and substantial Vessels, two Things, besides many others very necessary, which those People are destitute of. These, and many other Reasons that may be aliedg'd, make it appear that they could never have any Commerce with those two Provinces above-mention'd, nor much less with New-Guinea, or the Philippine-Islands, because there is no Sailing from those Parts to the said Islands, by reason the Wind is West and quite contrary to them. From the four Islands no other Land was discover'd. The Vessels the Inhabitants use are for short Voyages, and therefore it was consider'd which way it was possible for them to get to far distant Parts, and the most likely way is, that when they sail from a Place whence no other Land can be discover'd, they make their Observations, and take aim by that Land they leave behind, till by degrees they lose sight of it, and when they have lost that, then they have a view of the other part they are bound to; for whensoever Sight is lost both of the Land they come from, and that they go to, there is then an absolute solu<sup>t</sup>e necessity of understanding at least the Sea-Compass, which they have not. I will say nothing of contrary Winds, Currents and other Things, which may put them from their Course. This appears the more plain in that the most experienced Pilots, furnish'd with all those Necessaries these People want; when they have been three or four Days out of sight of Land, cannot positively assign where they are. Therefore, generally speaking, it must be said, those Indians Instruments of Navigation are no other but their Eyes, or their Guess at small distances. As to what might be objected, that they take aim by the Sun, Moon and Stars, the Answer is, that the Sun cannot be seen at Night, the mutability of the Moon is well known, and in short neither Sun, Moon, nor Stars are always visible, nor are they fix'd in one same Place, or free from Clouds. Yet tho' all these Things were as they are not, their Voyages must still be but short, as has been said. And tho' it be true that the most Ignorant may in their Vessels go from a small Island to a large Continent, so it be near at Hand, since if they miss of one part, they will hit upon another, yet it is not therefore to be granted that they can without Art seek small and far distant Islands, from large or lesser Countries. Among those Indians there were some that drew towards Mulattoes, which difference in Colour argues some Commerce with other People. Besides those four Islands being but small, it is to be observ'd, that great ones are scarce able to contain Men who are always looking out for another where they may live more at Ease, and they leave them either because they cannot agree, or because they will not be subject to their Rulers, or else because they would Rule themselves. It may therefore be rationally believ'd, that towards the South-east, South, and South-west, quite away Westward, there are other Islands one after another, or a Continent running along till it joyns with New-Guinea, or comes near the Philippine-Islands, or the South Coast of the Streight of Magellan, for otherwise we know of no Parts whence People could go to inhabit those Islands, unless it were miraculously. Whether it run the one or the other, or both ways, it is likely there are abundance of Islands, or a large Continent, being the Antipodes to the best part of Europe, Asia and Africk, where between the Latitudes of 20 and 60 Degrees, God made Men so useful.

Thus the Account ends abruptly.

T H E

THE HISTORY
OF THE PROVINCES
OF

Paraguay, Tucuman, Rio de la Plata, Parana, Guaira and Urvaica.

And something of the Kingdom of Chili,
In South America.

Written in Latin by F. Nicholas del Techo, Priest of the Society of Jesus.

THE P R E F A C E.

THE Author having design'd this for a History of his Order ; has fill'd a considerable part of it with the Lives, particular Actions, Preaching and Teaching of his Brethren the Jesuits, and inserted abundance of Miracles, and other pious Matter, which is not the Subject of this present Work, nor likely to be at all acceptable to the Reader ; who in a Book of Travels, will expect to meet with nothing but what is profane History, Description, strange Manners, Customs and Superstitions, surprizing Accidents, Discoveries, Conquests, and such Things as are usual in Books of this Nature. Such Care has been therefore taken, that his Expectation may be answer'd according to the Nature of the Work, and therefore those religious Narrations are either quite left out, or if any thing be said of them, it is so concise as may no way be tedious, but rather afford something of variety, and serve to make a connection, lest breaking off too abruptly in some places, we should altogether lose the Order and Method of the Author. But he having dispos'd Things so as that the delivery of the Affairs of his Society, may appear to be the principal Part of his Undertaking, has not therefore digested the others to the best advantage for a Reader that looks only for Travels, who therefore may think all Things are not so regularly recited as might have been, which is here endeavour'd in some measure to be rectify'd, by joyning some Accounts, which in him lye far sever'd, that so all Confusion might be avoided. And lest any one should object here is too much mention made of the Jesuits and their Actions, it is to be observ'd they are the main Subject of the History ; and that with good reason. For whereas in all other Discoveries, we see the whole Relation lyes upon Commanders and Souldiers, who Conquer'd those Nations found out by force of Arms ; Here on the contrary, and which is very well worth our curious Observation, we see vast Provinces converted to Christianity, and brought under the Dominion of the Kings of Spain by a few Religious Men, Arm'd only with the Sword of the Gospel, and yet these same Preachers are brought in here no more than absolutely Necessity requires, they being the great Discoverers of those far extended Countries we treat of, and Founders of Towns, so that these Things cannot possibly be deliver'd without mentioning those who were the prime Actors ; but the Thing will justify it self. As for the Truth of the Relation, I see little reason to call it in question, since the Author could have no Inducement to forge any part of it, as being a Religious Man who valued his Reputation, and could propose to himself no Benefit or Advantage by Falshood. Nor could he easily be impos'd upon, having Liv'd 25 Years in those Countries, during which time he must have seen much, and learnt more from Persons of Credit and Authors above blemish. Now to give a more particular Account of what is done, as to the Translation, several Matters as was hinted before, which in the Original lye far asunder, are here for the better understanding of them brought together. The first 21 Sections run exactly with the Author, neither adding nor diminishing, because so far he proceeds upon the account of those Countries, not interrupting it with any spiritual Matter. At Chapter 22 he begins to enter upon the Subject of the Jesuits coming into those Parts, where we reduce many Chapters into a few Lines each, till some Matters altogether spiritual occurring ; there are Chapters quite left out, till we meet with more temporal Affairs. This same Method is continued throughout the whole Work, sometimes delivering whole Chapters, oftner reducing them into less compass, by leaving out those Things that are not Historical, and sometimes wholly omitting Chapters, which contain nothing but the particular Lives of some of those Fathers, or Miracles, and such Things from the purpose. The Original is divided into Chapters and Books, which method is not follow'd here for the Reasons already set down. In fine, the whole Work is Diverting, full of Variety and New, for of those Parts we have had but very imperfect Accounts before, and such peaceable Conquests as are here found we do not meet with in any other Travels.

THE
HISTORY
OF
PARAGUAY, TUCUMAN,
And the adjacent PROVINCES
In South America.

Techo.
The Introduction.

AMERICA is divided into the Northern and the Southern. South America is shut in between two Seas, has a considerable part of its Shores inhabited by the Peruvians and Brasilians, neither of them stretching far into the Inland, unless where the desire of Gold or Silver, or the goodness of the Soil has drawn the Spaniards on the one side, and the Portugueses on the other. All the Land between Brasil and Peru, and consequently between the Atlantick and Pacifick Oceans, being a vast extent down to the Straights of Magellan, is for the most part comprehended under the Names of Chili, Tucuman, Paraguay, and some other Provinces included in them. This New World divided like the Old into two vast Peninsulas, and only knit together by a small Isthmus, was in the last Age but one brought under a foreign Dominion to its own unspeakable Advantage; for upon this occasion, through the special Goodness of God, and great Care and Expence of the Catholick Kings, wherever the Spanish Dominion extends, the Christian Faith is propagated. For if there be any Nations that have not yet own'd Christ, the King of Spain is no way to be blam'd for it, but all the fault is to be imputed either to the Obstinacy of those Barbarians, or, as is usual in all Parts, to the ill Behaviour of some private Persons. Others will speak of what relates to the rest of America, but I being commanded by my Superiors, to write the Affairs of the Society in those vast Southern Regions of Paraguay, Tucuman and Chili, which in the Year 1607 were made one Province of the said Society, will first give an account of the first coming of the Spaniards into those Countries; of the Towns founded by them; of first Preaching of Christianity; and afterwards proceed to such other Actions, as hapned in process of Time upon further Discovery of those Parts, chiefly as to Temporal Affairs, yet not so as altogether to forget the Spiritual. This I shall endeavour to perform with that Truth and Sincerity, that becomes a Religious Man. And thou, my God, the Author of all Good, without invoking whom a Religious Person ought not to enter upon any Work, assist me in this Undertaking, as thou hast done so many Heroes of our Society in propagating the Faith, whose steps I have follow'd in that great Work, tho' not so worthily, for the space of 25 Years. Do thou Fountain of eternal Wisdom, correct my Stile, which so many Years use of a barbarous Language has corrupted; and guide me, that I may make the best choice of the vast mass of Matter that lyes before me, and worthily deliver that to Posterity, which shall be to thy greater Honour and Glory.

Pizarro having carry'd the War into South America, and the Spaniards under his Command, gaping after the vast Wealth of the Incas, Kings of those Parts, having possess'd themselves of a large Tract fully.

The Portugueses first Discover'd Paraguay, but unsuccessfully.

Tract of Land along the Pacifick Ocean, commonly call'd the South Sea. Several Persons perswaded themselves there might be a shorter and less dangerous way found along the Coasts of the Atlantick or North Sea, to Peru, which was then reported to abound in Gold and Silver. The first I can find, that propos'd the Discovery of this Way, was Martin de Sousa, who Govern'd Brazil for King John II. of Portugal, and divided it into Provinces, and was ambitious to vye with the Spaniards in Discovering new Countries that might increase his Master's Dominions. To this purpose he sent Alexius Garcia a Man of undaunted Resolution, with his Son, and three Portugueses, and a considerable Attendance of Indians, from the Southern part of Brazil, to peirce as far as possibly he could into the Inland of America. He having travell'd 300 Leagues by Land, and coming into the Country about the River Paraguay, being well vers'd in the Language of the Indians, and knowing how to deal with them, prevail'd with about 2000 of the People of Paraguay to follow him as their Captain; with whom, in martial manner he made his way to the Borders of Peru, whilst the Inga was still Living, and there by Plundering gather'd a vast quantity of wrought and unwrought Silver. Being loaded with this Booty, he sent away two of his Portuguese Companions to Brazil for Succours, and returning to Paraguay, was cruelly Murder'd by the Barbarians, who spar'd his Son, because of his tender Years. The Father's Memory will live for ever, because he durst with so small a Company traverse almost all the Land between the two Seas that encompass South America, travelling unknown Ways, where no European had been before, and through fierce and warlike Nations, shewing that nothing is impracticable to those, who prefer Fame and the Benefit of Posterity before their own Lives. His Companions returning to Brazil, and besides the Account they gave of the Friendship contracted with the People of Paraguay, and the Wealth of the Inga, producing Pieces of Gold and Silver, as undoubted Proofs of the Truth of their Assertions. All the Portugueses were overjoy'd, and eager upon repeating that Expedition. Hereupon 60 Portugueses, and a good number of Brazilians under the Command of George Sedenio, were sent to the Assistance of Alexius Garcia, whom they thought to be still alive. When they were come near the River Paraguay, the Indians who were Guilty of the Murder of Garcia, fearing Revenge, refus'd them Provisions, and soon after fell upon them, killing their Commander and putting the rest to flight. Those that escap'd were by the Paranensian Indians taken into their Boats, which were Rotten and Worm-eaten, and being in the middle of the River, the Indians pull'd off the Clay they use instead of Pitch, by which means the Boats sunk, drowning all the Portugueses, the Paranensians who were Naked and good Swimmers getting safe to Shoar. Thus the Expectation of the Portugueses was disappointed, either thro' the Rashness of Sedenio or Treachery of the Barbarians, God reserving Paraguay and the adjacent Countries for the King of Spain.

3. Not long after, Sebastian Gavot a Man skilful in Navigation, who had discover'd Virginia for the King of England, offer'd his Service to the Emperor Charles V. promising to find a short way to Peru South of Brazil, or else to Discover the Inland of South America. The Proposal was pleasing to the Emperor, then fill'd with the Expectation of subduing vast Dominions, and seeking all means to secure the best Provinces of that new World. He therefore order'd four Ships to be immediately fitted out with 300 Men aboard, and gave the Command of them to Gavot, who in the Year 1530. crossing the Atlantick Ocean, put into the Mouth of Rio de la Plata, or the River of Plate (the Mouth and Coasts whereof had been Discover'd fifteen Years before by John de Solis a Spaniard, and four Years after review'd by Magellan) and sail'd up it, till he came to an Anchor, where the River Urvaica falls into that of Plate. Thence he sent Alvaro Ramon to Discover up the River Urvaica, who the third Day after he left him, lost his Ship upon the Sands, and was himself slain with most of his Men. Gavot having Built the Fort of the Holy Ghost at the Mouth of the River Carcaranna, which falls into that of Plate, sail'd 150 Leagues up this last River, till he came to the Place where Paraguay joyns it with a mighty Stream, and advancing forty Leagues up it, after Conquering the Indians that oppos'd him, came to that Place, where we said Alexius Garcia the Portuguese was Robb'd and Kill'd by the People of Paraguay. There as he pry'd into all Things, finding many Utensils of Plate in the Huts of the Indians, and not knowing any thing of Garcias's Travels and Death, thinking them to be the natu-

Gavot takes possession of the River of Plate in Paraguay, for the King of Spain

Espiritu Santo-Fort built.

Fecho. Riches of the Country, he hastily bought all up of the Indians, and as if he had now done the Business he came about, having Fortify'd the Fort of the Holy Ghost, or Espiritu santo, and leaving Nuno de Lara in it with 120 Men, he hasten'd back into Spain.

The Indians conspire to destroy the Fort.

After Garvot was gone, Nuno de Lara contracting Friendship with the neighbouring People, made a shift to maintain himself, till Mangora chief of the Timbusians resorting often to the Spanish Fort on account of Trade, fell in Love with a beautiful Woman, Lucy de Miranda, that was the Woman's Name, and Sebastian Hurtado her Husband, both born at Ezija in Andalusia, were not ignorant of the Barbarians wicked Design, and therefore she modestly confining herself before her Husband, receiv'd the Indians Presents after such a manner, as sufficiently evinc'd she did not design them as an earnest of any base Affection. However Mangora try'd all ways to enjoy her, and therefore pretending much kindness, earnestly Invited Sebastian Hurtado to go into his Lands to divert him with his Wife, where he should be respected and presented by his People. But Hurtado valuing his Wife's Honour above all he could hope to gain, excus'd himself to the Barbarian, pleading the rigour of military Discipline, which forbid such Liberty, and directed much Watchfulness to be observ'd among Strangers. Mangora inrag'd at this Disappointment, drew his Brother Siripus to his Party, and resolv'd to destroy all the Spaniards, that he might debauch one Woman. Nor was it long before an opportunity offer'd, for understanding that Nuno de Lara Governor of the Port, had sent Ruiz Mosquera and Sebastian Garcia Husband to Lucy de Miranda, with 40 Men into the neighbouring Islands, to bring in Provisions, Mangora hastily drew together 4000 Arm'd Indians, and lay'd them in Ambush to wait his orders in the Morasses near the Spanish Fort. This done he conducts 30 young Men loaded with Provisions into the Fort, as he had done at other times, and bestowing what he brought with great dissimulation, feasted among the Spaniards till late at Night. Then most of them being asleep, having order'd his Men what every one was to do, he fir'd the Magazines, slew the Centinels, threw down the Gates, and letting in his Men, fell upon the Spaniards either asleep, or in a Consternation. Many of them were struck through with Darts before they knew of any Design against them, others as ignorant of the Treachery, were butcher'd as they ran to put out the Fire, some few forcing their way through the Barbarians into the Parade of the Fort made a mighty slaughter of them. Among them Nuno de Lara, tho' he had receiv'd many Wounds, seeing Mangora the Contriver of the Mischief proud of his Success, made his way, and being incens'd at his Treachery, run him through, so often repeating his Strokes as he lay, till he was assur'd of his being dead, and not so satisfy'd slew several others of the chief Men; but being surrounded by many he fell down dead upon Mangora, all his Men oppress'd by the Multitude undergoing the same Fate. Lucy de Miranda the cause of this Misfortune, with four Spanish Women and as many Boys, whom their Age or Sex reserv'd for greater Sufferings, surviv'd the Slaughter. Which being over, Siripus, who had inherited his Brother's Lust, allowing his Men all the other Booty and Prisoners, taking none but Lucy de Miranda to himself, and left no means unessay'd to overcome her Constancy, calling her Sovereign Lady of a numerous People, and Wife of a powerful Lord, whereas she had lost a Husband that was destitute of all things. But nothing so much perplex'd the worthy Lady, as being Belov'd by the Barbarian, and she blam'd her Sex for having sav'd her Life, and her Beauty which had made her belov'd above the rest, so that she could not so much as afford her new Master a good Look. After some Days spent between the Indian Courting, and Lucy Resisting, some Parties that were abroad, brought in Sebastian Hurtado her Husband. He returning from the Islands and perceiving the Destruction of the Fort and Slaughter of his Country-Men, guessing at the occasion of it, deliver'd himself up to the Timbusian Guards, to be conducted to his Wife. As soon as Siripus saw him, being enrag'd with Jealousie, he order'd him to be taken away and shot to Death, which had been accordingly done, but that his Wife interceded for him, and the Barbarian granted her his Life upon Condition, they should for the future abstain from the Marriage Bed, otherwise both should dye. Having accepted of the Condition for some time, they only allow'd their Eyes the liberty of Enjoyment, tho' they liv'd together, till at last Siripus surpriz'd them in conjugal Embraces, his old Wife being the Informer. Then being inrag'd above measure, he order'd Lucy to be Burnt,

Slaughter of the Spaniards.

A traitor could murder.

Paraguay, Tucuman, &c.

Burnt, who being dragg'd from her Husbands Arms to the Pile, having recommended her self to God, perish'd in the Flames. Her Husband Sebastian like the Saint of his Name, being bound to a Tree, was shot to Death with Arrows.
Thus 'tis to be hop'd the two faithful Consorts, having purg'd all earthly Guilt, were receiv'd into the heavenly Manfions.

40 Spaniards erect a Fort on the Coast of Brasil.

The forty Spaniards, whom we mention'd before, to have gone out under the Command of Mosquera, to get Provilions, having bewail'd the Misfortune of their Companions and Fort, and Bury'd the Bodies, not knowing how better to bestow themselves, sail'd over to the next part of Brasil, where they built a strong little Fort, in 25 deg. of South Latitude. Having made Friendship with the Natives they sow'd the Land, and one Edward Perez, a Portuguese, being by his King Banish'd to Brasil with a numerous Family, had increas'd their number, when Martin Alfonso de Sousa, Governour of the Southern Coast of Brasil, sent a Messenger to order Perez to retire to that Part of Brasil to which he was Banish'd; and to require Mosquera and his Men, if they design'd to live Peaceably there, to take the Oath of Allegiance to the King of Portugal, in whose Dominions they were settled. Mosquera an-swer'd, that there was still a Controve-sie depending between their Kings, about the division of the Indies, which did not belong to them to decide, but that he and his Companion's Intention, was to keep that Part they had possess'd themselves of, for their Sovereign Charles V. Soon after a French Ship accidentally putting into the Island Cananea, opposite to the Port where Mosquera had settled, put the Spaniards in the mind of getting some Arms, and supplying their Wants. Having therefore taken 200
Indians to their Assistance, they went out in the dead of the Night in Canoes, and surprizing the French, brought them ashore, after taking their Ship and Arms from them. This done, understanding that the Portugueses were marching against them, they carried four Pieces of Cannon from the Ship to their little Fort, and preparing all Things for their Defence, lay'd an Ambush in a little Wood that was between them and the shore, keeping the rest of the Men close in the Fort. The Portugueses to the number of 80, follow'd by a multitude of Indians, suspecting nothing of the Ambush, nor thinking of the Cannon; but despi-

They take French ship.

sing the small number of the Spaniards, march'd very disorderly as if they went to punish a parcel of Thieves. But as soon as they had pass'd the Ambush, and came up to the Trench, the Spaniards fir'd their Guns, and at the same time those that lay in the Wood, attack'd them in the Rear, which putting them into Confusion, those in the Fort sall'y'd out, and having drove them into a close Place, slew them at Pleasure. After the Slaughter, going aboard their Vessels with the Indians their Confederates, they sail'd to the Portuguese Town of S. Vincent, which they plunder'd, and return'd immediately to their own little Town loaded with Booty, in which Expedition some Portuguese of their own accord sided with the Spaniards. This was the first Fight I know of that hapned between the Catho-lick Europeans in America. Not long after Mosquera and his Companions, no ways able to cope with the Forces of Brasil, and fearing Revenge, went away to the Island of S. Catherine, lying in 28
deg. of South Latitude, to inhabit there, till being afterwards Recruited, they might return to the River of Plata.

Route the Portuguese.

Retire to an Island.

In the mean while Sebastian Gavor re-turn'd into Spain, and spread abroad the Fame of what he had found, saying, The Countries about the River Paraguay, were not scorched with the violent Heat of the Sun like Brasil, nor subject to violent Cold like those Parts more Southward, but enjoy'd a temperate Air: That the vast Coasts of Parana were Inhabited by infinite numbers of People fit for Service: That there was much more variety of Fish and wild Beasts, than in any part of Europe: And then shewing the Pieces of Gold and Silver, and many Utensils made of those Metals, which he had purchas'd of the People of Paraguay that murder'd Alexius Garcia, and falsly believ'd to be the natural Wealth of that River; he by these means made so powerful an Impression in the Minds of the Spaniards, that many made Interest to be sent into that Country. From that time the River Parana on account of Gavor's Silver, or the hope of much Silver to be found there, was call'd, The River of Plata, a Name rather specious than true. Gavor having made the same Report to Charles V. it was decreed in Council, that a numerous Colony should be sent into that part of America. Two Thousand Two Hundred Men were rais'd, besides Sailers, and Ship'd under the Command of Peter Mendoza, a Man of the first Quality, the Emperor's Sewer,

A great Colony sent to the River of Plata.

The HISTORY of

Tcho. and now made Governor of the Rivers of Plate, and Paraguay. The chief Men among them, whom covetousness had mov'd to undertake this Expedition, were James Mendoza, the Governor's Brother, Francis Mendoza, once Steward to Maximilian King of the Romans, Charles Dubrin Foster-Brother to the Emperor Charles the 5th, John Ossorio Commander of the Fleet, nobly born, and renowned in the Wars of Italy, Luis Pérez, Brother to S. Teresa, Bernard a Genoese Captain, formerly in great Esteem with Doria, James Ramua, a Flemming, not to mention the Gusmans, Riberas, Rocas, Bracamontes, Manriques, Aguillars, Lucano, Ayonlas, Iralas, and other noble Persons, so very numerous, that there were thirty two Heirs of noble Families and Estates, reckoned aboard that Fleet. All these Sailing from Cadiz in the year 1535, when they had cut the Line, were parted and drove to several Places, James Mendoza, the Governor's Brother, after the Tempest was over, arriv'd safe in the River of Plate with a few Ships. The Governor with the rest put into the Port of Rio de Janeiro in Brasil, where whilst he lay for a Wind, he caus'd John Ossorio his Lieutenant, a Man much envy'd for his Bravery and Courtesy, to be Stabb'd, without any Tryal, being wrongfully accus'd of ambitious Practices, for that he was reported to have insinuated that in a short time he should Command in chief; which Action was so resented, that many stay'd behind in Brasil and others conspir'd to desert their Governor. But before the Conspiracy could come to a head, he left Brasil, and joyn'd his Brother James Mendoza, who was then in the River of Plate, building flat bottom'd Vessels to cross the Rivers, and hearing of the Murder of Ossorio, is reported to have said, he was afraid, lest the whole Fleet should incur some Judgment for his Brother's wicked action.

Buenos Ayres built.

The Governor having thus got all his strength together, order'd the Fleet to make over to the other side of the River, where landing Sancho del Campo his Kinsman, began to encourage the Men to settle, commending the goodness of the Air, which gave occasion to call the Town there built Buenos Ayres, it being 50 Leagues from the Mouth of the River, almost in 35 degrees of South latitude, directly opposite to the Cape of Good Hope, and put under the Protection of the Virgin Mary. As they were carrying on their Work, the Natives fell upon them, slew some they had drawn into an ambush, and kept the rest within their Fort. This mov'd the Governor to send his Brother James Mendoza with as many Men, as he thought fit, to check those inhospitable People. He taking 300 Foot, and some Horse of the prime Nobility, the Day after he set out, came to a Place, where out of a vast Lake there ran a Brook, on the further Bank whereof about 3000 Indians were drawn up in order of Battle. A Council of War being held, most were of Opinion, that they ought to expect the Enemy, whom they might easily destroy in the Passage of the Water. But James Mendoza was for attacking them immediately, and commanded the Foot to pass the Ford, on whom the Indians fell with such Fury, that they had neither leisure to fire their Muskets which had taken wet, nor to put themselves into any Order. However there was a great Slaughter made of the Indians, till Bartholomew Bracamont, and Paraserna Ribera Commanders of the Foot, being overpower'd by the Multitude, were kill'd. Then many of the Foot being slain, some few Horse that durst fall upon the Indians, were contemn'd by them; for the Horses being weak after the Voyage, and under no Command, as having not been back'd a long time, expos'd the Riders to the Enemies Darts, who were thereupon easily struck down, or put to Flight. John Manrique a noble Horseman fighting among the foremost, was kill'd, and James Mendoza going to Revenge his death, tho' well seconded by Ramiro de Guzman, was knock'd down with a Stone, and slain by the Enemy. The Commander being slain the rest fled, and the Barbarians, according to their Custom, cut off the Heads of those they had kill'd carrying and tossing them about by the Hair, in an Insolent Boasting manner. 250 Spaniards were lost in the Action and Pursuit; a great number, considering how few they were in all. Lucano a Horseman, who had receiv'd many Wounds, falling down dead on the Bank of an inconsiderable River, left his Name to it, which continues to this day. It is reported, that many of the contrivers of the Murder of Ossorio dy'd in that Fight, to shew what Fate they are to expect, who follow violent Countels. The news of the Slaughter being brought to the Governor, it is not easy to express how much he was troubled troubled at the loss of his Brother, and to many Men of Note. His grief was increas'd by the death of Medrane a noble Horseman, Murder'd as was suspected in Revenge for the death of Oso-rio in the Fort, and the Murderer never known.

Slaughter of Spaniards.

After these disasters, the Provisions they brought being spent, there follow'd such a terrible Famine, that many fed upon Man's-flesh, and other things not to be nam'd; nay there were those that eat their dead Brother's Bowels, and gnaw'd Carcasses on the Gibbets to the Bones; for the Cruelty of the Barbarous People, the fear of wild Beasts, and severity of the Commanders suffer'd none to go out of the Works. Yet there was a Woman, who weighing the misery of Famine, chose rather to expose herself to the Inhumanity of the Indians and wild Beasts, than suffer the torture of Hunger; and therefore stealing out, she wandred a long time about the Fields, till at Night she went into a Cave, where finding a Lioness ready to whelp, she renew'd the antient Example, and had the boldness to play the Midwife, much to her own advantage, for the Lioness laying aside her fierceness, fairly divided her Prey among her young ones, and her Midwife, till she fell into the Hands of the Barbarians, and being after many accidents redeem'd by the Spaniards, was brought again to the Fort. But being there condemn'd for her Rashness, and Disobedience, she was expos'd without the Works, to be devour'd by wild Beasts, where she must have Perish'd, had not God in his Providence so order'd it, that the Lioness she help'd to whelp, came up to her first, and defended her innocent Midwife against the rest. This being observ'd, lest Men should seem more Savage than wild Beasts, she was let loose and Pardon'd, and liv'd many Years after an unquestion'd Witness of these wonderful accidents. Her Name was Maldoneda. Who this severe Judge was, the Governor having been a short time absent, is not known. Certain it is, there was such rigor us'd, that a Souldier lost his Ears for stealing a Lettuce, and an other was publickly disgraced for a Cabbage. For then the integrity of Discipline and Justice exercis'd in Europe, was still in force among the new Planters; and would to God it had continu'd in their Posterity, to Punish heinous Crimes daily committed on account there is no fear of Punishment to deter them. The Governor quite discourag'd with his ill Success, having every where made Inquiry after Gavots Silver, the Nature of the adjacent Countries, and the hopes of building Cities, and finding all things far short of expectation, repenting him of his Expedition built the Fort of Corpus Christi in the Territory of the Tymbusians, brought Mosquera and his Companions from the Island where we left them near Brasil, and caus'd a Ship to be fitted out with expedition, which done, having appointed Francis Ruiz Governor of Buenos Ayres, and John de Oyola of Guipuscoa his own Lieutenant, or Deputy Governor, he set Sail for Europe. But his Voyage proving tedious, and the small Provision he had being spent, he was reduced to eat all filthy things, and at last dy'd miserably with several of his Companions, who all ran Mad after eating of a Bitch that was big with Puppies. It is reported that many of those Mendoza carry'd with him to this Expedition, had serv'd under Bourbon at the Siege of Rome, whence returning through Shame of that scandalous Service, they went away to this Part of America, where God's Judgments follow'd them.

In the mean while John Oyola the Deputy Governor, running up into Paraguay with some Ships, the same way, that Gavot had gone before, and being inform'd there was to the South-West, a Country abounding in Gold and Silver, which might be gone to, partly by Land and partly by Water, resolv'd to go thither. At his departure, he order'd Dominick Irala, whom he left as his Lieutenant, to expect his return in six Months in the upper part of Paraguay, and if he return'd not in that time, to be at his own disposal. During Oyola's absence, Salazar and Gonzalo Mendoza Sailing from Buenos Ayres to Paraguay for Provisions, contracted Friendship with the People call'd Guaranians, and found a fit Place to erect a Fort, whereupon they two parting, Mendoza built the Fort call'd by the Name of the Assumption, in the same Place where it still continues, being the Metropolis of the Province of Paraguay, Salazar going at the same time to bring away the wretched Souldiers almost starv'd to Death, from the Port of Buenos Ayres. Whilst they Sail'd backwards and forwards, the barbarous Indians of Caracara, who hated the Spaniards, dissembling their Malice fraudulently desir'd Alvarado Governor of the Fort of Corpus Christi, to assist

Techo

Corpus Christi Fort built.

Terrible Famine at Buenos Ayres.

Woman capt by a lioness.

John Oyola goes away by Land to Peru.

Assumption Fort founded.

Two Instances of crafty Treachery in the Indians.

assist them against another barbarous People. Alvarado suspecting no design, readily sent them 50 Spaniards commanded by Alonso de Figueroa, who being come into a little Wood adjoining to the Town of Caracara, were enclosed on all sides; and every Man kill'd. In this heat the Barbarians hast away in great humbers to the Fort of Corpus Christi, then much weakened with the loss of that part of the Garrison, and made several Attempts to break in. It must certainly have been lost, had not God in his Providence order'd that Ramua, a Flemming, who had the Command as to Martial Affairs, should touch upon that Coast, and guessing how the Matter went, fir'd from two Ships, which oblig'd the Indians after losing many of their Men, to quit their Enterprize. The Indians that were taken said, that during the Fight they saw the likeness of a Man over the Fort of Corpus Christi, clad in White, dazling their Eyes with his Brightness, and threatening with a Sword, which made many of their Men drop down with the Fright. This hapning on S. Blas's Day, the Spaniards concluded it to be he that appear'd, and therefore the Planters of Paraguay reckon him as one of their Patrons. About the same time Dominick Irala sailing on the River Paragua, had like to have Perish'd by the Treachery of the Paraguans, for about 400 of them appearing on the Shoar opposite to him, and sending to desire there might be an Interview and Trade between them, upon Condition both Sides should come unarm'd; Irala accepting of the Condition, order'd his Men to lay aside their Weapons, whereupon the Barbarians suddenly attack'd them, and they must have perish'd had not the Spaniards run to their Arms, and stood upon their Guard. Whilst they fought a-shoar, the Ships were beset by other Indians, and the Fight continu'd doubtful for a considerable time, both by Land and Water, till the Cannon firing from the Ships sunk the small Vessels of the Natives, and gave the Victory to the Spaniards, both in the Ships and a-shoar. Of the Spaniards 40 were Wounded, and 2 Kill'd, besides Caravajal a brave Man, who dy'd within three Days of his Wounds. Of the Enemies many were Kill'd, with their Commander, the rest fled, where a vast Multitude expected them. Eight Months were now pass'd, since Irala had been waiting for Oiola's return, and he began to consider, whether he should yet stay longer, or go off to avoid the Danger that threatned from Famine, and from the Enemies. Whilst he was thus divided with himself, on a sudden he hear'd the Voice of an Indian on the opposite Shoar, who ask'd to be carry'd Aboard, which being done, the Tears flowing from his Eyes show'd he brought dismal News, and being order'd to declare the Cause of his Sorrow, fetching a deep Sigh, he said he had been an Eye Witness of the Death of Oiola. Irala inquiring after the Particulars, he deliver'd himself to this effect. John Oiola, said he, with whom I went of my own accord, leaving Paraguay, travers'd all that vast Tract of Land that lies between this Place and the Borders of Pernu, and gather'd a great Mass of Gold and Silver among the Samococians and Sivococians, who dwell near the Mountains of Pernu, which he brought back into Paraguay, but in his return the Paiaguans, the worst of Men, and counterfeiting a readiness to do any Service, at first freely offer'd him their assistance and Provisions, till they thought he and his Company might be cut off with safety. Having therefore observ'd what Guards the Spaniards kept at Night, the chief of the Nation appointed several to cut off every one, and in the dead of Night they all at once set upon and Butcher'd them. Oiola alone, I know not by what Accident, fled, and hid himself among the Reeds in a neighbouring Marsh, whence being dragg'd out, he pay'd for delaying his Death by the Cruelty of it, being inhumanly Murder'd in the Market-Place of the Town, amidst the Clamours of the bloody Paiaguans. Thus not one Spaniard escap'd. Being an Indian I sav'd my Life, for by that means I was deliver'd from their Hands, and escap'd to bring you the News of so great a Slaughter. These Misfortunes taught the Spaniards how little Confidence was to be repos'd in the Indians, for the most stupid People have a sort of Craft, which is the more dangerous, because least suspected. The Marsh to which Oiola fled for safety, retains his Name to this Day.

The Slaughter of Oiola
and his Men.

Dominick Irala, being left at his own disposal, after the Death of Oiola, sail'd down the River with his Company to the new Fort of the Assumption; and the Spaniards met in Council there from all Parts, having read the Emperor Charles the 5th's Commission, newly brought out of Spain, with some Recruits, and a few Priests, by Antony Cabrera, by which the Inhabitants of the River of Plate and Paraguay, were authoriz'd to choose their Governor, in case the former

Irala cho sen Governor.

mer dying had appointed none ; they all unanimously pitch'd upon Dominick Irala for their Governor. Nor was he unfit for the Employment ; for besides his Birth, he had many good Civil and Military Qualities to recommend him ; insomuch that he had the principal Honour of having brought under that new Province. Before the Assembly for the Election broke up, the new Governor put it to them, whether they did not think fit for a while to abandon the Fort of Buenos Ayres, then infested with Famine and Plague, for a while, and to build a new Town on the Shoar of the River Paraguay, where they then were, to contain all the Spaniards, that their Forces being united they might be the Stronger. Some of the Members were of Opinion, that not only the Fort of Buenos Ayres ought to be maintain'd, but several other Colonies to be sent out, that the Spanish Dominion might be spread Abroad ; saying, it was below them to confine so many brave Men in a Nook, when they had such a vast Country before them, and that they did not doubt, that was the Emperor's Design, in order to cut off all other Nations any Passage to Pern, whither they would easily make their way, unless the Shoars of those vast Rivers were beset with many Towns ; and that the small Number of the Spaniards was no Objection, they being enough to curb the Multitude of Barbarians. This was in general the Opinion of those, who aiming at Commands, desir'd there should be many Governments. But the wiser sort, preferring the publick Good before their own Advancement, alledg'd, that tho' Experience shew'd the Spaniards wanted neither for Courage nor Conduct, yet the Indians were not without Craft and Resolution, as was sufficiently evinced by the fresh dismal Examples of Ramon, Lara, Mendoza, Figueroa and Oiola, which ought to weigh more than the Opinions of a few, who would have the Men dispersed, only to make the more Governments. The Governor being a prudent Man, Discours'd concerning both Opinions, as if he had been inclinable to each. For he said, it were to be wish'd, they could hem in those vast Countries with many Garrisons, but that considering the present Posture of Affairs it did not seem so convenient. Nor would the Emperor think otherwise, if he were present, and therefore, that the building of many Towns was put off for a while, not absolutely rejected. That in erecting a new Commonwealth, the Head was to be secur'd before the other Members. Therefore he thought fit the Fort of Buenos Ayres should be abandon'd for a time, and a Town built on the Banks of the River Paraguay, where they then were ; which being once well settled, it would be no difficult Matter to send out Colonies, and secure them against the Attempts of the Natives and Foreigners. The Resolution of building a Town prevailing, James de Abreu was sent with three Ships to the Port of Buenos Ayres, to bring the Men thence, whose Number he found increas'd by the arrival of a Genoese Ship, which having in vain attempted to pass the Streight of Magellan, put in there by chance, the Men chooling rather to joyn themselves to the Colony on the River of Plate, than to hazard themselves again in an unknown Sea. Thus both Sailors and Landmen joyning with the Garrison of Buenos Ayres, sail'd up to Paraguay, whence it came that the Families of the Trochi, Aquinates, and Rezi, were propagated in this Part of America. Having gather'd all his People, Irala the Governor muster'd them, and, what is wonderful in so short a time, of so many Europeans, there were scarce 600 Men left, the rest being all miserably consum'd by War, Famine, Plague, and the Cruelty of the Indians. To shew us the great Mischiefs that attend the search after Wealth, which is the incentive of all Evil.

After the Muster, all Things began to proceed regularly, the Ground near the Fort was mark'd out for Building of Houses and Churches, and publick Structures erected, Magistrates appointed ; to be short, in the Year 1538. the City of the Assumption, afterwards the Metropolis of the Province, was begun to be built, in 25 Degrees of South Latitude, 240 Leagues from the Sea, and 40 from the Mouth of the River Paraguay ; it was as the time would permit well secur'd against any Attempts of the Enemy, and still continues to this Day. The River Paraguay, on whose Banks the new City was seated, is reckon'd among the chiefest of that new World. It runs 300 Leagues from its Source, receiving several other great Rivers, and carrying a Channel fit for great Ships, before it falls into the Parana, by which it is swallow'd up 200 Leagues from the Sea, and both together make the River of Plate. There is one Thing very remarkable in their Conjunction, which

A Genoese Ship at Buenos Ayres.

All Colonies abandon'd to build the Town of the Assumption.

The City of the Assumption built.

Paraguay describ'd, why so call'd, falls into Parana.

The HISTORY of

is, that tho' they run down the same Channel, yet for several Miles each preserves its own natural Colour, as if Parana scorn'd to mix its CrySTALLINE Waters with the troubled Stream of Paraguay; or as if Paraguay resented the loss of its Kingly Name; for Paraguay signifies the crown'd River, so call'd because the Natives on each side of it wear Coronets made of the Feathers of Birds, of wonderful fine Colours, which that Country abounds in. Nor is there more variety in the Feathers of the Birds, than in the Languages, and Manners of the People that live scatter'd in the Woods and Plains about Paraguay. Among them all the Guaranians were the most Rational, and aptest to be Civiliz'd, and easily submitted to the Spaniards, being first perswaded to be Friends, then to be hir'd as Servants, and lastly to own the Sovereignty of the Catholick King.

A Conspiracy of the Indians detected and punish'd.

About the end of Lent, in the Year, 1539. the Governor thought fit to make a Procession in Honour of the Passion of our Saviour, inviting the Inhabitants of all the Villages far and near to it, that they might begin to have some Notion or Opinion of our Religion. The Indians already provok'd by the unusual Service they perform'd, looking upon this otherwise than it was design'd, conspired together to destroy the Spaniards upon the Procession Day, and to take away all Jealousie of any Rebellion, brought no Arms but their Bows and Arrows, thinking the Spaniards, who were unarm'd, naked, and ready to Discipline themselves, would be easily slaughter'd by their Multitude. It is reported there were 8000 Conspirators in the Town, and the Spaniards suspecting no Treason, were taking their Disciplines or Scourges to lash themselves. The Images to be carry'd were brought out, when an Indian Woman, who knew of the Design, being mov'd to Compassion, privately went to her Master Salazer, and said to him, Master I pity you, because you are this Day design'd for Slaughter. Salazer was surpris'd at these Words of his Servant, and having by fair Means got the whole manner of the Contrivance from her, went away to the Governor and acquainted him with it. He having no leisure to consult, or take any other Method, gave out he had receiv'd Intelligence that the Japirans, lately revolted from the Spaniards, were in Arms, and almost at the Gates. The Alarm was given, and the Spaniards laying aside their Scourges, took up their Swords and Fire-Arms, then the Governor, as if he would have made use of the Conspirators against the common Enemy, sends for the Heads of them to his House, where they were all put into Fetters and parted; then having forced them to a Confession, hangs up the chief of them. The rest, as if they had been Thunder-struck, were quite dispirited, and so far from daring to attempt what they had design'd, that they humbly sued for Pardon, promising Fidelity for the future. The Governor having taken off the Heads of the Conspiracy, spared the Multitude, which so gain'd the Hearts of those Indians, that from that time, as the European Women said, they willingly gave their Sisters and Daughters to the Spaniards; on which Wives they got such a numerous Offspring, that some fresh Supplies coming out of Spain, in a few Years they were able to send out new Colonies, dividing that vast Province into several Territories, all of them subject to Paraguay.

In the mean while the Emperor Charles the 5th, having receiv'd the News of the Death of James Mendoza, and the ill Success of Affairs at the River of Plate, and being of a Spirit that ever struggled against Adversity, he resolv'd to send thither another Governor, with a supply of Planters. Several aspiring to the Command, Alvar Nunez Cabeza de Vaca carried it, on account of the great Merits of his Ancestors. For his Grand-father Peter de Vaca, had subdu'd the Canary-Islands for King Ferdinand, and govern'd them; in which Employment he behav'd himself with such Integrity, that having spent his own Estate, he was reduced to such Distress, that he gave his two Sons in Pawn to a Moor, for a Sum of Money to support his Dignity and maintain his Government, and the King afterwards redeem'd them. One of these was Father to this Alvaro we now speak of; who being in his Youth educated in his Fathers and Grand-fathers Virtues, going over into Florida under Pamphilo de Narvaez, to be the King's Treasurer there, was Shipwrack'd on the Coast of America, and fell into the Hands of the Indians; and Authors of the first Rank tell us, he was so Virtuous, that during his ten Years Captivity among the People of Mexico, he wrought several Miracles invoking the Blessed Trinity. This Man being appointed Governor, imbark'd

Alvar Nunez the new Governor arrives with Recruits.

Tebe.

A Delicious Island.

Discovery
up Paraguay.

Ipanensians
subdu'd.

The Governor
goes to discover
the way to

700 Men besides Women and Children upon five Ships, and sailing from Cadiz with a fair Wind, when he came to 28 Degrees of South Latitude, landed in that part of America with 500 Men, and sending the Women and Children with the rest by Sea, travell'd himself by Land, almost the same way Alexius Garcia had gone before, for 300 Leagues, discovering the Country, and in the Year, 1541. happily arriv'd at the City of the Assumption, and what is most remarkable, he lost not one Soul in all that Voyage and Journey by Sea and Land. As soon as he had taken Possession of his Command, he sent Dominick Irala, the late Governor, with 300 chosen Men, ordering him to run up the River Paraguay, as far as possibly he could towards the West, having agreed in Spain with Vaca de Castro, Governor of Peru, that they would use all their Endeavours to make that way easy and fit to be frequented, that Peru and Paraguay might supply and support one another. Dominick Irala pursuing his Orders, ran 250 Leagues up the River in his Vessels, and returning acquainted the Governor that he was of Opinion, Peru might be gone to that way. This Affair being laid aside for a while, the Governor sent Messengers to the Barbarous People living upon the Banks of the River Ipana, to desire them to restore the Son of Alexius Garcia. The Ipanensians having Murder'd all the Messengers but one, sent the Governor word again, that they would never have any Peace with him, but if he would revenge the Death of his Messengers, they were ready for War. The Governor provok'd by this Answer, appointed Alonso Riquelme his Nephew, to go with 300 Spaniards and 1000 Indian Confederates, to reduce those inhospitable Barbarians. A Battle was Fought, in which 4000 of the Ipanensians were slain, and 3000 taken, of the Spaniards 4, of the Confederate Indians 150 were kill'd. This Victory obtain'd on the Eve of the Feast of S. James the Apostle, Patron of Spain, induced other People to submit themselves to the Spaniards.

After the Expedition against the Ipanensians, the Governor resolving to open the way to Peru in Person, and at the same time observe what Places were proper to plant Colonies, and find out the Mines of rich Metals, took aboard his Ships 400 Spaniards attracted, by the Hopes of enriching themselves, and extending their Dominion. By the way he punish'd the Murderers of Oiola, and having sail'd 250 Leagues up the River, came to an Island wonderful for the delightfulness and fruitfulness of the Soil. Its length 30 Miles, the breadth, except at the Point, Nine. How much this Island charm'd the first Discoverers, appears by their calling it Paradise. It enjoys an equal temperature of Weather all the Year, and would incline to be Hot, did there not Dayly at a certain Hour rise a fine westerly Breeze, and were not the natural Heat of the Torrid Zone moderated by the moisture of the River, and many Springs gushing out and forming considerable Brooks. There is vast plenty of Fruit, growing wild, yet so various and excellently well tasted, that tho' wild, they are scarce inferior to the Product of the best Gardens in Europe. The Natives, call'd Aurecones, because their Ears are bor'd, observe no Seasons for Sowing; they use a Drink made of Honey; for Game there is such Plenty, they rather take it as it comes in their way than seek after it; and for Fish, there is greater Store than of wild Beasts. The People unacquainted with War, and likewise with Fraud, and loving to Strangers, far exceed all the others lately discover'd in goodness of Temper, insomuch that they seem to have deriv'd their Goodness and Affability from the very nature of the Place. The Fleet continu'd there a long time, which was of ill Consequence, for the old Soldiers, allur'd by the deliciousness of the Place, began to fall at variance with their Commander. What is it, said they, we seek, amidst so many Dangers, and in these Barbarous Countries? We have been now tofs'd about these ten Years, without seeing any thing but deep Morasses, uncouth Mountains, fierce Nations, new Diseases, and the Death of our Companions. Let us at last grow wise upon our own and other Men's Experience, and ceasing to seek after uncertainties, make use of what we have. Let young Men seek after Gold, let us rest our antient Bodies in this Place, where there is plenty of Servants and Provisions. This was chiefly urg'd by the old Soldiers. The young ones, tho' they had not parted with their Desire of Gold, yet were of Opinion, that a Colony ought to be settled in that Island, whence there would be an easier and safer Passage to Peru, than from the City of the Assumption. Hereupon they all together repair to the Governor, desiring he would grant their

Tcho.

Request, and order the Foundations of a Town to be laid in that Place. The Governor nothing shaken in his Resolution, spoke to them thus. What is the meaning, fellow Soldiers, that like Children you are taken with Apples, despising, or not understanding the value of Gold? How come you to be so insatuated, as to prefer a little Honey before the present Hope of Wealth? Did we come through the vast Ocean to seek Land, or Gold? Who would forsake the Pleasures of Spain, his dear Friends, and native Country, and run so many hazards, to come and eat his fill of Fish, Fruit, and Venison, among a Barbarous People? But these are your private Concerns. It is my Duty, who am Governor, and yours, who are Soldiers, to grow old in the Service of the Publick, having engag'd our Lives and Fortunes to serve our King and Country. I will not disband my self, nor do I think it becomes Spaniards so to do. We must seek for Gold. Having spoke these Words, he gave Order for all to be in a readines, and the Ships to make over to the Continent, where leaving a Guard with the Ships, he travell'd away by Land to the Northward. As they march'd along in good Order, many of those inland Nations came voluntarily to offer Peace and Provisions. Some small Dispute there was with a few of them. When they were come near to the Borders of Peru, the Fore-runners gave Advice, that a vast multitude of People was flocking out of a great Town, and seem'd to be about 5000 Men. The Governor had scarce drawn up his, before the Indians appear'd, who being frighted at the strange Presence of the Europeans, and Noise of the Muskets, betook themselves speedily to Flight, without engaging, leaving the Spaniards an empty Town of 8000 Houses. The Houses of this Town differ'd not from the rest of the Country, but in the middle of a great Market-Place or Square, there was a round Tower made of vast Pieces of Timber, the top of it being Pyramidal, and cover'd with Palm-tree Bark. Within it was a Serpent of an extraordinary Bulk, kept upon a Religious or rather Superstitious Account, and fed with the Bodies of Men slain in War. The Devil was reported to give Answers by this Monster, like the antient Oracles. It was 25 Foot long, and as thick about as an Ox. The Eyes were very little and sparkling, tho' in a very thick short Head. Two Rows of Teeth stuck out of the jaws like Sickles, the Tail was smooth, the rest of the Body cover'd with Scales, like large Platters. The Soldiers were astonish'd at the sight of the Monster, especially when being enrag'd with the Bullets, it made a hideous Roaring, and shook the Place about with beating its Tail. The Monster being Kill'd, Discord, which is worse than any Monster, arose between the Governor and the King's Receivers, because he would not consent that the 5th part of the Booty taken by the Soldiers should be paid into the Treasury, alledging that it was not customary, nor becoming the King to receive a part of such inconsiderable Things, gain'd with so much Peril. But they still insisting upon it, and requiring every fifth Deer, or Fish taken to be deliver'd them, for the King, tho' the Governor offer'd to make good out of his own Pay, what it should amount to, in case the Matter were decided for the King, yet the Contention ran so high, that, much against his Will, they were all forced to return to the City of the Assumption, without compassing what they went about. There at the instigation of the King's Receivers, who pretended Misgovernment, he was in a tumultuous manner Seis'd by about 200 of the Towns-men, who had conspir'd together, and sent Prisoner to Spain, with the chief of his Accusers. But the Emperor having heard both Parties, not only clear'd but gave him a Pension of 2000 Crowns a Year, and he liv'd with Honour to a good old Age in the Council at Sevil. His Accusers far'd otherwise, for being cast into Irons by the Emperor, and order'd to clear themselves, they dy'd miserably, before judgment was given, one of them for fear, and another mad; The supream Judge preventing the Emperor's Sentence.

The Emperor keeping Alvar Nunez in Spain, made John de Sanabria Governor of Paraguay, who dying before he set Sail; his Son was order'd to go in the same Post, with a Supply of 400 Spaniards; but he being kept in Spain by other Business, at last the Government was by the Emperor again confer'd on Dominick Irala. He being abroad upon Discovery, Francis Mendoza being Convicted of having us'd unlawful Means to make himself Governour, was Condemn'd to lose his Head; and confes'd on the Scaffold, that he had formerly Murder'd his Chaplain and Wife in Spain upon very groundless Jealousies, upon that very Day he was then himself to Suffer. Thus giving

The Governor sent Prisoner to Spain and clear'd there.

Irala Governor again.

A Judgment upon Murder.

A Monster.

Glory

Glory to God, he shew'd there is no avoiding divine Vengeance, by flying from one Country to another. Iralas's Successors were Francis Vergara and John Ortiz Sarate, who in the Year 1572. brought 500 Spaniards to Paraguay, and under whom the Race of the Spaniards being grown up, many Colonies were planted in the Province. I will describe the Situation of them, as far as concerns the Work I have in hand, without observing the order of their Foundation.

Description of Paraguay.

The Province of Paraguay was so call'd from the River of that Name; and before it was divided into two Governments, by taking Tucuman from it, contain'd all that Tract of Land, which lying between Brasil and Peru, runs beyond the Mouth of the River of Plate, a vast extent along the Atlantick Ocean. It is easie to guess at the largeness by the two Rivers Paraguay and Parana, running almost 300 Leagues each through mighty Provinces, and receiving into them many other Rivers, before they mix their Waters. But where they meet 200 Leagues from the Sea, they make the River of Plate, which falls into the Sea through a Mouth 80 Leagues in Breadth. The City of Buenos Ayres is built 50 Leagues above the Mouth of the River in the same Place, where we gave an account Peter Mendoza erected the Fort of the same Name. The City of S. Fe or S. Faith, built almost eighty Leagues higher near the same shoar, is very Commodious to those that Sail backwards and forwards. Much about the same distance is another small Spanish Town call'd Corrientes, built upon the Conflux of the Paraguay and Parana, but far inferior to the Dignity of those two Rivers. Then running up the Parana above 100 Leagues, after passing over a vast Precipice, is Guaيرانا a Province joyning to Brasil, formerly famous for two little Spanish Towns, call'd Villarica, and Guaيرا. Upon the upper part of the Paraguay, is Xeres, and another Villarica, small Towns, built only to joyn Paraguay on that side to the further Provinces. Lastly, the City of the Conception built upon the Marshes of the red River, which falls into Parana, was for a long time of great use to curb the Neighbouring fierce Nations. But as for the Inhabitants of the City of Assumption the Metropolis of the Province of Paraguay, and those of the other Towns here mention'd, I would have them look'd upon, as the Race of most noble Families, and Seed of the best Names in Spain, for perhaps no Province in America, had such a number of Persons of Birth and Quality to Plant in it. Yet the Nature of the Place has much lessen'd that Nobility, as affording no Wealth to support the Grandeur of those Families. It is plain, no part of that new World did so much deceive the expectation of the Europeans. For Paraguay is quite a Stranger to Gold, Silver, and Jewels, nor do the Natives dig any Iron, wherein that Country abounds, and as yet the Spaniards, except only the Inhabitants of Buenos Ayres, and Sa. Fe, by reason of their Trade with Peru, know any thing of Money, but live still by exchange of Commodities; after the manner of Antiquity. There are but few Places where they make Wine, or sow Corn, the prime Men seldom eating Bread, or drinking Wine. They make Bread and Drink of Indian Wheat. All other Dainties, they seek in Fishing, Hunting, and Shooting; tho' at present their Herds of black Cattle being increas'd, they are not sparing of them. For a long time Sugar and Cotton both produced in small quantities, were their chiefest Wealth, till the Leaves of certain Trees growing in Marshy Grounds, commonly call'd the Herb of Paraguay, began to be in Esteem. These Leaves they dry at the Fire, and reduce to Powder, then mixing it with warm Water, the Spaniards and Indians both Men and Women, drink of it several times aday, and Vomiting it up with all they have eaten, they find it creates an Appetite. Many things are reported concerning the Virtue of this Powder, or Herb, for they say, if you cannot Sleep, it will compose you to it; if you are lethargick it drives away Sleep; if you are Hungry, it satisfies; if your Meat does not digest, it causes an Appetite; it refreshes after weariness, and drives away Melancholy, and several Diseases. Those who once use themselves to it, cannot easily leave it, for they affirm their Strength fails them, when they want it, and cannot live long; and so great Slaves are they to this slender diet, that they will almost sell themselves rather than want wherewithal to purchase it. The wiser sort, tho' moderately us'd it Strengthens, and brings other advantages, will hardly ever make use of it; and if immoderately us'd, it causes Drunkenness, and breeds Distempers, as too much Wine does. Yet this Vice has not only over-run Paraguay, but Tucuman, Chile, and Peru, and is near coming over into Europe, this Herb

Techu.
Nobility of the Planters.

Poverty of the Country.

Herb of Paraguay.

Toho.

of Paraguay, being valu'd among the precious Commodities of America. At first the Spaniards in Paraguay were well pleas'd with their Cotton Garments, and Liqueur made of Honey; but afterwards Trade enhancing the value of this Herb, Covetousness and Luxury increas'd, to feed both which the Indians began to be more enslav'd to make this Powder. Labour made their numbers decrease, and that made the Spaniards poor again; to shew us that very often the same Methods we take to gather Wealth serve to impoverish us. Thus much of the Foundation of the Colonies of Paraguay, and the River of Plate.

Towns
and Conquerors of Chile.

The Kingdom of Chile joyning to Peru, and running along on the same Coast, lyes between the Pacifick, or South Sea, and a continual ridge of Mountains parallel to it, from 28 to almost 44 degrees of South latitude, being but 30 Leagues in breadth, and sometimes less. The first, I know of, that invaded this Kingdom, was James Almagro with 400 Spaniards, and the Son of the Inga of Peru that was Slain, follow'd by a croud of Indians. This was in the Year 1536, and the success did not answer his Expectation, for having scarce discover'd the Vale of Coquimbo, he return'd before he had done any thing, into Peru, to Govern one part whereof he was appointed by the Emperor Charles the Vth. Not long after Peter de Valdivia breaking into that Kingdom with some Spanish Forces, subdu'd all the whole Country, Planting several Colonies. He built the Metropolis, call'd Santiago, or S. James, afterwards beautify'd with stately Structures after the European Manner, 25 Leagues from the Sea, in 34 degrees of South latitude. The City call'd Imperial, he seated in almost 38 degrees of South latitude; which place Lipsius says was so call'd, because the Spaniards there found Eagles with two Heads carv'd in several Houses and over the Doors, as they are drawn in the Imperial Standards, whence he would infer, that this new World was perhaps formerly known to other Nations. But in my Opinion, this is a groundless Conjecture, for Charles the Vth's Eagles had been carry'd about in America, for several Years before the City Imperial was built, which the People of Chile Trading with those of Peru might have seen. Valdivia founded a City of his own Name in the latitude of 40 degrees, and in a Soil abounding in pure Gold, not far from the Sea, as also Villarica up the inland. Coquimbo or

Santiago.

Imperial.

Valdivia.

Serena in the Valley of Coquimbo, and Angol between Imperial and the Concepcion, another new Town, were also built by him. The Kingdom of Chile being thus secur'd by building of Colonies, the Natives of the Valleys of Arauco and Puren much imitated by being immoderately kept to dig Gold, conspir'd together under the Conduct of Caupolica, and made a miserable Slaughter of Peter Valdivia, and a great number of Spaniards, and the Spanish Historians relate a cruel Action of an Indian, who pour'd melted Gold into Valdivia's Mouth, bidding him glut himself with Gold, since he so much thirsted after it. Francis Villagra Successor to Valdivia, to revenge his Country-men, wag'd War successfully a long while, till his Forces were at last overthrown by the Indians. The Consequence of Villagra's misfortune, was the abandoning of some new Colonies, the Indians refusing to undergo such Labour as they were unus'd to. After Villagra D. Garcia Hurtado de Mendoza Son to the Marques de Cancete Vice-roy of Peru, went Governor into Chile, with considerable Spanish Forces, and several pieces of Cannon, which struck such a Terror into the Indians, that many of them submitted themselves. Those of Arauco and Tucapelan holding out, were overthrown in Battle, and Caupolica the Muderer of Valdivia kill'd. Mendoza restor'd the Cities Valdivia and Imperial destroy'd by the Indians. He built the Town of Oorno in about 41 degrees of latitude, and gave it to the chief of his Men he had brought out of Peru dividing the Country about it among them. He also built by his Lieutenant the City of his own Name, afterwards head of two other Towns, in the Province of Cuico, or Chicmto, which is a limb of the Kingdom of Chile beyond the Mountains. At length leaving the Government of the Kingdom to Roderick Quiroga Knight of the Order of Santiago, he return'd with great Honour to Peru, which he Govern'd some time after as Viceroy. Roderick Quiroga having govern'd the Kingdom with various Success in continual troubles, left it to the Management of Alphonso de Sotomayor in the Year 1579. He having built the Fort of S. Ildephonsus in the Vale of Arauco in some measure curb'd those People, us'd to rebel at Pleasure, insomuch that Martin Loiola his Successor receiv'd a Kingdom to govern, in some measure peaceable and renowned, for twelve Spanish Cities there were in it. What Actions the Spaniards perform'd in so many

Oorno
Mendoza
Cities.

ny Years War with a resolute Nation, does not belong to me to relate, it is enough for my purpose to mention those things that conduce to the understanding of the History I have in hand

Description of Chile.

its beauty.

This I must add further, that nothing can be more Pleasant and Delightful, or better furnish'd with all that is requisite for a luxurious Life than is the Kingdom of Chile. It abounds in all sorts of Fruits, and produces on its pleasant Hills banks of Rivers, charming Plains, and sides of Springs, most of those that are dispers'd through Europe and America. There is such plenty of Milk and Wool, as is possible for Sheep and Cows to afford in plentiful Pasture. It yields as much Honey, Wheat, and generous Wine, as serves for his own use. The Strawberries, and Apples growing about Wild are wonderful sweet. The wholsomeness and delicacy of the drinking Water, which runs through veins of Gold is in great Esteem among the frugal Spaniards, tho' I cannot deny but the Veins of Gold themselves are much more valuable to most of the Spaniards. No thunder is heard throughout the Year, Lightning, Stormy Winds, and such like Storms are not known. The whole Country produces no Poisonous Creature, or hurtful wild Beast. Only sudden Earthquakes, sometimes terrify Men lull'd asleep, with long intervals of undisturb'd Happiness, nor is there any thing that so much awes the Planters, whom the deliciousness of the Country and plenty of all things, for the most part rather inclines to Luxury than Piety. Throughout all America scarce any Gold is more valu'd, than that of Chile, indigging whereof, if the Spaniards had at first us'd Justice and Moderation, and submitted their avarice to the Laws of the Catholick Kings, they might have continu'd long Happy. But when the Kingdom of Chile was brought under by building Colonies in all parts, private Men in opposition to the Catholick King's Edicts, began to oppress the Natives; whence ensu'd continual Wars, and the Wars were follow'd by so notable a depopulating of the Country, that there scarce remains any thing of the Splendor of that most happy Kingdom, but the Name.

alth.

Tucuman lying in the middle, between Paraguay and Chile, on the E. partly Borders upon Paraguay, and partly upon the River of Plate on the W. it is bounded by the Mountains of Peru; on the S. it Borders on vast Plains running as far as the Straights of Magellan, and on the North is shut in by most fierce Nations. It is all within the temperate Zone, except some small part that runs out into the Torrid, and what is most wonderful that part is Subject to immoderate Cold, as being full of high Mountains, and therefore nobly confutes all the Aulic Notions of the torrid Zone. But Tucuman being about 300 Leagues in length, but varying much in breadth, and ending somewhat like a Cone, is generally speaking inhabited by four sorts of Peoples. The most Southern live in the Plains, and on craggy Mountains without any Habitation, feed upon what they kill, and carry about Mats to serve them instead of Houses or Tents. The Northern People live in the Marshes and feed upon Fish. Both Nations are equally fierce, the Southern are the tallest, the Northern the more Brutal. Bones of Giants have been found there above four times as tall as other Men, though now there are scarce any to be found that exceed eight Foot. Others Born to darkness, denying themselves the enjoyment of the Air, bury themselves all their Life time in Caves they make under Ground. The last sort live in small Villages about the Plains and Mountains, after a more plentiful and polite Manner, by reason of their nearness to, and Trade with Peru. They are almost all alike, given to Sloth and Idleness; they make little use of Brass and Silver, which are not wanting among them. I dare rather affirm they have no Gold, than that the Europeans have neglected to search after it. These People make use of Sheep to carry their burdens, which for shape may be compar'd to Camels, Their Beasts. Colts. They are of a great Strength, but their Wool much finer than ours, of which they make all sorts of Garments, much resembling Silk. There are also Lions, like those of Africk in shape, but not so large, or noble natur'd, for they are not bigger than a Mastif, scarce so strong, or fierce, have no Mains, and are terrible only for their Roaring. But the Tygers are fiercer than in any other Country. The chief Rivers in Tucuman are two, the one call'd Dulce, or Sweet, the other Salado or Salt, from the tast of their Waters. Both of them, tho' many others fall into them, are rather like Brooks than Rivers, and not capable of carrying little Boats but only at certain Places.

Next

Next to these is Carcaranial, and some others of no Note, which having run a short Course, as if they were ashamed of their own littleness, are either swallowed up by the Earth, or lost in Lakes. Some of these petrify Sticks and Bones, and cause great swellings under the Chins of Men and Beasts like large Bladders, which are dissolv'd by the Waters of other Rivers. The scarcity of Rivers is sufficiently made amends for, by the Multitude of Springs gushing from the Woods and Mountains, and the Lakes in the Plains, which was the cause, that most of Tucuman was formerly well Peopled. It is very well known, some hundred thousand of Natives were found by the first Spanish Planters in Provinces of no great extent. That part, which lay next to Peru was Subject to the Ingas. The rest divided into little Parties, were under several Casiques, less remarkable for their Manners, than for their variety of Languages. It was very rare that two or three of these small Parties combin'd to repell their Enemies, which was a great help to the Spaniards towards subduing them, for they scarce ever consulted the Publick good.

Of the first discoverers of Tucuman and founders of Cities.

The first I know of that discover'd Tucuman, was one Cesar a Souldier belonging to Sebastian-Gavot, who in the Year 1530, undertaking to find out the way from the River of Plate to Peru, attended by only three Companions, travelling with wonderful Courage and Success over Countries then unknown, and over vast Rocks, and Morasses, and traversing all Tucuman, the Borders of the Kingdom of Chile, and greatest part of Peru, at length arriv'd at the City of Cusco, at such time as Francis Pizarro having taken Atabalipa the Inga in the Marshes of Cacamarca, kept him in Chains, in order to put him to Death. In this Journey he travell'd 2000 Leagues. But because there are many fabulous accounts spread abroad, concerning the Countries discover'd by that Souldier, which tho' it be an Age since, infatuate the minds of some People, who believe that in South America there is a Country call'd of the Casars, from this Cesar, not yet found out, but abounding in Gold and Silver, and remarkable for multitudes of Men, and political Government, I shall forbear speaking any more of him; being resolv'd not to tread in an uncertain By-Path, whilst I have a known sure Road to go upon. Five Year after, whilst Peter Mendoza was building the Castle of Buenos Ayres, upon the Banks of the River of Plate, 2 other Souldiers with incredible boldness travelling through Tucuman to Peru, fill'd their Country-men with the hopes of a vast Empire. Therefore in the Year 1540 after James Almagra the Younger, was defeated at Chupas, the Viceroy Vaca de Castro, after pacifying Peru, giving new Provinces as a reward to those that had serv'd well, Tucuman fell to the lot of John Rojas, who crossing the Mountains of Peru with 200 Spaniards, and coming to a Battle with the Indians, was kill'd in the very Borders of his Province by a poyson'd Arrow. After his Death, his Men taking Francis Mendoza for their Commander, march'd thro' Tucuman to the River of Plate, and arriv'd where Gavot had built a Fort at the mouth of the River Carcaranial. Mendoza designing to go thence up the River to joyn the Inhabitants of the Town of Assumption, he was Stabb'd by his own Men, who mutiny'd refusing to follow him, and return'd the same way they came. In the Year 1549 after Pizarro was defeated, John Nunez Prada by the Authority of Peter Gasca the Vice-roy, seven of Mendoza's Souldiers or Murderers advising and accompanying him, he gather'd upon the hopes of mighty Success a Company of brave Spaniards and piercing into the Heart of Tucuman, built the Town of S. Michael, on the Banks of the River Escava, which was first Translated to the Valley Calchaquima, then to another place, and soon after destroy'd. He also erected Crosses in several places, ordering they should be a Sanctuary to all that fled to them, whence it follow'd that the Heathens set up Crosses in their Villages, and began to give them that respect, which afterwards became a Religious Worship. He invited the Indians to embrace the Catholick Faith, and submit themselves to the King of Spain, by the means of Gaspar Caravagal, and Alonso Trueno Merzenarian Friars. Lastly coming to a Battle with Francis Villagra, who was leading Recruits from Peru to Chile thro' Tucuman upon a dispute about Jurisdiction, he was taken by him, and was set at liberty, and restor'd to his Command upon condition, that Tucuman for the future should be Subject to the Governor of Chile, and the Governors to be appointed by him. Accordingly in the Year 1553, Francis de Aquino was sent out of Chile with 200 Spaniards by Peter Valdivia then Governor there, destroy-

Boldness of two Souldiers.

Origin of the Town of S. Michael.

First Preachers of Christianity.

Tucuman Subject to Chile.

destroying the Town of S. Michael built the City of Santiago or S. James, afterwards the Metropolis of Tucuman and a Bishops See, upon the Banks of the River Dulce, or the sweet River, and in 28 degrees of South latitude. Roderick de Palos succeeded Francis de Aguirre, and did nothing remarkable. But in the Year 1558, D. Garcia Hurtado de Mendoza, Son to the Marquess de Canete Vice-roy of Peru, and himself Governor of Chili, gave the Government of Tucuman to John Gomez Zarita, who building the City of London, curb'd the Calchaquines, and other barbarous Indians. He rebuilt the City of S. Michael, subdu'd the Diaguitas grown unruly, and the Indians opposite to Rio Roxo, or the red River, as also most of the Inhabitants of the Valleys of Famatina, Sanagasta, and Catamarca. By his Command Julian Sedenno built the Fort of Cordova, which in some Measure brought the Calchaquines under Obedience; then he scour'd the Banks of the River Salado, and others, spreading the Terror of the Spanish Name so that in the Territory of Santiago only there were 80000 Subject Indians muster'd. In short he was so successful against the Indians, that as a reward the Vice-roy of Peru gave him the absolute Command of Tucuman, delivering it from any subjection to the Kingdom of Chili. But about that time, viz. in the Year 1561, Gregory Castaneda sent by the Governor of Peru, with a Body of Men to Govern Tucuman, having routed Zarita sent him away to Peru, whence it follow'd that the Town of Cannete, and Castle of Cordova being Destroy'd, most of the Indians revolted. Which being known, the Vice-roy of Peru in the Year 1563 sent Francis de Aguirre, with a considerable force into Tucuman, by whose Valour and Conduct, many of the Indians were again brought under Subjection, the Town of Esteco built, and all things in some Measure re-establish'd, till he embroiling himself in several Affairs was call'd back into Peru. Afterwards several other Colonies were founded or restor'd throughout Tucuman by the succeeding Governor's coming with fresh Supplies out of Peru. Whereof, the rest being destroy'd either by War, or their ill Situation, there now remain standing, besides Santiago the Metropolis, Cordova, the City of S. Michael, Salta, or Lerma, Xuxui, or S. Salvador, Rioja, Esteco, or Nuestra Señora de Talavera, London, and a few small Garrisons, to which the People of several Nations divided into Provinces are Subject, being for the most part brought under the Dominion of the Catholics by the Valour and Conduct of the Spaniards, not without the Expence of Blood.

Vol. IV.

When I come to speak of particular Places, or of the propagating of the Christian Faith in them by the Society of Jesús, I shall then as they occur give an account by what sorts of People, that vast Tract of Land here spoken of is inhabited; of their Form, Religion, Manners, and Language, of the Soil, Climate, and Irrational Creatures, as also of Rarities, and Secrets in Nature. But it will not be to my purpose to inquire, whether that part of America was known to the Antients. Cicero in his Dream, dividing the Globe of the Earth into two Habitable parts, Places one in the N. and the other in the S. which he calls ἀντιζόνα from the opposite Pole. Pomponius Mela calls the part of the Earth opposite to the old World ἀντιχώρα, and the Inhabitants of it Antichthones. Besides, the Words of Aritus, the Orator in Seneca, are well known, who affirms there are fruitful Lands in the Ocean, and another World and other Shores beyond the Ocean. Clement Disciple to S. Peter speaks of the Ocean, and Worlds beyond it; whence some will infer that this part of the World had been formerly heard of, and seen. But many inquire whence that new World was Peopled, with more curiosity than certainty. Lipsius following Aristotle's Conjectures, thinks the Africans Sail'd thither. Ferdinand Oviedo will have the Islands Hesperides so call'd of Hesperus King of Spain, and that they and the Continent of America were peopled by Spaniards. Others affirm the Americans are the Race of the Jews carry'd into Captivity by Salmanazar and placed in Countries till then not Inhabited, after a Progress of 18 Months. Many believe they were carry'd thither by Storm, being Chinese sailing on the Pacifick or South Sea, or other more Northern People. I will not pretend to decide the Controversy; but allowing the possibility of each Opinion, own I am a Stranger to the certainty of the Fact. Lipsius, Acosta, Pineda, Solorzano, and other learned Men, may be seen, who after searching all the Records of Antiquity, shew much erudition, but nothing of certainty concerning the antient Affairs of America. I know the Memory of a Deluge is preserv'd among these People; but whether it is to be understood of the universal

Teche.

Concerning the Antiquity of the aforementioned Provinces.

T t t t

Flood,

Techn. Flood, or of the Inundation of some particular Provinces, as of that of Ogyges in Achaia or Deucalion's in Thessaly, I leave to others to decide. I therefore leave it to others to discourse upon Plato's Atlantis, the reasons of the Deluge, Solomon's Ophir, the transmigration of Animals, and much more to that purpose; for I am willing to lay aside Conjectures and Fables, having enough of Truth to treat of.

The Care
the Kings of Spain have had
of the Indians.

Peru and the Southern Provinces of America seem to me like another Ophir, to the Emperor Charles V. who like David fought the Battles of our Lord, and his Son King Philip II. following the example of Solomon, built the noble Temple of S. Lawrence, call'd the Escorial. But to come to my Business, the Emperor Charles V. the same Year the Metropolis of Paraguay was built, sent over some Priests, and in the Year 1553 the first Bishop of Paraguay, furnishing him nobly with all Things for the Service of the Church. Afterwards Bishopricks were erected, Collegiate Churches founded, and Seminaries built in the Kingdom of Chili, in Tucuman and the Port of Buenos Ayres, by the Authority of the Chatholick Kings, and at their Expence. Besides, throughout these vast Dominions, Their Generosity has maintain'd Priests, founded religious Houses, and the Viceroy, Governors of Provinces and Towns, and the Courts and Councils have always been strictly charg'd, that forbearing to oppress the Indians, they should make the Conversion of those People their principal Study. In this particular the Society of Jesus has spread the light of the Gospel through Chili, Tucuman and Paraguay, whereof I am to give an Account.

The Society
call'd
into Tucuman.

At first the Condition of Religion was miserable, there being only a few Priests, ignorant of the Indian Tongues, and consequently the Bishops had but little help. Several Spanish Towns having no Body to administer the Sacraments, liv'd after a very dissolute manner: For tho' the Spaniards are naturally frugal, yet plenty and abundance of Servants and Women, had so debauch'd them, that they lamented their own Misery, seeing many Live and Dye without any spiritual Assistance, besides the infinite numbers of Indians who were destitute of all Instruction. At length the Reverend F. Francis Victoria, Bishop of Tucuman of the Order of S. Dominick, a Man renowned for Piety of Life and Conversation, thought of calling in the Jesuits, and in order to it writ to F. Joseph Archieta Provincial of them in Brasil, and to F. John Atienza Provincial of Peru, desiring they would send some Priests to his Assistance.

In compliance with his just Request the Provincial of Peru sent F. Francis Angulo and Alonso Barsena Priests, and John de Villagas a Lay Brother in the Year 1586. These setting out from Potosi, and passing the Mountains that part Peru from Tucuman, were receiv'd at Salta a Spanish Town, built three Years before, with incredible Joy; for till then there was no Priest in that Town. The City Esseco is 50 Leagues from Salta, whither they resorted to supply the want there was of Priests. They both knew the Language of Quichoa, and Barsena had learnt somewhat of that of Tonocote, by which means they began to instruct the Indians, till having spent a Month in this last Place, they were call'd away by the Bishop of Tucuman to Santiago, the Capital of the Province.

Jesuits at Salta and Esseco.

The Fathers we received out of the Town, and conducted to it by the Governor and all the People with the greatest Pomp, and came at so good a time into the Province of Tucuman, that there were then in it besides the Bishop, only five Priests and a few religious Men, who labour'd as much as in them lay, but few of them could speak the Indian Language. The Town of Santiago consisted of 500 Spanish Families, but in the Territory about it there had been 80000 Bow-Men muster'd besides Women and Children, whereof tho' many were destroy'd by the common calamities of the Indies, a vast multitude still remain'd without any to instruct them till the Fathers came. To work the more powerfully on the Natives, they apply'd themselves in the first place to reform the Lives of the Spaniards, wherein they had extraordinary success, and then applying themselves to the Heathens, instructed some Converts chosen out from the Multitude, whom they employ'd to help teach the others, who came in mighty Crouds to be Catechis'd. How many thousands were Baptiz'd is not known, for no account was kept, but great numbers resorted to Confession, and confin'd themselves to one Wife contrary to their former Custom.

They repair to Santiago.

F. Alonso Barsena was sent by the Bishop with the Lay-Brother, to the City of Esseco, to preach to the Infidels dispers'd in 50 Villages belonging to the Territory of that Town, where they spent sions at Esseco.

Conver-

spent nine Months undergoing vast Labours and Toils, during which time 6600 Indians were Baptiz'd and Instructed, and many thousands lawfully Marry'd, which done by order of the Bishop, they return'd to Santiago.

At Cordova.

Immediately both the Fathers without any respite, were sent to the Territory of Cordova, 100 Leagues distant from Santiago, built sixteen Years before. It was hard to instruct the Indians there, because of the great variety of Languages, yet 500 of those in the Town were Baptiz'd, and three hundred without in the space of a Month, besides 400 Converts brought to lawful Wedlock. This done they return'd to meet others of the Society that were coming from Brasil.

The Provincial of Brasil having receiv'd the Bishop of Tucuman's Letter, sent five Fathers in the Year 1587, who after many Dangers escap'd, arriv'd safe at Cordova, where two of them dissatisfy'd that they had been fetch'd out of a Portuguese Province, to a place where the Spanish Fathers of Peru were before, return'd back to Brasil, the other three stay'd with the Spaniards, where they altogether labour'd in the Conversion of Souls incessantly, Baptizing many thousands, and Marrying no less number. But Father Barsena who was to teach the Brasil Fathers the Language, falling Sick, they went away to the City of the Assumption the Capital of Paraguay, where having labour'd with the same success as they had before in Tucuman, two of them travell'd through into the Province of Guaira, Baptizing and Instructing many thousands. It is here to be observ'd speaking of these several Parts, that about Cordova the Indians live in Caves they dig under Ground, no Roof appearing above it, for they are altogether in the Earth, and distant from one another as Rabbits in a Warren.

Thirty Leagues from the Town of Villarica in the Province of Guaira, are a People call'd Ibirabas, being not above 1000 Men, who liv'd dispers'd upon Hunting, a fierce Nation and hard to be Reduced by Force.

Thus far the Translation has follow'd the Original pretty close, but must here, as is observ'd in the Preface, omit all things which only relate to the Jesuits, and therefore only a few words shall be added out of the first Book which have something Historical. Those, these and the last mention'd seem to come in some disorder. John Ramirez de Velasco Governor of Tucuman, went out with Span- nish and Indian Forces to reduce the Salchaquines who had revolted. They being a fierce and warlike People, had possess'd themselves of the Tops and Clefts of the Mountains, lying there ready to roul down vast Stones upon the Spaniards as they march'd up the narrow Paths to them. Father Barsena ordering the Spaniards to halt, durst go up alone, and by the force of his Eloquence, so far prevail'd with those obstinate People, that they submitted themselves to the Spaniards. In the Year 1590. two other Fathers came out of Peru, one of which with another of those that had been in Tucuman before, went to Preach upon the Rio Roxo, or red River. This River has its Springs in the Mountains of Peru, and being come down into the Plain, swells with the Winter Rains, overflows every Year the Country for eight Leagues about, except where it finds Hillocks, which it converts into Islands, all which multitude of Waters, gently flow into the River of Plate, a little below the great River Paraguay. Not far from it on the Banks of a Lake, 30 Leagues from the Rivers mouth, the Spaniards built the Town of the Conception, to the end an infinite multitude of Indians might by degrees be Civiliz'd. This City is 90 Leagues from Santiago the Metropolis of Tucuman, all over a vast Plain without any Water, but what it receives from the Clouds. The People about this City the Spaniards call Frontones, because they make the foreparts of their Heads bald to have high Foreheads. At their Girdle hangs a Club, and Quiver or bunch of Arrows. They carry a Staff set with the Jaw-bones of Fishes, with their Teeth like Saws, their Bodies naked, and painted to look more terrible. Being full of Factions they are continually at War among themselves, about the Limits of their Lands. They fix the Bodies of the Enemies they kill, in Rows to the Trunks of Trees for a Terror, that the Borderers may not dare to go over to Hunt in their Liberties. Their Houses being made of Mats, are easily remov'd at pleasure. They do not apply themselves to Tillage, but live upon what they shoot and Fish, and have one good quality, which is, that they keep to one Woman. Almost every Faction has a several Language, so that there are eight several Tongues spoke on both sides of the Red River.

The Nation of the Matarayians is much more docible than any of its Neighbours. Alonso de Vera, Founder and Governor

Feche
Fierce Indian submit.

Red River

Conception City.

Frontones their Manners, &c.

Teche.

of the Town of the Concepcion, took them from living dispers'd after their barbarous Manner, and brought them together into a Town, causing many of to be baptiz'd, but still they con- very ignorant of the Principles of Christianity. The Place of their Habitation was very wretched, for they had no Water to drink, but what was muddy and stunk, being only the Rain that fell gather'd in Ditches cut for that purpose. All their Food was Indian Wheat and Pompions. Yet here the Fathers Preach'd and Taught with such Success, that in the whole Town there was not one Heathen left, nor any but liv'd as a Christian to the best of his Knowledge and Capacity. In the Year 1593 the Jesuits began to preach in Chili; they that desire may see their Actions in our Author.

Revolt of Chili.

Having given an account in numb. 17. of the Towns built in Chili by the Spaniards, and a description of that Country in number 18, let us now look back to see many of those Colonies destroy'd, and the Spaniards almost expell'd that Country. They had, as has been said, built twelve Towns at convenient distances, which seem'd to have secur'd the Possession of that Kingdom, where they found great quantities of the purest Gold, and abusing the Plenty and Deliciousness of the Country, liv'd in Debauchery and Leudness. Vice produceth Sloath and Security, which gave occasion to the Indians to revolt, and in a great measure to compass their Design of extirpating the Spaniards. This hapned about the Year 1598. when Martin de Loiola being Governor of the Kingdom, lying abroad in the Fields in Tents within no Works, and attended by a very small Guard, was set upon by the barbarous Chilenians, and kill'd; which was no sooner done, but they drew all the rest of the Country to join with them, and exercise all manner of Cruelties upon their Enemies. The Indians might easily have been quell'd at first, had any good advice been taken, but what could be expected where there was no head? Besides, the suddenness of the Misfortune took away all time to consult, or prepare for War, the Indians every where falling upon and slaughtering them in confusion. The mischief began by the Spanish Squidiers abandoning their Town of Millapoa in a consternation, next follow'd Angol and Chilla, two neighbouring Towns, first plunder'd by the Indians and then burnt; only 150 Spaniards with the Women and Children saved

The Governor
kill'd.

Several Spanish Towns destroy'd.

themselves from the Fire and Slaughter in a Work cast up in hast, where they with true Spanish Bravery, severaltimes repuls'd 8000 Natives that besieg'd them, till at length they got off with safety. The City Imperial was a whole Year besieg'd, so that the Inhabitants having spent all their Provisions, and being drove to eat unwholsom Food not fit to be nam'd, it bred Infections among them, which made such havock, that many more dy'd of Sickness than by the Enemies Weapons. In this distress they patch'd up a Boat, in which they sent Messengers to demand Succours. Accordingly the Governor came from the City of the Concepcion, with Forces to rescue the Inhabitants and carry them away in safety. But the City was left to be destroy'd by the Natives, who fail'd not to exercise their Fury on the Houses, being disappointed of the People. The Town of Valdivia far'd not so well, for it perish'd with all its Inhabitants. When the Indians had glutted their Rage with Slaughter, they sav'd 400 Women and Maids belonging to the Town, to debauch and make Slaves of; This Turn of Fortune making them Servants to those very People they had before kept under. The Gold of Valdivia is counted the best in America, and there the Enemies most exerted their Cruelty; that, where Avarice had most predominated in seeking after Gold, there the Judgment might fall the heavier. The Town of Osono follow'd the same fate, but the Inhabitants sav'd their Lives in a Work they had thrown up in hast, and some Forces coming to their Relief, were carry'd off in safety. It was here remarkable, that a Nun of the Order of the poor Clares, being taken by an Indian who would have deslour'd her, she us'd such powerful Arguments to defend her Virginity, that he kept her a whole Year in his House among his other Women, with the greatest Respect imaginable, till he found an opportunity to convey her to the next Spanish Garrison, and some time after fled himself to the Spaniards, among whom he became a Christian, living many Years in a very pious manner. The Revolt ran through the whole Kingdom; the Enemy after destroying the Spanish Towns, being absolute Masters for above an hundred Leagues. The Metropolis or City of Santiago was not out of Danger, but had certainly fallen under the prevailing Rage of the Indians, but that the Magistrates being inform'd of the Conspiracy, prevented the execution cution among them, by the Punishment of the Conspirators. Thus a bloody War broke out between the two Nations, which might have been more fatal to the Spaniards, had not the Catholick King soon after sent over Alonso Ribera famous for his good service in the Low Countries, who entering upon the Government, erected many Forts after the manner of Flanders in the Enemies Territories, whence making Excursions, he rescu'd several Spaniards who defended themselves in small Works, and baffled the designs of the Enemy.

Cordova
City built

In the Year 1573. Jerome Cabrera, a Gentleman of Cordova in Spain, founded the City of Cordova in a Plain, at the foot of vast Mountains, 120 Leagues from the Port of Buenos Ayres. It does not Rain there in Winter, but in Summer there are thick Mists and Rains enough to make the Land in some measure Fruitful. When the City was first built, there were reckned to be 60000 Archers in its Territory, of which number only 8000 continu'd in Subjection to the Spaniards. In the Year 1600. the rest were either dead, or being fond of their Liberty and ancient Way of Living, had revolted from the Spaniards. In this Place the Jesuits were at first coldly receiv'd, but soon after all the Town vy'd to serve and honour them, building them a Church, and allowing them a Monastery, which was afterwards the Head of the Province. Hence the Fathers set out to preach to the People call'd Diaguistas, where whole Towns were Converted without any difficulty, only one considerable Place objecting, That they would not cut off their long Hair, as usually Converts did, nor take off the Ornament of Feathers they wore on their Heads, when they went into the Church; but being inform'd their Hair was no obstruction, provided they forbore superstitious Practices, they all readily submitted themselves. Other Places at the same time freely offer'd to part with their long Hair, which was held in such account among them, sending to invite the Fathers to come to them, going out to meet them, and clearing the Roads they were to come for three Leagues in length. All the Heathens were baptiz'd in these Towns, and inquiry being made after their antient Worship, it appear'd that the whole Nation ador'd the Sun, and in Honour of him sprinkled bunches of Feathers stuck up in their Houses with the Blood of Beasts. They believ'd the Souls of their Casiques Conversion and Superstition of the Diaguistas.

when they were dead became Planets, and those of the common sort and Beasts, lesser Stars. A Temple they had dedicated to the Sun, which these People at the command of the Fathers, destroy'd, burning all that was in it, and Crosses were erected wheresoever such Temples had stood. In the midst of this success the deputy Governor of Tucuman's Son, who was with the Fathers, presuming upon their Protection, order'd a number of Servants to be gather'd out of the Valley, which so exasperated that People, believing that Religion only a Cloak to enslave them, that the Fathers were in great danger of being Murder'd, and forced to hast away whilst they had time to save their Lives.

Tcho.

Let us again look back into the kingdom of Chili, where we left Alonso Ribera pacifying that Country, by building many Forts to curb the Natives; and the Success would doubtless have answer'd Expectation, had he not been unseasonably put out of the Government, when he had gain'd more Reputation for his military Exploits, than any Governor before him. But as he rais'd the Reputation of the Spaniards among the Chilennians, by his Courage and Conduct, so he lost himself by confiding too much in his own Merits. For notwithstanding Governors by the Laws of Spain, are forbid marrying Wives of those Provinces they have in charge, lest Affinity should make them partial and corrupt; yet Alonso Ribera presum'd to marry a noble Woman in Chili. Whereupon the King of Spain, (tho' he was very Serviceable) took away his Government, lest the Example might be of ill Consequence, but so moderated his Punishment, that by the next Letters he was appointed Governor of Tucuman, a Post little inferior to that of Chili. After him Alonso Garcia Ramon obtain'd the Government, who when he set out from Lima, took F. Luis Valdivia along with him, in hopes by his means to pacifie the kingdom of Chili. After escaping Fire and Tempest at Sea, they at length arriv'd at the Port of the Conception, the Residence of the Governors of Chili, small for number of Buildings and Inhabitants, and built along the Shore of the Pacifick or South Sea. Its Territory towards the Metropolis of the Kingdom, extends it self largely, and grows streight on that side towards the revolted Indians, that Spain Ribera and other Governors had secur'd by erecting Forts at due distances, the Garrisons whereof with much difficulty kept the Indians under. As soon as the new Go-

New Governor in Chili.

Conception City.

ernor

vernor arriv'd, he caus'd the Kings Proclamation for a general Pardon to be publish'd, inviting all that were in Rebellion to return to their Duty. That done he set out to visit the Forts and Villages of Indians that continu'd in Subjection to the Spaniards, either of their own free Will or by Force, yet the Minds of them all were so alienated, that they might well be accounted Enemies, and therefore tho' they had the Name of Friends, no Man went among them but what carry'd a Guard of Souldiers, for there is little confidence to be repos'd in them whom only Fear binds to you. The Governor was attended by the King's Troops; but Luis Valdivia was a better Security than many arm'd Men, because the Indians were inform'd and found by Experience, that Valdivia had always protect'd them from the Insolencies of the Souldiers, and being made Slaves. For this reason wheresoever he went, the prime Men of the Country flock'd about him, calling him their Father, Protector, and only safety of their Bodies and Souls; and Valdivia laying hold of that favourable opportunity, gain'd all he could to Christianity, and the subjection of the Catholick King. Twenty Caciques were met in the Fort, they call'd Levo; where hearing Valdivia discourse of the Immortality of the Soul, and other mysteries of Faith, they all desired to become Christians. All the Children were baptiz'd, the Men put off till Tryal was made of the Truth of their Call. About 40 Caciques of the Tucapelan Faction liv'd about Paica a Spanish Fort, of whom it was hard to judge whether they ought to be counted Friends or Enemies, nothing being friendly in them but the Name. The Governor thinking open Enemies less dangerous than false Friends, threatned them with War; but Valdivia interpos'd, and prevail'd with the Tucapelans to enter sincerely into Unity with the Spaniards. War breaking out in other Parts, he ventur'd with five Souldiers among those People, and was honourably receiv'd by the Caciques, where beginning to discourse of the end of good and bad Men, one of the Indians interrupted him, asking, Who taught him that Doctrine? Valdivia answering, It was deliver'd by the Son of God? Then said the Heathen, Your God had a Wife, if he begot a Son? This led him to make such a discourse on the Mysteries of the blessed Trinity and Incarnation, that the Infidels were much taken and surpriz'd. After this they ask'd, How Drunkenness could be a Sin,

Tesho.
General
pardon.

A Fight undertakes to make Peace.

since Sleep was innocent, and that provok'd Man to Sleep? Which being answer'd by telling them, That Drunkenness depriv'd Man of his Reason, and therefore was more prejudicial than if it took off a Limb? They next put the Question, Why it was forbid to have many Wives? To which Valdivia answer'd by asking, Why Women were not allow'd many Husbands? Then they alledging Custom against the one and for the other; he shew'd them that Custom neither made any thing lawful nor unlawful, and with many other Reasons and Arguments satisfy'd their Curiosity. Thus they spent the greatest part of the Night in discourse, till about break of Day 20 Caciques came from the remoter Villages, whom Valdivia embracing and discoursing upon the King's Pardon and former Kindnesses pass'd between them, very much inclin'd to his Party. Among the last Comers, one Avila a Cacique had great Authority, who understanding that Valdivia affirm'd the God of the Christians was the only Creator of all Things, in a great Rage cry'd out, He would never allow Pillan the God of the Chilenians, to be deny'd the Power of Creating. Valdivia inquiring concerning this imaginary Deity. Avila told him, That his God did, after Death, translate the chief Men of the Nation, and Souldiers of known Bravery, to Places where there was Dancing and Drinking, there to live happy for ever. That the Blood of noble Men slain in Battle, was placed about the Sun, and chang'd into red Clouds, which sometimes adorn the rising Sun; but that the common sort and poor People received no Reward from their God. What an unjust God is yours, said Valdivia, to be so kind to wicked Men, and take so little notice of the Innocent; for it is plain that many of your Nobles and brave Souldiers are guilty of much greater Crimes than the common sort. As they were thus discoursing, some of the Spaniards told him, They suspected Treachery design'd against them, whereupon he withdrew, and slipt away to the next Spanish Garrison. This jealousy prov'd groundless, for those same Caciques came to Valdivia, assuring him, The whole Nation was much concern'd that he should suspect them, and promising, if he would go with them to the inland Parts of the Kingdom, they would be Mediators of Peace, and Guard him. Valdivia accepted of their offer, and Travelling over uncoth Mountains, Bogs and other inaccessible Places, at last came to the Place where the Enemies Leaders were assembled to confer together. There the

*Pillan the Chilenian
God*

*Indians
conclud*

King

King of Spain's Pardon, the manner of settling a lasting Peace with the Spaniards, the propagating of Christianity, and other Points were so handled, that it plainly appear'd those People would easily embrace the Christian Religion, and submit to the King, provided their Grievances were redress'd. Three Commanders of the Indians, not far from the Place where this Conference was held, engag'd to submit to the Spaniards, and several other Indians being reconcil'd, Valdivia return'd to his People.

A notable Accident.

At this time there hapned an Accident worth relating. After the Southern Towns of the Kingdom of Chili were destroy'd, as has been mention'd, several Spanish Families remain'd in Slavery among the Indians, of which Number was one Heredia, a Man of some Account, happy in this that he had with him his Wife Marcella Grajal a worthy Woman, and two Sons grown up to Man's Estate, and his Master was not unkind, as requiring nothing of them but a certain quantity of their made Wine, which they carefully perform'd, for fear of being put upon worse Labour. It hapned that Heredia falling out with his Master, as they were drinking, had very ill Language given him, which he not being able to endure, kill'd his Master upon the Spot. This done he fled, and tho' pursu'd, made his Escape; whercat the Indians were so inrag'd, that they fell upon his eldest Son, and without giving Ear to the Mother's Prayers, or minding her Tears, burnt him alive. The Mother, with her other Son, terrify'd at this Sight, fled as soon as it was Evening, and to avoid being taken, travell'd by Night, retiring to Caves in the Day, and feeding on such Herbs as they found by the way. After three Days they came into a Wood, near a little Village, almost spent, and expecting to perish by Hunger, or at the Hands of the Indians. A Woman of the Country going out for Wood, found them both, and mov'd by Marcella's Tears, promis'd to assist them, provided they were not discover'd by the other Women that came on the same Account. To prevent such discovery she left them hid in a Ditch cover'd with Leaves, and returning to bring them some Meat, at last fled with them her self, through By-ways, and after three Days more, they all arriv'd safe at Arauco, a considerable Garrison of the Spaniards, where the Indian Woman embraced Christianity, and was charitably provided for. F. Valdivia having labour'd incessantly to restore Peace, and finding that the enslaving of the Indians was the Cause of all the Calamities that beset the Country, and that he was not able to remedy that Disorder, he apply'd himself to the Viceroy of Pern, who finding his Authority not sufficient to redress the Evil, sent him into Spain, to the King to procure the Abolition of that Abuse.

The settling of the Jesuits.

We now come unto the 3d Book of our Author, which he begins with the first entring of the Jesuits into the Kingdom of Pern 1568, who prosper'd so well that about the end of the fifteenth Century, that Province was grown too great to be manag'd by one Provincial. Wherefore it was resolv'd to divide it, and in order to it F. James Torres was sent to Rome to the General, for him to settle that Affair, who contrary to what they had contriv'd and delign'd in America, united the Provinces of Tucuman, Paraguay and Chili, into one Province independent of Pern, and committed the Care of it to the said F. James Torres as Provincial, in the Year 1607. This Father in his Journey through Spain, waiting upon the Duke of Lerma, and being with him at a Window, the Duke told him that but a few Days before it hapned they threw a Whelp, or young Puppy out of that Window into the Yard below, which was beset with Cages, where Lions were kept and let out to walk and feed. As soon as the Puppy fell it fawn'd upon and wagg'd its Tail to one of the fiercest Lions, which was taken with it, and carry'd it to his Den, Cherishing, Feeding and Protecting it from the other Lions, as long as it kept close to the said Lion, as if it had been his own Whelp, till some time after the Puppy venturing out into the Yard alone, was torn in Pieces by the other Lions, which as soon as he that had protected it perceiv'd, he leap'd out of his Den, and in Revenge tore to Pieces those that had kill'd the Whelp. Then one Lion coming out after another, they never gave over Fighting till they were all destroy'd. This remarkable Passage I thought worth inserting, tho' it may seem from our present purpose. F. James Torres being come into Pern, had 15 Companions, most of them Men of Note, assigned him for the erecting of his new Province, twelve of which were Priests, and had all their Charges thither assign'd at the expence of his Catholic Majesty, one half half travelling all the way by Land, the rest going by Sea into Chili. The new Provincial and his Company were every where receiv'd with great Honour and Affection, every Town inviting them to continue and settle there. He visited all the Province of Tucuman, and from the City of Cordova set out to hold a Chapter or Congregation at Santiago, the Metropolis of Chili. The way thither is cross a Plain an hundred Leagues in Breadth, after which follow the Mountains, which rising first in the Isthmus of Panama, divide the Kingdoms of New-Granada and Quito, and running along the length of Peru and Chili, to the Streights of Magellan, like the Apennine Mountains, divide them from the rest of America, and are so high, that the very Birds with difficulty fly over them. Some Passes there are to go out of Tucuman and Paraguay to Peru, not immoderately high, and easy enough; but out of Tucuman into Chili, there is only one way, and that never passable but in Summer, being impassable the rest of the Year, because of the intolerable Cold, deep Snows, and rapid Streams of Water. Tapu, the Hannibal of that new World, and second of the Ingas, leading an Army out of Peru into Chili, is said to have found out or made this way; which is not a little Dangerous at the usual Season of Travelling through it, being only a very narrow Path shut in on the one side by craggy Rocks, and bounded on the other by most frightful Precipices, and it often happens that Beasts slipping fall down with their Riders an unmeasurable Depth. Being come to the top of these Mountains, which is above the Clouds, tho' below all be burnt up with the immoderate Heat of the Sun, yet there the Cold is so intense, and the Air so sharp, that very often it parches the Skin off those Parts which are naked. And very often the continual shining of the Snow, which here has a sharper Reflection than in other Places, blinds People for the present, or causes a violent smarting in the Eyes. There are also abundance of Ignis Fatui or Will i'th Wisps, playing about, so that they seem to fall upon Travellers, and be hid in their Cloaths, which terrifies those that are unacquainted with them. The Natives attribute these Fires to the Devils, endeavouring by that means to frighten Travellers; but others better vers'd in Philosophical Speculations, suppose them to be the Matter of Thunder and Lightning,

A vast ridge of Mountains.

Ignis Fatui

which being every where hemm'd in with Cold, and as it were Fetter'd, for fear of its Enemy, naturally flies to the Bodies of Animals, in which is something of their natural Quality. Whatsoever it is, several Persons faint away with it; but what is most to be admir'd, Deer, Goats, Hares, and such like Creatures run upon the Tops of these Mountains cover'd with Snow, as safe, as if they were in the pleasantest Fields; and to give you to understand, that Nature has surrounded all Things of the greatest value with mighty Difficulties, the Guanacos, Creatures which carry the Bezoar Stone, live most upon these Mountains.

Bezoar
Stone.

The Fathers having held their Congregation, F. John Romero was sent thro' Tucuman, to the Port of Buenos Ayres to be ship'd off for Europe, and to found a Monastery in his way at that Port, which gives us occasion to treat of it. The Fort of Buenos Ayres was twice Built by the first Planters of the River of Plate, and their Numbers being wait-ed by Plague and other Misfortunes, twice destroy'd; till the Affairs of Tucuman and Paraguay prospering, in regard to the nature of the Soil, the nearness of the River, abounding in Fish, and that there was an easy Passage through that Continent to Peru, Chili, and Paraguay, these Reasons mov'd John Garay Lieutenant to John Ortiz Zarate the Governor, after routing the Natives in the Year 1580. to build in the same Place where the Fort had stood, a City famous for carrying the same Name, and for its Port, and increasing to this Day under the Tutelage of the most Blessed Trinity. This Port, tho' by the Laws it be forbid to Trade to it, is yet resorted to by several Ships from Europe, Africk and Brasil, on Pretence of being put in there by Storm, or for fear of Pirates. The chief Commodity this Port affords is Hides, and Beef dry'd in the Sun; for the Country abounds in Pasture, and has excellent Meadows for feeding of Beefs and Horses, whereof there are such vast Multitudes, that all the Country lying beyond the 34th Degree of South Latitude, as far as the Mountains of Chili and Borders of Tucuman, swarms with Herds of wild Cattle and Horses, belonging to no certain owner, all that vast Number being multiply'd out of two Horses and five Mares carry'd out of Europe. In these Fields there are great Numbers of Ostriches and wild Goats. There is also plenty Description of Buenos Ayres.

Vast increase of Cattle.

Manners
of the Indians.

of a little sort of Creatures, less than a Hare, not unlike it in Shape, but of much more variety of Colours, and brighter, nothing in Nature is more curious, or seems more delightful to Man. It is as Tame as Beautiful, for it fawns upon those it meets, and courts them to make much of it. Yet such is the malignity of this Beautiful Fox, as the Spaniards call it, that after all this Courtship, when least suspected, it sprinkles them that handle it with its Urine, which has such an intolerable Stink, that it can neither be wash'd, nor wore out with time, but utterly spoils the Garment so sprinkled with it. Thus we see there is no trust to be repos'd in fawning Beauty, which at last will exhale some damp, and infect those that enjoy it with a Stench scarce to be wash'd away with the Waters of many Tears. There are also other Sorts of Beasts; but I must speak of the Manners of the Men, inhabiting those vast Plains scatter'd about, and in a wandering manner. That they were vastly numerous, appears by their encoutring 2000 Spaniards, when the new Fort was first built, and destroying many of them; for besides their Number, their Weapons and Gigantick Stature were a Terror to the first Planters, the People towards the Streights of Magellan, being taller by the Head and Shoulders, and sometimes by half the Body than the Europeans, wherefore they are often call'd Giants. To shew their Strength, they thrust their Arrows down their Throat into their Stomachs, and take them out a considerable time after. In Fight they fasten Stones bigger than a Man's Fist, to a long Rope, and having swung them about some time, let them fly with a great Force, not as is us'd with a Sling, for they let go Rope and all. Wherever they hit they shatter the Bones to Splinters, and at one stroke knock down Man and Horse; but whether they are fled up the Country for fear of the Spaniards, or have been otherwise destroyed, there are very few to be seen at present in that great extent of Land, and those live scatter'd about without Villages or Houses, feeding upon Herbs, and what they Kill, being cloath'd in Skins, and lying on the Ground, both Men and Women. Nor have they any other shelter against the Rain or Heat, more than the wild Beasts, unless they cover themselves with some little Hay; wherever Night takes them there they lie, always roving, and always at Home. They have little knowledge of God, and consequently think not of worshipping him; yet after Death they say they return to the Creator of all Things. They celebrate the Birth of their Children with abundance of Tears, saying when they are Born they begin to weep. At the Funerals of their Kindred instead of Tears they shed abundance of Blood. They carefully keep the Bones of their Relations; nor is there any affront they Revenge with so much War and Slaughter, as the upbraiding of them that the Bones of their Ancestors have been lost for want of looking after. They Honour their dead Caciques by killing their Slaves, believing them to be sent after their Masters to serve them. Very few of these Indians had been Converted since the first coming of the Spaniards, and therefore the Society could not but be well employ'd there, either in regard of them, or of the Planters, or of the Seamen or Traders repairing thither out of Peru, Chili, Tucuman, and Paraguay.

Vol. IV.

After the Indians of the Valley of Arauco had murder'd the Governor Martin Loinola, and destroy'd the Towns in the South of Chili, a bloody War ensu'd between the two Nations, and the Kingdom of Chili was divided into two Parts; one of which lying towards the South, beyond 37 Degrees of Latitude, as far as the Streights of Magellan, and the richest in Gold Mines, is inhabited by the revolted Natives; the other lying next to Peru and Tucuman is wholly subject to the Spaniards. But several Forts have been built within the Borders of those barbarous People to curb their Fury, the chief of which is Arauco, seated in a Valley of the same Name, not far from the Sea, in 36 Degrees of South Latitude, with a Garrison of 500 Spaniards, and a convenient Number of Indians. The other Forts built in the Province of Jumbeline, near the River Biobio, were defended by 600 chosen Spaniards and Indian Soldiers. All the Country about those Forts was inhabited by abundance of Heathens living in small Villages, and subject to the Spaniards, either by force, or of their own accord. Both Natives and Europeans liv'd dissolute Lives, for generally the best of Men did not go over to those remote Parts, but if any had been good among them, they were corrupted by ill Company, or the Country it self, for the Plenty and Delights of the Kingdom of Chili, are a great Snare to those that desire to live voluptuously. The Indians were

U u u u

Su-

The State of Chili.

Tech. Superstitious, Obstinate, and refus'd to embrace Christianity, or converse with the Spaniards; for fear of being oblig'd to Work. To remedy these Disorders, the Society sent three Fathers into these Parts, whose Actions since we do not intend to give an Account of, we will proceed to speak of the Place. The Fort of Arauco, as was said above, is seated in a Valley or Plain of the same Name, from which not only those that inhabit it, but all the other revolted Indians of Chili are call'd Araucans, as all the People of the United Provinces are call'd Hollanders, or those of the Spanish Provinces Flemmings, taking their Names from the principal Towns. These Araucans have made themselves Famous throughout the World, being inferior to none of the Indians for Valour, for they have these many Years oppos'd the Spaniards to assert their Liberty, and still hold out in their full Vigour, to the vast Expence of the Kings of Spain; exercising the Spanish Troops in those Parts, that they may be always enur'd to War, to keep under those vast Dominions they possess. The Plain of Arauco, which is almost 20 Leagues square, when first the Spaniards enter'd it was inhabited by the following Numbers of Indians. Tucapellán Commanded 3000 Men, besides Women and Children; Ongol 4000; Caicuculienpec 3000; Paicave 3000; Millarapuc 4000; Levo, Purc, and Limoia each 6000; Levopia and Goleno 1000; besides other Caciques who had smaller Numbers. But the chief of them all was Petuguitu Lord of 6000 Indians. Of all which Number, when the Jesuits came into that Valley, which was in the Year, 1608. there were scarce 2000, as Horatius Bechius one of them testifies. But out of the Plain, beyond the River Bio-bio, there was a far greater Multitude kept under by the Spaniards, either through Fear or Affection. What the Number of the Enemies might be, could never be understood, none agreeing in their Accounts. The whole Nation is of a strong Constitution of Body, and what is wonderful, fit for War, or Country Labour, tho' addicted to a thousand Vices. Whatever Weapon every one chooses in his Infancy he is oblig'd to use all his Life-time, and forbid any other, lest by changing their Arms, they prove expert at none. Being all divided into small Parties, when an Enemy invades them, the Heads consult together whether they shall be for War or Peace. A Decree once made after three Days Consultation, Feasting all the while, like the ancient Gauls, is inviolable. Those that perform any notable Exploits, are prefer'd to Commands, the rest of the Soldiers are maintain'd at the Publick Charge. Lipsius tells us in his Political Examples, that the Araucans us'd to choose their Leaders only by their Strength of Body, trying it with a great Log of Timber, which he that could carry the longest, was thought fit to undergo the Burden of Government. But this Folly is laid aside; for at present being continually train'd in War by the Spaniards, they choose their Commanders by the experience they have of their Valour and Conduct. Tho' the Spaniards before the revolt had spread their Colonies throughout all the Kingdom, yet very few of the Natives were Converted. One Obstacle there was from the Europeans, viz. that the Avarice of private Men enslaving them, and the ill Example of their Lives created an aversion to Christianity. On the Indians side there were many; first their living dispers'd in the Mountains for fear of the War, and not in Towns, the multiplicity of Concubines they keep, the Authority of the Caciques against whose will there is no persuading of their Subjects; their wicked Custom of revelling to such a Degree, that they would invite the Country round about, and two or three thousand of them meet at a Feast, where they committed all Lewdness and Debauchery; their fond Opinion that Baptism was Mortal, occasion'd by the Custom us'd at first to allow it to few till they were near Death, because of their intollerable Vices, the confusion of continual War, the great Number of Wizards or Negromancers among them, and their Stupidity, occasion'd by their natural indulg'd Vices. For the better Preaching of the Gospel to these People, at the instigation of the Fathers, the Governor drew the Inhabitants of abundance of Villages, into 20 large Towns, where much Good was done upon them, till the Spaniards again oppressing them they all slipt away and dispers'd as they were before.

Opposite to the Shore of Arauco, at 15 Miles distance is the small Island of S. Mary. The Inhabitants ador'd a God they call'd Quequebu, had general Meetings at certain times, which they call'd Requet, where after much Debauchery, they made Priests, consulted the Devil, and perform'd many detestable Ceremonies

Obstacles to their Conversion.

Valour of the Araucans.

Their Numbers.

Their Manners.

Paraguay, Tucuman, &c.

Island of Chiloe.

nies. Chiloe an Appendix of the Kingdom of Chili, is an Island opposite to the Southernmost part of the said Kingdom, 50 Leagues in length, and seven in breadth, in the shape of an Arm Bow'd, contrary to what Geographers formerly represented, who made it square. The South part of it, is parted from the Continent by a very narrow Sea, and the Continent itself, as if loath to part with the Island, makes a Bay to receive it. All the Country is uneven, Mountainous, Woody, and Marshy, subject to extraordinary Cold, lying all beyond 43 degrees of South latitude. The Summer Season is interrupted by such Cold Storms, that it is scarce to be distinguish'd from Winter. The Frosty Winds and little warmth in Autumn hinder the Fruit from ripening. If you turn up the Earth a span deep, you presently come to a red Sand, so mighty dry that it destroys any Seed, and yet the Woods produce such tall Trees, that Ovalle with good Authority tells us, several lengths of Boards are cut out of them. The Soil being unfit for Plowing, was formerly Planted. This unfruitfulness of the Air and Land, makes them think they have a good Crop, when they have five for one of an insipid sort of Roots. On the North end of this Island, some few Spaniards that escap'd, being the remains of those Towns destroy'd by the Araucans when they revolted, built a little Town call'd Castro, which the English Pyrates plunder'd in the year 1600, when it was but just built, after which scarce 30 Inhabitants were left. In another of the Neighbouring Islands, which we shall soon describe they erected a Fort, kept by a Garrison of 80 Spaniards, who being in want of all things, are often burdensome to the Poor Natives. Most of the People live upon what the Sea casts ashore, and therefore before the coming of the Spaniards, only the Coast was inhabited; but since for fear of Oppression, the Islanders betake themselves to the inland, and hide themselves in the inaccessible parts of Mountains, living in miserable want on pretence of Liberty. They wear about their Waist a sort of Net-work made of Shells, all the rest of their Bodies being naked. When the Island was first discover'd there were reckoned in it 15000 Families. One only Ship sails thither in a Year, sent by the Governor of Chili to supply the Spaniards all the rest of the Year they see none. In those Islands they use Boats made of three Boards, sew'd together with a thick Cord, and caulk'd with the Bark of Trees, steep'd in Water. There is no going in these Boats, which they call Pyraguas, without great Danger. But the Peril is yet greater from the revolted Chilenians, who live all along that Coast opposite to the Island. So that considering the danger of the Sea, the Climate and Nature of the Soil, and the Poverty of the Natives and Spaniards, it is not only the farthest part subdu'd, but the miserablest of all that new World.

About the Island Chiloe, lye 40 small Islands, not very well Peopled, and at a small distance from one another, discovering the high Tops of their Woods, which look like so many Bands of arm'd Men placed about to guard the chief Island. The sight is Pleasant did not the sudden Storms rising there disturb this satisfaction, for it is ever dangerous to sail upon the Archipelagus of Chiloe amidst all those Islands. The Natives live after the same manner as those of the great Island, and follow the same Customs, the Soil being alike, but that being less conversant with Men, they are more stupid. After the revolted Chilenians had destroy'd the Towns on the Continent, 80 Spaniards built a Fort and settled upon one of these Islands. Most of these Islands are miserably dispeopled, and the reason the Natives give for their being so few, is because they are stole away by Pyrates, contrary to the known Laws, and carry'd over to the Continent, as Slaves. All the Islands are subject to the Governor of Chiloe.

Because we have often occasion to speak of the oppression of the Indians, vulgarly call'd Personal Service, it will be proper in this Place, to inform the Reader with the Nature of it, and to shew how much it was to the advancement of Christianity and the Honour of the Kings of Spain, that it was absolutely abolish'd and taken away. It is the antient Practice in America to reward such Spaniards as have serv'd well by making them Chiefs of a greater or lesser number of Indians subdu'd in War, or that have voluntarily submitted. This Custom introduced soon after the Discovery of the Indies, continues till this Day. The design of their Catholick Majesties was, that the Indians should pay some acknowledgment to these Men, according to the Nature of the Place, instead of the Tribute due to themselves. This thing was prudently contriv'd by the Kings, if the Spaniards who are Lords over Indians, and call'd Encomenderos, had made use

What the Personal Service in the Indies
was.

The HISTORY of

of their Authority with any Moderation, and it would have prov'd much more profitable both to the Crown and private Persons. But many of them abusing that limited Power given them by the King, and not satisfy'd with their yearly Contributions, oblig'd the Indians to serve them in Person, with their Wives and Children, which they call'd Personal Service, and the Nature of it was such, that those who were forced to it, could get nothing, or say any thing was their own. They were carry'd from their own Villages to serve their Masters in their Country or City Houses, without any Wages. Nay very often, upon some frivolous pretence they were sold away. For this reason a great part of the Indians of Chili had revolted, as had the Calchaquines in the Province of Tucuman, and other Nations about Paraguay. Whensoever the Indians were exhorted to embrace Christianity, they stood out obstinately, alledging it was the way to lose their Liberty; and even those that had been converted fled to recover it, hiding themselves in Mountains, and Bogs rather than live in Slavery. Whole Provinces suffer'd under this Calamity, for tho' the Emperor Charles the Vth, and King Philip the Ild, sent repeated orders to suppress the Personal Service, yet some Governors for their own Interest suppress them, and others were not able to oppose the avarice of the Spaniards, who obstinately stood up for it. Philip the Ild, repeated what his Forefathers had done putting out another Edict for suppressing it. The first that obey'd were the Jesuits, who dismiss'd all the Indians given them by several Persons, allowing them a competent reward for the time they had serv'd them. Some few Conscientious Persons follow'd their Example, the rest became their Enemies, refusing to quit those advantages they made by enslaving the Indians tho' never so unjustly.

Cuzco, or Chicuito
Province.

Cuzco, or Chicuito is an inland dependance of the Kingdom of Chili, at the Foot of the Mountains, on the side of Tucuman, seated, as it were without the Walls of the Kingdom, 200 Leagues in length, the breadth uncertain. There are in it three small Towns, thinly inhabited, the chief whereof is Mendoza, seated close to the pass of the Mountains that leads into Chili, and built by Peter Castillo, famous for taking Pizarro's Standard in the Civil Wars of Peru. The Name it had from D. Hurtado de Mendoza Marquis of Canete Vice-roy of Pe- ru. The Copper of this place is in good Esteem. The whole Country is famous for nothing so much as for fruitfulness, caused by the melting of the Snow in Summer on the tops of the Neighbouring Mountains, and convey'd down at Pleasure in Trenches to the Plain below, which produces such abundance of Corn, Wine, and other Fruits, that it supplies the neighbouring Countries. The Days in Summer are cut very short by the continu'd ridge of Mountains, rising up to the Skies so close by, which a few hours after Noon hide the Sun, and are impassable either way, unless, when the Spring is well advanced, even at which time there is Danger in passing them. Yet the Natives were forced to Travel that way almost naked every Year, without regard to Sex or Age to serve in the further parts of the Kingdom; where many lost their Limbs, and others Perish'd with Cold, besides many other Hardships imposed on them, without any care of their Souls. The Indians of this Province live either in Marshes, or in the Plains wandring without any certain Place of abode, carrying about Mats which are all the Houses they have. They feed for the most part upon what they kill, they Fish, and make Bread of the Roots of Rushes growing in the Marshes, dry'd in the Sun. They also dig holes in the Ground with small Mouths like Cunny-burroughs, to live in. It is usual among them, like the Jews, to sell their Daughters, and the Husbands make use of those they buy as Slaves, and Wives. See more of them at numb. 65.

The Town of S. Michael contended long with that of Santiago, about which should be Metropolis of Tucuman; for the former of them was founded in the Year 1550 by John Nunnez Prada, three Years before the latter; but having been destroy'd by an inundation, not many Months after it was built, and the Town of Santiago successfully rais'd out of its Ruins, the Superiority remain'd with this last, and the Honour of Antiquity, with the other. In the Year 1564, Diego de Villaroel, Nephew to Francis de Aguirre, Governor of Tucuman, rebuilt the Town of S. Michael in a more lasting manner than it was before, by Order of King Philip the Ild. After it was thus rebuilt Gualan the most Powerful Indian in those Parts assaulted it, slaughter'd a great number of the Inhabitants, set Fire to it, and had utterly destroy'd it, but that they say the Apostles S. Si-

Of the Town of
S. Michael.

Terbo.

Nature of the Country.

mon and Jude, whose Festival it was, terrify'd the Barbarians with terrible Lights, so that they were put to Flight, Gualan slain, and those Apostles ever since have been receiv'd as Patrons of the City. Since then it has stood many assaults of the Calchaquine Indians without ever being shaken. Its situation is adjoining to those Mountains, which run through all South America, cutting it in two by a continu'd ridge from North to South. All about it, the tops of the Mountains, the bottoms of Valleys, and the Plains are beautify'd with Country Houses, Farms, and Woods, abounding in all sorts even of European Fruit, and there is such abundance of all other sorts of Fruits of the Earth, that the first Planters call'd the Territory about S. Michael's Town the Land of Promise. But this most delightful Country, like the Garden of the Hesperides, instead of a Dragon, has cruel Tygers, which often devour Men and Beasts; that we may adore the wonderful Providence of God, which every where gives Prosperity and allay of Trouble, lest too much Felicity should make Man forgetful of his Misery. Formerly the Natives exercis'd themselves in Warlike manner, to destroy these Tygers and they that kill'd most, which was made appear by producing their green Skins, were Honour'd and Prefer'd above the rest. The Indians kill them after this manner. They hold a thick Truncheon by both Ends, and as the Tyger comes up to them, give it her to fasten on; and the Nature of them is such, that they never quit that they first seize. When it has fasten'd on the Truncheon with Teeth and Talons, the Hunter, turning it about overthrows the Tyger, which done, before it can recover its Feet he strikes it into the Belly, and Bowels it. The Spaniards Inhabiting the Town of S. Michael, being of peaceable dispositions are more addicted to Gallantry, than Arms, unless provok'd. They are well dispos'd to Piety, and Love and Honour their Pastors, which made them Ambitious of entertaining the Jesuits, whom they receiv'd with great Affection, and built their Church at the publick Expence. The Society had formerly been all over the Valley of the Calchaquines a part of this Country, where they gain'd few Souls, by reason of the Barbarity of the People, yet all was quiet till the Spaniards during the Peace, Baptiz'd many of them without any Examination, and then on pretence of causing them to be in-

Hunting
of Tygers.Peace made by the Jesuits.

structed in Christianity sent them away by force into Slavery. These Wrongs provoking the Indians, the War broke out between them and the Spaniards, a id spread throughout all Tucuman, and the Spaniards themselves being then at variance, it was fear'd the Indians might make use of that advantage to destroy them; when the Fathers of the Society offer'd their Service to procure an accommodation with the Natives. Two were sent, and so well receiv'd by those People, that in a very few Days they converted great Numbers, erected eleven Chappels in so many Villages of the Indians, and concluded a Peace between them and the Spaniards, upon condition no wrong should be done for the future.

Guaira is a large Country, part of the Province of Paraguay, Bordering on Brasil Eastward, and shut in by the River Parana on the West. Its breadth from the Plains of the Urvaicans in the South, to the Woods and inaccessible Marshes in the North, is not certainly known, but reaches a vast extent of Ground. This Country lying for the most part under the Tropick of Capricorn, is by reason of its immoderate heat, and moisture, no less Fruitful of Provisions, than of Diseases, the very same Causes producing Plenty, and Fevers. It is much fitter to be the Habitation of wild Beasts, and Serpents than of Men. Yet if we may Credit Guzman, when the Spaniards first came into America, there were 300000 Indians in this Country, who liv'd for the most part about the River Huiba, Tibaxiga, Paranapana, Pirapo, and Parana. The Ruins of abundance of Villages, caus'd by Sickness, and driving away of the Indians, which appear thick and almost contiguous, make this Account credible, tho' at this time scarce the 5th Part of that number remains. The Inhabitants of 2 little Spanish Towns are the Posterity of those, who being sent into Paraguay, settled in this part about the Year 1550. The whole Nation lives miserably, having no Bread, but what is made of the Root Mandioza, or any Flesh to eat but that of wild Beasts. They kill abundance of Elks, whose Hoofs are reported to be good against the Hartburning. This Province is famous for a sort of Stones, which Nature, after a wonderful manner, produces in an Oval Stone-case, about the bigness of a Man's head. These Stone-cases lying under Ground, when they come to a certain Maturity, fly

Curious Stones.

Techo.

fly like Bombs, in pieces about the Air, with much, noise, and scatter about abundance of very beautiful Stones; for they are bright, some of the colour of Amethysts, others violet colour, some a Grass green, some like Glass, some red, and some sharp like Diamonds; in fine, such is their beautiful Variety, that to see the lustre of the Stones one would take those Cases for Caskets of Jewels. But these Stones are of no more Value, than our Bristol Stones; but before this was known, the new Planters of the Province of Guaira, are reported to have abandon'd their Colony, after gathering a great quantity of these Stones, with a design to return into Spain, hoping to make Estates of them. But being stopp'd by the way, they were sufficiently laugh'd at, as they well deserv'd. There are here abundance of Trees that yield Balsam. The Woods produce various sorts of Berries and other Fruits, as does the rest of Paraguay. The most remarkable among the Flowers, is that they call Granadillo, which represents the Instruments of our Saviour's Passion, and of it comes a Fruit about the bigness of a common Egg, most delicious, when the Rind is taken off, so that it is an excellent emblem for the Meditation of our Saviour's Passion, which after the first appearance is wonderful delighting. Next to this the Guembe is a great Dainty, being long and sharppish, at both ends, and pretty large; when the Rind or Shell is broke there appear yellowish Kernels, like those of a Pomegranate, which are good to eat. The Fruit is perfectly sweet, unless you chew a very small Seed there is within those Kernels; for when that is broke it causes a sharp Pain in the Jaws. An excellent emblem of human Pleasure, which yields Gall, under the appearance of Honey, when close follow'd. The same Seed if it falls upon the tops of Trees whose Bark is rotten, will send down a sort of winding Fibres, like Ropes to the Earth, which being fed by the moisture of the Ground, take Root, and run up again like the Ivy, producing abundance of Fruit. There are also abundance of Dates, not so sweet as those of Africk; yet they make a sort of Wine of them, and Pottage, and eat the Pith of the Palm instead of Bread, for want of better. Among their wild Cattle, the Swine are famous, because, contrary to the Nature of all other Creatures, their Navel is on their Backs, which if you do not cut off, as soon as

Granadillo
Flower.Guembe
Fruit.Strange Swine.

ever the Beast is kill'd, it all corrupts immediately. There is vast abundance, and variety of Bees, but never to be brought to the House, their Wax can never be made White; the Honey is generally good, and fit to make Metheglin. The Snakes are here more mischievous than elsewhere, and there being no remedy against them, they destroy many Men. Some there are, which darting themselves off the Trees, twist themselves about the Bodies of Men, or Beasts, and unless immediately cut in pieces, soon kill any Creature, and devour it by degrees. These Snakes when they happen to gorge themselves, lay their Bellies to the Sun, which corrupting together with what they have eaten, they find themselves restor'd to their former Strength. Another sort of them lye retching their vast Jaws on the Banks of Rivers, casting out Foam, which deludes the Fishes, whom they thus allure and devour. A third sort springing from Marishes, or Lakes catch at a certain sort of Birds, which defending themselves, when they find themselves hurt, presently eat a sort of Herb call'd Macagua, from which the Birds themselves take their Name, as an Antidote, and as soon as well return to Fight. The Battle is Pleasant to behold, for the Macaguas make use of their Wings as Bucklers, their Beaks as a Weapon, and the Snakes lye intrench'd in Water, securing themselves by their winding motion, so that they do not easily kill, nor are they soon kill'd. The Province of Guaira has little in it remarkable, besides what has been here mention'd, which are common to the Neighbouring Countries, and Monkeys and Tygers. There was very little Christianity in this Country even among the Spaniards, till the Jesuits came among them. From the Mountains of Brasil, there runs down into this Country the River Paranapan, almost as great as the Paraguay, and falling into the River Parana, after it has receiv'd the Tibaxiva, Pirapus, Itangua, and other lesser Streams. Both sides of it are cover'd with great variety of Trees, but the Natives value the Cedars most, which are so tall and of such a vast Bulk, that their are Vessels made out of single Trunks, and them hollow'd, which carry twenty Cows. The Jesuits sail'd up this River, till they came to the Place where the Pirapus falls into it, where they gather'd the Natives, and built a Town, which they call'd Our Lady of Loreio, and four Miles from Snakes.

Macagua
Birds.Paranapan River.Loreio, and
S. Ignace
2 Towns.

Paraguay, Tucuman, &c.

from that another to which they gave the Name of their Father S. Ignatius, a third call'd Itaberaca, and a fourth the Name whereof we have not. These Places being built, the Spaniards resorted thither to carry away Indians for their Service; but the Fathers oppos'd them, and the King's Visitor hapning at that time to come into the Country, they obtain'd an Order of him to secure the Inhabitants of those Places from all Molestation from the Spaniards. This was the Original of the Towns of Loreto and S. Ignatius, which continue to this Day, and have been the occasion of building eleven more in that Province of Guaira.

The People of Parana.

About the same time that the Jesuits labour'd as above to bring the Indians of Guaira into Towns, that they might be the better Instructed, which was in the Year 1610, those People that Inhabited the Country between the City of the Assumption and the River Parana, opposite to the Paraguay, who till then had oppos'd the Spaniards, began to shew themselves much more tractable than before. For Arapizanduvins a Man in great Authority among them, went to Ferdinand Arias, Governor of Paraguay, promising, If they might have Priests sent among them, he with his confederate Caciques, would build a Town, and submit to the King of Spain. The Governor overjoy'd at this Offer, went directly to the Bishop to demand of him Priests, to bring those People to the Faith, and obedience of the Catholick King. The Bishop refus'd to send any, because those Indians were mortal Enemies to the Spaniards and Canibals, and could by no persuasions be prevail'd upon to alter his Resolution. F. James Torres Provincial of the Jesuits, finding the Bishop not to be mov'd, sent F. Marcellus Lorencana then Rector of the Assumption, and the only one he had that could speak the Language, with his Companion Francis Martin. These having travell'd thirty Leagues into the Country, passing the Marshes with incredible difficulty, stay'd in the first Village of the Indians they came at; where they gather'd the People of all the neighbouring Country, and mark'd out a Place for building a Town, labouring Day and Night to reduce those Barbarians to the Worship of the true God. But it was a Work of Time and much Patience to change the Manners of those hardened Heathens. These Indians follow'd their Debaucheries in the new Town, at certain Seasons, Painting their naked Bodies to look the more Terrible, and spending two or three Days and Nights together without Sleep, in Drinking, Laughing and Roaring, after such an extravagant manner, that the Fathers did not question but they should one time or other perish at their Hands, in these drunken Fits. Nothing but Patience could Conquer this preverfe Custom, which at length in some measure prevail'd, and many of them sued to be Baptiz'd, which was not granted them till after good Trial of their forsaking their barbarous Manners. It hapned that the Fame of so many Persons being Baptiz'd spreading abroad, a Paravian Woman with her Daughter stole privately from her Husband, to get an opportunity to be admitted to the Christian Religion. The Indian enrag'd at his Wife's flight, and laying all the blame on the Priest, stir'd up his Country People to take Arms to revenge his Quarrel. Being got together, they first vented their Fury on the Mahomas, Friends to the Spaniards, and having made a great Slaughter of them, drove away a great number of Captives to make their inhuman Feasts of Man's-flesh. F. Lorencana hearing of it, sent in the Name of the Spaniards to complain of that Action, and demand the restitution of the Prisoners. They answer'd, They had already eaten a good number of those Mahomas, and were satiating up the rest for Slaughter: Threatning the Father, and sending him Word, It would be a merry Day, when they had his Skull to Drink out of. This was a sufficient Declaration of War, and therefore the Converts taking up Arms for their Pastor, chose Aniangara for their Commander, which discover'd the Pride and Arrogance of that Nation; for Aniangara, being a Man in great Repute among his People, and puff'd up with his Election, spoke to them in this haughty manner. Ton had good reason, Gentlemen, to chuse me for your Commander, who am well known far and near to be singularly Brave; Me all the Country about Fears and Loves for my noble Exploits in War. For who has so often Routed the Enemy, but Aniangara? Who has Baffled their Designs, but Aniangara? Who has brought away the Spoils of their Commanders, but Aniangara? Aniangara is my Name, equally Lov'd and Dreaded by my Enemies. For tho' I have overcome many, yet after the Victory I have us'd such Moderation, as to kill none of the Prisoners, being no less famous for my Mercy when Action is over, than for my Bravery in War. This Speech was receiv'd with great Applause. Soon after

Techo.

War among the Indians.

Com.

The HISTORY of

The Town
of S. Ignatius.

a Company of Spaniards with 300 of their Confederate Indians, came to their Assistance, and Aniagara joyning them, they all march'd into Parana, where they routed a 1000 Indians without the loss of a Man. This done the Spaniards return'd home, F. Lorencana refusing to go with them as they desir'd, but chusing to remain expos'd to any Dangers among his Converts. His Followers increasing, he built the Town and Church in a more convenient Place, and gave it the Title of S. Ignatius. But the Paranians being Inrag'd by their last Defeat, and the hatred to Christianity inflaming their Rage, study'd the Ruin of the new Town, and joyning in far greater Numbers than before, their Bodies Painted after their barbarous Manner; pass'd the River and plunder'd the Country about the Town. The News hereof being brought, it is hard to express what a Dread seiz'd all Men, for the Spaniards were gone, and the Enemy more numerous than the Townsmen. F. Lorencana prepar'd his People for Fight and Death, performing all the Duties of a good Pastor, and his Converts offer'd themselves to stand by him. In the mean while their Spies brought an account, that the Enemy in a pännick Fear had retir'd into their own Country. It was remarkable at this time that F. Francis of S. Martin, Companion to F. Lorencana, was so terrify'd with the News of the approach of the Barbarians, that he ran Distracted, but afterwards recover'd.

Guaicureans live
dispers'd.

At the same time the Society sent Missioners among the Guaicureans, of whose Manners we will here give a short Account. This Nation is divided into two Parts, the one call'd Guaicuru, the other Guaicuruti. Both of them live on the Banks of the River Paraguay, opposite to the City of the Assumption, towards the Kingdom of Peru, dispers'd about without any settled Habitation; but they are most numerous about that part where the River Pilcomayo, which comes out of the Mountains of Peru and falls into the Sea. They carry about their Towns at Pleasure, having no Houses but Mats, which they set up where they think fit like Pens for Sheep. They understand Sowing, but will not addict themselves to it; but live by Fishing and Hunting. They use themselves from their very Infancy, to eat all manner of venomous Creatures; and feed on Worms, Snakes, Tygers and Lions, without any hurt. The Women are cover'd after a barbarous, but modest manner. The Men to look the more Terrible, daub rather than paint all one side of their Bodies from Head to Foot with stinking Colours. Instead of a Beard they fasten a Stone a Finger long to their Chin; anoint their Hair with a bituminous Matter; make themselves Bald by art; pull up all other Hairs about their Body, and make themselves monstrous by scarifying their Faces; making Deformity the Standard of Valour. Their chief Delight is Drunkenness and War; but they go through cruel Trials to attain to the Title and Dignity of Souldiers. For those that aspire to this Honour, are to testifie their Courage to the rest by enduring most hideous Tortures, boring their Legs, Thighs, Tongues and other Parts of their Bodies with an Arrow; and if they flinch, or complain the least amidst their Sufferings, they are excluded the Honour; which that they may be the surer of obtaining, the very Children use to run Thorns and Briars into their Flesh, for Sport and Pastime. All their Youth they practise Running, enure themselves to Labour, and are train'd in their way of Fighting. They pay a greater Honour to their Commander than any of the other Indians, receiving what he spits in their Hands, standing about him when he Eats, observing his least Motions, and clearing the Ways for him. Drunkenness, or the desire of satisfying their natural Cruelty, is often the cause of War among them. They are continually engag'd against the Chiriguans, Alipones, Frontons, and other Nations like themselves in Manners. Of the Prisoners taken in War, they Sell or Kill all that are grown up to Mans Estate, the younger Fry they breed up after their own way. They love dark Nights to fight in, having no force but in the Fury of their Onset, not knowing how to stand together in Bodies. Having done Mischief by Night, they retire to their lurking Places over horrid Marshes and Bogs, all scatter'd about like Tygers. Thus keeping many Spies abroad, they not only oppos'd the Spaniards during almost a whole Century, but very often made great Slaughter of them, continuing in their antient Superstitions. They pester'd the City of the Assumption from its very Foundation, committing Robberies and Murders, and wasted all the Places about it with continual Excursions. They carry'd away the Sister of Ferdinand Arias the Governour, and several other Spanish Women into miserable Thralldom. In fine, they did a thousand Mischiefs without

Their way
of War.

Paraguay, Tucumàn, &c.

First introducing of Christianity.

without scarce receiving any, being no less Dreadful in Peace than War. They were defended and born out in this savage Way, by the Marshes of the Country, many Rivers not to be forded, thick Woods, and Bogs full of Reeds, where they hid themselves, and by the multitude of vast Snakes bred by the Heat of the Sun in that wet Soil. This Country, tho' separated from the City of the Assumption only by the River Paraguay, had not as yet been visited by any Priest, because of the Barbarity of the People. However F. James Torres Provincial of the Jesuits, ventur'd to send thither F. Roch Gonzales, and F. Vincent Griffius. They pass'd the Paraguay, and having travell'd three Days over the Marshes, were carry'd before the Commander of the Guaiacureans, as Spies, but he finding to the contrary, defended them from any Violence. Being ignorant of the Language, they were forced to make use of a Converted Indian Interpreter, all whose Words they diligently writ down to learn the Language, which those ignorant Heathens observing, they concluded they had marked down the Roads, their Strength, and other Circumstances to bring the Spaniards upon them; for which reason they resolv'd to Murder them, and had done it, but that F. Gonzales by the help of his Paper, recited to them in their own Language those Mysteries of our Faith which he had taught them by the Interpreter; whereat they were so pleas'd, that the Commander order'd a Cottage of Mats to be set up for them, and became better inclin'd towards Christianity. After spending a Month there, the Fathers propos'd the building of a Town, which the Indians (who love Novelty) easily consented to. Besides their Captain upon the publick Faith given him, ventur'd himself with F. Roch Gonzales into the Town of the Assumption, and returning from thence, the Provincial went with him, being carry'd over Rivers in a sort of Boat made of a Hide, and over Marshes on the backs of the Indians. At length he came to the Place appointed for the Town, where the scatter'd Indians were gather'd, and set up their Huts of Mats. The Fathers liv'd among them in a miserable manner, feeding upon every Thing as they did, except venomous Creatures. It was very difficult to curb the Vices of those Barbarians; for it was terrible to hear their drunken Crys at Night. In the Day they would perform some hellish Ceremonies, and many lew'd, lascivious Actions in the Face of the Sun. In fine, the Fathers labour'd there long with little Success, for all those Nations of Indians which do not Sow, nor dwell in settled Places, are more vicious, barbarous and obstinate than the others, and less fit to receive the Faith.

The Provincial having done such good Service about the Town of the Assumption, sail'd down the Rivers Paraguay and of Plate to the Port of Buenos Ayres, where arriv'd 19 Fathers out of Spain, sent by his Catholick Majesty to forward the propagating the Faith in those Parts, with Orders that all so Employ'd should be Maintain'd at his Cost. About the same time Ferdinand Arias late Governor of Paraguay, prevail'd with the Provincial to settle some Fathers in the Town of Santa Fe, eighty Leagues above the Port of Buenos Ayres. This Town was built by John Garay, not long before that of Buenos Ayres was rebuilt, upon the Banks of the River Quiloaisa just where it falls into the River of Plate, for the conveniency of Ships coming out of Europe. The Indians often fell upon the new Planters, but without Success. It was formerly very remarkable among the other Customs of the Natives, that the Women were not allow'd to paint their Bodies with a clay Colour, till they had tasted humane Flesh. If they had no Prisoners taken in War, they would cut the dead Bodies of their own People in pieces, and give them to the young Maids to eat. They planted Trees over the Graves of their Ancestors, and adorn'd them with Ostrich Feathers, and met there at certain times to lament. Before the coming of the Spaniards they liv'd upon Fishing and Hunting; but afterwards the Herds of black Cattle multiply'd so fast, that they serv'd not only to feed the Natives, but in some measure to enrich the Spaniards. It appears upon Computation, that from the Year 1611 till 1631, a Million of Oxen were drove from the Country about Santa Fe into the Kingdom of Peru, which have yielded a prodigious Profit. This is all that was remarkable concerning the Town of Santa Fe, besides the hopes of bringing those Barbarians to the Faith of Christ; for on that side next Paraguay, runs the Plain of Calchaquina almost an hundred Leagues along the River of Plate, and is Inhabited by most inhuman People. In this Town the Fathers settled a small House, and Ferdinand Arias the late Governor, with his maiden Daughters, carry'd Earth upon their Shoulders at the building of the Church.

Town and Country about Santa Fe.

Their Manners.

The HISTORY of

Echo.
A College
at Cordova.

Another
in Chili.

The Fathers had now more Work upon their Hands than it was possible for them to go through, by reason of the great Multitudes of Infidels, and vast extent of the Country, besides many Places desir'd they would settle among them, but they were too few to fix in every Part. Their chief Seat was at Cordova, where they settled a College and Noviceship, choosing rather to breed up their Young religious there, than in Chili, the Delights of which Country might render them less able to undergo the Toils they were to be expos'd to. Many thousands of Infidels were Converted in the Country about this Town, whence the Provincial went over the Mountains to Chili, and in the Metropolis of that Kingdom, at the request of the Magistrates, Founded a College for the Education of Youths, under the care of the Fathers. The Provincial returning into Tucuman, Luis Quinones Governor of the Province, sent to acquaint him, That certain stragling Souldiers having kill'd some Caciques of the Diaguitas, those People were again Revolted, and desired he would send some Fathers to pacify them. John Darius and James Baroa were appointed to manage that Affair, who passing thro' Aconguinca, betwixt the Cities of S. Michael and London, and the Places adjoining to the Wood of Joncavil, Converted abundance of Infidels. Then entering the Territories of the Diaguitas, the Success answer'd their Expectation, those People freely condescending to their Proposals, and they on their side engaging to have them secur'd against all Outrages of the Souldiers. Thus they visited the Guassans, Malleans, Huacasses and Andalgas, Inhabitants of small Towns, Baptizing 500 of them. Those Fathers we mention'd before that had been among the Guaicureans, having met with very little Success, were about to be recall'd, but the Commander of those People desiring they might be continu'd, and delivering up his Son then twelve Years old, to be bred a Christian, they were continu'd in hopes of bringing those Barbarians to more Civility. In the mean while the Fathers in Guaira and Parana continu'd indefatigable in their Labours, in the latter of which Provinces they found the Natives so wild, and unfit for the Yoke of Christ, that they thought fit to forbear for some time, till by degrees they could by fair means, and good offices reclaim, and bring them to something of Humanity. In the first their Endeavours sometimes seem'd to answer Expectation, but then on a sudden those unsettled Infidels would slip away from the Towns to their usual lurking Places, and fall to their antient Practices, seizing upon such other Indians as they could come at to sell them for Slaves, and spending whole Nights celebrating their Victories, and performing many superstitious Acts. F. Romero one of the Missioners there, inquiring into their Religion, found that they ador'd the Moon and the Constellation, call'd the Charles Waine, and had no other Worship. During these Transactions, Father Valdivia had been in Spain to solicit for the Indians of Chili, and having obtain'd all he went about, return'd into that Kingdom, where he presently had a Conference with 50 Ulmes (so they call their great Men) and after a short time concluded a Peace with the Leicureans and Pureneans; Utablame one of the principal Indians answering for the rest. He press'd to have some Women belonging to Aganamon, another prime Leader of those revolted People, restor'd to him, they being then Prisoners. It was granted that a Daughter, who was an Infidel should be return'd, but for his Concubines and another Daughter, who were become Christians, he could not prevail. Peace being settled, Utablame took three Fathers along with him to persuade the remoter Indians to submit themselves, but when they came to his Town call'd Leicura, Aganamon dissatisfy'd with what had been done, entered the said Town by force, killing some Ulmes that had been for the Peace, and railing at the Jesuits because his Women had been detain'd, first dash'd out their Brains with Clubs, and then hew'd their dead Bodies with other Weapons. Thus dy'd Martin de Aranda, Horatius Bechius and James de Montalva for refusing to restore the Infidel his Concubines. After this Murder most of the Indians fell from the Peace, many Factions, tho' wholly Innocent, fearing they might suffer among the Guilty; yet 8000 Cata-raians continu'd Friends to the Spaniards. Because we do not pretend to write the Actions of the Fathers, but only what is Historical, or relating to the Description of those Countries, we have pass'd by the greatest part of the fourth Book, according as our Author divides his Work, only relating what is to our purpose, and omitting all that relates only to the Society. All we can add out of the said fourth Book, is, That about 50 Leagues from the City of the Assumption, up

Paraguay, Tucuman, &c.

up the River is an Indian Town call'd Guaramba, consisting of about 900 Families part Christians, and part Infidels, and remarkable for nothing but being very unhealthy, and about ten Miles from it are two others of about 300 Families each, the Names of them are Pitave and Niegua.

Country of Paraguay.

Tho' somewhat has been said before at num. 43, concerning the People of Parana, that relating only to such as live between the Town of the Assumption, and the River of that Name, we must in this place add something of that Country in general. The River Parana runs 500 Leagues, as has been said above, before it falls into the Ocean, through a Mouth 80 Leagues in breadth, and has not undeservedly the Name of Parana given it, as representing the Greatness and Majesty of a Sea in most Parts. This makes me dissent from Joseph d'Acosta and others, who reckon the River Maranhao the greatest in America, tho' the same Acosta affirms the Mouth of Maranhao is but 30 Leagues wide. The Parana, as well as the Silaro in Naples has the occult quality, of converting Wood into Stone, so that it is frequent to see Sticks, as far as they lye under Water petrify'd. Ferdinand Arias, the Governor set up a Pillar thus Metamorphos'd or converted, in the Porch of his House. Besides it every where breeds Fishes of a vast Bulk; and F. Ruiz affirms he has seen some thicker than an Ox towards Guaira. It is frequent to see Sea Wolves swimming in Shoals, lifting up their Heads above Water, when a Man Whistles, and then ducking again, as if they sported. The Capibara, an amphibious Creature, is often kill'd by People, as they Sail along. In the middle of the River Parana, lies an Island eighteen Leagues in compass, all round very high and encompass'd with lofty Rocks, so that it is inaccessible, unless in some Places, where the Land is a little lower, but those Parts beset by many dangerous whirl Pools. This Place was formerly the refuge and Fortrefs of the Paranenians, against Incurfions of the Spaniards, for which reason, the Inhabitants besides their natural Fierceness, were of a Warlike disposition. Both the Shores as well where they are plain and open, as where they are wooded, produce a great multitude of Beasts, and Birds. There are every where great flocks of Birds and Parrots, but these last are three times as big, as those of Wood converted into Stone.

Asia, and their Feathers so beautify'd with variety of colours, that the Natives formerly for their sightliness, ador'd them as Gods; but they are only commendable for their Colours, as never learning to talk. That sort of Bears is very remarkable, which are call'd Ant-Bears, because of their eating those Insects. Their Head is very long, the Snout twice as long as a Swine's and sharper, out of which they draw a Tongue like a Spear, as it were out of a Scabbard, and thrust it into the Ant-hills, and draw it back with a great Booty of Ants sticking to it. These Ants which are as big as the top of ones Finger, being tosted over the Fire, are reckoned by the Natives and Spaniards as dainty Food. Formerly there were no great Towns upon the Parana, but the People liv'd dispers'd in Villages. Both sides of the River, running a vast extent, are inhabited by several Nations, all, except the Guaranians, as like one another in Manners, and Barbarity, as they are remarkable for diversity of Languages. Among them all, I think those very remarkable who feed upon a certain sort of Earth dry'd at the Fire, and then dipp'd in the fat of Fish; so that there is little cause to admire, they should think so little of Heaven, who find so great a relish in the Earth. That part of the Parana, which is next the Ocean, for the space of 200 Leagues from the Mouth, is by the Spaniards call'd the River of Plate, the Reasons given for this Name varying. For some will have it to be so call'd from Gavot's Plate, as was observ'd in its Place; others from the first Planters, seeing the Natives on the Shoars, as they sail'd along in their Ships, cover'd with white Shells, which at a distance glitter'd like Silver. Some will have this Name given it, because the Lakes and Rivers on whose Banks the Silver Mills are set at work in the Province call'd Los Charcas in Peru rould down, after a prodigious long run, a great quantity of good Silver Oar among the dross, there wash'd away, which quantity is so vast, that those, who know how to judge of Metals, guess there have been 40 Millions of Silver, so carry'd away by the Rivers Tarapaya, and Picolmayo, from the first working in the Mountains of Porosi till the year 1611. And for Quick-silver, us'd in the working of the Plate, the quantity is so great, as serves to Poison the Waters of those Rivers for a vast space, so that they

Techo.
Parrots
worship'd as Gods.

Bears and Ants.

Name of the River of Plate.

The HISTORY of

Techo. breed no Fish, that venomous Mineral destroying all living Creatures. But it is a Folly to assign this for the Reason of calling the River of Plate by that Name, because it was certainly so call'd, before the Mountains of Potosi were known to the Spaniards. Whatever the reason of the Name is, the Parana, as far as it is call'd the River of Plate, that is, till the Paraguay falls into it, has three Spanish Towns on it, which in some Measure, keep the Indians about the Shore in subjection. Towards its source, for almost the space of two hundred Leagues, it runs thro' Guaira, and other Countries, in a manner subdu'd by the Spaniards. That part of Parana which lyes between Guaira and the River of Plate, and is opposite to the Paraguay for almost an hundred Leagues, itill holding out, chose rather to be harass'd by War than to submit to a Foreign Yoke. Those People baffled the Forces of Ferdinand Arias a brave Commander, and other Governors, tho' they consisted of considerable numbers of Spaniards, and the choice of their confederate Indians. They almost ruin'd the Spanish Town of S. John seated on the conflux of the Rivers, Parana and Paraguay, by their continual Excursions. They often invaded and terrify'd the Converts made by the Jesuits, at the Town of S. Ignatius. There was no going out of Tucuman into Paraguay without a Guard, the Paranensians lying upon all the Roads, and Killing and Robbing all they met. But none so cruel, as those who having been converted were fallen off, for they being incens'd by the Service the Europeans requir'd of them, continually set the People of Parana against their Masters; so that for several Reasons the Name of the Paranensians was equally terrible to the Spaniards, and their Indian Confederates. No Priest had been among them as yet, that is in the Year 1615, except only Roch Gonzales, who ventur'd among them two Years before, with no other Weapon, but the Cross, being sent by Marcellus Lorenzana, having made way to this Mission, by founding the first Town sixteen Leagues from the River. This same Year 1615 the same Roch Gonzales, after travelling some time through an uncouth Country by Land, came to a Lake call'd Appupen, running into the Parana, and call'd by the Spaniards S. Anne. About it dwelt abundance of Infidels, with whom he so far prevail'd, that they desir'd him to mark them out Ground to build fierceness of the Proof Parana.

a Town, which he did and converted many Families; but the Franciscan Fathers, who had Preach'd there before, demanding to have that part left to them, which they first took in Hand to instruct, he freely quitted it to them, being sensible there was Work enough elsewhere for the Society. F. Gonzales went up the River by Boat, tho' much oppos'd by the Indians, who would not harken to his Proposals, about 50 Leagues, and came to Itapua, where 4 Caciques resided with a considerable number of their followers, who after some difficulty submitted, promising to erect a new Town in that Place, provided the Society would promise to settle among them. He hereupon hastened away to the Town of the Assumption, to negotiate the sending of some Fathers to settle there. As soon as he was gone, the Paranensians on the upper part of the River, being wrought upon by an Apostate, made War upon the Itapuan, for having entertain'd F. Gonzales, and attempted to pull down a great Cross he had set up, but were oppos'd by the Itapuan, who though still Heathens stood about it, and repuls'd them, tho' much more numerous.

James Marino Negron, Governor of Paraguay and the River of Plate, being Dead, Francis Gonzales de Santa Cruz, Brother to F. Roch Gonzales was Deputy Governor, till the King should appoint another. He thinking it would be an Honour to him, that the Province of Parana, so often attempted without any Success, should be reduced during the time of his Government, and by means of his Brother, having conferr'd with F. Marcellus Lorenzana the Rector, granted a Patent in the fullest manner he could, by which he permitted the Society to build as many Towns as they thought fit, upon the Rivers Parana and Uruguay, to appoint Magistrates, and erect Churches. F. Lorenzana provided all necessaries for building a new Town, and so they dismiss'd F. Gonzales, who return'd to Itapua, where he arriv'd upon Christmas-Eve. Itapua is a Place equally distant from the Mouth of the River Paraguay, and the Borders of Guaira, being about 60 Leagues from each, and standing high on the South Side of the Parana. A Lake that runs into the River makes a Port before it. There were Indians enough in the Country about, to make a handsome Town. The Itapuan Caciques, who had gain'd

Itapua

Itapua describ'd.

renown

Paraguay, Tucuman, &c.

Conception
Town
built

many other little Villages were willing to joyn. The Indians therefore assembling in great numbers, a Cross was erected, and the Foundation of a Town laid, which was call'd the Conception. Cacique, the most powerful of the Gualaches, renowned among both Spaniards and Indians, being invited by F. Ruiz, came to him with an hundred Followers, promising he would either erect a Town in his own Lands, or joyn the People of the Conception. The first of these Proposals was approved of, and he sent home with Hopes; the Spaniards admiring that a word from the Fathers should be of more force than their Arms, with which they had despair'd of reducing the great Curito. After he was gone, because the Way to the Country of Taiacoba was not streight, and through the Lands of War-like Indians, F. Ruiz, with incredible labour, open'd another through impenetrable Woods, which was but four days journey. F. Diastanius left in charge with the new Town, reducing the Language of the Gualaches to Grammar Rules, and committing the Elements of Christianity to Writing, made things easie for those that were to succeed him there in the care of Souls. Besides, he gain'd the Affections of those People by his Skill in Mechanicks, and specially in Smiths work, which he had learnt of himself, and most necessary where there was great want of Iron Tools. Yet the Converts were not very numerous, because of these Indians inclination to Drunkenness, and other barbarous Customs.

The Cacique Guiravera solicited to embrace the Faith.

F. Ruiz being come into the Lands of Taiacoba, through that Way he had made himself, bent all his Thought upon gaining of the Cacique Guiravera, who did all he could to obstruct the founding of any new Towns, and endeavour'd to destroy those already founded. And indeed it was no indifferent Conquest to reduce him; for Guiravera was the Chief of all the Man-eaters and Sorcerers in the Province of Guaira; looked upon, by the People far and near, as a Destroyer of Human race for his greediness of Man's Flesh, and made it his principal to study to contrive to have F. Maceta, who had drawn over many of his Heathens, fall into his Snares. Besides, he had declar'd to all the Caciques, who for fear of his Power and Sorcery, adher'd to him, that the greatest service they could do him, would be to seize F. Ruiz, and serve him up roasted for him to eat. This Cruelty was attended by

Pride, which made the Monster stile himself the High-priest, and Commander of all Guaira; and such was his Madness, that he assum'd an air of Divinity, employing all his Power in obstructing People from becoming Christians. The Fathers studied all means to reduce or appease this inveterate Enemy; and found it was something more than a Humane act to gain; a Man who was reported to be familiar with the Devil, who laid the way to be taken in his own Snare; for Guiravera using to receive Oracles from dead Bodies, the Devil speaking, according to Pythagoras his Opinion, of the transmigration of Souls, is said to have told him, that the Soul of Quaracitus, who in former times had been look'd upon as a God, was gone into the Body of F. Ruiz, and had transferr'd all its Divinity thither. Which being spread abroad, E. Ruiz, among the Heathens, was generally reputed to be a God, and the true Image of Quaracitus. Which, in process of time, prov'd beneficial to Christian Religion; for Guiravera being very eager to see F. Ruiz, whom he took for Quaracitus come to life again; after several Messages sent forward and backward, set out to see him in great state, attended by 200 Indians. Being come near the Town of St. Paul, among the Inanians, he sent in a Man to fix the Conditions of the Interview, but being impatient of delay, enter'd the Town after him, proclaiming, in a hideous voice, that contrary to his Dignity, he had vouchsafed, at present, to tread the Ground to see the Foreign Priests. Going on with this sort of Discourse, he found the Fathers sitting in the Market-place, and was by them desir'd to sit down upon a low Bench. He with insupportable Pride, order'd his Men to cover the Bench and Ground his Feet were to rest on, with their Garments; then sitting down, and looking more calm, he saluted the Fathers after the Country manner. They return'd the Salutation, and having endeavour'd to introduce some discourse of Religion, finding him very uneasy, they put it off to a proper Season, and so they parted. But knowing that nothing so much gain'd the Hearts of the Indians as feasting, they killed two Oxen, and having made a plentiful Banquet, their Exordium or Introduction, F. Ruiz finding Guiravera very suspicious of Treachery, among many other things he said, ended his Speech to him in this manner. You have Tecbo.

Techo.

no cause, Guiravera, said he, to apprehend any Treachery from those, who desire nothing so much as to die for the Glory of God; you see our Innocence is our defence, suspecting nothing, tho' unarm'd, amidst your armed Guards, and only studying to entertain those, who are reported to covet nothing so much as to catch and devour us. Our only care being to gain Souls; we have never been known to hurt the Body, it being our only Study to bring all Men to worship one only God. Trusting in this Hope, we despise all Dangers. But be not deceiv'd, Guiravera, with the false glittering of an empty Name; for you and I are mortal; I arrogate nothing from the Impostures of your false Oracle, nor do I allow you that Divinity you vainly boast of. You and I were made of Dust, and to Dust we shall return; this was our Original, and this will be our end. Alay thy Pride therefore, Dust and Ashes, and learn what distance there is between a vile Clod of Earth and the Universal Creator. Why do you boast of having created the World; who have hitherto behaved your self, as if you had been born to be a plague to it? You are not the Creator, but destroyer of Men; not the bestower of Dignities, but a base Slave to Vice; not the joy of Humane race, but its devourer, still gorg'd with Bodies of Men, and gaping after more. You are not the Maker of the Universe, but an empty product of the Devil's. Yet believe, God is always so merciful, that he is ready, if they repent, to pardon the Transgressors of his Laws. Honour this God, unless you will rather chuse to endure his Punishments for ever. Return home for the present, we soon will follow you. The Barbarian becoming much more complying, made show, as if he approv'd of what was said; but it plainly appear'd he only temporiz'd, and counterfeited. Several of the Caciques that came with him shewed an Inclination to embrace Christianity privately, affirming, if the Fathers would come into their Country, that many of Guiravera's followers would quit him to embrace the true Religion. F. Ruiz knowing that the People were all led by their Caciques and Sorcerers, and that all things would be easie when they were gain'd, to oblige Guairavera, gave him a Rod, such as the Spanish Magistrates carry, in the Name of his Catholick Majesty, and caus'd him to be honourably conducted about the Town by 400 ~~red~~ Converts, by which means, he ~~was~~ to be somewhat oblig'd. After departure, the Fathers consulted about settling a Colony in his Lands, whatever the danger might be. While F. Ruiz was upon this Design, Letters were brought, giving an Account that the Town of the Incarnation was infested by the Mamaluc, and therefore putting off the Business of Guairavera, he hastened away to oppose them.

Some Companies of Mamaluc (of whom we shall give a full Account hereafter) had pass'd the River Tibaxira, near the Town of S. Xaverius, and encamping near the Colonies of Converts, struck a terror into all the Province of Guaira. For besides a Multitude of Infidels, they had drove away into Captivity several Converts, whereof F. Mendoza complaining they made a meer Jest of what he said. F. Ruiz being come, and expecting no civility among Robbers, order'd a thousand Converts to take up Arms in their own defence, and sent two Fathers to try those Rovers, who kill'd one that went with them, and wounded one of those Fathers, yet they proceeded, threatening to raise all the Province against them, and boldly unbinding the Prisoners, carry'd them back to F. Ruiz. The Robbers still seem'd inclin'd to give Battle, tho' F. Ruiz, in the name of the Catholick King, conjur'd them to peace; however at last they drew back from the Towns of the Converts, shewing as if they would be satisfy'd with driving away the Infidels, and forbear infesting the Converts. Yet it was fear'd, and the event shew'd there was no truth in their Pretences, to the ruin of the Province, as we shall see in its place. New Fathers coming in the midst of these Troubles out of Europe, found matter to exercise their Patience and Charity. For the Coronados Indians inhabiting the Plains, who had been attempted a Year and half before without any success, sent now to F. Mendoza, residing in the Town of the Incarnation, to desire they might have Priests sent them, and Towns founded. Which they were the more earnest for, when the report was spread abroad, that only those were to be led away Captives, who would not submit to be instructed by the Society. F. Ruiz taking F. Mendoza with him, went and found all things in a great Forwardness. Ibitiruna is a very craggy Mountain, three Days journey from the Town of the Incarnation, the Inhabitants of which Mountain being commanded to demolish their Villages, which lay scattered up and down, and to build a Town in the Place appointed, readily performed it.

Invasion of Mamaluc

renown by defending the Cross, gave F. Gonzalez, when he return'd, a House made of Mud and Straw; after the Indian manner. He having fitted up one part of it for a Chappel, what by his own means, and the assistance of some Indians his Emisaries, drew a considerable Number of the Neighbouring People to come and join with the *Itapuan*s. F. James Boroa being come to keep F. Gonzalez Company, after he had been there four Months alone, they both joyfully mark'd out the Ground for the new Town, built a House, and Church big enough to contain the Multitude, made Huts for the Indians, whom they persuaded more by their Example than Words: Brought Clay and Straw, cut Timber, and made it fit for the Work, being in such want of Provisions, that they accounted an insipid sort of wild Thistles, and Bread made of the Pith of Trees, as Dainties. They using to make some Pottage of a sort of Herbs, which only the Parrots were wont to eat before, those People in a harmless way of jesting call'd the Fathers Parrots. The Church being built, the Dedication was celebrated in the best manner they could, and a Picture of the Blessed Virgin being set up therein, not only the said Church, but the Town took the Name of the Annunciation, under which Name it continues to this Day. By the contrivance of the Devil it was soon given out, that the Fathers were no Priests, but Spies in Disguise, to betray the People, under the Show of Religion, to the Spaniards; and that they brought the Plague with their Pictures and Books. These Things alienated many of the Indians from them, till being by degrees undeceiv'd, they became more familiar with the Fathers. Having built this Town and the other we mention'd before, call'd S. Anne, on the Lake Appupen, which he left to the Franciscans, F. Gonzalez return'd to the City of the Assumption, where having given an Account of all he had done to Ferdinand Arias, who was again appointed Governor of Paraguay, and the River of Plate, he endeavour'd to dissuade him from going into those Parts, as yet, but in vain. The Governor therefore having sent the Father before to dispose the Indians to receive him, set forwards with 50 Spanish Soldiers. Being come to the River Parana, he cross'd it in small Vessels provided by F. Gonzalez, and when they arriv'd at Itapua, made great rejoicing, the Governor saying to his Men, let us give God Thanks on our Knees, that by virtue of the Cross alone, we now tread that Ground, which neither my Sword, nor the Valour of the Spaniards could conquer in so many Years. Then having appointed Commanders of the Indians, and charg'd them to be respectful to the Fathers, he set out from the Port of Itapua, the same Day he came thither, covering his Fear with the pretence of Business, because the report went that the Inhabitants up the River, were alarm'd at his coming, and their Boats began to appear. As he was sailing down the River about 300 Indians appear'd on the steep Banks, arm'd with Clubs and Darts, and had certainly attack'd the Governor, but that Gonzalez by his Authority withheld their Commander. His Name was Tabacambini, who being ask'd by the Governor to accept of a General's Staff in his Catholic Majesties Name, by which he might be known to be Commander of the Paranensians; Haughtily answer'd, He had been their Commander before, and should be so still without a Staff.

All the Country that lies between the River Maranon, otherwise call'd of the Amazones, and the Parana, which are above a thousand Leagues distant from one another, makes almost one half of South America. All which Country the Guaranians Inhabit, and not so satisfy'd, passing these Bounds, possess all that lies between Paraguay, Panama, and the Borders of Peru. But within that Compass there are several other Nations to be found, differing from the Guaranians in Language and Manners, and whom they out of their natural Pride call Slaves. With them they have continual Bloody Wars, fattning the Prisoners they take, and eating them. At these Feasts they take new Names to express their Warlike Exploits. They live in little scatter'd Villages, which are under the Command of Caciques, renowned either for their noble Descent, or popular elocution. In time of War they chuse a General of known Valour; but know nothing of Regular Troops, keeping their Ranks, foreseeing Dangers, chusing a proper Time or Ground, improving Opportunities, or laying up Provisions. For the most part they Fight as Chance offers the Occasion, being not the first on set, but cowardly if suffered to cool. In Fight, they use Clubs and Arrows, and make their Bodies hideous with dismal Colours before they engage. They make no use of Lime, Stone, or Tiles; Houses.

Techo.

Or the Guarani
see.

Their

Techo. but build Houses of Clay and Straw, either round or long, and for the most part so large, that one of them makes a Village. Matrimony is at Will, for every one has as many Wives or Concubines as he can keep or get. The Caciques claim a Right to the handsomest Maids in their Village, whom they easily give up to be deflower'd by their Followers or Friends. To have to do with their Daughters-in-law is frequent, and no Shame to put away Wives, or be cast off by them. It is look'd upon as a great Crime to turn any Stranger whatsoever out of Doors. They entertain their Guests with Weeping, and long Praises of their Ancestors, but their Sorrow ends in Laughing and Feasting. They cover their nakedness with a very short Garment made of Shells or Feathers put together, the rest of their Body is Naked. They sow Indian Wheat, and several Sorts of Pompions, Beans and Roots. When any Person, particularly those of any Note among them Dies, it is not to be express'd, what horrid Howling the Women make in all parts; swelling their Cheeks, they by Fits give hideous Shrieks, they sometimes cast themselves headlong from high Places, tear their Hair, batter their Fore-Heads, turn the Dead Bodies, embrace and talk to them, bow their Sides, open their Hands, lay the Carcasses into great Pots; and believing the Souls are bury'd with the Bodies, cover the Faces of the Dead with concave Dishes, that the Souls may not be stifled; to show they had the same Master, who pray'd that the Earth might ly light upon those they lov'd. They adore no God, but are addic'ted to the Superstitions of Wizards and such Impostors. Their manner of Conjuring varies according to the several Countries; but they almost all agree in giving the greatest Honour to those Sorcerers, who are most familiar with the Devil. Those that aspire to the Knowledge of their Magick Arts are to mortify themselves with most severe Fastings and other Afflictions; which whilst they are performing, they live alone, naked, and without washing in dark and remote Places, eating nothing but a sort of Pepper and Indian Wheat roasted, affecting to look gasty with their Hair uncomb'd and clotted, their Nails grown to a shameful length, and other filthy Circumstances, and bring down their Bodies with other rigorous Practices, till having almost lost their Strength and

Senses with Fasting, they call upon the Devil and see him. It is their Business to do Mischief, by darting Bones, Coles, and Hairs undiscov'rd; which Things being deprav'd by their Charms, and piercing the Bodies of Men, make them wast away, and sometimes Die, unless he that did the Mischief, take the Cause out of the Parts so affected. There is another sort of Magicians, who do no harm, and only Boast of their familiarity with the Devil, and pretending they can discover Secrets and Things done a great way off, to them that ask, which they learn of the Hellish Fiends. In some Countries, if a Woman will be a Witch, she must pretend to Chastity, for if once she proves with Child she is no longer respected. The Devil never appears to these Conjurers without a hideous and frightful Noise. There is also a sort of Sorcerers who pretend to Phisick; it is also their Business to talk much, Lye without measure, and for the most part do nothing. They Suck the sick Bodies, and pretend to spit out some corrupt Substance, as if they had suck'd out the Cause of the Distemper. The whole Nation minds Dreams, and superstitious Observations to a Madness. They think the touch of an Owl will make them Lazy, because that Bird among them does not fly much, nor build a Nest. If a Woman eat a double Ear of Millet, she believes she shall be delivered of Twins. They exercise a young Maid the first time she has her Courses, after a strange manner. She is put into the Hands of a lusty brawny Woman to be thus exercis'd; she is forced to abstain from eating Flesh, till her Hair before cut off grows down to her Ears. It is a Crime for her to look upon Men. If she happens to see Parrots, they think she will be talkative ever after. She is made to sweep the House, to carry Water walking apace without stepping out of the way, to pound Corn in a Mortar, never to be idle, and to do all the Business of a good House-wife. This Exercise of theirs John Rho reckons among their many Virtues. In short they are of Opinion the young Girl will behave her self all the rest of her Life, as she does about the time of her first Courses. Women with Child abstain from almost all sorts of Food. They eat no Elk, lest the Child should be born with a swoln Nose. If they eat small Birds, they fancy they shall bring forth a small Child. They are forbid eating any of those Creatures, whose Qualities they Superstitions.

fau-

castically imagine may hurt their children. The Laws the Men are to observe when their Wives are with Child, are these, not to kill any wild Beast; not to make Arrows, Clubs, or Staves to any other Instruments; to abstain from eating Flesh, fifteen Days after the Wife is brought to Bed; to unbend the Bow; not to lay Snares for Birds; to lye at Home idle, and fasting till the Infants Navel-String be cut; if they do any thing to the contrary, they must expect some great Mischief will follow. When the new Born Babe happens to be Sick, the Kindred Men and Women abstain from such Diet as they believe would hurt the Infant, if it eat of it. As soon as the Children are Born, they give them Names agreeable to the Beauty or Imperfections of the Body. If it be black or swarthy, they call it Crow; if it have a hoarse Cry, Frog. I omit much more of the same Stamp, lest it nauseate the Reader. Yet it is found by experience that this Nation, notwithstanding this Folly and Barbarity, if it be well taught is more apt than any other People of America to embrace and retain the Christian Faith, and to learn mechanick Trades, and a good measure of Civility.

Childrens
Names.

Many following Chapters affording but little Matter to our purpose, we will only collect out of them, what may be worth relating, giving this Advertisement of it, that the Reader may not be surpriz'd to find many short Relations put together, which have no particular Connection among themselves. The Fathers of the Society Preaching among the Guaicureans were not so successful, as in other Parts, those Indians looking upon Baptism as mortal to whosoever receiv'd it. The cause of the Error was, that by reason of their many Vices this Sacrament was not granted them till they were in the utmost extremity, and therefore most of those that receiv'd it, immediately Dy'd; which those Infidels imagin'd to be the effect of Baptism. But Time and Experience undeceiving them, they afterwards came in more freely to embrace the Faith. It hapned that a Sorceress among them lying desperately Sick, and having try'd all the Arts of their Impostors for her Cure, and been supply'd during the time of her said Sicknes with some better sort of Sustenance by the Fathers, overcome by their Charity, turn'd off her Indian Charmer, and desir'd to be Baptiz'd. As the Father was about complying with her Desires, a multitude of Indians flock'd about him, begging he would not bestow that Favour on the worst of Women, who was us'd to do much Mischief; for if he should according to his Custom, bury her in the Chapple, she would turn into a Tyger and destroy all about her, and therefore it was better to carry out her Carcass when she was dead, into some remote solitary Place, lest she should do more harm dead, than she had done alive. This they said, because the Guaicureans are of Opinion, that the Souls of wicked Persons transmigrate into wild Beasts, which are mischievous in Proportion as they were when living. But the Father undeceiving them, Baptiz'd her, shewing that the Virtue of Baptism was such, when rightly apply'd, as to make the blackest Souls brighter than the Sun, and send them into eternal Bliss. At Cordova, in the Province of Tucuman about the Year 1616, a Monastery of Nuns was founded by Ellenor Texeda, which was the first in those Parts. She design'd them for Dominicans, and accordingly they wore that Habit, and the Monastery was erected under the invocation of S. Catherine of Siena; but there being none of the Order to begin it, nor any Book of the Rule, they follow'd that of S. Teresa with some little alteration, which afterwards bred great contests; for some would have it that their Vows were void, because they were design'd for Dominicans, and follow'd the Carmelite rule, besides other circumstances that made them a confus'd sort of an Order; but after much Debate the thing was refer'd to Pope Paul the 5th, who order'd the present Nuns should remain for the present as they were, under the Rule they had taken their Vows to, but for the future others admitted should be reduced to the Rule of S. Dominick, and so the Monastery continue as had been at first design'd.

Techb.

First Nuns in Tucuman.

Great Hopes were conceiv'd of advancing the Faith, throughout the Province of Parana, and introducing it into that of Urvaig or Urvaica, when the Governor Ferdinand Arias had like to disturb all, by designing a Conquest on the latter of those Places, from which all the Perswasions of the Fathers could never divert him, till the Spaniards refusing to follow him in that dangerous and unprofitable Expedition, oblig'd him to alter his Resolution. F. Gonzales being eas'd of this Fear, which would have alarm'd the

Jaguapua Town
built.

Techo. Indians, and utterly destroy'd all that had been done for their Conversion, went away to a Place the Indians call Jaguapua, where he persuaded a good Number of the scatter'd Natives to come together and settle. Tamboacicus, Cacique of an Island opposite to Jaguapua increas'd the Number of those People, and by his Example many more flock'd thither out of the Woods, who altogether built a Town, F. Gonzalez marking out the Ground for them. Jaguapua is about four Leagues from the Town of Itapua, and twelve from that of S. Ignatius, and therefore there being no Fathers to settle at Jaguapua, those of the other two Places took it by turns to go over thither to instruct the Indians, where they made very many Converts. At this time Arapizanduvius the Indian Commander of the Town of S. Ignatius, taking some disgust at the Fathers, gather'd a number of Malecontents, and stirring up the Paranensian Infidels, went away to joyn Tabacambius, who we said before had refus'd to accept of the Generals Staff from the Governor of Paraguay. These two great Men retiring into a Peninsula made by the River and a Lake, call'd by the Natives Maracana-is, struck a Terror into the new Towns of Parana, and the Fathers were much afraid lest they should by their great Authority draw many Converts to abandon the Faith. Therefore F. John de Sales, before they were well settled in their Designs, ventur'd to go from the Town of S. Ignatius to them, to persuade them to Peace, where he had doubtless been Kill'd, had not an old Woman put them in mind that the Spaniards would revenge his Death, which made the Infidels hold their Hands, and the Father taking that Opportunity to speak to them boldly, His Words had such force, that Arapizanduvius immediately begg'd Pardon, and drawing together his Followers, forsook Tabacambius, returning to the Town of S. Ignatius. At the same time F. Joseph Cataldinus attended by a small Parcel of Converted Guaicianians, ventur'd through the Country among the Piropoensians, among whom he spent 10 Months, and having converted 700 of them, caus'd them to remove out of their Woods, and build a Town not far from that of Loreto. Very little good was done among the Guaicureans, their Obstinacy and Stupidity prevailing above all the Exorts of the Fathers, and therefore many advis'd they should be given over, but Father Peter Romero, who had spent some Years among them, and brought them to live together in a Town, was for overcoming them with Christian Patience and Kindness. The Plague raging among them, they all dispers'd and fled to the Woods, many of them that had taken the Infection dying by the way. F. Romero never ceas'd following them, and prevail'd with some few at the last Gasp to receive Baptism, and when the virulency of the Plague was over, brought back those that had escap'd it to the Town. They abusing that Health they had been restor'd to, according to their natural Inclination, presently ingag'd in unjust Wars, making Slaves of the Prisoners they took, spending the Nights in hideous Cries, giving up themselves to Drunkenness, and celebrating their new Moon Festivals with superstitious Madness. This Year 1617, Father John de Viana, who had been sent Procurator to Rome, arriv'd at the Port of Buenos Ayres, with 37 Fathers he gather'd by the Generals order, for a supply to the Province of Paraguay. This addition made the Province so flourishing, that the Provincial now settled nine Colleges in it, and seeking which way he might enlarge either among the Spaniards or Indians, soon found an Opportunity, the Spaniards of Estecho and the Calchaquine Indians, admitting the Fathers to settle among them. Estecho, otherwise call'd Nuestra Senora de Talavera, is a small Town, very conveniently seated for the relief of those that travel out of Peru, to the River of Plate and Paraguay, through Tucuman, and it had increas'd beyond all the other Cities of Tucuman, but that the unwholesomeness of the Air, which is hot and moist, obstructed its thriving. This Place being in want of Priests, made Provision for and receiv'd five of the Fathers.

The Valley of Calchaquina above-mention'd running thirty Leagues in length, from North to South is but of a small breadth, and almost enclos'd on both sides by the high Ridges of Mountains that make the Borders of Peru and Chili; the two Angles of it look, the one towards Salta, the other towards London, two small Towns of Tucuman. Many Monuments of the Conquest make it still appear, that the Inhabitants of this Valley were formerly subject to the Ingas Kings of Peru; and those People, to this Day, have a Veneration for the very Name of the Ingas. It is most certain, there are Mines of rich Metals in.

37 Je-arrive Buenos Ayres

Estecho
Town.

Valley of Calcha-
quina

this Valley, but as yet they could not be discover'd, those Indians for fear of being forced to dig concealing the Gold and Silver, which have been the Cause of so much Mischief. It is reported, that in the Night there is a sort of Creature seen there, which casts a mighty Light from its Head, and many are of opinion that Light is caus'd by a Carbuncle; but as yet this Creature could never be taken or kill'd, because it suddenly baffles all the deligues of Men, leaving them in the Dark by clouding that Light. The Natives of this Valley, ever obstinate from the first coming of the Spaniards into Tucuman, have defended themselves and their Families with such Resolution, that the Women have been seen to force their Husbands back to fight, driving them with Firebrands, when they saw them give way or fly; and when their Strength has fail'd them, Rage still prevailing, rather than fall into the Hands of their Enemies, they have either run upon their Swords, or cast themselves headlong from the tops of Mountains. Aonso Barseña had formerly pacify'd these People, which Peace they had often broke at Pleasure without regard to Articles, either running into open Rebellion, or doing harm under show of a false Peace. During those Intervals of Peace, such as they were, some Fathers of the Society made several Excursions among them, wherein they found much more Difficulty than Success. But these Excursions for a short time turning to no account, it was believ'd their obstinacy might be overcome by continually inculcating the Doctrine to them, or at least it would be some curb to their frequent Revolts. Therefore F. James Torres having this Year 1617, obtain'd an allowance of 600 Pistoles a Year from the Viceroy of Peru, for the support of the Society, he resolv'd to fix two constant Seats of the Society in this Valley, and accordingly sent four Fathers with full Power from the Governor and Bishop, to build Towns and Churches, and do all other Things for the well governing of those People as they should think fit. The Indians were willing enough to entertain the Fathers, not so much for the sake of Religion, as because their numbers being much diminish'd during the late Wars, they now thought not themselves Superior to the Spaniards, and therefore were glad to have an honourable Opportunity offer'd them of putting an end to the

r. For this Reason the principal

Men went out to meet the Fathers, offering their assistance towards building of their Houses; and having carry'd the Fathers about the neighbouring Villages, diligently built a Chappel in a convenient Place, with Cells made of Mud and Straw. This Place in gratitude to Cardinal Ferdinand Borromeus, was dedicated to S. Charles Borromeus. After some time Christopher Torres, who was Superior of that Mission, leaving two Fathers there, went away with a Companion to the further part of the Valley, where he settled another Mansion, under the Invocation of the blessed Virgin Mary, the Indians assilting as the others had done. From these two Seats they were in continual motion over all the Valley, endeavouring to propagate the Faith, but with very little success, the Customs of those barbarous People being too opposite to Christian Religion, and therefore it will be proper in this place once for all to give an account of their Manners. It was suspected that these Calchaquines were descended from the Jews, because at the first coming of the Spaniards among them, many of them had the Names of David and Solomon; besides, the eldest among them affirm'd, that their Forefathers us'd to Circumcise themselves. It was also a Custom among them to raise Seed to their dead Brothers; and their Garments hanging down to the Ground gather'd up with a Girdle, shews something of a Jewish Custom. This Conjecture is confirm'd by the opinion of Joseph d' Acosta and other Writers, who affirm the Americans to be descended from the Jews. The whole Nation like the Jews, is superstitious even to Madness. They frequently adore Trees adorn'd with Feathers, so that what was said formerly of the Synagogue may be well apply'd to them, Thou didst fall down under every flourishing Tree. They worship the Sun as their prime God, the Thunder and Lightning as next to him. They pay an Honour to Heaps of Stones, which are the Monuments of their Ancestors, which is a further instance of their Jewish Extraction. They give much honour to Sorcerers, whom they use as Physicians and Priests, being most notable Impostors. These Men live in solitary Hermitages, conversing with the Devil, or at least pretending so to do. It is the duty of these Priests to bring up others to their hellish Practices. They practise all sort of Extravagancies with their Wives, and are as Mad and Abominable

Techo.

Customs of these People.

Techo.

in these their filthy Debaucheries, as can possibly be imagin'd from the worst of Men, inflam'd with continual Drunkenness and Rage. When they are heated with Wine, they fall upon one another in a riotous manner to revenge past Injuries, battering one anothers Heads with their Bows. In these Drunken Frays, it is an everlasting Shame to shun a Stroke, or put it by with the Hand; but it is reckoned the greatest Honour to receive several Wounds, to shed much Blood, and to have their Faces made hideous. In the heat of their Madness, the Priest muttering many Words, Consecrates the Skull of a Hind stuck full of Arrows, to the Sun, praying for a good Harvest; this done he delivers the Skull to another, who receiving it, becomes Head of the next mad Revels. Thus the prime Men of the Nation giving the Token round, spend their Lives in raving Mirth. At their Sacrifices they are daub'd with the Blood of Beasts by the Sorcerer. But they are never so mad as at their Funerals. All the Kindred and Friends repair to the dying Man's House to drink together Day and Night, as long as the Distemper lasts. They encompass the sick Man's Bed with abundance of Arrows stuck into the Ground, that Death may not dare to approach for fear of them. As soon as the Party is dead, they bewail him with the loudest Cryes they are able, place all sorts of Meat and Wine about the dead Body, which is seated on a Chair, make Fires, and Burn a sort of Leaves instead of Frankincense. To move Compassion, both Men and Women shew the dead Persons Goods to the Multitude; whilst others Dancing and Leaping after a distracted manner, clap Meat to the Mouth of the dead Carcass, as if it were to eat it, and then swallow it themselves. Having spent eight Days in these and such like Follics, they Bury the Body, casting into the same Grave with him, his Dogs, Arms, Horses, and other Goods, besides abundance of Garments offer'd by his Friends. This done they burn the House he dy'd in, that Death may never return thither again. Having spent a whole Year in Mourning, they celebrate the Anniversary with the same Ceremonies. Instead of Mourning Cloaths, they paint their Bodies Black. That nothing may be amiss, they make use of a Master of the Ceremonies. They believe no Bodies are a natural, but all violent Deaths, which Error makes them always

Their Funerals.

Grois Error.

full of Jealousies and Fighting; the Devil to promote War, sometimes whether truly or falsely laying their Deaths at some Persons Doors by the Mouths of their Sorcerers. They think the Souls of their Friends after Death are converted into Stars, whose Brightness is proportionable to the high Post they had in this World, or the brave Actions they perform'd. On Festival Days they make themselves Crowns of Feathers of several Colours. Their Hair, which reaches down to the Waist, they wreath with Ribbons like Women. Their Arms are cover'd as high as the Elbow with Silver or Copper Plates, which is useful for shooting with their Bows, and some Ornament to them. The chief Men of the Nation wear a Silver or Copper Ring within a Diadem or Coronet of some other Matter about their Heads. Youths are forbid having to do with Women, till they are Emancipated or made free by their Sorcerers. Maidens wear Cloaths of several Colours, which when they have lost their Maidenheads, are chang'd into one Colour only. The Factions among them are almost continually destroying one another in warlike manner. The Women are most powerful to reconcile the two jarring Parties, and produce Peace, those most barbarous People easily granting any thing at the request of those that Bore and Suckled them. It was reported there were at this time about 30000 Natives living in abundance of Villages; but I find even those that went to instruct that Nation differ about the Number. But this they all agree in, that the Calchiquines are as easily induced to imbrace the Christian Faith, as they are afterwards ready without any Cause to renounce it. Not one of those, who had been formerly Baptis'd, liv'd at this time like a Christian, but resided promiscuously among the Heathens, following the Customs of their Fore-fathers. For which reason the Fathers agreed, that for the Future none should be Baptis'd, but at the point of Death, or after several Years Trial. Infants were more easily admitted to Baptism. Because the antient deprav'd Customs of the Indians were to be abolish'd, before the Laws of Christianity could be introduced, therefore the Fathers spar'd no Labour, but without regarding the Danger of Death, cast down Idols wheresoever they came, exclaim'd against their Funeral Rites, and hindred their being performed about any Body that had been Baptis'd. Besides they took Garments.

Women: peace-makers.

took much Pains to dissuade many from the opinion they held that nothing was a Sin, and therefore they had no need of Confession. But tho' the Fathers gain'd few Profelytes among that perverse People, yet it was a Comfort to them that they often baptiz'd dying Infants, and sometimes others grown up, and kept that Nation from revolting openly against the Spaniards, and warring among themselves. Besides the usual Allowance for the subsistence of the Fathers, the King sent Bells and Church-Stuff for both those Mission Houses.

Punishment of a Sorcerer.

We now enter upon the sixth Book of our Author, and find nothing in his two first Chapters, but little excursions of the Jesuits, and therefore wholly omitted; in the third we find this following account of a Brasilian Impollutor, who repair'd to the Town of Loreto in the Province of Guaira attended by a Man-servant and a Woman. All the way he came this Sorcerer had practis'd his Frauds, and as soon as he arriv'd at Loreto, the residence of F. Cataldinus, he there gather'd the Multitude by the River side, and putting on a Garment of Feathers us'd by Sorcerers, and shaking a sort of Rattle made of a Goats Skull, crying after a mad manner, he proclaim'd himself absolute Lord of Death, Seed, and Harvest, that all things were subject to his Power; that he could destroy all things with his Breath, and create them again; that he was three in Persons, and but one God. For, said the Blasphemous wretch, I begot my Companion, (that was his Man) with the Splendor of my Face, and this young Woman proceeded from us both, whom we equally love, making use of her by turns. This Monster of a Man astonish'd those Ignorant People, and he the more to terrify them, roar'd after a hideous manner, that he would make a mighty Slaughter, and presuming to rave before F. Cataldinus, shaking his Rattle, skipping, repeating his Blasphemies against the blessed Trinity, and declaring, if they durst attempt any thing against him, he would destroy their Converts and their Priests; The Father justly provok'd, order'd those that were next to seize him, and being deliver'd to the Officers, the sham God was well Whipp'd; and tho' he cry'd out after a few Stripes, that he was no God, nor any thing different from any other vile Fellow, that all his Divinity was vanish'd, and he had no Power in his Breath; yet the lusty Converts who had him in Hand left not off, till they had given him an hundred lashes by tale, the Boys laughing and making sport at him. The two following days he was again publickly Scourg'd, that he might three times abjure his being God three in Persons. This Punishment brought him to a right understanding, for his Man and Woman being detain'd at Loreto, he was banish'd the Province for a time, which being expir'd he return'd and became a Christian. This hapned about the Year 1618, at which time a raging Plague ran thro' all the Province of Guaira, which abundance of the new Converts believing would be less contagious if they were dispers'd, they fled in Shoals from the new Towns, into their antient Woods, so that the last of the three Towns erected in that Province, was utterly ruin'd. The Heathens to whom some of them fled endeavour'd to persuade them quite to abandon the Towns, and restore themselves to their antient Liberty; adding threats to their persuasions, and declaring there was nothing they so earnestly desir'd, as to have one merry bout at drinking out of a Priest's Skull. Howsoever, when the Plague abated, the Fathers with the assistance of the most faithful of the Converts, began to gather up those that had surviv'd out of the Woods and Marshes, some travelling one way, and some another, and having brought together all the Converts, they by continual labour drew a great number of Infidels, which more than made amends for what the Plague had destroy'd. The Converts, who were continually searching out the wild Indians between the Rivers Parana and Huibaro, light upon a sort of Men more fierce than generally the Guairanians are. Many of these had fastned three or five little Stones in their Lips which stuck out, and made them look hideous. They liv'd in Cottages not so high as themselves. All their Food was Dates, the Pith of the Palm-trees, some little Venison, and Roots. Having no Iron, they supply'd that want, with sharp Stones and Bones fix'd to long Wooden handles. They had no name to express God, but worship'd the Thunder as their only Deity. The Fathers brought 73 of these Men at one time to inhabit the Town; but being us'd to feed upon such things as grew naturally, and to live in shady Woods, they all but four dy'd within a Year, having been first Baptiz'd. About this time some of the Planters of Guaira that went about to take Indians, came to the new Towns of Guaira, reporting they

Techo.

Plague.

A wild
People.

Techo. they had cross'd a vast Country as far as the River Mayannon, and telling many wonderful things they had seen, which their Authority not being very good, we shall not impose upon the Reader, as not becoming the Authority of this History. Among other things they said, they had found some Memory among those People of S. Thomas his having Preach'd there, of which because I find some account from better Hands, I will here say something.

Of S. Thomas the Apostle's being in the Indies.

F. Joseph Cataldinus, and Simon Maceta being employ'd about reducing the People about the River Parapana to live in Towns, Maracana a Powerful Man, among those Indians, and several other Heathens told them, They had a Tradition from their Ancestors, That S. Thomas (whom they call Zume Brasili, as the Guaranians do in their Language) formerly travel'd through Guairania, and Prophecy'd to those Country People, that it would come to pass in process of Time, that all their Nation should be reduced to two Towns, by Men carrying Crosses in their Hands; which they said was fulfill'd, by building the Towns of Loreto and S. Ignatius. Seven Years after, the same F. Cataldinus preaching the Gospel to the Pirapoensians, and after him other Fathers in several Parts of Guaira, found the same Memory and Prophecy of S. Thomas still preserv'd; which is confirm'd by part of a Letter written by F. Emanuel Nobrega, Visitor of Brasil, in the Year 1552, whose Words are these. The Natives, (says he) that is, the Brasilians, have some knowledge of S. Thomas, whom they call Zume, and have it deliver'd down to them by their Ancestors, that he travel'd this way, and affirm his Footsteps are still to be seen near a certain River, which that I might be more certain of, I went my self, and with my own Eyes, beheld the Impression of four Feet and the Toes made pretty deep, which are sometimes cover'd by the swelling Water. They report those Impressions were made as S. Thomas fled from his Persecutors, who would have kill'd him, and that the River divided it self, through the midst of which he pass'd without wetting his Feet, and went away to India. They also recount, that the Arrows shot at him, return'd back upon those that shot them; that the Woods through which he pass'd made way for him; and he promis'd he would some time return to visit those Countries. Thus far Nobrega. Nor is what Orlandinus relates in his History Society unlike this. There is a Hill to be seen by such as travel out of Brasil to Guaira, to which the Natives have given the Name of S. Thomas, be- lieving the Apostle travel'd that way. This Path continues much the same all the Year about, the Grass growing on it but low, and quite different from the adjoining Fields, which are very full of Grass, and looks like a Way made by Art; which the Fathers teaching in Guaira, affirm, They have often seen, but never without Astonishment. Besides, near the Metropolis of Paraguay, there is a sharp Rock having a small flat space at the top, on which there are still the prints of Mens Feet in the Stone, and the Natives affirm, That from thence the Apostle S. Thomas us'd to preach the Law of God, to the Multitude resorting to him from all Parts; adding, That he taught them to plant the Mandioca, of which they make their sort of wooden Meal. Laurence Grado, Bishop of Paraguay and afterwards of Cusco, as also Francis Alfaro of the King's Council, affirm, They found In Peru. Footsteps of the same Apostle in the Province of Misqua. The Peruvians shew a seamless Garment of an unknown Stuff, found among the Ashes of a burning Mountain, a pair of Shoes of a most fragrant Smell. As James Alvarez de Paz, affirms, Prints of Feet upon Stone with exotick Characters, and a Path through the Reeds on the Marsh of Titiaca, are still plain to be discern'd. And Men of Authority are of opinion all these Things belong to S. Thomas the Apostle, because of the memory there is of him among the Indians, who call him Tume. Torribius Archbishop of Lima, renowned for Sanctity of Life, caus'd that Rock on which the prints of a Mans Feet are, to be enclos'd within a Chappel; and before the coming of the Spaniards, Colla Tupa Tutor to Guarcar Inga in his Youth, caus'd that Rock to be worship'd. In the Province of the Cachensians, there are Rocks still to be seen scorch'd with Fire, and it is a receiv'd Tradition, that they were formerly burnt with Fire from Heaven, sent down to punish the Peoples attempting to kill a certain Man that taught the Law of God; which Man the Colles, another People of Peru, held in such Veneration, that they call'd him the Son of the universal Creator. But nothing makes so much for my purpose, as the Cross at Carabuco, famous through all Peru. Carabuco is a small Town of Convert Indians upon the Lake of Titiaca, under which, upon Information receiv'd from the Indians, Sarmiento Corate of the Place, after much digging found a Cross, soon after famous for working many Miracles; among which one very remarkable is, its growing up again as fast as bits bits of it are cut out to satisfy Peoples Devotion. It is a receiv'd opinion that this Cross was formerly erected at Carabuco, by S. Thomas the Apostle. The Devils at the same time declaring, they would give no answers by their Oracles, till it was taken away, and therefore the Indians cast it into the adjoining Lake, which they having often repeated and finding it still swimming on the Water, and that no Fire would consume it, at last they dug deep under that Lake Titica and bury'd it, laying a vast heap of Earth upon it. The signs of their having in vain attempted to burn it, are still visible upon it. But there being no such Wood as this Cross of Carabuco is made of, to be found either in Pern or the adjacent Countries. Antony Ruis guesses the Apostle carry'd it through the Provinces of Guaira and Paraguay out of Brasil, where he says there are many Trees of that sort, which he has seen himself. But if any Body should object the weight of it, which is above three Horse loads, they may as well refuse to give credit to Orosius, who affirms, That at Malepur or Meliapor, a Town in Cambeia, where the Apostles Tomb is to be seen, they to this Day shew a piece of Timber miraculously brought thither, which is so vastly big, that a great number of Oxen, or as Mendoza says, several Yoke of Elephants, cannot stir it out of the Place where it is. If any Man make a question, which way the Apostle sail'd into America, let him read Navarcha's Asiatick Epistle, where he proves that might be done without any Miracle. I am not ignorant how many Stories of S. Thomas's Travels are counted as Apocrypha; for as it is certain the sound of the Apostles was spread throughout the Earth, so it is doubtful which way every one went. Therefore I rather relate than affirm what has been here said, lest by omitting it, I seem to contradict the Opinions of grave Men; or by asserting to deliver Conjectures for certain Truth. Let us proceed to what is better known

Account of him in Brasil.

Chuni-

The Fathers sent to Convert and Instruct the People of the Archipelago of Chiloe, on the Coast of Chili before spoken of, built among those Islands 80 little Chappels, and spent the whole Year sailing from one to another to assist those poor People. The Fathers Melchior Vanegas, and John Baptist Ferrusin, sent thither by the Provincial F. James Torres, were by him order'd to inquire diligently into the Manners of the Chunians and Huillans, Inhabiting near the Streights of Magellan, and to send him an account

if there was any hope of propagating the Gospel among them. Delco the chief Man among the Chunians, satisfy'd their Desires. He being us'd to come from his Country to the Islands of Chiloe on account of Trade, trafficking with the Spaniards, found the precious Stone of the Gospel, and having taken the Name of Peter in Baptism, desir'd nothing so ardently, as that his Son might receive the same Grace. He repairing to the Fathers then busie among the Islands upon this Account, gave them very great Comfort. He brought along with him in five Vessels, besides his own Family, a numerous Train, and one well skill'd in the Language of Chiloe, who serv'd for his Interpreter, and after a courteous Reception, being ask'd concerning the Manners of the Chunians and Huillans, he deliver'd himself to the Fathers to this Effect. 'Three Days Journey (said he) 'from the Archipelago of Chiloe is Guatana, the first Island of the Chunians. 'All the way thither is through a Sea 'subject to continual Storms, which is 'not very dangerous to the Islanders, 'who by continual practice are perfectly 'acquainted with the Sea and Winds; 'but if Strangers go thither, the hazard of being Cast away is almost inevitable, by reason of the Shoals and narrow Channels. The whole Nation lives partly on the Continent of America, and partly in an infinite number of Islands not far distant from the Shore, but these so thinly Peopled, that none among them except Guatana, contains above three or four Families. 'The Soil is all Barren, Stony and Wild, 'scarce bearing any Grain. The Trees 'as to greenness, are much more dismal than those of Chiloe. The Natives 'live upon Fish and what the Sea casts up, the Women diving to the bottom, 'and soon after coming up with great store of Fish in Baskets hanging about their Necks. Their greatest want is fresh Water. They press an Oyl out of Sea Wolves, which they drink, 'and know of no other Wine, or delicate Liquor. Having drank a great deal of that Oyl, and gorg'd themselves with eating unreasonably of Fish, they vomit it up, and so celebrate their Bacchanals with Motions like drunken Men, that they may not seem to be outdone by the neighbouring Nations, whose drunken Feasts are their principal Mertainment. Yet at present the Indians 'Wheat, of which Drink is made, grow 'indifferently well in the Island of Guatana

Tebo.

Their Food.

Drink.

tana

Techu. Guatana, my native Country. The Natives are for the most part red Hair'd, of an olive Colour Complexion, and of a mild disposition. In the remoter Islands they breed Dogs with long Hair and Mains, whom they trim, and of their Hair make Garments, so short, that they cover nothing but the Shoulders and Breast, covering their Nakedness with Sea Weeds, or Leaves of a vast bigness growing in the Sea, and hardned in the Sun. Delco deliver'd himself much to this purpose. 'The Condition of the Huillans who are near the Streight of Magellan, is much more miserable, and their Disposition more barbarous. They live in almost 50 degrees of South Latitude, in a very cold Climate, and stark Naked, build moveable Huts of the Barks of Trees, in the shape of a Cone or Sugar Loaf, eat nothing dress'd, and nothing but raw Fish and Oysters. Their Skins almost black, and their Hair so harsh and upright, that it looks more like a Bush than Mans Hair. Their number is small, and they give no other reason for it, but that the Nature of the Country and the Incursions of their Enemies, suffer them not to increase;
for the Chunians hunt after the Huillans as if they were wild Beasts, and either keep them as Slaves, or sell them in the Islands of Chiloe, or else give them away; and they are still happier in Slavery than in their own Country. They rather make a Noise than Talk. They are of no use in the World before being transported; they learn the Language of Chiloe, but to drive the Birds from their Corn Fields like scare Crows, being equally fit to fright and to be frighted. By the help of the Interpreter, John Baptist Ter-rufin, in two Days time translated the ten Commandments, some principal Prayers and the Confiteor, into the Chunian
Language so successfully, that the poor
Indians were besides themselves for Joy.
Delco earnestly beg'd his Son might be Baptiz'd, but he not being sufficiently Instructed, and the Chunians oblig'd to return home it was put off till another opportunity, those People most humbly in-treating the Fathers to go along with them, which could not be granted to the great Sorrow of those distressed Converts, who had no other Comfort, but that *F.
Melchior Vanegas* promis'd he would let them have no opportunity of procuring the Salvage of their Souls. Yet for ten Years those Nations had no help but

The Huillans.

Their Houses.

what some few of them receiv'd, who came to the Islands of Chiloe. Till this Year 1619. the aforementioned F. Melchior Vanegas and Mathew Stephanus, with great Danger and Trouble sail'd over to the Island Guatana, where Delco being inform'd of their coming, had built a Chappel after the manner of those of Chiloe, and gather'd as many of his People as he could, that they might be bap-tiz'd and receiv'd into the number of the Faithful. Thence they pass'd over to the Continent and other Islands, where they found abundance very desirous of learning the Christian Doctrin; yet baptiz'd only 212, because they could not be longer absent from their own Province.

Let us return from the South Sea towards the Atlantick and Brazil. The River Urvaica of the first Magnitude, rising out of a small Spring in the Mountains of Brazil, carries but a small Stream for a long way and without any considerable name, till having swallow'd up many Streams and considerable Rivers on both sides, and by that means increas'd its store, it becomes equal to, if not greater than the Paraguay, and falls into the River of Plate, a little above the Port of Buenos Ayres, where losing its Name and Channel, as it were for a Punishment of its Presumption, it is hurry'd away into the Sea. For when it has once left Brazil running directly up the Inland, it gives a turn and runs continually parallel to the River Parana, not much inferior to it for greatness. Great Stones and Rocks lying in it at certain distances, make it incapable of Ships of burden; but when it has receiv'd the Winter floods from the Rains and other Rivers, swelling over its Shoals, vast Rocks and both Banks, unless where confined by mighty topping Shores, it spreads its Waters like a Sea. It runs two hundred Leagues from its Source with a mighty Noise, being streightned by continual Ridges of Rocks and Woods, till having with much struggling rid it self of those troublesome Obstacles, it glides more gently along the Plains. The Woods, which abound in Monkeys, Tygers, Parrots and other sorts of Creatures, differ but little from those of Pa-rana. Formerly nothing was to be seen in the Fields, but Ostriches, Lions and several sorts of Goats and Deer; at present all that vast extent of Land on both sides the River is Pasture, cover'd by an infinite number of Cows and Horses; as if these Beasts had succeeded in the place of Men, who formerly in great multitudes

Urvaica
River and Province.

tudes Inhabited these Plains, but are now very thin considering the largeness of the Country. The Province Urvaica, so call'd from the River of that Name, reaches as far in length as the River. On the East it has Brazil and the Atlantick Ocean, on the West Parana, on the North Guaira, and on the South the River of Plata; and is divided into several Provinces distinguish'd by as many barbarous Languages. Among them all the Guaranians far excel the rest, both in number and aptness to be civiliz'd and become Christians. The first European I can find that attempted to discover this Province, was Ramon or Raimund, sent thither by Gavot the Discoverer of South America for the Emperor Charles V. in the Year 1526. He sailing up the River in a Frigate, was slain in Battle by the Charvas a most fierce People, with many of his Companions. Afterwards in the Year 1557, an hundred and twenty Spaniards were sent by the Governor Martin Irala, to build a Town near the Mouth of the River Urvaica. But the very first Year of their settling there, the Natives tir'd them out with such continual Attacks, that they were forced to abandon the Colony. As they were sailing back to Paraguay, a most dismal accident befel them; for many of them being gone ashore at Noon to dine, the high Bank on which they sat, on a sudden opening and sinking under them, drew those Persons that were dining, after it into the River, making so great a Commotion in the Water, that one of the Ships being overfet, stuck its Mast in the Bottom of the River, not one of those that went out to dine escaping. But the Ship recovering, brought up a Woman alive after she had been many Fathom under Water. About the Year 1610, the Governor Ferdinand Arias made his way with some Spanish Troops to the Province of Urvaica; but hearing of the great Multitudes of Natives there were in those Parts, retir'd ingloriously without doing any thing; for the Barbarians had secur'd themselves by spreading the Terror of their Name far and near, insomuch that the Spaniards, as covetous as they were to make themselves Masters of those vast Countries, so famous for the fruitfulness of the Soil, plenty of Pasture, and conveniency of their Rivers; yet despair'd of ever subduing the Urvaicans by force of Arms. This great Work was resolv'd to be perform'd by the preaching of the Gospel, and the first that attempted it was F.

Roch Gonzalez. Whilst he and F. James Boroa were teaching the Law of God upon the River Parana, some of the Urvaicans, attracted by the fame of the new Religion, came several times to the new Town of Itapua, under pretence of Trade, and were there courteously entertain'd by the Fathers, hoping the Christian Faith might be propagated in their Country. The small number of Preachers obstructed it for a long while, till the Provincial Peter Onate being reinforced, appointed F. Roch Gonzalez for this great Work. He set out attended by a small number of Converts, and having travel'd through dismal Places as far as the Brook Aracuta, which runs into the River Urvaica, found there a great number of Indians, who had notice of his coming by their Spies, and were there naked, but arm'd with Clubs and Bows, haughtily commanding him to proceed no farther, because it would certainly cost him his life. His Companions terrify'd by their Threats left him, but he lay in a Wood all Night with only two Boys that serv'd at Mass, and the next Morning Quaracipucinus a Cacique of note came to him, promising his Protection against his Country People. By his solicitation several Caciques met, and resolv'd to hear the Father, who having declar'd to them the cause of his coming, so far prevail'd, that Nieza the most powerful of all the Caciques, invited him to his Village. The River Urvaica was two Leagues from this Village, whither he went with Nieza, and gathering a multitude of Indians, set up a Cross of a mighty bigness on the Bank of it, teaching those People to pay a devout Veneration to it, for having expounded the mystery of the Redemption, and thereupon kiss'd the Cross, all the Heathens fell down and worship'd it. There is a place a League distant from the River Urvaica, call'd Ibitiraqua, where several of the Caciques assembling upon the Day of the Conception of the Virgin Mary, F. Gonzalez mark'd out the Ground for a Town, to which he gave the Name of the Conception, and abundance of Indians from all parts resorted to Inhabit it, so that it afterwards became the Metropolis of the Province of Urvaica. Some Indians beyond and others up the River, at first threatn'd the new Town, but were soon appeas'd by F. Gonzalez. He by the Provincial's Order, set out with a few Converts to discover all the River down to the Port of Buenos Ayres, which the Indians beyond the River be-

Techo.

Manner of introducing Christianity.

First Discoverers of Urvaica.

Techo.

General
Hunting.

ing inform'd of, and imagining he went to bring in the Spaniards, now he was acquainted with their Country, they pursu'd with a Resolution to murder him, but he let them pass by in a dark Night, and return'd to the Town of the Conception without daring to proceed further. Being disappointed of this Design, he apply'd himself to build another Town, which, that it might be done with less danger of his life, he caus'd the Converts to appoint a general Hunting, as they call it, to which the Urvaicans dwelling in all the neighbouring Plains were invited. The manner of those general huntings is thus. The Indian Hunters beset a large Field, encompassing it with their Multitude; then upon a Signal given, they contract, drawing equally into a less Circumference towards the center, whither all the Ostriches, and wild Beasts retire for fear of the Men; having shut them up into a very narrow compass, they give a shout for joy, and fall to slaughtering the Game, which they dress and feast together: The Indians us'd to resort to this sport from far and near. F. Gonzalez under pretence of seeing this Sport, hop'd to gain an opportunity of finding a fit place to build a Town, and become acquainted with the Heathens. Both these things he perform'd, yet could not for the present, attempt the erecting of the Town. Besides, at his return from the hunting, he found the Plague in his new Town of the Conception, which made the Converts disperse, and found him and his Companions work enough to follow them into the Woods and Plains, that they might not die without help. After the Plague follow'd Famine, which was so sharp, that what had escaped before, fled to remote places, eating any filthy Food they met with. The Sorcerers gave out, this was a Punishment for embracing the Christian Faith; and the Paranensians were not wanting to blow the Coals, but still the Patience and Resolution of the Fathers prevail'd, and they brought back the Indians, and restored the Town.

In the Year 1620, the Provinces of Paraguay and the River of Plate, which till then had been subject to one Governour, and one Bishop, were divided into two several Governments and Bishopsricks, the River Parana being the Boundary of both their Jurisdictions. The first new Governour of the River of Plate, brought over with him from Lisbon, contrary to the known Laws, a considerable quantity of Merchants Goods; whereof Information being given at Court, the King sent over a Judge with power to examine the matter. The Town of Buenos Ayres favour'd the Governour, and contriv'd to expell their Judge, who, at the same time, happened to offend the Fathers at that Port; whereupon some crafty Friends of the Governour, advised the Rector to appoint a Judge Conservator to assert his and the Society's Right: The Rector who was a plain, harmless Man, took their Advice, and appointed a Judge over the King's Judge: This Person so appointed being set on by the Governour's Emisaries, gave Sentence against the King's Judge for the wrong done to the Society, and sent him back by force into Spain: The King's Council in Spain complain'd of this Affront to the General of the Jesuits, who, besides other religious Punishments inflicted in private, declar'd the Rector for ever incapable of the fourth Vow of the Order, and of any Dignity or Preferment in it. The King on the other side, sent one of the Counsel of Pernu to punish the Abettors of that Insolence, who is said to have fin'd them in 80000 Pistoles: Discord at this time, like a Plague, ran through the whole Province, and particularly the Towns of Santa Fe and the Assumption. About the same time a Spaniard being abroad in the Field, was set upon by a Tyger, which had broke through a Wring of Indians, and with much difficulty escaped alive, but much torn; which Accident was very remarkable, because it is the nature of Tygers ever to assault the meanest Creature first: Thus, if it meets a Man on Horse-back with a Dog, it first falls upon the Dog, then the Horse, and last of all the Man; nay, it goes further, and makes choice of Men, so that if it meet an Indian, a Black, and an European together, the Indian is first attack'd, then the Black, and next the European: Even among Spaniards it makes a distinction, and picks out those first that have most mixture of Indian Blood. This Section being compos'd of several Matters, as they occur'd in the Author; tho' we have elsewhere treated of the Guaicureans, we will here insert the manner of their performing the Funeral Exequies. F. Joseph Oregius had baptiz'd their Chief Commander, who was always a Friend to the Society, but would never be reconcil'd to Christianity till a little before his Death: Whilst the

Obsequies
of the Guaicureans.

the Father was burying the Body after the Christian manner, the Indians made a dismal howling Lamentation, and rending and breaking into pieces all his Garments, Ensigns, Garlands, Bow, and all his other Goods, scattered them abroad in the Air: Some blooded themselves at the Calves of their Legs in great abundance, others express'd their Grief by mad motions, killing all the Dogs, Parrots, and other Creatures their Commander delighted in; and had certainly murder'd and thrust into his Grave, a Woman and her Son to serve him, as they fancy'd, in the other World, had not F. Oregius, by his Authority, prevented it: His Son, James Francis, succeeded him in the Command, who being a Christian, gave great Hopes of propagating the Faith; but the fierceness of the People disappointed that expectation, and very few were gain'd the following Years.

Tho' it may seem something foreign from our purpose, yet because our Author thought fit to insert it, and the curious Reader may for variety sake, be pleas'd with an Argument concerning a nice Point in matter of Religion; I have resolv'd not to omit a Controversy that arose about Baptism, and 'twas whether the Baptism of the Blacks brought from Angola were valid, or not; some being of Opinion, that the said Blacks newly brought over, ought to be baptiz'd conditionally, others denying it: Those who were against re-baptizing argu'd thus. That it was not allowable to call in question what the Prelates on that Coast of Africk, which was subject to the Catholick King, did in relation to conferring of Sacraments: That if Scruples were started on that account, the ignorant Blacks throughout America, seeing their Country-men re-baptiz'd, would never rest 'till the same were granted them. That to prevent an Evil which might very rarely happen, there would be a Snare laid to an innumerable Multitude. That it was not deny'd, there might sometimes be Defects in the Baptism of those People, but for the most part they were not such as touch'd the validity of it. That even among Hereticks, Baptism was not duly administred; and yet it was rare that Hereticks converted were ever re-baptiz'd. That the Baptism of the Blacks had never been call'd in question for so many Years past, and therefore such an Innovation, tho' never so much palliated under the show of Religion, would be suspicious. This they said that oppos'd it; the other Party alledged, That it would be no Reflection on the Prelates of the Coast of Africk, if those Defects which they desir'd to correct but could not, were rectify'd in any other part of the World. That it was not to be called a Niceness, or Scruple to secure the Salvation of so many Souls, which was otherwise dubious. That the Blacks, who had once been examin'd, would easily be pacify'd. That it was improper to instance the Baptism of Hereticks, who rarely do any thing to invalidate it; but yet in those things wherein they err'd, the Errors were cautiously to be rectify'd; but as for the point of Innovation urg'd by the other part, it did not at all make to the purpose, because it is certain, there daily arise Disputes started by ingenious Persons upon several matters, which as Circumstances vary, alter from the former state they were in. Thus they argu'd on both sides, but the time of starting this Doubt, and cause of it, was as follows. In the Year 1605, F. James Torres, who was then laying the Foundation of the Province of Quito, observing that many thousand Blacks were every Year brought out of Africk unto America, by the way of the Port of Carthagena, he committed the care of them to F. Alonso de Sandoval, who afterwards compos'd a very useful Book, about restoring the Blacks to a state of Salvation, and dedicated it to the same F. James Torres. He often enquiring of the African Traders, after what manner the Blacks were baptiz'd at Loanda, and finding by several Years experience, how ignorant most of them were of the Mysteries of Christianity, thought he would do a very good Work, in composing a small Book, and directing it to the Archbishop of Sevil, shewing it was his Opinion, that the Baptism of most Blacks brought out of Africk into Europe and America was void for want of catechizing them; and that therefore they ought not to be admitted to other Sacraments, 'till they were conditionally baptiz'd. The Book pleas'd the Arch-bishop, who caus'd it to be examin'd by Learned Men, not only of the Society, but of other Orders, who all were of Sandoval's Opinion. By their consent the Archbishop pass'd a Decree, ordering all Blacks brought into his Diocefs, without exception, to be examin'd by able Men; and those that they had any Scruple about to be con-

Vol. IV.

Z z z z

ditionally

Of the Baptism of the Blacks.

Techo.

The HISTORY of

Techo.

ditionally baptiz'd. The Bishops of Mexico and New Granada soon follow'd his Example, and appointed Examiners of the Blacks in the Sea-port Towns. The News hereof being brought into Tucuman, F. James Torres labour'd to introduce that Examination there, with much opposition from the adverse Party. Whilst the Controversy was depending, he receiv'd Letters from F. Jerome Bogado, Rector of the College of the Society at Angola, whom F. Torres had sent to consult upon the matter, the very Words were these. F. James Torres, Your Reverence is in the right in questioning the Baptism of the Blacks sent out of Africk into other parts; for in my Opinion, they are not baptiz'd, and ought, at least, to be conditionally rebaptiz'd, because they receive Baptism without being scarce Catechiz'd: For the Day before they sail, they are carry'd in Troops to the Vicar; by whom being ask'd all together, whether they desire to be made Christians? and a few words more said to them, they are baptiz'd, and have Christian Names given them, before they understand what Faith they embrace. I have often charg'd the Vicar Generals with this great neglect, in the presence of the Bishops, but to no purpose; for tho' at first, when they have been check'd they are more careful of their Duty, yet they soon relapse into their former Negligence, and serve those poor Wretches after an undue manner. The Bishop thinks he had sufficiently clear'd his Conscience, if he lays some punishment upon the Vicars that are accus'd of such neglect. Thus F. Bogado. When these Letters were read, the Controversy ceased, and all the Fathers apply'd themselves to the relief of that miserable Nation. This may suffice, as to the matter of the Baptism of Blacks, which I thought worthy to be inserted, being a curious point which may give the Reader satisfaction.

Town of Corpus Christi.

The Plague continued to rage in the Province of Parana, in the Year 1622, yet the Fathers supplied the places of those that dyed in their Town, with new Converts brought out of the Woods, and were so successful as to build a new Town. The Inians are fifteen Leagues distant from the Itapuanas up the River, and had been earnestly solicited by F. Gonzalez for some Years, to joyn with the Itapuanas, but either the natural fierceness, or the natural love of their Country, had still made them refuse; yet, at this time, they became so well inclin'd to Christianity, that of their own accord, they ask'd for Fathers to be sent among them. F. James Boroa and F. Peter Romero went and found all things to their mind; so that very few opposing it they apply'd themselves to build the new Town, upon the Bank of the River Inian, which falls into the Parana, giving it the Name of Corpus Christi, under which it flourishes to this Day. Not far from it are the Rivers Tibiapo, Pirapo, and Caapibari, whence many Inhabitants have been drawn to the new Town, and in the Year 1670, there were computed 5000 Souls to have been baptiz'd there: About the same time this new Town was built, a number of wild Indians, of the Province of Ibitaranbeta in Brazil, came to the Woods of the Town of Loreto in Guaira, to fetch Wood to make their Arrows; some few of which Nation had been among the Converts at Loreto, and told them that their Country swarm'd in Men. F. Cataldinus laid hold of this Opportunity, in hopes of converting those People; and having, by means of the Converts, entertain'd many of them lovingly in his Town, desir'd they would take him along with them, to teach them the Christian Religion. Nambahains their Cacique, said he was willing enough to do it, but that he fear'd it might cost them both their lives. The Father being willing to expose himself to the danger, went along with him, and they travel'd a Month up the River Tibascia; but as soon as they came near the Borders of Ibitirambeta, the Cacique Nambahains stole away before his People knew of his bringing the Father: He thinking it a rashness to go on, sent two Youths to invite the Caciques of Ibitirambeta to come to him, but they with threats prevail'd with one of those Youths to marry among them, tho' he was marry'd before, and renounce Christianity; the other, rather than comply, suffer'd himself to be cut in pieces and eaten by them. Whilst these things were doing, F. Francis Vaquez, who had been sent Procrator into Europe, arriv'd at the Port of Buenos Ayres, with a supply of 21 Fathers. There F. John Vas had taught sixteen Converts Musick, which play'd and sang so well, that they gave extraordinary satisfaction. These new Fathers brought over the Catholick Kings, and Pope Gregory the 15th's Letters Patents for erecting Universities in the Province, and accordingly, the City Cordova in the Province of Tucuman, and that of Santiago

Paraguay, Tucuman, &c.

Stago or S. James, in the Kingdom of Chili had that Honour conferr'd on them. There were now in this Province of the Society, eleven Colleges, two Residences, one Noviceship, and thirteen small Houses among the Indians, and in them 194 Fathers.

Town of Salta.

Nicholas Durandus, the new Provincial of the Jesuits, in the Year 1623, erected a College of the Society at Salta, a small Spanish Town, built in the Year 1582, not far from the Borders of Peru, and at the very entrance of the Valley of Calchaquima, to curb that barbarous Nation, by Ferdinand of Lerma, Governour of the Province of Tucuman. The Town furnish'd all Necessaries for building the House and Church; and the Provincial perceiving the Fathers, who had been sent into the Valley six Years before, and settled there, did reap no Fruit worthy of their Labours, call'd them away, thinking it enough for the present, if they made some Excursions at times from the Town of Salta. The News being brought into those Southern Parts, that S. Ignatius Loiola, and S. Francis Xaverius had been Canoniz'd the Year before, there was extraordinary rejoycing in most costly manner, not only in the Spanish Cities, but even in the Indian Towns. The pleasantest Sight, for its novelty, was in the Town of the Assumption, where a number of Urvaican Boys lately made Christians, and brought thither by F. Roch. Gonzalez, were divided into two Troops, the one in the Indian, the other in the Christian Habit, and represented a Battle, dancing very dexterously to the Musick: The Indians distinguishable by the variety of their Feathers, were arm'd with Clubs and Bows, the Christians with long Crosses. It was diverting to see them sometimes all mix'd, and then presently parted; sometimes fiercely attacking one another; sometimes falling into two Ranks, and then mixing again, as if they would destroy one another: After they had thus fought a considerable time, the Christians got the day, and the Musick following to another Tune, they led the Indians as their Prisoners, and presented them to their Bishop, and Governour, to express they became Subjects to the Church, and Catholick King. At this Solemnity Quaracipucium a Cacique, and 23 more, Urvaicans, brought to the Feast by F. Gonzalez, were baptiz'd. Soon after, a Controversy arising between the Society and the Bishop of Paraguay, he sent Complaints against them

A pleasant Dance.

Vol. IV.

into Spain, and took from them their Schools in the Town of the Assumption, but it was not long before he was reduced to restore them, and be reconcil'd. The Governour of the River of Plate had desir'd of the last Provincial, to send F. Peter Romero, who was skilful in managing the Indians, up the River Urvaico, to try whether the Tarosians might be brought under, and a new Town built at the Mouth of the said River. Tho' the Mouth of the River Urvaica be not far from Buenos Ayres, yet no body had dar'd to venture up it, the numerous Indians on both sides, all of them fierce People, and speaking several Languages, having refus'd all Commerce with Strangers. Among them all, the Tarosians and Charuans were most obstinate in adhering to their Ancient Customs; living dispers'd, utter Strangers to Husbandry, and any Form of Government; and so very barbarous, that they cut off a Joint of a Finger at the death of every one of their Kindred, so that there are several of them who have nothing left but the bare Palm of their Hand. Before the coming of the Spaniards, they liv'd upon Ostriches, other Fowl, Venison and Fish: At present, they ride about the Plains, there being vast Herds of Oxen and Horses: They feed, for the most part, on Beef half raw, generally use Slings, and are so expert at them, that they often hit Birds flying, and knock down the largest Beasts. F. Romero ventur'd among them attended only by one Spaniard and a few Indians that row'd: Wheresoever they went, they met fierce Men, with their Bodies anointed, their Hair hanging below their Shoulders, their Limbs deformed with much pricking of them, and formidable for their hideous Voices. These being exhorted to embrace Religion and Civility, positively refus'd admitting any alteration of their Ancient Manners. Nevertheless the Father proceeded till he came to the first Villages of the Guaranians, an hundred Leagues distant from the Mouth of the River Urvaica, and was very desirous to make his way through, to that part of the Province Urvaica, where F. Gonzalez, four Years before, had founded the Town of the Conception; but the Indians would not permit, threatening immediate Death, if he did not turn back. Therefore finding none of all those People ripe for the Gospel, he return'd to the Port of Buenos Ayres, to give an Account of

Techo.

The Turo-
sians.

Z z z z 2 . . . what what he had seen, to his Provincial, and the King's Governour.

Techo.

The Provincial immediately sent him back to the Guaicureans, two hundred Leagues up the Rivers of Plate and Parana, where he employ'd all his Talent with his Companions in reducing that Nation; but the Barbarity of those People frustrated the Labours of those Fathers. Three Months after his arrival there, the Commander of the Guaicureans, and his Mother, attended by a great number of Indians, met the Provincial, then going and visiting the College of Assumption, intreating him to afford their People his presence. The manner of inviting him was thus; there went before a Woman singing and expressing the Desires of the Nation in Tune, declaring in many Words, how acceptable and beneficial it would be to that miserable Nation to enjoy his presence; when her Song was ended, the whole Company, with confus'd Cries desiring the same thing, oblig'd the Provincial to cross the Paraguay and repair to the place where the Guaicureans had set up the Cottages of Mats, about the Chappel of the Society, in the form of a Town: The Provincial articul'd with the Commander, that in case he would have the Fathers stay amongst them, they should settle in the Town, and forbear unjust Wars; because it was not fit, that those, who had so many Years since put themselves into the Hands of the Society, should be no way civiliz'd. They, in appearance, submitting to the Conditions, receiv'd some Gifts from the Provincial; yet very little Credit was given to their Promises, because many Years Experience had shewn, that they would not stay long in a place, their Inclinations to War being such, that they change their Habitation every Year almost, to find out new Enemies. When they return from War, they bring home to their Wives, in triumphant manner, the Skulls of their Enemies slain; which Skulls the Women on their Festival Days, bring out in great Pomp, with the commendation of the People, as it were to insult over their Enemies. Nay, they are sometimes so mad, as to contend with the Elements. When a Storm arises, and is much Thunder, or Wind, they go out in Troops, as it were to fight, shaking their Clubs in the Air, shooting flights of Arrows that way from whence the Lightning comes; and believing this show of resolution hinders of theirs.

Customs

the Spirits or Devils, whom they look upon as the causers of all Tempests, from doing any mischief. They have also some Festivals in which they represent Battles. There is no time of so much Joy among them, as when the North Winds begin to blow in that Hemisphere; for then, without any regard of Age or Condition, they fill the Air with Cries, beating one another with their Fists, computing the Year will prove plentiful, or otherwise according to the measure of their madness. Therefore the Provincial, tho' he had but small hopes of converting those People, left the Fathers there to try the utmost, who continu'd three Years longer, and then utterly abandon'd the place, when they had been in it sixteen Years, without reaping any Fruit among those hardened Barbarians, but only the baptizing some Infants, and a very few at Mens estate, at the point of death. At the same time the Plague raging through the Province of Parana, made mighty havock in all the new Towns of the converted Indians, but more especially at Jaguapua, where the Fathers had been eight Years a gathering a considerable number of Indians, and bringing them into the Church. Here the Distemper was so virulent, that after the greater part of the Inhabitants had perished, those few that remained went away, some to Itapua, and some to other places. As soon as the Infection ceased, the Fathers, with infinite labour, searched all the Woods, Mountains, and Marshes, to bring fresh Supplies of Inhabitants to the Towns. Having mentioned the Town of Itapua, I will not omit a more than manful act of a Woman of that place. A cruel Tyger had seiz'd a Boy of ten Years of Age in the presence of the Father and Mother, and close by them, which the fierce Beast made away with, throwing the Child over its Shoulder, as the Fox does with a Fowl. The Father, astonish'd at the Accident, fled, but the Mother, whose Love was tenderer, forgetting the danger, ran after the Tyger, and recovering the Boy, brought him back to her Husband, that fierce Creature never attempting to oppose her; the Husband ever after confessing, his Wife had more Courage than he.

Plague.

A brave Woman.

Something was said before of the Ibitirambetans concerning whom we will add what remains in this Place. Tho' the

A Town built among the Ibitirambetans.

Paraguay, Tucuman, &c.

The Attempt made before upon them prov'd unsuccessful, this did not discourage the Fathers Antony Ruiz, Joseph Cataldinus, and James Salazar from making another effort to bring them over to the Flock of Christ. The whole Province of Guaira is divided into two Parts, the Woody, and the Champain. The woody had been under the direction of the Fathers for several Years. But as yet they could never get into the Champain, because of the Inhumanity of the People, who cruelly devour Strangers, and resolutely defend themselves against any Foreign Invasion. Ibitirambeta is a woody Mountain, which separates these two Parts of Guaira, so call'd by the Natives, because at a distance it looks like a Man's Head, with a Rock sticking out of the Chin, instead of a Beard. About this Mountain were abundance of Villages of Heathens, which being brought together would make a populous Town, and be a good Step towards the Champain Country. A Year before this, as was mention'd above, the Inhabitants of this Mountain, cruelly slew the Youth sent to them by F. Cataldinus, and had roasted and eaten several of the People of the woody Country at their Feasts; for they reckon Man's Flesh their greatest Dainty. When the Fathers, after passing the Rocks and Precipices of the River Tibaxiva, came near to their Borders, the Converts attending them, began to be seiz'd with Fear, and chiefly because Taitetus, a Man famous for Cruelty among the Itibirambetans, had met them a little before, and assur'd F. Ruiz that if he durst proceed he would meet with many Enemies. Yet some offer'd to hazard themselves in carrying a Message to those People. But the Fathers Ruiz and Cataldinus leaving F. James Salazar to look to the Boats, with Orders if they were Kill'd to fly down the River, went on themselves with a few Indian Converts by Land. Having wandred a long while without knowing the way through the Woods, they at last met with a Man more like a painted Devil than an Indian, who acting the Part of an Angel, undertook to introduce the Fathers into his Village, provided they would let him go before, to dispose them to receive their Guests favourably; assuring them it would be very dangerous to go without he made way for them. The Fathers thinking it safer to stand the Brunt of coming upon those People suddenly, than to give them time to consult together, follow'd the Indian Guide close at the Heels, and that same Day boldly enter'd the first Village of the Itibirambetans, the People whereof, tho' they forbore acting any Cruelty, yet shewing their mistrust declar'd they would not allow the Fathers to stay among them, lest after them should follow the Rovers that went about to carry the Indians into Captivity. As they were in this Condition, the Cacique of another Village promising F. Ruiz his Protection, gave some Hopes of Success. Having therefore call'd away F. Salazar, from the River, they mark'd out the Ground for a Town, fell to build a Church, and abundance of People flocking thither from the Neighbourhood, order'd a Form of Government. As they were thus Employ'd, News was brought, that several Factious had conspir'd together, and particularly those that the Year before slew the Youth sent by the Fathers, all unanimously agreeing, that the Strangers were to be made away, lest they should bring some Mischief upon the Province; and that they would Taste whether the Flesh of Priests differ'd in Taste from that of other Men. The Enemy being within less than a Mile of the Town, F. Ruiz came to F. Cataldinus, then busie about building the Church, to acquaint him with the Danger, who answer'd, As the Will of Heaven is, so let it be, and went on with his Work. The Enemy being told of this Resolution of the Fathers, went off without attempting any thing, fearing some great Misfortune might befall them, seeing those Strangers make so small account of Death. This Storm being blown over, there ensu'd such a Calm, that they had leisure to build the Town in Peace, and Dedicate it to S. Francis Xavierius. Not only the neighbouring People, but even those that before had been Enemies, and others from remoter Parts resorting to inhabit this Town, it came to contain 1500 Families. Here F. Cataldinus was left alone, and so continu'd a Year among those barbarous People.

The other two Fathers Ruiz and Salazar undertook a new dangerous Expedition into the Lands of Taiaboa, whereof I find the following Account. Huibaius a River in Guaira, falling into the Parana, under the Tropick of Capricorn, has on its Banks Villarica, a little Spanish City, thirty Leagues from its Mouth, and eight Indian Towns not far from it, and under its Jurisdiction. Above this Town the River falling from a Precipice

Techo.

Taiaboa's
Territories

hinders any Vessels going farther up. Techo. This Precipice was a Boundary and Entrenchment to Taiaboa, and his confederate Caciques. All this Nation is so barbarously greedy of Human Flesh, that when they want Enemies, they inhumanly Kill and Eat their own People. Some of them weau their Children with Mans Flesh, and make the Heads of their Arrows of Men's Bones, making the Monuments of their Brutality the Instruments of fresh Cruelty. Which makes me admire Ransoniarius should write, that in this part of Guaria, there are no Tygers or wild Beasts, whereas there are almost as many wild Beasts as Natives; for the old Saying fits no Nation so exactly, viz. Man plays the Wolf with Man. The reason why this Country took its Name from Taiaboa, was because he being the most powerful of all the neighbouring Caciques, was by his People call'd the Great. Take this Account of him. Some Years before this we now write of, an European Commander, famous for his Hatred to the Indians, coming from the Metropolis of Paraguay to Villarica with a Power, pretending Friendship, sent to invite Taiaboa to come to him, promising him much Courtesie and some Presents. Upon publick Faith given Taiaboa, and three other powerful Caciques, come to Villarica, full of Hopes of what they were to receive, but there instead of Gifts, they met with Threats, Stripes and Bonds; that Commander terrifying them with Death and Tortures, if they did not bring a Number of Indians to Villarica, to be made Slaves. Three of the four Caciques, rather than betray their People, starv'd themselves to Death in Prison. Taiaboa alone escaping with his Fetters into his Territories, for the future was so strict in hindring any resort to his Territories, that he not only kept off the Spaniards, but tore to Pieces and devour'd the Indians sent to him at several times to settle Peace. The Spaniards had often invaded him, but never came off without much Loss; insomuch that there were no further Thoughts of subduing them. Thus stood Taiaboa, when F. Ruiz entertain'd Thoughts of Converting those People. When his Design was known, every Body affirm'd he went in great Danger of his Life; but he set out and travell'd eight Days difficult Journey, with F. Salazar, a resolute Man, to the Borders of Taiaboa, and leaving his Companion in the Towns about Villarica, he pass'd over the Precipice, and got to the first Village of Taiaboa's Party; and perceiving how great the Danger was, those Man-eating Indians flocking about from all Parts, he prepar'd himself and fifteen Converts that attended him, for Death. As he was so imploy'd, the Canibals and Sorcerers gather'd about him, to whom he declar'd the cause of his coming, which was to teach them the way to Heaven through Jesus Christ, and how to avoid eternal Torments. Scarce had he spoke those Words, when the Indians gave him the Lye, declaring him guilty of Death for denouncing eternal Torments to them, and were just ready to fall upon him. John Guirains a Convert persuaded him to fly, which as they did the Arrows flew about them so thick, that Seven were immediately Kill'd, and Guirains perceiving they all aim'd at the Father, who could not fly so well as the rest, clasp'd his Gown and Cap on him himself, that the Indians might mistake him for the Priest, and aim at him. Thus they both escap'd into a Wood, with Seven more of their Companions, whence with great Sorrow they made their way through the Bushes and Brambles, down to the River, and there found a Boat two old Men had brought from a Village that was in Amity, hearing of the Danger they were in. This Boat carry'd him down the River to the Towns about Villarica, where he found F. Salazar. In the mean while, the Canibals having divided the Booty F. Ruiz left behind him, made a Feast of the Bodies of the Convert Indians, nothing troubling them, but that they had mist of the Priest's Flesh, and could not drink about in his Skull. F. Salazar was left in those Towns of Converts about Villarica, that being near at Hand, he might endeavour by Kindness to win Taiaboa's People, but nothing succeeded for a Year and a half. F. Ruiz went away to the Town of S. Xaverius, which he found much encreas'd by a great Number of Converts, and having afterwards been to give an Account of his Actions, to the Provincial return'd into the Province of Guaira, where attempting to reduce the Tucutiensians, he found the Success answerable to his Expectation. The People lay in the mid-way between the old Towns of Guaira, and the new Colony of S. Xaverius. It was therefore very convenient to settle a new Colony among the Tucutiensians that there might be a direct way and Commerce between the

Of Taiaboa's.

The Tucutiensians.

the aforesaid Towns and Colony, because before the way was very troublesome, being far about, and along the River Tibariva, besides the Danger of leaving barbarous Enemies behind. The Cacique of the first Village the Fathers came to, offer'd them that Place to build the Town, but that being unhealthy, they chose another, to which 200 Families immediately resorted out of the Neighbourhood, and soon after six Villages came over to it entire. The Church and Town had the Name of S. Joseph given them. Having settled this Town, and left F. Simon Maceta in it to instruct the People, F. Ruiz undertook to open a way through the Woods and Mountains, to the Colony of S. Xavierius, and tho' he met with almost insuperable Difficulties and Hardships, being several Days without Water, and forced to suck the moisture of a certain Branch that runs up the Trees like a Rope, for Drink, and feed upon Leaves, he at length prevail'd, and got safe to the Town, to which he had made this new Road. I have follow'd F. Ruiz in all these Travels to come to the conclusion of what we are to say of Taioba, with whom we began this Section, and am now drawing near to bring them together that the Relation may not be dismembred, as it is in our Author, who has divided it too much for the Convenience of the Reader. Suruba a Cacique in great Authority had been the main Obstacle for a long time to the Conversion of the Taiatenians, a People of the Territory of Nivasingnia, opposite to the Plains of Guaia, he being an obstinate follower of the Customs of his Fore-fathers, and a profess'd Enemy to Christianity. He, tho' his People were well inclin'd to the Faith, kept them from any Communication with F. Ruiz, because he was resolv'd to have no Town built within his Liberty. This Suruba, attended by several Caciques and their Followers, all Enemies to the Spaniards, went into the Lands of the great Taioba, to gather the Herb of Paraguay, in which they take great delight, and whereof an account has been given before. Among them was Pindovius, a powerful Man among his People, who the Year before lay in wait for F. Ruiz, to eat him, and afterwards would have had him come to erect a Town in his Territories. Taioba the Great, dissembling his hatred to Strangers, gave them free Passage through his Lands, to gather the Herb, but laying an Ambush for them as they return'd, slew Suruba; and all his Company, securing their Bodies to make a Feast. Only Pindovius making the best use of his Weapons, broke through a Company of Bow-Men, with three Followers, and made his Escape. Suruba being thus taken off, Pindovius considering to what a peaceable Condition the Itibirambetans were reduced by the Society, from their former Confusions and Disorders, but erecting the Town of S. Xavierius, and that he had Enemies whom he could not withstand, unless he joyn'd the Christians, sent three Caciques of his Faction to F. Ruiz, to desire in his Name he would come and build a Town. The Inhabitants of the Town of S. Xavierius hearing of it, severely reprimanded his Messengers, hindring them from the Speech of the Father, alledging that was one of Pindovius his usual Frauds, to draw the Fathers to him, that he might devour them. Yet F. Ruiz taking the Messengers apart, promis'd to go with them in three Days, notwithstanding any Danger that might threaten. They thank'd him for giving Credit to them, rather than to those that gave so ill a Character of them, and promis'd, they would be as zealous in protecting him and his, as the Itibirambetans had been. After the three Days F. Ruiz and his Companion set forward, and the fourth Day of their Journey came to the Place of Pindovius his residence, by whom they were receiv'd with triumphal Arches made of Boughs, amidst the Noise of Drums and Trumpets, and throng of People flocking from all Parts, and so Conducted to a Chappel built for them. Pindovius promis'd to use all his Endeavours to gather Inhabitants for a populous Town, he gave the Fathers a House that was Fortify'd with a Trench and Palisadoes, against the attempts of a certain Cacique, who had taken and eaten Pindovius his own Mother, as Pindovius had done by several of his Friends; and not long before the coming of the Fathers that Enemy had taken three Boys of Pindovius his Party and roasted them, and kill'd some Indian Women, whose Bodies Pindovius recover'd, and among the rest one that was shot through having Life left was Baptiz'd and recover'd. The Place pitch'd upon to build the Town, was a Field very commodious by reason of the River running along it, and abundance of Fir Trees close by.

There

Town of
S. Joseph.

Tecba.
Incarnati- on Town
built.

There a Cross was erected, and the Names of many Saints being put into an Urn, they drew to give a Name to the Town, and missing All Saints, took out The Incarnation, as the Place is still call'd, which soon contain'd 1500 Families.

F. Christopher Mendoza was left in the new Town of the Incarnation, F. Ruiz repairing to other Parts. Whilst he was absent, the Indians of the Plian rose in Arms against Pindovius, for having receiv'd the Society, resolving to kill F. Mendoza, and destroy the Town. Having gather'd their Forces, they sent a Youth to discover the Strength of Pindovius. This Youth being taken was put to the Rack to discover the Designs of the Enemy, which still he resolutely refus'd to have any Knowledge of, till F. Mendoza taking up his Breviary to say his Office, he believing that Book discover'd all Secrets to the Europeans, of his own accord reveal'd all that could not be extorted from him before, declaring that the Enemy desir'd nothing more than to gorge themselves with the Flesh of the Priests, and had resolv'd to ruin the Town, and Slaughter all its Inhabitants. Upon this Intelligence Pindovius led out his Men with all expedition against the Enemy; but their being disappointed by their Spy, fearing some Treachery, retir'd to their own Lands. But to return to the great Taiaoba, from whom the continu'd Series of these Affairs has diverted us, he being now somewhat mollify'd by the Fame of the Society, sent two of his Sons in a Disguise with the Cacique Maendius to the Town of S. Xaverius, to discover whether all was true that was reported of the Society. They having liv'd conceal'd some Days in the Town, were at last discover'd by a Servant of theirs to F. Francis Diasianus, who then had charge of the Ibitirambetans. The Father hoping that opportunity might serve to oblige Taiaoba, sent for the two Youths, and Maendius in an honourable manner, and ask'd what was the Design of their coming; who ingenuously answer'd, they came as Spies to pry into the Manners of the Christian Priests and their Converts. Next he ask'd, How they lik'd the Religion? To which they unanimously reply'd, they lik'd it well, and would persuade Taiaoba to admit Christianity in his Dominions. This done they were handsomly clad and sent back. F. Ruiz being inform'd hereof by Letter, hasten'd to the Town of S. Xaverius.

Taiaoba hearing of his approach, went out to the Borders of his Territories to meet him with a great Retinue, and embracing him with great Demonstrations of Joy, said, Behold me here, O Father, receive me as your Son, and instruct me what I am to do. His Wife in no less obliging a manner, set before him her three little Children, whom F. Ruiz lovingly Imbracing, wonderfully oblig'd both the Parents. For nothing so much takes with the Indians, as to see their Children belov'd by Strangers. Being conducted through Arches made of Boughs, with great Noise of Trumpets, into Taiaoba's Lands; His first care was to chuse a Place to build a Town, and having pitch'd upon it near the River Huibaio, with the assistance of 300 Indians he erected a Cross, laid the Foundation of a Church, mark'd out the Plat for the Town, created Magistrates in the Name of his Catholick Majesty, gave the chief Command to Taiaoba, appointed his eldest Son Captain of the Forces, honour'd the other Caciques with several Titles, baptiz'd 28 small Children of Taiaoba's by several Wives, and gave hopes to those that were grown to Mens estate, that they should be receiv'd into the number of the Faithful, as soon as they had learnt the Rudiments of Christianity. The Sorcerers enrag'd at this Success, stirr'd up all the neighbouring People against Taiaoba, who setting out gave strict Command that no harm should be done to F. Ruiz, their design being to take him alive, and kill him with Solemnity at a Feast. Taiaoba and his confederate Caciques being much inferior to the Enemy in number, and sensible of their Danger, went late at Night to F. Ruiz desiring to be baptiz'd, and promising, If that Favour were granted them, to dye Manfully in Defence of the Faith. The Father considering the present Circumstances, instructed them the best he could for that short time, and made them all Christians. Before break of Day the Enemy having divided their Troops into four parts, attack'd Taiaoba's Forces. At the first Onset several of the Enemies and two of ours fell, many on both sides and among them Taiaoba's Son being Wounded, and his whole Party put to flight. F. Ruiz order'd Taiaoba to stay in the Place design'd to build the Town, with the Cacique Piraquatia, till they could have an opportunity of retrieving that Misfortune. The People of Villarica hearing of what had hapned, sent 500 Converts well Arm'd against those revolted revolted Indians. These coming to a Battle, and being overpowered by the Multitude of the Enemies, were forced to secure themselves within Palisadoes. Where the Fight being renew'd, they must all have perish'd, had not F. Ruiz advis'd them to receive all the Enemies Arrows without shooting any, because both sides make use of the Enemies Arrows, and when they have none left they certainly fly. By this means our Men having receiv'd all their Arrows without any harm, soon put them to flight, which done they return'd home. It hapned in this Expedition that our Men having put the Enemies to flight, brought away a Pot full of Flesh, whereof F. Ruiz's Hunger pressing, and believing it to be Venison, eat a little, but was struck with horror, when at the bottom of the Pot they found a Mans Head and Hands, and above all when it was found to be the Flesh of his own Clerk, who being taken in the former flight, had been reserv'd for a solemn Entertainment. Concerning the Ceremonies of their Feasts of human Flesh, because we have often occasion to mention them, take this short account. The Man-eaters of the Province of Guaira led any Prisoner they took in War to their Village, allowing him all manner of Dainties they could think of, that he being fatted, might fatten others with his Flesh. During the fattening Time, it was a Crime to refuse him any Thing he had a mind to. On the Day before the Slaughter was to be, the Inhabitants of the Village calling in the Neighbours on all sides, made a mighty Appearance. First went a great number of armed Men two and two, and Women in the same manner; one Maid in the midst of the Procession richly adorn'd with Feathers and Garments, carry'd a Club, the Instrument of their Cruelty, in a fine Dish; and another dress'd like her, a Crown or Garland for the intended Victim. Lusty brawny Women led the Prisoner, bound about the middle with black Ropes and his Arms loose, throwing Sticks and Stones at all about him. If the Prisoner hapned to hurt any Body, all the Multitude applauded his Valour and Dexterity, with great Shouts and Acclamations. The Procession of the Eve being ended, they spent the Night in confuse Noise, Dancing and Drunkenness; cramming the Prisoner with Meat and Drink. In the Morning they led him in the same manner as the Day before to the Place of Slaughter, where having repeated all the same Follies, the Prisoner being Crown'd by some powerful Cacique and curiously Adorn'd, was knock'd down with the Club. When down all there present struck him, leaving their old Names and taking new Ones, and even the little Children having Names given them by their Mothers, were forced to strike the Body with their Hands. When it appear'd he was dead, all the Company broke out into immoderate Laughter, and Danced about before the inhuman Feast. Then they boil the Carcass, cut in pieces and eat it, sending some Pieces to the neighbouring Villages, that they might Taste and take new Names. This Barbarity was look'd upon as a glorious Death, and therefore very few Prisoners made their escape, tho' they might easily do it. Things not being yet ripe for building the Town, because the Enemies were too powerful and the Friends but few; F. Ruiz retir'd from thence to visit the other Parts of Guaira. Having perform'd that Duty, he return'd with greater Resolution, and tho' all People dissuaded him, alledging, He would infallibly be devour'd by the barbarous Indians, nothing could alter him. He therefore sent before Nicholas Taiaoba, with Orders to gather all the Force he could to oppose the Enemies, whilst he had recourse to God for Aid. About the same time an hundred of the Bloodiest of those Indians who had formerly eaten the seven Converts that attended F. Ruiz, came and submitted themselves to him; and News was brought that seven Caciques, who were mortal Enemies to Christianity, had been beaten to Death with Clubs in the Woods, and many others of that stamp Slain in the same Place, yet it could never be known who had made all that Slaughter. So many Obstacles being remov'd, F. Ruiz set forward, and within a few Days was met by Taiaoba and Piraguatia, with whom he went to the Place design'd to build the Town, where he found very few Indians, because the Followers of Taiaoba and Piraguatia understanding the other Indians had again Conspir'd against them durst not assemble. Guiravera a Cacique was the most inveterate of Canibals, who now threatned F. Ruiz, should not escape him, and therefore call'd together all the Caciques of his Faction, who agreed to put his Design in Execution, which was thus disappointed. Among the rest was Ararundio, who in the former Attempt against F. Ruiz, Commanded their Forces; him Guiravera upon some suspi-

Ceremonies of killing Men to eat.

Techo.

Town of the Seven Archangles built.

tion, Murder'd with his own Hand, and lay'd him before the rest to be eaten, designing to make a Feast of all his Followers. Accordingly Cheacabic another Cacique, who had formerly promis'd his Concubines to Treat them with F. Ruiz's Legs, was shot through. These Murders bred Discord, and so the Enemies Forces were divided, and Taiacoba's Party so considerably Increas'd, that of 80 Caciques there were in that part of the Country, 60 favour'd Christianity with Taiacoba. F. Ruiz encourag'd by this Success, fell to Work on Building the new Town, gave it the Name of the Seven Archangels, and settled the Form of Government. There he baptiz'd 500 Persons, before he left that populous Town to the charge of F. Peter Spinosa to go himself into the Plain, where we shall speak of him again hereafter.

Of the People of Cuto or Chicuito.

Tho' some Account has been given before at number 46. of the Province of Cuto or Chicuito, we will here add a further Relation our Author gives out of a Letter of F. Dominick Gonzalez, Rector of the College of Mendoza, the Capital of that Province, who labour'd much for the Conversion of those People, and writing to the Provincial, speaks thus of them. The Indians (says he) among whom I have been, inviting one another from several Villages, have often solemn Revellings. I saw the Places of their mad drunken Meetings, which the Lord of the Village and Master of the Feasts encloses with Straw, making them round with Gaps at certain distances, and in bigness proportionable to the number of the Guests. There all the Men pass three or four Days in Dancing and Singing, without Sleeping. The Women are not to come within these Inclosures, only when they bring their Husbands Wine, which they do with their Eyes shut, and their Face turn'd away; if through any neglect they look upon the Men when they are Revelling in that Ring, the Punishment is Death; which Law is so rigorous, that neither the Husband forgives his Wife, nor the Father his Daughter. The reason they give for this superstitious Cruelty, is that they have found by Experience, as they pretend, that some of the Revellers dye presently, and sometimes are openly kill'd by the Devil, if they are seen by Women in that Enclosure. The Devil before call'd upon, is present at these Dances, and the way of raising of him is thus. An old Fellow standing in the midst of the Dancers, beats a Drum till he visibly appears with a mighty Noise, in the shape of a Man, Dog or Fox. When come, the Devil does not refuse to Drink, *then having made a Speech to the Company, the Parents offer their Children to him, whom he marks as his, drawing Blood from them with his Nails. At other times, those that desire to devote their Children to the Devil, carry them to certain old Men appointed for that purpose, who tear the Children's Skin with their Nails, and pierce their Heads with a sharp Bone till they bleed plentifully, the Blood which runs they receive in their Hands and scatter it in the Air, believing the Children Consecrated by this Ceremony. Having thus Blooded them, they make them fast in some retir'd Place remote from all other Company, by which Misery they pretend they become strong. All the Nation adores the Sun, Moon and Morning Star, hoping for all Health and Prosperity from them. Thus F. Gonzalez of the People of the Province of Cuto or Chicuito.*

Let us look back a little into the Province of Parana, where some attempts had been made to introduce Christianity among those People, Inhabiting on the Banks of the upper part of the River, yet at length some of the Caciques had been so far oblig'd by frequent Courtesies, that it was believ'd there might be a probability of building a Town. F. James Boroa and Claudius Ruiz undertook this Work in the Year 1624. setting forwards in March, with a Company of select Converts. The Mouth of the River Acarai is 30 Leagues from the Town of Corpus Christi, whence they set out. About that River dwelt several Caciques, one of whom of his own accord, assign'd a Place in his Liberty to build the Town. The Report whereof being spread abroad, drew many Caciques thither to confer, who departed so as was believ'd they had been gain'd over to the Faith. The Fathers therefore built a sort of Chappel for present use, and give the new Town the Name of the Nativity of the Virgin Mary, taking all possible care to attract all the neighbouring People to come to Inhabit there. F. Claudius Ruiz was left there alone, and endur'd very much, there being scarce a Man in the Town but what fell sick, as soon as they recover'd he drew over the Inhabitants of two Villages. But his main Design was upon Quaracipucarius an Apostate, who hearing the Father was coming to him, assembled the neighbouring Caciques to Murder him; but the Father wrought so powerfully upon him by his Words, that he furnish'd him Provisions, and some time after joynd the other Converts. At this time and others the Fa-

The Town
of the Nativity built

thers

they brought several Indians to his Town, but they out of their natural Laziness neglecting to build their Houses, were frightened by a Tyger that us'd to come into the Town at Nights, that they fell to Work in their own Defence, and with wonderful Celerity built substantial Habitations to defend them from Danger. Soon after the Tyger was taken in a Gin. This Place was long subject to be so infested by Tygers, and had another Plague, which was a multitude of Guats breeding in that low hot Ground, that Day and Night were a continual Torment to the Inhabitants, yet the Town prosper'd and continues to this Day. Jaguapinus a Cacique of this Province of Paragua, was a great hindrance to the progress of Christianity, and persuaded the Heathens of Uruaica, to build a larger Town near to that of the Conception, to the end they might with united Forces make War on the Christians, and obstruct their Increase. The Converts of Parana having notice of his Design, drew together and fell upon his Town, where they took him, and sent him into Banishment; which prov'd a double Advantage to the Towns of Parana and Uruaica; for Jaguapinus became a Christian with all his Followers, and afterwards many more Towns were built. Yet amidst all this Prosperity, no little Trouble was rais'd by one John Quaracius a wicked Sorcerer, famous for many Villanies, who being born in the Province of Guaira came into that of Parana, suffering himself to be Baptiz'd, that he might being the less suspected do most Harm. He travelling into several Countries, spread every where his damnable Superstitions, endeavouring to dissuade all he could from embracing Christianity. In the Town of the Assumption, being Convicted of heinous Crimes, he was Condemn'd to be Hang'd, but sav'd by some indiscreet Persons, and Banish'd to the Town of Santa Fe. Making his escape from thence up the River Parana, he privately got into the Town of the Itatinsians, subject to the Franciscan Fathers. Being a crafty Fellow he persuaded the People to conceal him, and by insinuating Discourses prevail'd with those credulous Indians, to repair to him in great numbers at Night. The Doctrine this Night-Doctor taught, was this. ' That they should ' take heed of the Christians and their ' Priests, who were devoted to the Ruin ' of the Indians. That they persuaded ' the Converts to Confession, that they

A famous
Sorcerer.

' might make an ill use of the knowlege ' of their Sins. That the Salt they use ' in Baptism, was a sure Poison sooner ' or later to infect the Bodies of Infants ' or Men. That the holy Oyls serv'd ' only to cause Deformity. That the ' Christian Priests forbid the having of ' many Wives maliciously, lest the Indians multiplying too fast, should be ' too hard for the Spaniards. That ' therefore he by the Power he had in ' him, commanded them all not to be ' satisfy'd with one Wife for the future, ' but to keep as many as they could get. Live (said he) and Drink after your ancient Manner, making Merry with Dancing and Drunkenness; celebrating the Memory of our Ancestors. Give no Honour to the Images of Saints, but look upon me as your only Deity. If you do otherwise, I will deliver you up to be swallow'd by the Parana, transform'd into Frogs and Toads. To these blasphemous Doctrines, he added a leud Example. For besides keeping seven Concubines constantly to satisfy his Lust, he would have to do with any others at Pleasure. Having thus done much harm by Words and Example, in a short time he so perverted the Itatinsians, that they look'd not like the same People. For instead of Respecting they Revil'd the Priests. Instead of frequenting the Sacraments, they were fallen to their former Vices so openly, that a Revolt of the whole Town was fear'd. F. John Gamarra a Franciscan, well skill'd in the Indian Language, and in the way of managing those People, was then Chief there, who inquiring into the cause of this sudden change, was a long time before he could make any Discovery, till at last a Boy made some Discovery. For having a particular kindness for him, and asking him, Whether he lov'd him? The Boy answer'd, Indeed I love you Father, but John Quaracius lies privately in Town, whom I love better than you. Quaracius's Name was well known, and therefore having heard this Account, he made no question but that was the cause of all the Mischief. But he being more earnest in that Business than was proper, Quaracius making his escape with his Concubines up the River Parana got away into Maracana, the refuge of wicked Men for many Years. Then making some Looses from thence, spreading his Venom in all Parts, he infected our Converts, and sail'd to the Villages of the upper Parana, to persuade the Infidels not to embrace the Faith. F. Gonzalez observing the change in the Converts,

Techo.

~
Techo.
~

and not knowing the cause whence that Mischief proceeded, having receiv'd Letters from F. Gamarra, giving an account of Quaraciu's escape, gather'd a Company of the most Faithful of the Converts, and with them halted to Maracana, but before he could get thither, the Impostor had betaken himself to his lurking Places in the Marshes, wherewith he was well acquainted, and would never have been discover'd thence, had not one of his Concubines betray'd him. When found, the Converts bound him fast, and after shewing him in the Town of Ititana, conducted him down the Parana, and up the Paraguay to the City of the Assumption, where he was hang'd, and so deliver'd the Provinces of Parana and Urvaica from imminent Danger.

About this time, that is, the Year 1625 or 26. the Kingdom of Chili which hitherto had been a part of the Jesuits Province of Paraguay, by reason of the vast extent of the said Province, and the vast Mountains which part those Dominions, and are passable but at certain times in the Year, was divided and made a Vice-Province, subject to that of Pern, which I mention here, because this History treating only of the Father's Province of Paraguay, we shall for the future have no more occasion to speak of the said Kingdom of Chili. Upon this separation, all the Fathers born in that Kingdom retiring to it, there began to be a want in Paraguay, to remedy which Gaspar Sabrino was sent Procurator to Rome, to bring new Supplies out of Europe. There we will leave him and return to F. James Boroa, who being chosen Rector of the College in the City of the Assumption, beg'd of the Provincial that before he entred upon that Dignity, he might have leave once more to try to bring the Iguazuans, a People bordering on Parana, among whom he had been before with imminent Danger of his Life, to build a Town and embrace the Faith; which having obtain'd, he set forward with all Necessaries for his Design. Iguazu, which signifies, great River, falls into the Parana with a mighty Noise, at an almost equal distance from the Town of Itapua and borders on the Province of Parana, in about 24 degrees of South Latitude. A craggy Rock lying quite athwart the River four Miles above its Mouth, renders it innavigable, and runs down from a great height such a vast quantity of Water, that the Noise of its falling is heard three Leagues off, and the violence of its dashing, forms

River Iguazu.

as it were a Cloud ever visible from the Parana. This Precipice had till this time been as a Bulwark, to secure them against all Foreigners. The whole Nation differs in nothing from the rest of the Guaranians. Before the coming of the Jesuits among them, the Women went Naked. They reckned it dainty Diet to feed on the Flesh of their Enemies. No Spaniard had hitherto been among them, nor was there any hopes of entring by force of Arms. Three Years before this F. James Boroa, attempting with a few Converts to introduce Christian Religion among them, was forced to retire by the Natives in Arms. Two Years after having pass'd the same Precipice, and gain'd the good will of some Caciques, he was again expell'd by Taupá, the most powerful of the Iguazuans, and return'd to Parana with small hopes of reducing those People. But being of a Spirit that still struggled against all Difficulties, he again went upon the same Expedition better provided than before, with F. Claudius Ruier for his Companion. Their Design being known, the Iguazuans according to their Custom, held a Consultation at a solemn Feast, to Debate, whether the Preachers of a new Law ought to be admitted. That the Business might be perform'd with the greater Solemnity, they with horrid Ceremonies kill'd a Youth they had Prisoner, dress'd, and eat him. What is wonderful, amidst these Abominations, when the Matter was put to the Vote, they all unanimously agreed, that F. James Boroa was to be admitted, because from the time they had resisted him, God had punish'd them with Famine and Pestilence; most of those who were the chief Cause of expelling him, being taken off by the Plague. As soon therefore as they heard that the Father had set out of Acarai, they sent Boats to the Precipice, which when he had pass'd, they receiv'd him in their first Village with extraordinary Demonstrations of Kindness. The following Days Taupá himself, and other Caciques came very readily to submit themselves. Several strove to have the new Town built where their Villages stood, but the Fathers without regard to private Interest, chose the most convenient Place for the Publick. A great Cross was erected, and the Plat being mark'd out, abundance of People from all the neighbouring Parts, destroying their Villages, came to settle there. The new Colony was call'd S. Mary Major of Iguazu. After four Months the Cacique

Town of S. Mary of Iguazu built.

Parana

Paraguay, at the instance of Taupá, brought over two hundred Families to the Town; after whom, none refused to embrace Christianity, so that 150 Men and Women were baptiz'd on the Feast of the Assumption, and above 500 of all sorts within a few days after, all the rest coming in by degrees, to the number of 8600, at the time when the Author resided there. The House and Church were five Months building; during which time the Fathers dwelt and taught under Mats; living so poorly, that insipid Roots were their chief Dainties; for the Country of Iguazu being all woody, has not Pasture for Cattel; and the River being shut up by the Precipice, has no Fish, so that all the People feed on Snails, and some inconsiderable Fruits of the Earth.

S. Nicholas Town built.

F. Roch Gonzales was no less successful upon the River Urvaica. He had been confin'd for seven Years to the Town of the Conception, built by himself, not being able to set his Foot beyond the River, because of the Obstinacy and Jealousy of the Indians; but many Obstacles being now remov'd, passing the Urvaica with a few Converts, he went as far as the place where the small River Piratin falls into it. Having found a place fit to build on, two Leagues from thence on the Banks of the said River, he summon'd the Neighbouring People to a Conference, and having gain'd their Affections, on the Day of the Invention of the Cross, he erecteth one, and laid the Foundation of a Town, which, in honour of his Provincial, Nicholas Durand, he call'd S. Nicholas; and the Indians resorting to it, in a short time it grew populous, so that above seven thousand were baptiz'd there in a few Years. In the mean while, Luis de Cespedes, Governour of the Province of Rio de la Plata, thinking it would gain him Reputation, and be a matter of Merit with the King of Spain, if the Province of Urvaica were reduced to admit of Towns, during his Government, used all possible means to open a Way from the Port of Buenos Ayres, to the Town of the Conception, founded by F. Gonzalez. But despairing of ever subduing such vast Nations by force of Arms, he concluded the only way to compass it, was to encourage the Society, with Supplies from the King to continue that Expedition. To this purpose, having purchased the Friendship of the Inhabitants, near the Mouth of the River Urvaica, he prevailed with Ferdi- nand de Sa, a Spaniard, well acquainted with the Language and Temper of the Indians, partly by his Authority, and partly by hopes of Reward, to venture to sail up the River Urvaica 150 Leagues and carry his Letters to F. Gonzalez, then in the Town of the Conception. Ferdinand de Sa, escaping many Dangers, performed the Journey, and deliver'd the Letters to F. Gonzalez, by which the Governour signify'd, that it would be a great service to God and the King, if he would discover along the River Urvaica, and come down to him to the Port of Buenos Ayres, that they might consult about the best means of reducing the Province of Urvaica. F. Gonzalez rejoicing that the means was offer'd him of doing that, which he had so earnestly desir'd; taking along with him the boldest of the Inhabitants of the Conception, and their Commander James Nieza, set out with Ferdinand de Sa. By the way he perswaded 400 Indians, that came out to meet him in War-like manner, to return peaceably to their Homes. Wheresoever he went, the People along the Shoars, remarkable for their diversity of Languages, and Barbarity, ran out to have a view of him. In 25 Days he came to the Port of Buenos Ayres, to the great joy of the Governour, who understanding, that the chief of the Urvaican Converts came along with him, thought it might be of consequence to receive them with Grandeur, to instill into those ignorant People, a respect for the Catholick King, and Spaniards. To this purpose, on the Day appointed, he march'd out with all the prime Men, and a good number of Horse: Next him followed his Eldest Son, Captain of a Troop of Horse, and another Son that was Captain of Foot, exercising their Men, the Cannon in the mean while roaring from the Walls. Thus were the Indians, astonished at that terrible Noise, conducted, in state, first to the Governour's, and then to the Bishop's Pallace; and the Governour having kiss'd his Hand, and speaking to him some time on his Knees, taught those Strangers what respect was due to Prelates. Then James Nieza, in the behalf of all his People, took an Oath that he and they would be faithful to the Catholick King, and obedient to his Governours; and take care that none should obstruct the execution of his Majesty's Commands; and begg'd that they might not be oblig'd to serve private Men, or be govern'd by any any but the Fathers of the Society. The Conditions being granted, and Homage receiv'd for the Province of Urvaica, the Governour appointed James Nieza Commander over his People, and having presented him with his own Coat, and several other things, advis'd him to continue faithful to the Catholick King, as he had sworn, and be obedient to the Fathers. The Bishop did the same, and then gave the Fathers full Authority in Spirituals, as the Governour did in Temporals; delivering, at the same time, to F. Gonzalez, Bells, Church-stuff, and other Necessaries at the King's expence; and knowing there might be more Towns erected, besides the two already built on the Banks of the River Urvaica, if there were Fathers to supply them, he sent F. Michael Ampuero back with F. Gonzalez, and writ to the Catholick King, extolling the Proceedings of the Society, and begging that 30 of them might be sent to serve the Province of Urvaica; which Letters were of good effect at Madrid, for obtaining the Fathers that came two Years after to Paraguay with F. Gaspar Sobrino. James de Vega, a rich Portuguese, gave considerably towards priestly Vestments, and other Church-stuff, and promised to send for all sorts of Iron Tools for the service of the new Towns, which he afterwards perform'd, and was of great Use. Having spent ten Days in concluding these important Affairs, F. Gonzalez returned the same way to the Place from whence he came; and having again viewed the Shores of the River Urvaica, found there was little Hopes of founding any Town, for an hundred Leagues from the Port of Buenos Ayres, because the Natives were of that sort of People, who wandring about all their life time, would not be brought to Till the Land, or settle in one place. Beyond that, he encourag'd the Japeivians to build a Town; and twenty Leagues further, prevail'd with the Jaguaraitians to do the same, whereof we shall soon give an Account. This done, he return'd to the Town of the Conception.

Two ways from Tucuman
to Guaira.

This was the posture of the Province of Urvaica; when the Provincial F. Nicholas Durant, having resign'd the Kingdom of Chili, resolv'd upon visiting Guaira, where no Provincial as yet had been. There were two Ways out of Tucuman into Guaira; the one had been used for many Years past, which was up the Rivers of Plate and Paraguay, and the rest by Land. But his was much about, and almost 500 Leagues in length, besides, that it was infested by the Jaguans, the most inhumane of the Indians, and famous for the slaughter of many Travellers. The other Way was much shorter, which was sailing up the Parana, and had never been attempted before the Society erected the Towns above spoken of, for fear of the Infidels; and because of a vast Precipice running quite athwart the Parana, near the Borders of Guaira. Most of those People being now brought into Towns, the Provincial hoped he might take that way. F. Anthony Ruiz being inform'd of the Provincial's Design, sent several Messengers one after another, to discover that new Way; the last of whom making his way through into Tucuman; satisfy'd the Provincial, that he might go up the River to Guaira with very little danger. He set forward from Cordova, and travell'd 60 Leagues to the College of the Town of St. Fe; thence 150 Leagues to Itapua on the River, and 15 further to Corpus Christi Town, and so 30 more to the new Colony of S. Mary Major of Ignazu, wherein were already 2000 Inhabitants. He held on his Course to Acarai, and thence towards the Precipice, which was 40 Leagues further. Drawing near the Precipice, he began to be sensible of the force of the Water that fell; the little Vessel that carried him being much batter'd; and another in which were F. Martin Marinus, and Mendiola Priests going to assist in Guaira, beaten to pieces against a Rock, but the Passengers sav'd. This oblig'd them to travel by Land. F. Anthony Ruiz had laid Bridges over the Clefts of the Precipice, and open'd a Way through the impassible parts of the Woods; yet they were forced very often to lay Planks over from Rock to Rock, going over them in great danger of their Lives, if their Feet had slipped, being sure to fall a vast depth into the rowling Waters. Very many fabulous Stories have been made concerning this Precipice, which I will not take notice of. Most certain it is, that many have lost their Lives, being dash'd by the falling Waters against the Rocks; and I know not whether there be any thing in the World more wonderful of that kind; at least in America, there is nothing more dreadful, or more spoken of; for a little above the Precipice, the River Parana, which is two Leagues over, draws into so narrow a compass, that the breadth is not above a Stones throw. When it is at this narrowness, it tumbles most impetuously down a prodigious height, down a descent of twelve Leagues, the stooping Channel being full of hideous Rocks, against which, the Water violently beating, flies up a wonderful height. In many places the Channel is obstructed by mighty Rocks; but as soon as the Waters, thus stoppt, get a head again, they make most dreadful Whirl-pools. In other places, the falling Waters, after making their Efforts against the Rocks, slip away out of sight through private Passages, and having been long conceal'd, piercing through the Rocks, break out again at the bottom of them, and spread abroad with a frightful noise, as if it were out of inexhaustible Springs. In fine, so great is the violence of the Waters, tumbling headlong down that inclining Channel, that there is a continual Foam of an Iron-colour for all the twelve Leagues the Descent lasts, which being reflected upon by the Sun, dazles the Eyes of those that behold it. The noise of the Waters falling and beating against the Rocks, is plainly heard four Leagues off. Not far from the foot of the Precipice, the Water seems delirious to rest in a smoother Bed; and having made, as it were, a Sea, looks more like a standing Pool than a Cataract. But that calm is mischievous, for almost every Hour there rises a great noise from the bottom, the cause unknown, and throws up the Water many Cubits high, perpetually giving warning, that there is no confidence to be repos'd in its counterfeit stillness, which every now and then grows boisterous to the destruction of many. There are Fishes there of a prodigious bulk. F. Anthony Ruiz affirms, he has seen one as big as an Ox, swimming with half its Body above Water. It is reported, as a most certain truth, that an Indian was swallowed by one of these Fishes, and afterwards cast up whole on the Shore. They spent six Days with unspeakable toil in climbing the Mountain; for tho' the Way of it were strait, would be but twelve Leagues, yet the many Windings make it almost double. Besides, it is all along an uncooth rocky Shore, divided by Lakes, Brooks, Woods and scorching Sands. No part of the World would be hotter, did not the Woods at small distances make a shade; and yet that very thickness of the Trees, which does not give free passage to the Air, is very tiresome to Travellers.

The wonderful Precipice of Guaira.

Where they were to lie at Night, the Indians set up a little Cottage, the Walls and Roofs whereof were made of Leaves, orderly placed, which being bound together with Roots instead of Cords, kept out the Rain.

When they came to the top of the Precipice, F. Peter Spinoza met the Provincial with Boats, from 60 Leagues further up the Province of Guaira, and entertain'd him and his Company with a plentiful Provision of the Country Fruit; this meeting at the top of the Precipice being in some measure, an Emblem of those, who ascending with much difficulty to the pitch of Virtue, taste there the sweet Fruits of their past labours. Two Leagues beyond the Precipice, the chief Men of Ciudad real, came out to meet the Provincial, receiving him with the greater Honour, because, 'till that time, no Bishop, Governour, or Provincial had been in Guaira. After the reception, they desir'd of him that he would erect a College in the City, which he could not grant, because of the small number of Fathers, but promis'd he would appoint some to take care of the City, and to see the Indians perform'd their two Months service, according to the King's Orders, and suffer'd no further Oppression. Thence he went to Loreto, where the Converts, to honour his coming, represented a Fight among themselves on the River, which was all cover'd with Boats, re-sounding with musical Voices and Instruments. The Church he found adorn'd with such curious Inventions, that he declar'd, he thought them a sufficient Reward of all his Labours. The Town of St. Ignatius entertain'd him with no less Tokens of Affection; and he departing from it, left the River Parana on his left hand, and went up the Tibaxiva, which being very shallow in many places, he had much ado to make 30 Leagues in fifteen Days, to come to the Town of St. Xavierius, containing 1500 Families, under the direction of F. Francis Diastanius. Hence he sent F. Christopher Torriano some days journey by Land to Villarica, to restore the Residence of the Society in that City, that it might be a check to some who oppress'd the Indians, and assist them in their Spiritual concern. In his return upon the River Tibaxiva, the Vessel that carry'd him was cast away, and many things lost. Wheresoever he went, he bestow'd Shirts, Hooks, Pins, Needles and Glass Beads among the Indians; insomuch, that he is said

Techo.

The Provincial's Travels.

Techo.

said to have spent to the value of 2000 pieces of Eight among the Guaichureans; which Liberality was not ill bestow'd, for the Fame of the great Father's Gifts, (as they call'd him) gain'd the Hearts of abundance of the Infidels, and encourag'd the Converts. At his Departure, he order'd F. Antony Ruiz to build 3 Towns more among the Inianians, and in the Countries of Taiésua, and the Coronadas. When he came down the Precipice of Guaira, he went to see a vast Rock, which by contraries they call Pena pobre, or the poor Rock. This Rock is of several Colours and so bright, that the Sun Beams striking upon it are reflected, as it were from a Glass; which makes the ignorant Multitude believe it to be all of some rich Metal, if not of Gold; but they are deceiv'd, for it is known to be meer Stone, so Rub'd and Polish'd with the Sand of several Colours drove by the Wind, that it looks at a distance like Glass. It is reported that 30 Spanish Boats were formerly lost going near to view this Rock. Thence the Provincial proceeding through the Province of Parana, drew away the two Fathers that were among the Guaichureans, there being no hopes of the Conversion of those People, tho' the Society had been sixteen Years settled among them. At Itapua the Inhabitants Petition'd the Provincial, that he would suffer the Blessed Sacrament to be placed in their Church, and the best Instructed among them to receive it, which he granted, whereupon they kept a Festival with such Solemnity, that the nicest Europeans who beheld it were struck with Admiration. Let us return a little to the Province of Urvaica, which not long since we left in a good Posture towards being Reduced.

Tumults in Urvaica on account of Spanish Governors

The too hasty eagerness of the Governor of the Province of Rio de la Plata, bred much Disorder and Confusion there. This Governor sent from the Port of Buenos Ayres, Ferdinand de Sa, Peter Bravo and Paiva, all Spaniards, to be Corregidores, or Governors of the new Towns the Fathers had or should erect for the King of Spain. F. Gonzalez, tho' he foresaw the ill Consequence of that unseasonable Resolution, yet not daring to withstand the King's Governor's Commands, permitted Ferdinand de Sa to act as Corregidor in the Town of the Conception. Paiva he sent to the Jaguaraitians. And Peter Bravo to the Japevians, People of Urvaica, who had desir'd of the Society to be gather'd into Towns. But it was not long before this precipitate Project did much harm, tho' out of respect to the Fathers, the Converts for some time bore with strange Governors, yet it soon appear'd that could not be lasting, which was tolerated so much against Inclination. For the News being spread abroad, the *Itapuan*s a People of Parana, sent a Messenger to threaten the Ibitiraquans with War, if they did not cast off the Yoke of that foreign Governor. And the Infidels Inhabiting the opposite Shore of Urvaica, gathering into a Body, fell upon a Party of Ibitiraquans, and plundering them, sent them home with many Reproaches and a Declaration of War. Ferdinand de Sa by his imperious Carriage added Fuel to the Fire, provoking the People not us'd to be under Command by his Threats and arbitrary Practices, and by giving a box on the Ear to a Youth who had powerful Relations, for not obeying his Orders immediately. The Ibitiraquans impatient to be upbraided and provok'd by this Action of Ferdinand de Sa, besides some Jealousie of his Lust, ran to Arms in a tumultuous manner, beset the Fathers House, and demanded to have the new Governor to be deliver'd to them to suffer Death, and had done it, but that F. James de Alvaro interposing his Authority in some measure appeas'd them, but Ferdinand de Sa durst not go out of the House, or presume to exercise any Command. Not long before this hapned F. Gonzalez had got together as many of the Jaguaraitians, as were sufficient for a handsome Town, which they had begun to build. Paiva coming thither had with his Threats so incens'd those People, that Potirava a powerful Cacique contriv'd to kill him, and had done it, but that Tabaca the Indian Commander of the new Town obstructed it. Potirava being disappointed of his Design, for fear of being Punished, fled to his ancient lurking Places, drawing along after him about a thousand of the Inhabitants of the Town. Paiva for fear hid himself in the Woods. Upon this News the Provincial with some Companions halted to the Province of Urvaica. As he came into the Town of the Conception, the chief Men of the Town flock'd about him, rather Demanding in a tumultuous Manner than Intreating, that he should interpose his Authority, unless he would have the Church perish there; for the Urvaicans were all agreed, That the Faith could not be propagated among them, if any other Governors came among them but those of the Society, under whom they they would obey all the King's Commands. The Provincial having heard their Complaints, defer'd giving them an answer till the next Day, when he told them, It was not in his Power to displace the Corregidores sent by the King's Governor General, but that he would send one of the Fathers to him, and did not question, but he would remove the Causes of their Troubles. The People were satisfy'd with his Answer, and he presently sent F. Michael Ampuero down the River Urvaica to the Port of Buenos Ayres, who obtain'd of the Governor not only the removal of those Corregidores, but new Supplies for the support of the Fathers in that Province. The Provincial then continuing his Visitation, proceeded to the Town of S. Nicholas on the River Piratin, and thence to the Tapevians, where he forwarded the building of a Town already begun, and call'd Los Reyes, or the Three Kings, which made way to the Conversion of the Jarofians, Membaquas, Charuas, Guenoas and other fierce Nations till then untouch'd, which hope is since much advanced by the building of the Town of S. Andrew among those People. Here let us leave these People ending this Section to proceed upon other variety of Matter.

suit or
rification Town
ilt.

The River Ibicuit, falls into the Urvaica an hundred Leagues from the Port of Buenos Ayres, on the opposite Shore among the People call'd Tapevians. It was requisite to bring the People dwelling on its Banks to the Faith of Christ, in order to open a way to those other Nations that Inhabit the great Continent, between the River Urvaica and the Atlantick Ocean. To this purpose F. Gonzalez with great danger of his Life, venturing up the River Ibicuit in a Boat with only a few Indians to Row, ran forty Leagues, till he came into the Country of Tabaca, a powerful Cacique, by whom being friendly receiv'd, he found the beginning of his Attempt easier than he had imagin'd. For Tabaca having heard the Doctrine of Christ, took upon him to gather as many Infidels as would suffice to make a considerable Town. The Father thus assisted, presently erected a Cross, built a Chappel to serve for the present, and mark'd out the Plan of a Town, to which he solemnly gave the Title of the Purification, otherwise call'd Ibicuit, which done he return'd to the River Urvaica, promising to send them a Priest with all possible speed to Reside there. When he was gone, the People further up the Country Conspir'd, and thinking he was still there, came Arm'd in great numbers to Sacrifice him and demolish the new Town. At first Ousef they threw down the Cross, burnt the Chappel, threatned the Supporters of the new Religion with Death, and destroy'd all they found. The News being brought to F. Gonzalez, he set out with F. Romero contrary to the advice of all the Tapevians, who affirm'd he was running to most certain Death. Having run up the River Ibicuit twenty Leagues, his Spies told him he could not possibly escape if he advanced. Nevertheless sending F. Romero back, he ventur'd alone with only a few Men that tow'd to the Place where the Town had been destroy'd. There he was inform'd by Tabaca and the neighbouring Caciques, that the thing had been done in their absence, and that tho' they had been there, they could not have oppos'd such a Multitude of Enemies. The Father having sent for some of the Caciques of the upper Country, by his Authority and Rewards, prevail'd with them tho' much against their Wills, to convey him into the Country of the Tapevians, to retrieve what had been lost. Being there, as he was examining all Things and disposing the Indians to build a Town, News was brought that the further People were marching in great Numbers to kill him. The Caciques his Friends gave some check at first to their Advance, but being press'd by too great a Number, and almost lost, F. Gonzalez made use of his Wits to shun this threatening Danger, fetching out a great Book, and a Saw he carry'd with him to cut down Timber. The Enemy's Spies being terrify'd at the sight of those Things, ran back to acquaint their People, That F. Gonzalez brought along with him an Iron Instrument full of Teeth, which he said could with great Ease cut in Pieces an infinite Number of Men: And that he talk'd with a parcel of Leaves put together, which certainly were able to destroy whole Armies. The Indians hearing this Account, being very apprehensive of the Power of Books, and not knowing the Power of the Saw, were struck with a pannick Fear, and fled. F. Gonzalez finding Matters were not yet ripe there for his design, return'd to Urvaica. But it was not long before an opportunity offer'd to attempt it again, for the chief of the Piratinians inform'd him, that above the River Piratin there was a Place call'd Caasapamin, very commodious to build a Town, and that the People thereabouts (if it were put to them) would easily be brought to embrace the Techo.

Techo.

Faith. Upon this hope F. Gonzalez taking F. Romero along with him, enter'd the Borders of the Caasapaninians, where of about 200 met him in Arms, threatening in case he did not retire; but these very Men being persuaded by the Fathers, promoted their Design, encouraging their Country People to embrace the Faith, so that F. Gonzalez laid the Foundation of a Town, calling it the Purification, as he had done the first time, the Care whereof he committed to F. Romero, under whom it prosper'd so well, that there were 3000 Souls reckned in it the first Year, and above 7000 had been Baptiz'd when the Author was there. The Famille.

Country of Iguazu was now miserably afflicted with Famine, the Fathers in the Town of S. Mary Major being reduced to Extremity, and the Indians for the most part dispersing, of whom F. Ruiz afterwards with much difficulty gather'd 400. A Tyger having tore to Pieces a young Girl that lay in the Woods, F. Ruiz laid a Snare for and catch'd it that same Night, which gain'd him much Reputation among the Indians, and thereupon many of them return'd to the Town. But their natural Fierceness prevailing, they broke out into War with some neighbouring People their Enemies, and having taken a number of Prisoners, Slew some, and design'd to Butcher the rest, and would have relaps'd into eating of Man's Flesh, had not F. Ruiz boldly ceas'd the Promoters of it, and forced them to release the Prisoners. Yet many hundreds there and in other Parts were Converted by degrees, and became religious Christians. At this same time F. Maceta Founded the Town of S. Paul among the Inians, a People lying between the Town of the Conception and the Lands of the great Taiaboa. The Cacique Gniravera a great Man-eater and Sorcerer, us'd all possible means to obstruct the Increase of this Town, which nevertheless in a short time grew to 4000 Inhabitants, but we may have occasion to speak more of this Matter hereafter.

Town of
S. Paul.Indians of the plains.

About this same time the Indians of the Plains, so call'd because they Inhabit the vast Champaign Country above the Town of the Incarnation, found the Fathers new Employment. They are also call'd Coronados and Cavelludos, that is, Crown'd and Hairy, because both Men and Women wear their Hair down to their Shoulders, but the top of the Head shav'd round like Religious Men. These People seem'd to have excluded all hopes of being brought to Civility ever since, as was said before; they attempted to destroy the Town of the Incarnation and Murder F. Maceta, yet they began to be better inclin'd upon this account. The Tupis a People of Brazil, (of whose Fierceness Orlandinus in his History of the Society makes mention) breaking into the Territory of the Town of S. Xavierius in great Numbers, were driving away some Converts into Slavery, which were recover'd by the Industry of the Jesuits. Another Company of them had made Prisoners some Townsmen of the Incarnation, whom F. Mendoza rescu'd, pursuing the Robbers with Pindovius and a parcel of Converts. And being further inform'd, that a Village of the Coronados had been Plunder'd by the same People, and many carry'd away, he surpriz'd them, and recovering the Booty and Prisoners, sent them back well reprimanded into Brasil. The Coronados oblig'd by this Kindness and some Gifts he bestow'd on them, were dismiss'd, promising, To send their Country People to the Fathers to be inform'd in Matters of Religion, which they perform'd. Not long after ten Caciques of the Coronados, mov'd to it by Taiaboa's Example, sent to desire of the Fathers some one to instruct them in the Christian Doctrin. Hereupon F. Ruiz hastening out of the Country of Taiaboa to the Town of the Incarnation, took F. Diastanius with him, and set out towards the Coronados. When they had travell'd eight Days over Rocks and Marshes attended by thirty Converts, they met some of the Coronados, who told him, That Guabair a powerful Cacique, hearing of their coming, had drawn over several Villages to his Party, and by common Consent lay in wait for them in the next Wood, where they would undoubtedly all Perish if they presum'd to advance. That they themselves had been Summon'd to have a Hand in that Business, but being mindful of the Kindness receiv'd from the Society, were come a By-way to give them Intelligence. The Fathers thanking them, consulted whether it were safe to proceed, and finding it was not, turn'd back and put off that Expedition till the next Year.

It is time we should say something of the Province of Chagua, under which Name is comprehended all that part of Paraguay, Tucuman and Rio de la Plata, under the Jurisdiction of the Bishop of Santa Cruz, or the holy Cross in the Mountains, and the Archbishop of Chagua, which is a vast extent of Land. It is divided into several Parcels by Rivers rising

Province
of Chagu

rising in the Mountains of Peru, and falling (after a run of many Leagues) either into mighty Lakes, or into the Rivers Paraguay and la Plata. Upon the first coming of the Spaniards into those Parts, abundance of the Natives of Tucuman and Peru, retir'd thither for fear of those new Guests, as appears by those that still use the Language call'd Amiarra, proper to the Peruvians. The most noted Nations among them are the Tamivi-ans, formerly Inhabiting 188 Villages, the Tents, Mataguais, Agois, Mosobies, Japitilagans, Churumatans, Tonocotas, Abipones, and several other Factions of Indians, differing more in Languages than Customs. There is no supream Power among them, they are subject to Caciques like the other barbarous People, whose Power extends not beyond a House or Village. Every particular Person among them, superstitiously chooseth a Fish for his Patron and Protector, and worship it so religiously all their Life time, that they will rather starve than eat any of that Species. They are continually at War with their Neighbours, being more dreadful to Strangers for their Cruelty than Valour. Some Governors have endeavour'd to open a way through these People into Peru; but that Road has been forsaken, because those Barbarians have at several times Murder'd many Spaniards in their way from Paraguay to Peru, till in the Year 1628, Martin de Læesma, Governor of Tucuman, conceiv'd some hopes of performing what had been in vain attempted before by subduing the Province of Chagua, by the way of Xuxui, the last Town under his Government, near the Borders of Peru. Having therefore rais'd a body of Men, he writ to F. Durand the Provincial, earnestly Intreating him, To assign some Priests to Preach the Gospel. The Provincial well knowing that Souldiers commit many Insolencies when they enter upon new Conquests, lest he should render the Society odious to those Indians, answer'd, He would send Fathers into the Province of Chaguay, when he could see any hope of settling there. But when he understood that the Governor with his Spanish Forces had pierced into the Province of Chagua, and having built a Castle, lay'd the Foundations of a Town, in that part where the River Lobo runs through the most fertile Soil, and most frequented by Indians, he then sent F. Gaspar Oforio to look to the spiritual Welfare of both Spaniards and Indians. He being a comely and sweet temper'd Man, soon won the Affections of all Men. Several Caciques of sundry Factions resorted to him, with whom he agreed, that they should fell Timber in three Places to build, as many new Towns, after the manner of the People of Parana. These were reported to be above 50000, whose Language he endeavour'd to make himself Master of. There were reckned 30000 of the Language of the Mataguais. Nor did he neglect the Tongues of the Tobas, Mocovias, and Zapitalaguas, very numerous Nations, as well because many of them desir'd to become Christians, as because there were Hopes of making a way through them to many other populous Nations. He also study'd the Language of the Churumates, so call'd perhaps, because they often use this Syllable Chu, Chu. Martin Ledesma, the Governor being gone to found another Town on the Banks of the River Solotano, F. Oforio stay'd among the Tobas to mark out the Plan of another Town; whence he writ to the Provincial, acquainting him, that three Towns might be founded in the Territories of the Tobas, Mocovias, and Zapitalaguas, if there were Fathers enough. He added, that the Indians up the Country were so tall, that he could scarce reach their Heads with his Hand. The first Year the Spaniards sowing, found the Soil fit to bear all Sorts of European Grain, and what pleas'd them best, the Indians were reported to conceal Mines of Gold and Silver. Yet there were some, who fear'd these easy beginnings would end unhappily, through the Avarice of the new Planters. At this time F. Gaspar Sobrino who had been sent Procurator to Rome, return'd to the Port of Buenos Ayres, bringing with him 42 Fathers to be dispers'd through that vast Continent, to carry on the Work so well begun. They were receiv'd with great Joy, and the more for having narrowly escap'd being taken by Pirates, who appear'd in the River of Plate, presently after their Landing, and were known to be Dutch, who to Poison the People, and excite them to Rebellion, left on the Shoar under a Chest, a Parcel of Spanish Books but printed in Holland, tending only to follow their Example in falling off from their Obedience to their lawful King. But of this enough, for we must confine our selves to the Affairs of the Indies.

There F. Gonzalez traversing the Province of Uruguay, endeavour'd to find Employment for the new come Fathers, the News of whose arrival was spread abroad. First he made his way into the Woods of the Caaroans, knowing that the Inhabitants of them were in some measure dispos'd to receive the Faith, by the Example of their Neighbours, and Perswasions of F. Romero. Sixty Caciques dwelt in these Woods, most of whom he perswaded to sow their Grain not far from one another, in hopes of building a Town; and promising them one of the Society should come speedily to instruct them in the Christian Faith, he went away to the Jivians through the Country of the Piratinians. The Jivius more like a Brook than a River, having fallen down some easy descents from its source, runs directly into the Urvaica, a little above the Ibitiraquans. On both its Banks and the adjacent Plains there are Woods, inhabited, at that time, by about 500 Families and their Caciques. The chief among them was Niezuvius, who by his nimble Tongue and Sorcery, had prevail'd with all the neighbouring People to follow him as their Leader. He was a Fierce, but crafty Man, cunningly flattering Strangers, that he might have them in his Power. Abundance of Indians offended at our Converts, had fled from the Town of S. Xaverius and other Places, to that Monster of a Man, allur'd by a licentious way of Living; all whom Niezuvius kept about him and maintain'd, requiring them all to Worship him, as a God. His Disposition was naturally fit for any Fraud or Villany. This Man must have prov'd very troublesome to the Affairs of the Converts, had he persisted in his Wickedness; therefore F. Gonzalez putting in execution the Design he had long entertain'd of going to him, made no account of the Man's Cruelty, or the Danger of Deserters and Renegadoes that lay in wait, and appearing unexpectedly before Niezuvius prevail'd so far by his Eloquence, that the inveterate Enemy seem'd to be reduced the first Encounter. Therefore the more to oblige him he brought him to the next Town of S. Nicholas, where he was conducted to the Church with great State. This Show of Honour so far inclin'd him to the Society and Christian Religion, that returning home he built a House and Church for the Priests that were to come, and brought over many of the neighbouring Caciques to follow his Example. This was a difficult Province, and requir'd a prudent and resolute Man; for it was fear'd, that Niezuvius, who was so easily brought over, might soon re-lapse, being known to be much given to Sorcery, to affect Divine Honour and even at that time to keep a great company of Concubines. F. John C. Stillo was left there, and F. Gonzalez going away to the River Tabatio, which runs into the Urupica, found that another Town might be erected on its Banks, as was afterwards done, and therefore he promised the Tabatians an Instructor, as soon as there were Fathers enough. Then hearing that ten Fathers were coming up the Parana, he went to meet them, and having detain'd and dispersed them, returned through the Territories of the Jivians and Caasapaminians, into the Country of the Caaroans. This Country lies about ten Leagues from the River Urvaica towards the Inland, nothing unlike to the other parts lately civiliz'd, but that it seems to be somewhat more populous; nor would it be any thing more remarkable than its neighbouring People, but for having signaliz'd it self in a base Action, and afterwards in making Amends for it. One great cause of reducing this Country to Christianity before any other, was its bordering on the Lands of the Caasapaminians, as those do on the Jivians, and these on the Piratinians, who are parted from the Ibitiraquans only by the River Urvaica; and it was hop'd, that these People, among whom the Fathers had founded Towns, being so linked together, would easily defend themselves against their Enemies, and make the Passage easie to these Lands which lie between the River Urvaica and the Atlantic Sea. F. Gonzalez being come with the Caciques to the place appointed, erected a Cross, marked out the ground for the Church and Town, to take the Name of All-Saints; appointed Magistrates, baptiz'd Infants, instructed the Men and Women, and began vigorously to carry on their Work. As things were thus going on prosperously, Potirava, a bold Man, fit for any mischief, who had fled from the Town of S. Xaverius, being hardened in his old Superstitions, went privately to Niezuvius, and telling him he would soon be no better than a Slave to the Jesuits, and must quit all his Concubines, easily stirred him up to conspire the Death of the Fathers. Having drawn his People to consent to the Murder, he sent the Cacique Cuniaragua to carry the Design among the Caaroans, directing him to put the Caciques Caarupe and Caabure upon murdering F. Gonzalez, and F. Rodriguez, which

CAARONS.

Techo.

Town of
All Saints

done,

F. Ruiz
murder'd.

done, they were to go to execute the same upon F. Romero, whilst he put to death F. Castillo and other Fathers, about the River Piratin. All things were disposed as Niezuvius had order'd, so that Gonzalez having call'd together the Indians to hang a Bell, that was to call them to be catechized, they were all ready, but upon another Design, for Caarupe had underhand commanded them to be privately arm'd, and make no discovery, till he gave the Signal to Marangoa, who was to execute the Murder. They were all thus assembled, and F. Gonzalez stooping to put the Rope into the Ring of the Bell, Caarupe thinking that a fit opportunity to strike, made the sign to Marangoa, who, with all his force, struck the Father on the Head with a Club that had a great Stone fixed at the end, and at one blow knocked out his Brains and left him dead, yet another seconding, the Head was quite bruised to mash. Then all the Company gave great shouts of joy, which alarmed Father Rodriguez, who was at his Prayers in a Cottage near by. As he was coming out, the cruel Executioners beset his Door, and in the same manner with their Clubs, batter'd him to death. When they were both dead, a continual Cry followed, but not all of a piece, some rejoicing at the Murder, others (for they had not all consented) expressing their Grief, in doleful Lamentations. The Barbarians not yet satisfied, cut the Trunk of F. Rodriguez, his Body from the Limbs, mangling them with many Wounds, dragging them about the Church, and at last burnt them and the Church together, tearing and breaking all that belong'd to it. Then sending an Account of what they had done to Niezuvius, they all fell to Feast together, where, as they were boasting of this action, as if it had been some honourable Enterprize, an Ancient Indian, Father-in-law to Guarobains, a great admirer of the Society, tho' not yet baptized, had the Courage to reprimand them for their Insolence, whereupon they all furiously fell upon, and tore him to pieces. Two Youths who serv'd F. Gonzalez at the Altar, being taken, it was consulted whether they should destroy them, but their Advice prevailed who would have them sent home, lest it might be a Provocation to the Indians of Parana to make War upon them. These being accordingly sent home, discover'd the whole manner of the slaughter.

The next Day, being nothing more sedate after their Nights sleep, they repair'd in throngs to the place of the Murder, where finding the Fire had not consum'd the Trunks of the Bodies, they kindled the Fire again, and cast them in. Whilst they were thus employ'd, one of the Youths, we said they had sent away home, passing in his way through the Territories of the Caasapaminians, acquainted F. Romero with the slaughter of his Brethren; which those People, according to the Custom of their Country, first kept a doleful silence, and then broke out into dismal shrieks, to express their Sorrow, till their Grief turning into Anger, they ask'd leave of the Father to revenge the Murder. He dissuaded them from seeking Revenge, but said he should look upon it as a great Testimony of their Affection, if they durst bring away the dead Bodies. Membacaba, a Man in repentance among his People, immediately chose about two hundred out of all the multitude, and ordering them to arm themselves, set forward with speed, and came the same day to the place where the mischief had been done, where they took the Bodies half burnt, and return'd with them in despite of their Enemies, and put them into a Coffin, as the time would permit. Not long after, the wicked Caarupe, came unexpected upon the Caasapaminians with 300 armed men, to sacrifice F. Romero, whom, because he liv'd single, in scorn he call'd the old Woman. The Towns-men, according to their Custom, were abroad in the Fields about their Country Affairs, so that there were but ten young Men in Town, who being led by an Old Man, went out with their Bows and Arrows against that great number, and behaved themselves so gallantly, that they stopt them, till the Caasapaminians flocking out of the Fields, put them all to Flight, killing some without the loss of a Man. F. Romero himself appearing on Horseback with two Converts, contributed much towards gaining this Victory, and so daunted the Enemy, that they durst never make a second attempt. Before these things were done; that is, the next day after the slaughter of the two Fathers, Niezuvius having receiv'd the News of their death, and rejoicing at the bloody Fact, put on his Garment of Feathers, and all the other Ornaments us'd in their prophane Ceremonies; and ordering one of his Concubines to be dress'd after the same manner, call'd all his People about him; it

The dead Bodies re-cover'd.

A brave Action

was Tacha.

F. Castillo
kill'd.

was Night when they all met, and he making use of the Darkness, for all Lights were put out, after ratling some strange Words in his Throat, and making a hideous noise with an empty Calabash; at last when he had fill'd all the Company with horror, declar'd to them that F. Castillo was to be taken off. They all consented, resolving to manage it dexterously, lest he should make his escape, and therefore they took along with them some Infidels that were come to be instructed in Christianity. At break of day they came to F. Castillo, then at his Prayers, desiring him to admit those who desir'd to be inroll'd in the Catalogue of Christians, and to bestow some small Present on them, according to custom. The Father receiv'd them with all possible affection, but as he was busie, and suspecting nothing, they fell upon, buffeted, and threw him down. If it be for these little things I bestow, said he, that you exercise your cruelty on me, take all, and keep me as your Slave. They answer'd it was his death, and of all the Fathers throughout Parana and Urvaica, which they sought; and so to make short, they bound him with a long Rope, and thus dragg'd him half naked out of the Town, over Briars and Stones, scoffing at him and shouting. By the way they hew'd his Face, pierc'd his Body with Arrows, a Slave of Niezuvius every foot cruelly battering his Belly with a Club. At last they cover'd his Head, all deform'd with Blood and Mud, under a heap of Stones, casting the Body into the Woods to be devour'd by Tygers; which done, they return'd to give Niezuvius an account of their Exploits. He putting on F. Castillo's priestly Vestments, and over them the old Garment of a Sorcerer; assembling his People, told them, they had no cause to fear their Fields would lie waste; that they might now safely, after the manner of their Ancestors, keep as many Wives as they pleas'd, and again bestow Divine Honours on him. Then causing the Children that had been baptiz'd, to be brought to him, as if he could take off the Baptism, wash'd their Heads with hot Water, scouring their Tongues with Sand, and scraping them with a Shell, to wipe away the exorcis'd Salt that had been laid upon them. Having perform'd many more extravagant Ceremonies, he burnt the Church, and order'd his Men to be ready to march the next day, to kill the two Fathers that were among the Piratinians. The News of their

Design came thither before them, and the Fathers prepar'd themselves for Death; the Indians, in the mean while tho' few in number, because most were abroad in the Field, making ready to defend their Teachers, hearing that the Enemy was very near, and numerous, the Converts forced the Fathers to fly into the Woods, and the Rebels being too numerous for the Piratinians, broke into the Town of S. Nicholas, seeking the Fathers, and exercising their Cruelty against the Houses and Goods, till the Piratinians that were abroad, could be call'd home, and then renewing the Fight, put those bloody Barbarians to flight, killing sixteen of them, and wounding many more, without the loss of one Man.

In the mean while, F. Alfonso de Aragon, and F. Francis Claviso, were forced to fly in great distress to the Town of the Conception, among the Ibitiraquans, whither the News was already brought of Niezuvius's Cruelty; and F. James de Alfonso had call'd together the Chief Men of the Town to consult what was to be done. Their Commander, Nicholas Nienguir, deliver'd himself thus. Nothing will do, Father, but to make use of our Weapons with expedition; the Enemies Designs must be speedily prevented, lest they run us down while we lose time in debating. I would have you entertain that Opinion of me and my Followers, that we will not return to see our Wives and Friends, till having repuls'd the Enemy, we revenge the death of our dear Masters with much Blood of theirs. This said, he order'd 200 of his best Men to arm and follow him, whom he led into the Territories of the Piratinians, thinking it enough if he put a stop to the progress of the Enemy, till Supplies could come from further parts. The News of the Murther of the Fathers being spread into other Towns, caus'd great Sorrow and Consternation, which was increas'd by a report spread by the Enemy, That the Inhabitants of all places had conspir'd to slaughter their Teachers. But when a further Account came of the death of F. Castillo, and that Niezuvius was stirring up the Indians towards the Atlantic Ocean to War, that he might overpower the Converts, the Terror was beyond measure. Therefore Expresses were sent to the Spanish Cities, and Indian Towns far and near, to make known the numbers of the Enemy, how few there were to oppose them, and how

Courage: of the Ibitiraquans.A general Consternation.

Techo.

The Caaroans punished.

how great the Danger was. In the mean while, a Company of Souldiers is sent to the Caasapaminians to bring away Father Romero, who was next to the Enemy; but the Caasapaminians declar'd they could not part with him, unless he would have all the Converts return to their scatter'd Habitations, being forsaken by their Pastor; but if he stay'd, they would defend him from any harm at the expence of their own Blood. It was necessary to comply with their request, for fear of doing wrong to such well-deserving People. Whilst these things were transacting, three Spies were taken, and it appear'd they were some of the Murderers, and came to draw over Quaracipucatus, the Chief Cacique among the Ibitiraquans, over to Niezuvius's Party, on account they were Kindred. Quaracipucatus was then present with his Men, and being asked by F. James de Alfaro, what he would have done with those Kinsmen? Answer'd, There ought to be enquiry made into their Actions, and if they were Guilty, no notice to be taken of their Consanguinity; for that from that time, he would look upon no Man, who was an Enemy to Religion, as his Relation. F. Alfaro, to try the Man, order'd the Chief of the Spies to lay down his Arms, but he refusing, stepp'd back, clapping an Arrow to his Bow, and pointing at the Father, being ready to let fly, had not the Company seiz'd and bound him. Eight hundred Men were now got together, with which Force it was thought fit to set out against Niezuvius, who was not well provided, and the Tivians scatter'd about the Country. Only two Men were found in the Town of the Tivians, one of which had like to have been kill'd by a zealous Convert, had not the Father prevented him. The next Morning our Men came in sight of the Enemy, of whom they demanded if they desir'd Peace; to have Niezuvius and all that were guilty of the Murther deliver'd up to them, but receiv'd no other Answer but by Arrows. Thus incens'd, they fell on with such fury, that in a moment, they routed the Enemy, killing many of them, with the loss of only three killed, and about thirty wounded. Niezuvius flying before the Fight, got over the River Urvaica, in a Boat made of Branches of Trees, and lay conceal'd, and roving in several places, till some Years after, falling into the Hands of Robbers, he suffer'd the Punishment due to his Guilt; being long formidable under his Misfortunes, because his Condition was not known. His scatter'd Houses being as many as his Concubines, were all burnt.

Having thus, in some measure, revenged a just Quarrel, Niengurius leading back the Conquerors into the Piratinian Territories, found new Succours were there assembled. F. Emanuel Cabral Alpoim, a Noble Portuguese, had, at his own cost, brought a Company of Spaniards by publick Authority, from the City of St. John, 80 Leagues distant; and from the Indian Towns subject to the Franciscans, F. Gregory de Osuna, a Godly Man, had sent 200 Converts; and F. John Gamarra, worthy of Eternal Honour, as many more. Arapisanduvius and other Caciques, had brought a considerable number from other Colonies of Converts. These things were much forwarded by F. James Boroa, Rector of the Assumption, who having unsuccessfully try'd the Spaniards in Paraguay, drew some Men together himself, and came with great speed to joyn the Piratinians, because he acted for the Provincial, who was then absent. In December, Emanuel Cabral, who commanded in chief, led the Forces to the Territories of the Caasapaminians, where F. Romero was in danger. It was a Providence that he was so expeditious; for the next day after his arrival, the Caaroan Murderers, to the number of 500, knowing nothing of our Forces entred the Borders of the Caasapaminians, and were now at hand, threatening the Town, when our Troops marching out unexpectedly, struck such a terror into the Rebels, especially at the sight of the Spanish Horse, that after the first onset, they never stayed for a second, but betook themselves to the next Woods, Cabral on the one side, and Niengurius on the other, making a great slaughter of them. Many fled, and fifty were taken, among whom were the Caciques, Caabure and Caarupe, with others of the Murderers. The next day they marched, and made themselves Masters of the Town of the Caaroans, where a consult was held about the punishment of Offenders. The Multitude was for punishing all, the wiser sort for taking off the Heads of the Rebellion, and the Society for no Blood. Cabral order'd it so, as to endeavour to please all, for having given sentence of Death against them all, he pick'd out only twelve of the number, by their Example, to shew what all

Techo.

all had deserv'd. Caabure and Caarupe were hang'd first, and then Marangoa in the same place where he had murder'd F. Gonzalez. Potirava, the Author of the Conspiracy, having absconded for some time with Araguira, the Murderer of F. Castillo, they were both deliver'd up by the Heathens, and put to Death. They all desired to be baptiz'd before they dy'd, except Caabure, who dyed blaspheming. After punishing the Criminals, the Bodies of the Fathers were taken up, and carry'd in a very honourable manner to the Town of the Conception, where they were received in solemn Procession. First went the victorious Forces leading their Prisoners, then the Children of the Town, next the Women, after them the Men, and lastly, the Chiefs of the Nation, attended by variety of Musick. On both sides of the Biers, were Fathers who had resorted thither from all parts. The People had adorned the Way with triumphal Arches, lighted Bone-fires, and made other demonstrations of Joy. In the Church the Bodies were placed in an honourable Tomb, and F. Boroa made their funeral Oration. Thus ended the Rebellion of those Indians, whom we must leave to give an Account of others.

Of the Gualaches.

The Province of Guaïra now calls upon us, where the Fathers Ruiz and Dia-stanius venturing upon the Gualaches, met with unexpected success. The Country of the Gualaches, who are also call'd Guarianes, lies between the Lands of Taiaboa, and the Territories of Ur-ucaica, and Ignasr, running out as far as the Sea towards Brazil. All this Nation differs from the Guaranians both in Customs and Manners, and is for the most part, at War with them. It would be far more populous, did not the Inhabitants continually destroy one another; for when they are heated with their Drink made of Honey, in their circular drinking Meetings, their Pleasure turning into Madness, they fall upon one another with whatsoever Weapons come next to hand, with such fury, that many are desperately wounded, or killed in the height of their Drunkenness. These Festivals coming about very often, must needs lessen the number of the People. Besides, their numerous Sorcerers increase the number of the Dead, killing many with their Charms and Poyson. They frequently converse with the Devil, and live rather upon Hunting than Tillage, dwelling in small Villages, not far distant from another. No body had been among them as yet to preach the Gospel; but the Borderers came to the Iron Mines, where a few Spaniards wrought, not far from the River Piqueri, which falls into the Parana. These Gualaches hearing the News, that the great Taiaboa, with whom they had been at War, had forsaken his barbarous manner of Living, and was become a Christian, sent several Messengers to F. Ruiz, to acquaint him that the People of several Villages were willing to live together in a great Town. F. Ruiz was then in the Colony of the Incarnation, with F. Diastanius; and taking him for his Companion, he went away to Villarica. From thence, there were two ways to the Gualaches; the one by the Iron Mines, which was fives days Journey; the other about, up the River Huibaio, through the Lands of Taiaboa and the Indians of the Plains, who were always at War. F. Ruiz took the former, F. Diastanius the latter, but with very great danger, because no Man had as yet ventur'd through those Lands, which were much infested with Sorcerers, and this Father was the first that got through that way. When he entred the Country of the Gualaches, the sixth day of his Journey through the Desert, he met with greater danger, being met first with two Companies of Men-Eaters, and afterwards by a greater number, from whom escaping through special Providence, he at length came to a part of the Country of the Gualaches, then infested with the Plague, where he baptiz'd abundance of Infants, and some Men and Women, after, instructing them by the help of an Interpreter. F. Ruiz taking the direct Road, as was said, came upon the Borders of the Gualaches, the fifth day after he set out of Villarica, baptizing very many, because the Plague rag'd in those parts. As he was thus employ'd, Messengers came to him from the Chiquitos, beyond the River Piqueri, desiring to have one of the Society sent to instruct them, and make out the Plan for a Town; whom he dismissed, promising to send a Priest as soon as they had gather'd a sufficient Number for a Town. Having spent 8 Months in Baptizing those that were infected with the Plague; at length the Fathers, Ruiz and Dia-stanius met in a convenient place to build a Town, which was the residence of Cobe a Cacique, Father of five Sons, each of which was chief of a Village. Besides them, many

The Chiquitos.

In the mean while F. Mendoza sent to the Miangues, a People opposite to the Sea, to build a Town there, finding they were all dispers'd for fear of the Mamaluks, brought an hundred Families he could gather, to add to the new Town of S. Michael, so that there were 2000 Souls in it. This Place being settled, F. Ruiz at the request of Patagniruvius a Cacique of Note, went a Days Journey further, and gathering Indians, laid the Foundation of another Town, under the Invocation of S. Antony the Hermit, so many Inhabitants resorting to it, that in two Months it contain'd 2500 Souls. The Fathers were no less successful in the Lands of Taiaboa, for F. Diastanius being sent by F. Ruiz from the Town of the Conception to look to the Colony of the Archangels for some time, several Caciques of Guairaverá's Faction resorted to him, requesting so earnestly to have a Town built, that there was no refusing of them. There is an Eminence half way between the Towns of Archangel and S. Paul, which the Indians call the Burying Place of S. Thomas, having receiv'd by Tradition from their Ancestors, that the said Apostle of the Indies passing through those Countries, Bury'd a great Multitude he had Baptiz'd in that Place. This Spot being very commodious and encompass'd by abundance of Villages of Infidels, was chosen by F. Diastanius to build a Town on, and a Cross erected; and what is wonderful, those very Men who had contriv'd to murder F. Ruiz, and were counted the cruellest of Man-eaters, came voluntarily into it. Besides 400 Families that came in of their own accord at first, F. Diastanius gather'd 400 more in the Woods and Mountains, and call'd it the Town of S. Thomas. But the Plague raging at this time throughout the Province of Guaira, found the Fathers a great deal of Employment. But the dread of the Insolency of the Robbers was more grievous than the Distemper, for it was now fear'd they had lost all Respect to the Fathers, and would fall openly upon the Converts. The Jealousie was increas'd by the Arrival of the new Governor of Paraguay, who coming through Brasil, the same way the Robbers came, and being an Enemy to the Society, was fear'd would furnish a sorrowful Subject for History.

The Province of Urvaica was not well settled after the Troubles rais'd by the Murderers of the Fathers, and it was much fear'd that Niezuvius being still alive, might elsewhere gather new Forces and do the more Mischief, because the Converts were grown confident of their own Strength after their late Victory. Hereupon the Ibitiraguans calling in Succours from all Parts, let out a Fleet of an hundred Boats, with which they ran up the River Parana, to the Place where Niezuvius was thought to be contriving an Insurrection. They search'd all the Woods to no effect, till they heard he was fled an hundred Leagues further. This done they return'd home without any Success; but the baptizing of two old Men they found Dying in the Woods. The Territory of Iguazu was no better settled. All the Heathen Inhabitants of the Town of S. Mary Major had been warn'd, That if they intended to be Instructed for Baptism, they must put away all their Women but one, whom they were to take to Wife. Many who had so much Grace, obey'd, the rest fearing they should be compell'd to it, fled up the River into the Woods, and sowing in remote Places, built a Village after their antient Manner, renouncing Christianity. F. Ruiz sent after them those he thought the sincerest of the Converts, to tell them, It should be no Disgrace to them, if they would return in time. These Messengers pleas'd with imaginary Liberty, changing their Mind, grew more Mischievous than those they were sent to, for they not only perswaded those that were fled to stay abroad, but undertook to draw the rest from the Town, and it was fear'd they might by their ill Example debauch other Converts, and trouble all the Province of Parana. To prevent this Mischief, after mature Deliberation, the Fathers Ruiz and Badia went to the Place where the Deserters were, attended by a Company of trusty Converts, and coming at a time when the Men were gone a Hunting and to cut Wood, with the assistance of the Caciques that came along with them, they set Fire to the Huts, and began to drive the Women and Children to the Town. The Deserters returning at Night, and suspecting by the Fire how the matter stood, for the sake of their Wives and Children, came and submitted themselves to the Fathers, who commending them for Returning, instead of blaming their Desertion, restor'd them to the Town, where they continu'd without ever relapsing, to the great Joy of the whole Province; most of them soon after embracing Christianity, quitting their Concubines, and marrying lawful Wives. Yet

Techo.

Disturbance in Iguazu.

Tacho.

Caaroans
submit.

the Plague ceas'd not to rage throughout the Province of Parana, and therefore because the Town of Corpus Christi seem'd to be seated in an unhealthful Place, as drawing the Vapours from the River with the Rising Sun, it was remov'd to a better Seat. Next all the Fathers apply'd themselves to repair the Damages sustain'd by the Revolt of Niezuvius's Faction. This Design was not a little forwarded by the Repentance of the Caaroan Murderers, which they were easily brought to by Tambatians a Prisoner sent back to them. To testify their Penitence, they sent a piece of F. Gonzalez's Chalice to the Fathers, intreating them to come and restore all Things to the same Posture they were in before. Whereupon F. Romero and F. Alfaro prepar'd to repair to them, notwithstanding the Converts us'd all Arguments to dissuade them, and being upon the Spot erected a Cross, and finding sufficient Encouragement to undertake the building of a Town, return'd in safety. Soon after F. Vasquez the new Provincial, coming out of the Province of Tucuman to visit those of Urvaica and Parana, resolv'd to go thither himself well attended to gain the greater Reputation. The Chief of the Caaroans follow'd by a Multitude of People, came out to meet him Unarm'd, in whose Name Guarabains who had continu'd Faithful, spoke to him after this manner, We lay our Arms at your Feet, Great Father, being ready to obey all your Commands, provided you do not impose it as a Punishment of our Crime, to be depriv'd of the Society. This is the Request of all my Country-men, and they have chose me, who am Innocent, for their Advocate, that the Guilty may the more easily obtain Pardon. This said they fell down at the Provincial's Feet, begging of him not to forsake them, F. Romero being their Interpreter. The Women and Children by dismal Motions interceded for their Husbands and Parents. The Provincial return'd a most affectionate Answer, laying all the blame on Niezuvius, and calling them to Imbrace him, whereat they all burst out into Tears. The next Day the Provincial baptiz'd several Infants, set at Liberty some Prisoners taken when Niezuvius was defeated, bestow'd some Garments among the Caciques, and appointing Guarabains their Commander in the Name of the Catholick King, went away to the River Urvaica. Soon after F. Oregius came from the Metropolis of Paraguay, to take charge of the Caaroans, restor'd the Town, and baptiz'd many Men, Women and Children. After the Caaroans were settled, Tuca a powerful Cacique, in that Part where the River Tabatians falls into the Urvaica, seven Leagues from the Colony of the Ibitiraquans Eastward, requested of F. Boroa that he would send some Father to him to build a Town. This Father hasted thither, and building a little Cottage to serve for House and Chappel, began to instruct the Multitude that repair'd to him. As he was thus employ'd, a great number of naked Painted Indians came upon him from the neighbouring Mountains, but he soon appeas'd them with some small Gifts, and they went off without doing any Harm. Notwithstanding this and other Dangers, he gather'd a sufficient Number to lay the Foundation of a Town, in which he was much assisted by a Converted Indian Woman, who running through the Woods, persuaded many to repair to hear him. Thus soon after a Town was built there under the Invocation of S. Xaverius, because the Jaguaitians being but a very small number, had left theirs of that Name and were gone elsewhere. Next the Acaraguaians, another People on the Urvaica, sent to desire Fathers might be sent them, but this could not be granted for the present, because there were not enough to supply all Parts.

In Guaira the Fathers having in some measure reconcil'd Guiravera, thought it would be for the Glory of God, to expose themselves to Danger, endeavouring to found a new Town in his Lands. To this purpose F. Ruiz and F. Maceta banishing all fear, went into his Territories, by whom they were at first courteously receiv'd, many Caciques favouring them, and chose a Place to erect a Town, which they call Jesus and Mary, so many resorting to it from all Parts as sufficiently evinced the general Approbation of that Undertaking. F. Maceta was left there to carry on the Work, and People flocking in great numbers. Guiravera who could not bear to be forsaken by his Followers, came attended by some Caciques to F. Maceta, demanding that long white Vestment he wore at Mass to be given him, speaking very reproachful Words against the Virgin Mary and the Society. Guiravera's Companions advis'd the Father to rid himself of that troublesome Man at so easie a rate, but he knowing by experience, that giving way to those Heathens, was an encouragement to them to crave more, bold-

S. J. us.

Jesu-Maria
Town
built.

boldly refus'd to give it, and laying hold of a little Trunk or Box the Vestments were in, declar'd he would dye before he would part with it. Guiravera and his Company were so daunted at his Resolution, that they turn'd pale and had not a Word to say; whereupon the Father altering his note, spoke to them in a loving manner, promising them all favour if they would desist from their Enterprize. In the mean while Guiravera's Aunt and other Caciques came in, encouraging the Father, and engaging to secure him against any Violence. This Storm being blown over, a short Calm ensu'd. Guiravera possess'd by evil Spirits, was at times put into such a Ferment, that he foam'd, his Eyes sparkled, and his Hair stood an end, till his Concubines by stroaking and caressing had brought him to himself. In one of these Fits, without any provocation, he ran into the middle of the Market-Place at Midnight, waking all the Townsmen, and crying out he was a God, and that there was a Man in Town, whom he must presently devour. But some other Caciques coming to him, frighted him out of that raging Madness. During the peaceable Intervals, the Work was carry'd on so prosperously, that in a short time fifty powerful Caciques had engag'd to come in, who would have brought above 2000 Archers with them, besides an infinite number of Women and Children, so that this would soon be the biggest of all the Indian Towns. Guiravera again Conspir'd with a Cacique call'd Apermond, to Murder F. Maceta, but the Design was timely discover'd and they disappointed, whereupon F. Diastanius coming with a good Company of Converts to the Relief of F. Maceta, reprimanded Guiravera severly, so that he submitted and beg'd Pardon. He was Pardon'd, but to keep him a little under, another Commander of the Town was chosen, with equal Power to him, which did good for some time, he endeavouring not to be outdone in good Deeds by his Companion. But Vice cannot lye long hid under the Cloak of Virtue. For Guiravera when his Fear was over fell to his old Practices, threatening the Father by Signs tho' he forbore Words. It was his custom when he design'd to be most Outragious, to hang three Plates about his Neck before his Breast; when he would Rave in a less degree, he hung but two; and only one when it was to be a common Madness. F. Maceta declar'd, He had good reason to suspect that one of the Plates was a Paten, such as Priests use at the Altar. After many struglings between them, Guiravera was baptiz'd by the Name of Paul; but tho' he had been a Saul in Persecuting, he prov'd not a Paul in Repentance; for he is reported to have fallen again to eating of Man's-flesh, and so to be kill'd by Robbers; yet his being baptiz'd did this good, that none of his Followers refus'd to follow his Example. Thus much of Guiravera, that Devourer of Mankind; and Terror of the Converts and Fathers.

Christianity now Dayly increas'd, and it was to be hop'd, that all the Province of Guaira would soon embrace the true Religion, when the Devil envying this Success, either by himself or by his Agents the Mamaluks, contriv'd the Destruction of the new Colonies built in Guaira by the Fathers of the Society. The Mamaluks being the prime Actors in this Tragedy, it seems but reasonable we should give an account of their Original, Country, Manners and Allies, that we may afterwards go on without Interruption in the Relation of their overrunning a most flourishing Province, so that there was scarce any hope of restoring it, and their plundering other Countries. Brasil a vast Province of the new World, extends Northward as far as the Line, and Southward to the Bounds of the Government of the River of Plate. It lies all along the Sea Coast, and no where runs far up into the Country. The Kings of Portugal at several times possess'd themselves of this Country, planting Colonies in it, and Alonso de Sousa by Order of King John III. divided it into several Governments, and then built the Town of S. Vincent, in about 25 degrees of South Latitude, Fortifying it with a Castle and Tower, in a Place where a small Bay is shut in by two Islands, which serve as Ramparts to it. In one of the Islands he built another Town under the Invocation of All Saints, that the one might be a Defence to the other. From these two Towns some Colonies were sent up the Country, one of which is call'd Piratininga. Two Years before the Death of S. Ignatius, Emanuel Nobrega the first Proviucial of Brasil, gave it the Name of S. Paul, because he came into Piratininga on the Festival of that Apostle. Tho' all the Fathers of the Society, who Founded a College there labour'd with great Applause, yet F. Anchieta excell'd them all for his wonderful Actions and Innocence of Life, and the European Planters for a long

Techo.

Original and Manners of the Mamaluks.

Techo.

a long time preserv'd their native Honour, till the European Women failing, they began to mix with that barbarous Race, and corrupted the Noble Portuguese Blood. This mixture, in process of time, running through them all, and bad Sons succeeding good Fathers, and worse Grandsons; the Sons that generous Portuguese breed, being so often mix'd, degenerated, so that there nothing remain'd among the Posterity of those first renowned Conquerors of Brazil, but their Names. The Portuguese disdaining to call this Generation by their Name (as Orlandinus in his History of the Society observes) gave them the barbarous Title of Mamaluks; that since they are like them in nothing else, they may not be alike in Name. This deprav'd Race was increased by the addition of worse Companions, who resorted to them in great numbers from other places, being invited by Liberty, and the good disposition of the place. For Piratininga, as to situation and fruitfulness of Soil, furnishes such a desire to live wickedly and daintily, with Necessaries and Safety. It is fifteen Leagues from the Ocean, and a little South of the Tropick of Capricorn. Being therefore in a temperate Climate, it produces most things necessary for life, so that it not only furnishes it self, but the rest of Brazil, which is so luxuriant by reason of the great Heat and Moisture, with plenty of Corn and Cattle. It produces Sugar, and is said not to want Gold Mines. There is but one way thither from the Ports upon the Ocean, which is over craggy Mountains, and very difficult to pass; and so narrow, that a very few may keep out any numbers. This fertility of the Soil, and inaccessibleness of the place, draws many, who are forced to fly for their Crimes, or desire to commit them to fly thither out of Europe and Brazil. Thus Men of several Nations, and guilty of all Crimes, having found out a place suitable to their Inclination, and joining in amity with the Mamaluks, began to treat the Indians after a far different manner from the first generous Portugals, who first planted Colonies in Brazil. The first, and a singular Proof of their Villanies, as I find it fell upon the Tupinaques. These People dwelt on both the Banks of the River Aniambi, which rising out of the cold Mountains, and running a long race through the Province of Guaïra, falls into the Parana. They were computed to be 30000 Archers, living in 300 Villages; but they so destroy'd all that Nation in six Years War, that there scarce remains any token of that Multitude, except the Ruins of the Villages. The War with the Tupinaques being at an end, they entered the Territories of the Tupiguas, inhabiting both sides of the River Teticai, in the Year 1589, after having spread their Terror through the neighbouring Countries, and for seven Years drove all before them; after which followed the five Years Desolation along the River Paraubaba, which falls into the Springs of that of the Amazons. King Philip <sup>p.</sup> abhorring the cruelty of these Robbers, <sup>R.</sup> set out an Edict, which was only the renewing the Laws of the Emperour Charles the 5th, and the Kings of Portugal, forbidding the Indians being made Slaves on any pretence whatsoever. The Governours and Magistrates of Brazil, and even those of the Town of Piratininga endeavour'd to have the King's Commands observ'd. But the Mamaluks breaking through all Antient and Modern Laws, were still more wickedly bent upon the destruction of the Indians. Yet, lest they should seem openly to violate the Laws, they had always specious Pretences, and such as seem'd to carry a Zeal of the King's Service for what they did, palliating their Villany under a show of Justice. Thus, under a colour of going to the Gold Mines found up the In-land, they often broke out in great numbers from the Towns of Piratininga, S. Vincent, and the Saints, and drove away an infinite Multitude of Indians into slavery. But what is most preposterous, they perform all acts of Devotion before they set out upon these Expeditions, which last three or four Years, as if Heaven could hear the Prayers of Miscreants, and give a Blessing to Villanies; and what is most provoking, these Wretches call their Robberies, Apostolick Excursions; saying, they go to ferret the Indians out of their lurking Holes, to bring them to Civility and Christian Religion. I could give a particular Account, having the Authentick Relations by me, of the Persons, Times, and Places; I could show how cruelly they wasted whole Provinces, who the Commanders of the Robbers were, and what particular Places they utterly destroy'd; but I shall express it more briefly, by saying, that all the vast tract of Land, from the River Marannon to thirty Degrees of South Latitude, up the In-land, suffer'd by their continual excursions. There remain'd a part of Guaïra, and some other Countries famous

Tupinaques

mous for the Labours of the Society in them, which how they plunder'd or damaged, I am now about to set down as acted in several Years.

Luis de Cespedes, a Man nobly descended, arriv'd from Spain in Brazil, in the Year 1629, to proceed to Paraguay, having obtain'd the Government of that Province of the King. There are two Ways from Brazil to Paraguay. The one by Land, the other by Sea. The Way by Land was absolutely forbid by the King, to prevent the Oppression of the Indians. Yet the new Governour thought fit to go by Land, alledging he had the King's Dispensation. Being at Piratininga, he set out at such time as 900 Mamaluks, and 2200 Tupims, (these are fierce Indians, in League with the Mamaluks) were preparing to enter Guaira to plunder. Their Commander in chief, was Antony Raposo; other Men infamous for enslaving the Indians, were Captains under him. The Governour setting out of Paratininga in an ill Season, having travelled some Days by Land, made the rest of his journey into Guaira on the River. Being honourably entertain'd at Loreto by F. Ruiz, all the Return he made was ill Language; and having consulted about providing against the Mamaluks, he fixed upon nothing. Tho he could not but commend the Labours of the Society, he could never be brought to order Supplies to oppose the Robbers, declaring he was not strong enough for them; but it appears he was faulty in that particular, and therefore some time after was fined by the Council of Spain. In the mean while the Troops of the Mamaluks drove the Lands of the Infidels not far from the Towns of the Converts, attempting nothing upon the Converts of the Society; yet the Fathers did not doubt there was Fire hid under those deceitful Ashes, which soon broke out into a dreadful Conflagration; for it was plain that the Robbers only wanted a Pretence to fall on. The Cacique Taturana was the innocent cause of all this Mischief. He had been once taken by Simon Alvarez, a Mamaluks, but having made his escape, with his Men, fled to the Town of S. Antony. This being known, Simon Alvarez, Commander of one of the Troops of Mamaluks demands Taturana of F. Mola Director of the Town of S. Antony, who answering, That Taturana was free by Nature, and therefore could not, contrary to the Laws of Nature, put him into Chains, who had fortunately deliver'd himself; the Rover was enrag'd, and consulting with Antony Raposo, chief Commander of the Mamaluks, order'd his Company to Arms, resolving, in revenge, to destroy the whole Colony of S. Antony. F. Mola, on the other side, not questioning he should be attack'd, baptiz'd all the Infants in the Town. The next Day a numerous Company of Mamaluks under the command of Simon Alvarez, assaults the Town, plunders it, spares none, cuts off such as oppose him, secures the prime Men, drives away the weak Multitude, robs F. Mola of all he had, tho he us'd all means to move those Robbers to commiseration; but finding no humanity among them, and despairing of defending the Bodies, apply'd himself to procure the health of the Souls of those poor People, baptizing, instructing, and otherwise helping them, as occasion would permit in that short time, and this not without danger of his Life, one of these Miscreants aiming to kill him, had not another of the Gang obstructed him. About 2500 Indians are said to have been taken at this Invasion by the Robbers; the Shepherd was left without his Flock, lamenting the loss of his dear Children in God, whom he saw drove away like Sheep before his Face, without hopes of redress. Nor was the Sorrow of those poor Captives less, who still look'd about to see whether there was any possibility of making their escape; and some having found means of compassing it, made their Way to F. Mola. To these were added some others who had hid themselves from the Robbers, all whom as he was leading to the Town of the Incarnation, he was again in danger of being kill'd; for several of them changing their Minds, began to Mutiny, accusing F. Mola of Treachery, and affirming he dealt underhand with the Robbers; whereupon they were ready to fall upon him, but that he commemorating the dangers he and others of the Society had expos'd themselves to for their sakes, diverted them for that time, with the assistance of some sincere Converts. But the danger was accidentally doubled; for a great number of Gentiles, altogether ignorant of the Mischief done the Day before, coming to the Town of S. Antony, with a design to embrace Christianity, finding it abandon'd and strewed with dead Bodies, grew enrag'd, and dispersing into several Companies, sought about for the Fathers as Betrayers of their Country. But F. Mola was got safe to the Incarnation.

Teebo.

Mamaluks
destroy
the Town
of S. Antony.

tion, F. Pastor having come out to meet and relieve him.

Pecho. The News of the Invasion being brought to the Town of St. Michael, oblig'd F. Mendoza and F. Vansuck, who resided there, to provide the best they could against it: And because it was unsafe to remain in the Town, endeavour'd to perswade the Inhabitants to fly with them to the Town of the Incarnation, where with joint Forces they might oppose the Robbers. Many taking the Advice, follow'd F. Vansuck, and were met and reliev'd by the Fathers and Converts of the Incarnation. Having secured them, F. Vansuck return'd to the Town of S. Michael, and perswaded the rest for fear of the Enemy, who was now near, to hide themselves in the Woods. He himself stay'd in the Town with two Youths, to the great danger of his life; for many of the Indians were full of Jealousies, and some were reported to design against his life; whereupon some Converts venturing from the Incarnation to defend him, fell into the Hands of the Mamelucs, and were carry'd away into slavery, notwithstanding he went to demand them. Soon after, Antony Picudo, Captain of another Band of Mamelucs, envying the Plunder of the Town of S. Antony, without any other provocation, enter'd the Town of S. Michael, and finding it abandon'd, in a rage, search'd all the Country for four Leagues about, making all Slaves that he could meet with. These two Towns being destroy'd, there could be no opportunity of attending the Conversion of the Caaiuvans, a numerous Nation, that desired the assistance of the Society. In the mean while, great numbers fled for protection to the Town of Jesu Maria, but in vain, for neither could this Place avoid the fury of those Miscreants. Emanuel Morato, Captain of a Band of those Thieves, being inform'd of the Multitude there was in the Town of Jesu Maria, taking some Detachments out of the other Companies of Rovers, and 2000 of the Tupus their Auxiliaries, in march appear'd before the Town of Jesu Maria. The chief Men of the Town going out a little way to discover whether those were profess'd Enemies, were presently seized and bound. M. Maceta perceiving they acted in a hostile manner, went out to them with a Crucifix in his Hand, and an Albe or Surplice on to try whether any Respect would be given to his Priestly Function, but they scorn'd him, calling him Fool, and

And that of Jesu
Maria.

Deceiver of the Indians. The new made Christians surrounded their Father, expressing their Affection the best they could in Words or Tears. Among them Curuba, a powerful Cacique complaining to him with a filial Confidence, of the Violence offer'd him, was shot through the Body with a Bullet by one of the Robbers. F. Maceta provok'd at this Villany, severely reprimanded that Wretch, who drawing his Sword threatened to kill him, but was diverted from it. Curuba in the mean while wallow'd in his Blood, and having not been before baptiz'd, was there at his Death made a Christian. Guiravera with the rest of the principal Men had their Hands bound behind them, and were drove away like Sheep. F. Spinosa hearing of the Danger F. Maceta was in, came with some hundreds of Indians by Night to his Assistance, and had like to break his Neck off a Rock, of which fall he lay three Hours as if he had been dead, recovering afterwards with much difficulty. Three hundred more Converts came with F. Diastanius on the same account from the Town of S. Thomas. All the good these Succours did, was only to receive some few that made their escape from the hindermost Troops, for the Robbers were gone off in time. F. Maceta went away with F. Diastanius, who advis'd him to pursue the Robbers, that if he could not move them by intreaty, he might force the Prey from them in Brasil by the assistance of the Magistrates. This being resolv'd on, F. Maceta and F. Vansurkins who had been rob'd of their Flocks, follow'd the Robbers through a vast Desert and soon overtook them. The Mamelucs divided into Companies as they were, drove a numerous Multitude of Captives before them; and that none might escape, had secur'd the Caciques with Fetters link'd to a long Chain, the rest were put forward with their Hands bound. F. Maceta ran among these poor Wretches embracing them, and begging of their Keepers for his Children in Christ, but they scoff'd at him, saying he was Mad, and yet he desisted not till he had mollify'd one of those Thieves, and rescu'd some few of the Indians. Encourag'd with this Success he went to another Company, where with much intreaty, he obtain'd Liberty for Eight, one of whom was the famous Cacique Guiravera and with him his Wife. He try'd others, but with no Success, for Cruelty once hardned is not to be mov'd by any Intreaties. Therefore left the Revers

Rovers should repent them, the Fathers sent back the Indians they had deliver'd with those that carry'd their portable Altar into Guaira. After which they follow'd the Thieves through a vast Tract of Land, attended by three Companions, and feeding on Berries or other wild Fruit that grew in the Woods, with eminent Danger of their Lives. The Mamaluks march'd slowly, lest the Prisoners should faint by the way, if they drove them hard; yet very often some dropt, being either spent with Sickness or Hunger, or failing through Age or Weakness, who the Fathers having prepar'd for Death, were oblig'd to leave in the Wilderness expos'd to wild Beasts, that they might give the same Assistance to others. There it was frequent to see young Men loaded with their Mothers, Mothers with their Children, Sons with their Fathers, Wives with their Husbands, and Husbands supporting the Wives who had their Infants in their Arms. If any one attempted to make his escape, he was cruelly Whipp'd: Nor was it permitted any Man, if his Father or Mother dropt by the way, to stay behind with them, but wheresoever one sunk, there he must dye alone. Parents were dragg'd away from their dying Children, and Sisters drove away from closing the Eyes of expiring Brothers; and the Mothers dying Infants perish'd for want of Suck. At length having overcome the Difficulties of that tedious Journey, they came to Piratinunga, or the Town of S. Paul, where the Fathers were lovingly Entertain'd in the College of their Order. The Mamaluks returning after an Expedition of nine Months with 1500 Captives, divided the Prey among themselves, owning they never made a better Booty.

That the
thers
d in Bra- The two Fathers having made their Complaint to the Judge of Rio de Janeiro in Brasil, of the Mamaluks Plundering their three Towns, and driving away all the People, and demanding to have the Prisoners restor'd, were answer'd, That he had no Power to determine those capital Cases, which were all refer'd to the Governor General of Brasil. Upon this they set Sail from Rio de Janeiro with the Provincial of the Order, to Baia de todos os Santos, the Residence of the Governor. Where having made their Complaint, they obtain'd an Order for all the Prisoners to be restor'd to them, and a Judge was appointed to go force them from the Mamaluks. But this was more Specious than Effectual, and the Governor well enough knew it; for it was plain that so villanous a Cause was not manag'd with that Severity it ought to be; and it was plain that those Robbers ought not to be dealt with by Form of Law, but Force of Arms. The Connivance was universal, for the miserable Captives were sold throughout all Brasil as Slaves, and many of the principal Men bought of them, that so more being concern'd there might be the less hopes of Redress. But James de Vega a noble Portuguese, perceiving the Business was protracted, without any hopes of Success, offer'd F. Maceta as much Money as would bear his Charges into Spain, to sollicite this Affair before the King, but it being reported that the Mamaluks prepar'd for another Invasion into Guaira, the Fathers thought better to return thither with all speed. Having recover'd but twelve of the Prisoners at Rio de Janeiro, they went away to Piratinunga, carrying a Child of four Years of Age on their Backs up a Mountain two Leagues to the top. Being come to Piratinunga, the Mamaluks in a tumultuous manner, obstructed their entring the College, and carrying them to another House, detain'd them till the Rector of the College deliver'd them by force of Intreaties. The Judge sent by the Governor of Brasil, was in danger of his Life, one of those Villains firing at him; and some of those Miscreants were heard to say, They would rather renounce their Baptism than suffer the Governor's Order to be put in Execution. Thus the Judge despairing of doing any good, return'd from whence he came. The Fathers after many Affronts put upon them, set out of Piratinunga with a very small Number, they had rescu'd out of so many Thousands; and being plentifully furnish'd with Provisions for their Journey by the Fathers of the College, sail'd down the River Aniambi into the Parana, and out of that into the Parapana, returning home after a whole Years Toils to little purpose.

Vol. IV.

The Province of Guaira having suffer'd so much by the IncurSION of the Mamaluks, was no less rent by Jealousies and Fears; for many of the Converts thought they were gather'd into Towns by the Fathers, that they might be the better betray'd to those barbarous Enemies, giving out, there was no Faith to be given to those who had so often affirm'd, That the Mamaluks would only infect those who did not become Christians, and submit to the King of Spain. That dismal Experience had taught them, they

D d d d

fear'd

Troubles
in Guaira.

spar'd none; and considering what had hapned, there was less Danger in the Woods than in Towns, for since the coming of the Fathers, more had perish'd in one Day, than in many Years before. This and much more they alledg'd, and their Suspicion was increas'd by a Report spread abroad, That the wild Infidels in the Woods, had made a notable Slaughter of the Mamaluks. The Fathers on the other side vindicated themselves, repeating the extraordinary Kindnesses they had at all times done that Nation, instancing that they had protected the Indians at the expence of their own Reputation and Goods. That they had prevail'd with the Spaniards of Villarica not to oppress the Natives. That they had obtain'd several Laws to be enacted by the Catholick King in favour of the Indians; and much more to this purpose; besides all the particular Actions of every Father in particular, wherein they had serv'd them at the expence of their unspeakable Toils, and hazard of their Lives. The Indians inrag'd with Misfortunes would hear no Reason, but became Ungovernable, looking upon all these Allegations no better than so many Snares. When Guiravera, who had been deliver'd from Captivity, as was said above, returning home, and finding the Society traduced, ran among the People, shewing with what Danger and Trouble F. Maceta had deliver'd him; and how he travel'd into Brasil to secure them against further Invasions. This fresh Example prevail'd above reason, and Guiravera shewing himself in all Parts, in some measure took off the false Imputation. Yet there was no less trouble at Villarica, for some of the Citizens there, had the Confidence to seize those for their own use, who escap'd the Mamaluks at the Town of S. Anthony, which the Fathers took care to oppose, lest it should produce new Troubles. But the most deplorable thing of all was, that the Governor neglected in this time of Distress to relieve Guaira, a principal part of his Province. After the Governor departed the Province, F. Diastanius discover'd a Practice that would have prov'd very pernicious, which I will set down in this place to divert the Reader amidst the Relation of so many Calamities. About 1500 Families of Inhabitants of the Town of the Incarnation, had been so well instructed by F. Mendoza, that they differ'd but little from the ancient Converts. But amidst these Confusions of War spoken of, the Devil set up certain Sorcerers, who had such Influence over them, that they could not endure to come to Church, or do any other act of Christianity, but look'd like quite another People than they were; and seem'd to have return'd to their former Barbarity. F. Diastanius being much concern'd at this change, and having long endeavour'd to find out the cause; when he least expected had it discover'd to him by a Youth he had bred at home. He told him, It was all the Work of the Sorcerers, who had seduced most of the Inhabitants; and built two Temples on the Tops of the Mountains, for Men, Women and Children to resort to. That the Devil gave Answers, as the Oracles us'd to do, through the Bones of dead Sorcerers placed there, to Honour which they had appointed Priests and Priestesses. That even those who had charge of Catechising others, were Infected, and Debauch'd others; and that all sorts of Sacrileges were committed there. That the Men there making extravagant Motions, like mad Men, sought Predictions of what was to come. And the Women with dishevel'd Hair, fed the perpetual Fire in honour of the Devil. That it was reckned a Crime to touch the Bones of the Sorcerers, which they pretended had again taken Flesh. That they resorted thither on Sundays and Holy Days, to be out of the way of attending the Christian Devotions. The Fathers having consulted together, went out two one way and two another, to burn the Temples and burn the Authors of this Mischief. F. Diastanius and his Companion coming about break of Day, unexpected to one of the Temples, found all things agreeable to the Information given, for it was large, and the Sorcerers Bones were in a private part in a Hammack hanging by two Pillars, and wrap'd up in Blankets and adorn'd with Feathers of several Colours, and worship'd with extraordinary Ceremony. Without it were several little Huts, in which those that were newly admitted to the Religion Feasted and Revell'd; from the Roof hung an infinite number of Offerings made to the Devil, who on his part distracted his Worshippers with monstrous Lies. Having examin'd all things, they set Fire to the Temple and all that was in it, and to all the little Hovels about it, which done they return'd home. F. Ruiz and F. Mendoza understanding the way they went, that the Bones were carried out of that Temple, pursu'd and brought them back, burning all together as the others had done. The next Day the the Fathers gather'd the Indians, and checking them severely for relapsing into this Superstition, soon brought them all to Repentance. This done, the Fathers apply'd themselves to repair the Damages caus'd by the Mamelucs, and F. Cataldinus built a Town among the Gualaches, five Days journey from that of the Conception, which was the 13th they had founded in the Province of Guaira, and called it the Town of S. Peter.

The Fathers searching the Woods, gathered those that had fled for fear of the Mamelucs, and with the assistance of Guiravera, who, as has been said, was return'd from Brazil, drew such a Multitude as was sufficient to re-build the Town of Jesu Maria in the same place it was before, where it was accordingly begun; but F. Maceta coming from Brazil with the News of the obstinacy of the Mamelucs, it was, for more safety, remov'd to a place near the Precipice of Humbai. Thus was the Province of Guaira beginning to be restor'd, when the dismal News was brought, that the Mamelucs had destroy'd the Town of S. Paul, and drove all the Inhabitants away into Captivity. The Inhabitants of the Incarnation hearing of the destruction of St. Paul, fled some of them to the Town of S. Xavierius, and some to Humbai. Thus one Town was destroy'd by the barbarity of the Robbers, and another only by the dread of them, without any hopes of being restor'd. F. Ruiz halting from among the Gualaches, to remedy these Misfortunes, could find no better expedient, than to gather the remains of the Inhabitants of both Towns, and to send them toward Villarica, where the Track of S. Thomas remains, there to build a new Town. But this was running them into fresh Disasters, for other stealers of Indians lying in wait for Booty, seized all they could for their own use, and drove them a vast way into Paraguay. F. Ruiz sent F. Suarez, and F. Racionero to complain thereof at Villarica, and finding no redress, but that new danger threaten'd from the Mamelucs, he sent away F. Diafanus into Paraguay, to acquaint the Governour with the whole matter, and beg some assistance to support the sinking Province. The Governour having heard the Account F. Diafanus gave of the Invasion of the Mamelucs, the destruction of the Towns, and destruction of the Province of Guaira, was as much inrag'd as if some Affront had been offer'd him, and told the Father, he was well assur'd by Letters from Villarica, that the Fears of the Fathers were groundless, and that the Society magnify'd every thing to misrepresent him. But F. Diafanus, lest the conniving at this Behaviour, might afterwards be a Reflection on the Society, drew up a Petition, and presented it to the Governour before a publick Notary, praying relief for the Province of Guaira; but no Answer being return'd, he halted away to consult the Provincial upon that point. At the same time F. Alfaro was sent thither, because the same Governour, had made a Law, forbidding any Person, without his leave, to go through the Province of Parana, into that of Guaira, but through Paraguay, which is 250 Leagues about; and tho the Society represented the ill consequences of that Law, which cut off the sending any timely Supplies to those distressed People, yet they could not make him alter his Resolution. F. Vasquez the Provincial, was extremely concern'd at these Calamities, especially when he receiv'd further News from Guaira, that there were People there, who made Slaves of those poor Indians who had escaped out of the Hands of the Mamelucs. These things mov'd the Provincial to send F. Diafanus to the supreme Council in Pernu, and he himself went up the Parana to Guaira, to comfort the Afflicted, and be an Eyewitness of other Calamities. But having stay'd so long in this Province of Guaira, it will not be amiss to look back into the others, before we proceed upon the rest of its Calamities.

About the end of the Year 1630, and the beginning of the next, the Province of Tucuman began to be infested with War, which might have been avoided, if the People had been satisfy'd when they were well. The Spaniards inhabiting the Towns on the Borders of the Valley of the Calchaquines, had, some Years ago, been offended at the Society, for having settled in two places of the said Valley, saying the respect they had for the Fathers, hinder'd them from subduing those fierce People. The Fathers, tho' they had long labour'd in vain to reduce the Calchaquines, yet thought they did Christianity, and the Publick good service, in baptizing the Children, and keeping that savage Nation from plundering the rest of Tucuman. Yet for other Reasons, as has been said before, the Valley was forsaken. After which, the Citizens of Salta and Rioxa, livina

Techu.

Rebellion of the Cal- chaquines.

Techo.

living in greater security than was convenient among faithless and offended People, till'd the Lands as they used to do upon their Borders; and Urbina, a rich Man, was so bold as to build a stately Country House like a Castle, at the very entrance into the Vale. But the Fathers being once gone, as if all Bands were broken, their Antient Hatred prevailing, the barbarous Indians broke out, falling first on what was next at hand and then further off. Then joyning with their Neighbours, they take Urbina's Country House, and killing him, with his Wife and Servants, carry'd away his Daughters, who were afterwards recover'd by the Citizens of Salta; destroying all the Country Houses of the Spaniards. The Andalgales, Famentines, Andacoles, Capaines, and other barbarous Indians in league with them, came into their assistance. The Indians bred under the Spaniards, murder their Masters, and force their way into the Vale to recover their Liberty. Albornex, Governour of Tucuman, elder Brother to the Cardinal of that Name, falling upon the Indians before they could joyn their whole Force, defeats them, and builds a Fort at the Entrance of the Vale; but the Enemy uniting, kill the Commander of the Fort and all his Garrison that had ventur'd without their Works, and taking the Fort, destroy the City London, killing many of the Inhabitants, lay siege to Rioja, and strike a terror throughout all the Province of Tucuman. This War lasted above ten Years, and was not ended till the Society return'd to the Vale.

Of the
Caiaguas.

In the Province of Parana, an Excursion was made from the Town of Acarai, to bring over the Caiaguas to the Faith of Christ. The Nation of the Caiaguas is small, and the most savage of all the Indians. They live scatter'd in Woods between the Rivers Parana and Urvaica, whence they had the Name given them; for Caiagua signifies of a Wood. They have a particular Language of their own, not easily to be comprehended; for in uttering their Words, they seem rather to whistle, and to make a confus'd noise in their Throats than to speak. They live in wretched Huts, made of the Boughs of Trees, far distant from one another, without making any more Provision for Food than the Wild Beasts, for they neither mind Husbandry nor Trade. They kill both Beasts and Fish with their Arrows; and for the most part, feed on Worms,

Snakes, Mice, Pismires, and such ready kind of Food, and eat the Flesh of Tygers. The Elks, which the Spaniards call great Beasts, they fight with and eat. As for Monkeys, they creep after them from Tree to Tree, as if they were Monkeys themselves, and it is the nature of those Creatures to carry their young ones along with them, as they fly from one Tree to another; so that if they happen to slip down, the Inhabitants catch and devour them. Wild Honey is one of their Dainties, and they make a Liquor of it which warms and defends them against the Cold. They are continually at War with the Tygers, nor can they give any other reason for their being so few, but that they are continually destroy'd by those fierce Creatures. They look upon Madnets as Valour, and are unacquainted with any other Endowments of the Mind. Many of them are deformed to a Prodigy; as like Monkeys as Men, especially if you look upon their Noses, which are more like Snouts. They are generally hump'd back'd, and wry neck'd; yet there are some among them well shap'd, especially the Women, who being born and Bred in the Shade, are colour'd much like the European Women. Both Sexes have but very little use of Reason, which they so deprave by their Food, fierceness, and libertine Life, that they differ but little in their ways from the very Beasts. The Women cover themselves from the Waste to the Knees with Nettles, which they steep like Flax, and combing them with their Fingers, weave them together like Nets. The Men wear no Cloaths but Skins, which are so little, that most of their Bodies are naked, and yet their Skins are so hardened, that they creep like Snakes, through Bryars and Brambles without the least concern. If any of them are taken in War, it is harder to tame them than the wild Beasts, for they will bite Iron Fetters, foaming all over like Mad-men; and even the Children, when taken, can hardly be brought to be sociable and tame. If they are kept long bound, they soon starve themselves to death, like Creatures that cannot live out of their Element. There is another sort of warlike Caiaguas, whose Military Exploits are more like the Sallies of wild Beasts, than the fighting of Men. These sallying out of their Woods, surprise Travellers, as they lye asleep, and murder them; not out of any revenge or Covetousness of what they have, but to eat their flesh, or satisfy their own cruel Temper; which inhumanity they call War. They are so much concern'd to be overcome, that tho sometimes they are spar'd by their Enemies, they will neither eat, nor suffer their Wounds to be dress'd. The Fathers in Guaira, had at several times, got some numbers of both these Nations out of the Woods, but most of them, as soon as they were shut up in the Town, dyed like Plants that grow in the Shade, and cannot bear the Sun. The Fathers of Acarai had done the same, and were desirous to find some expedient to provide for the Salvation of those wretched Creatures, with more safety to their Bodies. F. Alvarez, with incredible Labour and Danger, made his way through almost impenetrable Woods to these People, and having got eighteen of them together, he return'd to the Town, where he instructed them the best their stupidity would bear; and having baptiz'd them, they all dyed. The rest of the Province of Parana was peaceable, and the Heathens daily came over, and were baptized.

Town of Assumption built in Urvaica.

The Province of Urvaica was still more prosperous, and yielded a more plentiful Harvest, for above 3000 Souls were there baptiz'd, a new Town built, and the Foundations of two others laid. The River Acaragua falls into the Urvaica, seven Leagues above the Colony of St. Xavierius. The Provincial Vasquez had promised the People, dwelling on its Banks, to send them a Father, in hopes whereof, they had so gather'd their scatter'd Houses, that they seem'd seriously to desire to be civiliz'd and become Christians; and the Society thought it a matter of great consequence to secure that Post, which would open a Way to the upper part of Urvaica, and obstruct Niezuvius from raising new Tsoubles. F. Romero repairing thither, and finding 350 Families already assembled, and as many more ready to meet, erected a Cross, appointed Magistrates, and baptiz'd the Children. F. Altamirinus well skill'd in the Indian Language, govern'd this new Town, call'd the Assumption, twelve Years, with such success, that 4200 were there baptiz'd. It was here I learnt to express my self in the Language of Guaira; and having gain'd some skill in it, through God's great mercy, was able, tho unworthy, to employ my little Talent for twenty Years, through the Towns of Parana and Urvaica. The Infidels of the Island of Urvaica towards the South, were no less forward to ask for Fathers, and particularly, the Caapians and Caasapans, mov'd to it by Apicabija, and Mbo-carata, the Lords of those numerous Nations. But Ibapirius, a fierce Man, oppos'd their Designs. He being grown famous by his skill in Sorcery, among the Heathen People about the River Igai, raised the neighbouring People, declaring he would revenge Niezuvius his Quarrel, and crush the Caapians, and Caasapans, that they might do no harm by their Example. The Multitude ran to Arms, and marched towards the Caasapans. This being known, the Ibitarapans, Tabativians, Piratinians, Caasapaninians, Acaraguans, and Caarvans, drew out their Forces, lest the new Candidates to Christianity should suffer, and meeting the Enemy, put them to flight, and pursuing, overtook them again two Days after, but they slipt away over the Fords of the River, Igai, before they could be engag'd. There Ibapirius recruiting his Forces, making many more Fires about the Fields than were necessary for his Men, to strike a terror, and putting on the Vestments F. Gonzalez formerly us'd at the Altar, with a piece of the Chalice he had, carry'd himself as vainly as Niezuvius had done. Then affecting Divinity, he threatned to destroy all those that follow'd the Fathers. The Converts, frightened at these things, had certainly fled, but that Alonso Querrana, a Man of note among them, having spoken some words to encourage them, bid them follow him, and then with Father Romero, tho the Season was cold, ran into the Water up to the Neck, where the Ford was, and the rest following his Example, made their way over, attacked and plundered Ibapirius his Houses. Then marching with diligence, overtook, and routed the Enemy. Ibapirius fled with such precipitation, that there was no hopes of reaching him. The Conquerors alledging, it was requisite to hang some for a terror to others. F. Romero advised them to hang one of those that had been killed, which was accordingly done. Cunamipita, the promoter of this War, Ibapirius his Son, and four of his Concubines were taken, and afterwards became Christians. Ibapirius himself, after he had lived some Years in Banishment, wandring about, desir'd to be carry'd to a Town of Indian Converts, but dyed by the Way. F. Romero, before he dismissed his Forces, mark'd out the Ground for a Town among the Caasapaguans, and being subdued.

Techo.

Ibapirius

being inform'd that Apicabija had gather'd a sufficient number, laid the Foundations of another among the Caapians. The first of these Towns was dedicated to S. Peter and Paul, the other to S. Charles Borromeus. Not long before, F. Rua sailing up the River Ibicuit from the Town of Japcire to the Province of Tape, invited the Inhabitants of three Villages to go with him to the Colony of the Three Kings, then very thin of People. They all refus'd saying, That if the Society would build a Town among them, they would all consent and become Christians; and the Chief of them shewing that they and their Neighbours could make a populous Town, the Father promis'd Care should be taken of them, and return'd, Priests being yet wanting to supply so many Places. The Plague now raging, destroy'd many hundred of Indians, who lying much dispers'd, because when Towns were first built, the Fathers gave them leave at times to return to their Villages to Sow, till there could be Corn enough about the new Colonies, the said Fathers had an endless Fatigue, continually running through Woods, Rivers and Marshes, and over Hills and Mountains, to assist those that were Infected. It being therefore impossible for so few to attend them all, some of the best of the Converts were entrusted, after being well taught by the Fathers to let Blood, prescribe Purges, bring the Sick to Town, and in case of necessity to Baptize. Vincent Japinus a Cacique, who formerly had a hand in the Death of F. Gonzalez, was now one of the most zealous and diligent in performing all charitable Offices to the Sick, carrying them to the Town, supplying the Needy, assisting those that were Dying, instructing the Ignorant, rebuking those that retain'd any thing of their former Superstitions, and doing all things that could be servicable to Body or Soul; till the Infection seiz'd him, and he Dying happily, was succeeded in the Employment by Marcellus Maendius another Cacique, no less zealous. Some of the wild People call'd Caignas before-mention'd, perceiving that the Iguazans their antient Enemies, troubled them no more since their Conversion to Christianity, ventur'd with a Cacique to the Town of S. Mary Major, the People running to see them as if they had been Monsters. They gave ear to what the Fathers said to them by an Interpreter, eat what was offer'd them, and felt the Father's Garments and Shooes with admiration, thinking they had been born with Hats and Shoes; so very ignorant were those wild Creatures. It was pleasant to see how they star'd at the Ringing of the Bell, as if it had been Thunder, and to hear them ask, How so little a Thing could talk so loud. But it was much pleasanter to see those barbarous Men only us'd to the noise of Tygers, leap about when they heard the Musick, and strive to imitate the Converts, who danced to it. They return'd to their Woods giving some hopes they would come again, but tho' the Fathers us'd all means to gain them, very few were Converted. The Bishop of Paraguay visiting the Province of Parana, was receiv'd in the Towns with triumphal Arches, and in the Churches with Musick; confirm'd many thousand Converts, and applauded the Labours of the Fathers. All this Joy was allay'd by the coming of Emanuel Correa, a Man of Quality out of Brasil, with the News that vast numbers of Mamaluks and Tupus, were setting out to destroy the Province of Guaira, the Governor of Paraguay shewing no manner of concern at it; which draws me away, tho' with horror to relate what hapned there.

F. Vasquez the Provincial after visiting the Towns of Parana, went by the way of the famous Precipice, before spoken of, into the Province of Guaira; for tho' the Governor of Paraguay had forbid going that way, the royal Council of Pern had vacated his Order. Proceeding up the Rivers Parana and Huibai to Villarica, he there receiv'd the News that the Town of S. Xaverius was besieg'd by the Mamaluks. Having therefore encourag'd the Inhabitants of Villarica to defend the Country; he went the shortest way with all the speed he could to succour those in distress. F. Pastor who had charge of the Town of S. Xaverius, hearing that the Mamaluks were driving the Indians from the further Villages, ran out among them and contemning all Danger, prevail'd to have some few of the Prisoners restor'd to him. But the next Day those Robbers exercis'd their Cruelty upon the Houses nearest to the Town. There the Father thrust himself among them to save one of his Converts, and the Mamaluks flocking about him, gave occasion to the Indians to think they had Murder'd him, which prov'd advantageous to many, who upon that notion immediately fled to the old Towns of the Province. F. Pastor pick'd up three hundred, whom he deliver'd to F. Suarez to be convey'd to Places of safety, the Mamaluks

Mamaluks in the mean while after their manner, securing their Prisoners within an Enclosure made of Stakes, or Palisades, or else fastning them in long Chains. The Inhabitants of Villarica coming up at this time, fell upon the Mamaluks, but one of their Men being Wounded and another Kill'd, gave way, and could never be persuaded by the Provincial to make another Onset with them, to rescue the Prisoners. Pindovius Captain of the Colony of the Nivatinguians which had been destroy'd, drawing along with him a multitude of People, deliver'd himself up to the Robbers, after which the Town and Church of S. Xaverius were destroyed, which had contain'd 1500 Families, whereof scarce 500 Souls were saved, and sent down the Tibaxiva to the old Town. Nor did the Invasion stop here, for the Colony of S. Joseph lying in the mid way between S. Ignatius, and S. Xaverius, was destroy'd with only the dread, the Inhabitants running away for fear of the Mamaluks, or else falling into their Hands. Because the remainders of so many Towns destroy'd, might be burdensome to others, the Provincial order'd a new Town to be built near Loreto, that they might assist one another. Having thus order'd Affairs, he hastened away to relieve other Towns of the Faction of Taiaboa; for there was a Report, not altogether groundless, that the Mamaluks and Tupus were coming in great numbers to destroy the rest of Guaira. The Society had erected three Towns about the Lands of Taiaboa, one of which called the Archangels, contain'd above 1000 Families, that of St. Thomas 800, and F. Maceta had gathered such a Multitude in that of Jesu Maria, rebuilt by him, that it was little inferior to what it had been at first. The Provincial being there, was again inform'd by their Spies, that the Mamaluks were not far off; therefore calling all the Fathers together, he consulted what was best to be done in that danger: They answer'd there were two ways of assisting those People, which were either to encourage them to oppose their Enemies, or lead them away to safer places; which latter Advice the Provincial inclining to, because the Indians, who were almost naked, and fought with Arrows made of long Reeds, which did but little execution upon the Mamaluks, who had Coats stuffed with Cotton to resist them, could not, tho more numerous, withstand those Enemies, who had Swords and Fire-arms, he resolv'd the three aforesaid Towns should be remov'd out of hand, near to the Precipice of Guaira, that their great distance might be a defence to them, and in case of need, they might pass the Precipice, and repair to the Towns in Parana. Having so order'd Affairs, he went away himself for that Province, in great anxiety of Mind for these Calamities. No sooner was he gone, but News came that the Enemy drove all the Country before them, whereupon the Project of removing was hastned. Accordingly the Fathers took care to save all that could be carried away, and convey the Inhabitants to the places appointed. F. Ernotus was 60 Days marching with those committed to his charge, and brought all safe without the loss of one Creature. The others met with greater difficulty; want of Provisions, and the hardships of the Way, prevail'd with many of the Indians to turn back to their native Country. Of these, some were killed by the Gualaches, and others made Slaves. Three Days after they were gone, the Mamaluks entering the Lands of Taiaboa, found a greater Booty than ever they did before; the People surrendring themselves of their own accord, and voluntarily running themselves into Fetters, for fear of Death. All those who forsook the Fathers, ran the same Fortune. But the Mamaluks, not satisfy'd with so great a Booty, understanding that great Companies of the Converts had been conveyed away, through the Lands of the Gualaches, they pursu'd them in several Troops.

The Society had founded two Towns in the Country of the Gualaches, the one call'd the Conception, and the other S. Peter. A Troop of the Mamaluks falling unexpected into the latter, bore down all before them, without any respect to the Priests. The Mamaluks do not like the Gualaches for Slaves so well as the Guarans, because of their natural fierceness; and therefore passing them by, they made it their whole business to overtake the People of Taiaboa, that fled with the Fathers. Thus the Town of S. Peter was destroy'd, the Inhabitants retiring to their lurking places, and the Fathers, all the Guarans being taken from them, retiring to the River Piquiri. The Town of the Conception fared no better; for tho the Mamaluks did no harm there, but the carrying away of two Women, the Inhabitants were so inrag'd at it, that they fell upon F. Sala-

Towns of
S. Peter
and the Conception
destroy'd.

three owns destroyed, and the People
dispers'd.

Techo.

zar, plunder'd all he had, and forced him to fly through the Woods to the other Fathers. When such Multitudes of People from so many Towns as were destroy'd, met almost in the same Place, Provisions failing, and even the hopes of any, both the Indians and Fathers were in a miserable Condition, scarce keeping themselves alive with Herbs, and wild Fruits, and Berries. Every one had the Misfortune of another to bewail besides his own; Fathers lamented their Children, Children their Parents, Husbands their Wives, Wives their Husbands carry'd away by the Robbers. The Fathers who were in care for all, agreed to Sow in that Place, till such time as other means could be found to relieve those People; tho' it was plain there could be no settling there, or in any other Part of the Province of Guaira, because no Place was safe against the Mamelucs. F. Ruiz who had been to attend the Provincial to the Precipice, returning to visit the distress'd Indians, receiv'd News that the Mamelucs infested the Villages under the Jurisdiction of Villarica, on the River Huibai; and that fresh Troops of Robbers were coming from all Parts of South Brasil, full of hopes of a mighty Booty, to destroy all the Towns of Guaira, and little Cities of the Spaniards. Hereupon he made all possible halt to the Towns of Loreto and S. Ignatius, in the greater Consternation, because F. Salazar writ to him, that a Mameluc in the Town of the Conception, being oblig'd to him for some former kindness, had assur'd him, That when they had plunder'd the Country of Taiacoba, the Robbers had resolv'd to fall upon the old Towns of the Converts; which the Provincial foreseeing, had before his departure order'd a great number of Boats to be built, which would be useful to remove when the Enemy was near. The Spaniards of Villarica having been in due Form of Law requir'd to defend the Country, and owning themselves too weak, F. Ruiz order'd the People of Loreto and S. Ignatius to make ready to remove. These two Colonies built 20 Years before this time, were by the Industry of the Fathers so improv'd, that they might compare with the best Spanish Towns in those Parts. The Churches in them were more stately and better adorn'd than any in Tuchuman or Paraguay. F. Vaz had brought up such Choirs of Musick in both Places, that they differ but little from those in Europe; and the Behavior of the Converts was scarce inferior to that of the most polite Nations. There began to be a good increase of Kine and other Cattle, brought thither with much Trouble by the Society. There grew enough Cotten and Corn, not only to supply the Natives, but to furnish the Spaniards. All these Things, it was fear'd would make the People averse from removing, and the more because they would consider the Miseries that must attend them in perpetual Banishment. They had a Journey of an hundred and thirty Leagues to the place, whither they were to be conducted, nor was it likely that the Women and Children, Sick and Aged, who would soon feel the want of Necessaries, could pass that vast Precipice and Solitude. But on the other side the Enemy press'd, who besides reducing them to miserable Servitude, would bring their Souls into danger. Finding themselves in this condition, they all unanimously promis'd, To follow the Fathers whithersoever they pleas'd to lead them. Saying, They would never forsake their Teachers, and if any perish'd by the way, they should have the satisfaction of knowing they Dy'd for the Faith; and did not doubt but God would have a providential Care over them. F. Ruiz not to slip this opportunity, orders all to make ready; accordingly all that could be carry'd away was put into Boats, there call'd Balsas, and having laid in Provisions, they set out much better pleas'd than such as are going into Banishment us'd to do, running down the River Parapana, never to see their Country again. They went very slowly for fear of leaving any Boats behind, ~~then~~ for the Enemy. Being out of the Parapana, they held on their way on the Parana, against the will of the Inhabitants of Cuidal Real, and came without any considerable loss near to the great Precipice; where on the further Bank, all those Indians we said came from the other Towns expected their coming. F. Macesta an Eye-witness, affirms, There departed from the Town of Loreto 900 Families, and 800 out of that of S. Ignatius; besides 400 Families that join'd them from other Parts. How many met in all at the Precipice from all Parts, I cannot affirm, because the Fathers who were present differ in their Accounts. This is certain, that it was an unspeakable Grief to them to consider how many thousands of Converts out of thirteen Colonies, had been either drove away by the Mamelucs, or fled to their antient lurking Places; besides that there remain'd no hopes of ever being

Colonies of Loreto
and S. Ignatius abandon'd.

Being able to assist so many Thousands of Infidels as they left behind; or of recovering the scatter'd Converts. But now they were to consider of passing the Precipice, that the Multitude might then be convey'd down the Parana to the Place appointed, which was still seventy Leagues off; lest these remains should fall into the Hands of the Mamelucs. For News was brought that the Robbers three Days after the Departure of the Inhabitants, came to the Towns of Loreto and the Conception, and finding them abandon'd, in a Rage had threatned further Destruction. The difficulty was in finding Boats for such a Multitude after they were down the Precipice; for there was no hope that of all that number of Boats, any could escape Shipwreck, if they were let run down from the Top of the Precipice, to the Pool at the Bottom. Yet because they would try all Experiments, they turn'd almost all the Boats loose, after taking out their Lading; which in a moment were shatter'd into Chips and vanish'd, beating against the Rocks, and being swallow'd by Whirlpools. The next hope was to have Boats brought to the foot of the Precipice, from the Towns of the Converts in Parana; but they were therein disappointed in a great measure, the chief of the Fathers of Parana, being at that time call'd away to the Chapter at Cordova. Therefore the best Advice was, when they had march'd down the Precipice to the Plains, to build new Boats.

March of the trans-migrating multitude.

For the better conveniency of their descending, F. Ruiz divided the Multitude into Troops, placing a Father at the Head of each to lead, encourage and assist them. They all march'd loaded with their Provisions, and other small Utensils, meeting every now and then with Brooks, to pass which they were forced to cut down Trees and make some sort of Bridges. Sometimes the steepness of the Rocks, sometimes the hot burning Sands, and sometimes impassable Woods, obstructed their Passage; which made not only the Sick and Aged, but the Women loaded with their Children, and healthy Persons faint by the way; wheresoever any one fail'd, he was forsaken by the rest, the Fathers not being able to relieve them, but only taking care of their Souls. It is certain that a great number Perish'd in the Descent of that Precipice, which I have describ'd before. That Descent, if they went strait forward is but 14 Leagues, but they are forced to take so much Compass, as makes it almost double that way. Having spent eight Days in coming down, when they arriv'd at the Plain, all fell to Work at making of Boats, which the Indians being us'd to make of Trees hollow'd out; and there being no large Timber at the foot of the Precipice, they were forced to make Boats of very small Burden. The Fathers of Parana had with great labour and the loss of many, sent a few Boats laden with Provisions to the foot of the Precipice, to relieve the Indians after their March; but being so few among a Multitude, they signify'd little. For these reasons all the Multitude was divided into four Parts. The first Troop was order'd to march along the Banks of the Parana, under the leading of F. Spinoso. Two others took their way through the Woods up the Country, on both sides, towards the Towns of Acarai and Iguazu, under the conduct of F. Contreras and F. Suarez. The last Troop went down the River under F. Ruiz, and he not having Vessels enow to carry so great a number, F. Maceta was order'd to stay at the foot of the Precipice with the rest of the People, till the Vessels could return from Acarai, and other Conveniences be provided. F. Maceta and his Company liv'd there 3 Months upon wild Fruits; and F. Salazar liv'd four Months on the other side among the Rocks with 600 Indians, in great want of all Things; till F. Gallego came from the Town of Iguazu to relieve them. But whether they went by Land or Water, abundance dy'd; some fainting with Hunger, some with Weariness and other Misfortunes. Those on the River, the Boats being small and the Surges great, were often overset and many Drown'd. Many had made Boats of Canes, fifty Foot long and thicker than a Man's Leg, bound together, in which several were lost. One of these was stav'd, and drop'd all it carry'd into the Water, before the Fathers; but all that were in it swam ashore, except one Woman, who chose rather to be Drowned with her Children, than quitting them to get off with the rest; but the other Indians sav'd both her and the Infants. Another Boat being swallow'd up by the River, all the Men and Women were sav'd, and eleven Children lost. Those that surmounted all these Dangers, were first reliev'd by the Converts of the Towns of Iguazu and Acarai; nor is it easie to express how Charitably the Fathers and Converts of Parana, receiv'd and entertain'd so many thou-

Vol. IV.

E e e e

Tech.

Liecho. thousand Strangers; reducing themselves to extream want to supply them. Before it was propos'd to build Towns, the whole Nation dispers'd itself among the Colonies of Parana and Urvaica; which Colonies, by reason of the ill Crop the Year afforded, being ill provided to supply the Natives, involv'd themselves in wonderful Calamities. It is well known that the Inhabitants of the Town of S. Ignatius on the River Paraguay, distributed two thirds of the Provisions they had, in Alms among the Strangers. The *Itapuan*s bestow'd 3000 Oxen among them. The Inhabitants of Corpus Christi, slaughter'd a great number of Cattle to relieve them; and yet soon after Plague and Want destroy'd many of them. Six hundred were bury'd in the Town of Acarai, in a short time after some Thousands of these Pilgrims came thither. Those that surviv'd having consumed all the Food there was about the Town; labour'd to protract Life, dispers'd about the Woods, killing what came in their way. F. Alvarez ranging the Forreits to take care of their Souls, was reduced to such extremity, that he had nothing but the Skin upon his Bones, and look'd like a Ghost, being just ready to eat a pair of old Shoes, he had softned by long Boiling, when some small Supply was sent him by the other Fathers. The Ignazians for four Months maintain'd 1500 of those Guairaneans, for which they afterwards suffer'd Famine. The Plague soon after destroy'd 500 of them. In the Town of S. Mary Major, the Tygers first flesh'd on the dead Bodies, devour'd 20 Indian Converts. The People of Urvaica, whither a part of these Strangers were sent, were profusely bountiful to them; notwithstanding all which some dy'd of the Plague and for Want. To be brief, of the remains of 13 Towns of Guaira, scarce 4000 surviv'd the first Year after their Transmigration; all the rest either Dying in the way, dispersing themselves about, or Perishing by Hunger or Famine. When the Pestilence was a little abated, F. Ruiz gathering the Survivors from all Parts, apply'd himself to rebuild Towns. The River Jabebuir is about half way between the Towns of Itapua and Corpus Christi; on its Banks, not far from the Parana into which it falls; were lay'd the Foundations of two Towns, under the old Names of Loreto and S. Ignatius. That the People might not perish with Hunger whilst they were Building; the Fathers out of the Money the King allows them Yearly, and what they could raise by sale of the Goods of the Towns destroy'd, bought 10000 Oxen; which, with some other helps, kept them from starving; and those transplanted Colonies, through the Industry of the Fathers, began to regain some part of their former Luster. Hither were brought the remains of Guaira, where the Fathers had spent 23 Years with incredible Labour in reducing those People; having Founded thirteen Towns, besides the Spanish City of Villarica, which was also abandon'd. The Province of Guaira through their indefatigable Labours was thus improving, and it was hop'd the whole would embrace Christianity, and submit to the Catholick King; when that Plague of the Mamalucs, as has been said overthrew all, cutting off the hopes of any return thither; for after Plundering the Towns erected by the Society, the Robbers first ruin'd the Villages under the Jurisdiction of the Spanish City of Villarica, and then without any respect to the Bishop of Paraguay, who came thither in Person, overthrew that and the City of Guaira. Some of the Spaniards of Villarica were remov'd to the River Paraguay, and some took up among the Mamalucs. The two Towns being settled, F. Ruiz was appointed to have charge of them. Where we must leave him to look a little into the Province of Urvaica, and some other Parts.

When F. Romero had made some Provision for the poor Guairanians, being strengthned by the Accession of the Fathers came from that Province; he seriously apply'd himself to propagate Christianity beyond the bounds of Urvaica in the Province of Tape; wherein God's special Providence was visible, which after the Destruction of so many Towns, furnish'd a new Province for that of Guaira which had been utterly ruin'd. Under the Name of the Province of Tape, is comprehended a ridge of Mountains running an hundred Leagues from East to West; but the Extremities of which Mountain are eight Days Journey from the River Urvaica, and twice that distance from the Atlantick Ocean. The Vales below it are excellent Pasture for Cattle. The Land which will bear any Grain, and Water'd by abundance of Springs and Brooks. In the marshy Grounds towards the Sea there is often found an amphibious Creature very like a Sheep, but that it has Teeth and Talons like a Tyger; and on of the Province

Descript
of T-

Reported to be so fierce, that it does not spare Lions, nor do the Natives dread any Creatures so much as these, which sometimes come out of the Water in Flocks, and do much mischief. There is no way to escape them, but by speedy climbing of Trees, and even that will not do sometimes, for those Sheep either root up the Trees, or stay so long about them, 'till Fear or Hunger makes the People drop off. If ever they happen to kill any of these Creatures, which is very rare, they wear their Skins, whence the Guarans call a Garment Mo, taking its Name from the Beast, or giving the Beast the Name from the Garment. These Monsters really are in Sheep's Cloathing, but are themselves ravenous Wolves. There is also a famous White Bird, which tho it have but a very small Body, has a Voice that sounds like a Bell, which therefore the Natives call Guirapo, or the sounding bird. The Woods produce a low sort of Palm-trees, not unlike the Indian Pines, of the Bark whereof they make Bow-strings, stronger and finer than if they were made of Silk. There is plenty of shining Stones, which doubtless might be curiously polish'd, if there were European Artists. The Tree Ecapis, which is also found in other parts, when the Sun rises, weeps or sweats out a plentiful Flower, which appears to be no Dew, because the other Trees about it are dry. This Tree seems to put us in mind, that Men should weep when the Sun of Prosperity shines on them. The People of the Province of Tape differ not from the rest of the Guarans, either in Customs or Language, only they seem to be of a milder Temper, and less Vicious; and Experience has taught, that no Nation in South America sooner embraces Christianity, or retains it more steadily. Loving their Ancient Liberty, they were utter Enemies to Strangers, and could not easily have been subdued by force of Arms; had not the power of the Cross prevail'd. They liv'd after the manner of the Guarans in little Villages, built either on the tops of Mountains, or in Woods, near to Springs or Brooks; of all those Villages, Tape, which gave Name to the Province, was the biggest. F. Gonzalez had been there before his Death; but the People being not well dispos'd, retir'd with some danger. But in the Year 1631, F. Ruiz coming hither up the River Ibrinit, and F. Romero by Land; they found, that by conversing with the Converts, many of the People were become inclinable to Christian Religion, and particularly Gdamica, Jabico, Cuniambo, Aracajo, and some other Caciques, earnestly intreated they might be furnished with Teachers of the true Law. Their Request was now granted this Year 1632, because the Province of Guaira being ruin'd, the Fathers that came from thence, did not only know the Language, but knew how to deal with the Indians, and were zealous to retrieve their late Losses. F. Romero, having sent two other Fathers before, and following himself with two more, was honourably received there by Guamic, and his confederate Caciques, and conducted to a House and Church they had built for him. F. Mendoza and F. Bernardes, left there to take care of that new Colony, within the space of a Year, gather'd 750 Families. The Town had the Name of S. Michael given it, where above 8400 Souls have been baptiz'd. In another part of the same Province, F. Romero was receiv'd with abundance of Bonfires, where there was also a sort of Church ready built, and Huts about it, to show their readiness to obey whatsoever the Fathers should command, and in three Months time, 1200 Families settled in that place. This Town had the Name of St. Thomas given it, and was two Days Journey from that of S. Michael; in the mid space between both which places, there were abundance of scatter'd Indians, who assembling of their own accord, in a place called Iiquatia, built their Houses in order as for a Town, with a Habitation and Church for the Fathers, sending some Men to F. Romero, to desire he would not slight them any more than others, for they were resolv'd to become Christians. F. Romero blessing God for this wonderful Success, halted to them, call'd the Town S. Joseph, and prom to send them a Priest. The same done in another place call'd Ararica, on the top of a Mountain, where 600 Families met together, and had the Name of the Nativity of the Blessed Virgin given it. Another Town was erected near the Wood Ibitarana, and call'd S. Teresa, of which more may be said hereafter.

Nothing bred more frequent Troubles, and made the Indians fly from Christianity so much, as the confining of them to one Wife, which gives us occasion to say somewhat of a Controversy that arose among the Fathers, concerning the Marriages of the Guarans.

Of the Marriages of the Guarans.

Town of S. Michael

And St. Thomas.

Guirapo, a strange Bird.

Ecapis, a notable Tree.

Techo.

rans, not unworthy to be here mention'd with the decision of it, because it was nice and curious. The Chief Men of this Nation, were wont to keep as many Concubines as their Lust inclin'd them to, or their Authority could obtain among their People; and it was a great discouragement to them to embrace Christianity, when they were warn'd to be satisfi'd with one Woman. This was in some measure heighten'd by the too austere nicety of some of the Fathers, who would oblige these Men to take to Wife the first of their Women. Others, without any Scruple, allow'd the new Converts to chuse any one they pleas'd of their Women for a Wife. These different Opinions having continued and been maintain'd for some time, the decision of it was at length referr'd to the Pope, who was then Pope Urban the 8th, and the whole Controversy sent him in Writing by F. Lugo, who was afterwards a Cardinal, which because it shews the barbarous practice of those People, and several particulars worth observing, I will set down at large; his Words are these. Most Holy Father, "There arises a mighty Difficulty in the Conversion of the Indians, of the Province or Kingdom of Paraguay, in the West Indies, on account that some of our Missioners, will oblige them to take to Wife, and stick to the first Consort they had, during their Infidelity; for this Nation, according to their barbarous Custom, turn away at every foot, their Wives, if they may be so call'd, as we do our Servants; and this, only because the Wife is sick, and cannot dress the Meat, or sew the Garments, or look to the House, or because she grows Old. Nay, very often, a Man takes not only one Wife at once, but with her, all her Daughters, or Sisters if she has any, of which he afterwards bestows some on Friends or Servants, and then takes them again if the Servants go away. Others leave their Wives only because they remove to another place, and will not take them along. For this reason many are of Opinion, there is no true Matrimony among them, but that these are all Concubines; and therefore when Converted, they are allow'd to take a Wife or Husband that is Baptiz'd. Others are scrupulous, and oblige these Men so strict to their first Wife, which causes many Inconveniences. First, Because many on this account,

"take an Antipathy to Baptism. Secondly, Because they lye, saying they had no other Wife, and thus deceitfully marry another. Thirdly, Because they pretend to return to their first Wife, but in reality have another, and value not the first. Fourthly, Because it is often a difficult matter to know which was the first, because amidst such a Multitude, they scarce remember which was the first; and when they have found her, Inquiry must be made again, whether she had any Husbands before, and again whether those Men had any prior Wives. Besides all this, they use no outward Ceremony at these Marriages, more than they do when they take a Concubine for a Week or a Month; so that very often there is no exterior sign to be found to express their giving consent to that Marriage. Therefore considering their practice and manner of proceeding, many Learned and Godly Men are generally of Opinion, that there is no true Contract of Matrimony among them. But to remove all Doubts and Scruples, and to take away this mighty Impediment to the Conversion of that Nation, we do humbly pray, that since according to the Judgment of Learned Men, the See Apostolick can, upon urgent Causes, annul the Marriage of Infidels, as your Holiness has declar'd in your Brief, of the 20th of October, 1626; and again, in another of the same nature, dated the 17th of September 1627, in these Words, We observing that such Marriages of Infidels are not look'd upon as such, but that they may, in case of necessity, be dissolved, &c. And in this case the Motives are very great, or rather an absolute necessity, for the Conversion of those Infidels, we therefore pray as before, That your Holiness will be pleas'd, in your Apostolick Goodness, to grant Power to the Provincial of the Society of Jesus, that he and such of the Society, as are employ'd in the Conversion of that Nation, and are fit to be entrusted with it, may when occasion offers, upon due Examination, and there being a doubt of the validity of the Marriage contracted in Infidelity, or a great difficulty of discovering the Truth, or of finding the first Consort so parted from, that they may, I say, for the more ease of their Conversion, or for the retaining of those already converted in the Faith and Obedience, to the Church, dispense with such Converts, that after Baptism, they may contract a real Marriage in the Face of the Church. For by this means, your Holiness will open a way into the Church for those Infidels, which the Devil endeavours to shut up; as our Duty obliges us to hope of your Holiness, whom God, &c. Pope Urban the VIII. having consulted learned Men upon that Point, declar'd he did not believe there was any need of his special Dispensation, there being the probable Opinions of Doctors on both sides; and therefore they should follow those Opinions, which according to the Nature of the Places and People they had to deal with they found most favourable to them, still leaving learned Men the liberty of believing according to their Judgment. It was therefore the general Opinion of most of the Fathers residing in these Countries, that the Marriages of these Infidels were void, for the reasons above alledg'd, and that the Indians Converted might lawfully take any one Woman that was Baptiz'd, to Wife, and cast off the rest. Yet this they always acted cautiously in, as the matter requir'd.

Province
of Itatina.

The Province of Guaira being totally overthrown as has been said, some amends was made for it by the reduction of that of Itatina, whercof we will here give a perfect Account. The mighty Rivers Paraguay and Parana, as was declar'd in its Place run through large Countries for above 300 Leagues from their source, before they joyn their Waters. A long ridge of high Mountains divides the Land lying betwixt those two Rivers, out of which Mountains several Rivers and Brooks run down, some East to the Parana, and others West into the Paraguay; with this notable difference, that the Waters flowing into the Parana, running along high Lands, preserve their original clearness, the Mountains where they have their Birth stretching themselves out with a gentle Descent till they reach the Banks of the Parana. But on the other side being in a manner upright, precipitate their Waters into a low marshy Ground, where drawing the Mud along with them, they continually defile the Paraguay, and overflowing in several Places with the said River make a little Sea, which makes some compare this Winter Inundation with that of the Nile. In this low Part lies the Province of Itatina upon the Borders of the Torrid and Temperate Zones, extending from the nineteenth Degree of South Latitude beyond the Two and Twentieth. On the South its Boundaries are the Villages of Indians within the Jurisdiction of the City of the Assumption, on the North the River Buzurco hems it in. The Inhabitants differ but little in Language and Manners, from Paranians and Urvaicans, being also alike in this, that they have small Parties of different Languages about them, with whom they formerly wag'd endless Wars. They us'd to try their Strength (as Lipsius writes of the Chilenians) by carrying a great Piece of Timber, which whoever could first run with to a Place appointed, gain'd a Reward or Honour. The Women deform rather than Paint their Bodies, pricking their Bodies in Streaks which they daub'd with a Dirt Colour. They honour'd the Funerals of their Kindred by casting themselves from high Places, and sometimes with loss of Life. The rebounding Balls of Itatina made of the Gum of Trees are famous all the World over, and being tossed are us'd for curing the Flux. The whole Nation considering the great extent of Ground, and Variety of People, is not very numerous, the Place, which is hot and moist, being naturally sickly and consequently thin of Inhabitants. Yet it was hop'd that when the Province of Itatina was once subdu'd, the Light of the Gospel might be carry'd beyond the Paraguay, as far as Peru one way, and the other way to the Lands about the River Maranon, all famous for Multitudes of Indians. The Provincial had in the Year 1631. order'd F. Ruiz, then residing in the Province of Guaira to repair thither, but he being busy about transplanting the Colonies of that Province sent F. Racionieri in his stead, who repairing to Xerez, a Spanish Town on the Borders of Itatina, after serving those Inhabitants, went away into the Lands of the Infidels. At his first coming the Indians shew'd rather jealousy of him, than any Affection. The reason of it was, because one Acosta a Portuguese Priest, having brought together many of the Itatinians into a Town, on pretence of Religion, endeavour'd to drive them away into Brazil, to make Slaves of them, which he had wickedly perform'd, but that the Indians discovering the Fraud put him to Death, and now they fear'd lest F. Racionieri should prove another Acosta. Their fear was increas'd by the indiscreet saying of an European, whether in Jest or Earnest,

Paraguay
River why Muddy.

Techn.

Natives oppose the Farther.

for Techo.

Receive him with Joy.Towns
built. S.
Jof p<sup>h</sup>, the Angels.Incarnation.

for meeting some Itatinians on the Road, he told them, that all those who receiv'd E. Rancionieri, should afterwards serve the Spaniards. To this was added the Knavery of their Sorcerers, who gave out, that the Stranger Priest was come thither, that he might gather the Multitude in the Churches he built, and burn them. The calmest among them, taking up Arms, as it War had been declar'd with the Spaniards, openly declar'd, That the Peace could not be kept as long as E. Rancionieri was there, for he was the fore-runner of Slavery and other Calamities. But whether the Misfortunes that fell upon some of his chief Opposers, or some other Providence prevail'd with them, the Itatinians soon chang'd, so that they not only allow'd him free liberty of Preaching, but invited him to their Villages, and he making use of his Time, set out to view all the Country. Some for Joy of his coming, went out to meet, and carry'd him Home in their Arms. Famine now raging they liv'd upon the Pith of Palm-Trees, call'd Palmutos ground into Meal, and sometimes eat Locusts. The Father by his discreet and religious Behaviour so gain'd the Hearts of those People, that they were absolutely at his disposal, when three other Fathers came to his assistance, and they all apply'd themselves to building of Towns. The first there founded was call'd S. Joseph, and put under the Care of E. Enartius, who presently gather'd 200 Families. The second was the Angels, under E. Martinez, who gather'd the like Number of Families. The third the Incarnation, not far from the Borders of the Guarambaras, formerly famous for the Labours of the Society, whither E. Vanjuck drew 500 Families. Near to this Town was a Village, the Chief whereof very opportunely order'd the Father not to apply himself to any thing but instructing his People, for he would plentifully supply him with all Necessaries. The fourth Town under the direction of E. Rancionieri, appointed by the Provincial Superior of this Mission, was built in the Lands of Nianduabusuvius, who did not only boast himself to be Lord of the Itatinians, but extending his imaginary Power, beyond the bounds of his Country, pretended all the Indians as far as the City of the Assumption ought to be subject to him. It appear'd he was almost ador'd by the Itatinians. The Spaniards had for many Years us'd endeavours to have a Sight of him, but in vain; for to deceive them, he always appointed another Indian, who represented his Person. This same Deceit he made use of towards E. Rancionieri, receiving him into his Dominions by another who personated him, having strictly enjoyn'd his People, not to discover him to the Stranger Priest, till he had observ'd his Life and Conversation. He in the mean while having given another his Ensigns of Honour and Attendance, went about like a private Man. After four Months spent in making this Discovery, perceiving that the Father truly favour'd the Indians, and that he alone it was to be hop'd would protect them against their Enemies, he took off his Disguise, promising for the future to be favourable to him. Thus all Things seem'd to favour the Father, who Baptiz'd many of Nianduabusuvius his Followers, and call'd the new Town S. Peter and Paul, it being seated three Leagues from the River Paraguay. On the opposite side of that River is the Nation of the Paiaguas, which from the first coming of the Spaniards had continu'd its antient Cruelty, infesting all the Neighbourhood with Rapine and Slaughter; so that those People were accounted as bad as the Guacureans. Some Converts either of their own wicked Inclination, or else provok'd by hard Usage, had fled to them at several Times, and given them an account of the Fathers, informing them that they only sought the good of Souls, without any prejudice to the Body; whereupon they resorted to E. Rancionieri, affirming they would build a Town. As they said they did, setting up their Mats after the Country Fashion not far from the Town of the Apostles, after the manner of a Town. But being naturally Fickle, they soon after slipt away to their old lurking Places, beyond the River Paraguay. The Fathers in their four Towns labour'd to Convert those People with good Success, not omitting to attend the Spaniards of Xerez, whom E. Enartius serv'd so diligently in the Lent, that they writ to the Council and Bishop of Paraguay to desire the Society would settle among them. Besides not far off were the Guatians, Gualachians, and other People of sundry Languages, who seem'd inclinable to receive the Light of the Gospel, if there were any Body to convey it to them. Beyond this Province in the Lands towards the great River of the Amazones there were Pigmeys remarkable for the smallness of their Stature; and Amazons for and S.

S. JEW
Paul.

Paiaguas.

To call'd because living in War all their Lives, they are reported every Year for a very short time to call Men from the Neighbourhood to get them with Child; besides other Nations so numerous, that F. Rancionieri writing to his Superiors, affirm'd there might be many Towns built at once up the Country, if there were Fathers to serve them. Thus considering the State of the Province of Itatina, this alone with its neighbouring Countries, was sufficient to blot out the Memory of the Unfortunate Guaira. But another Storm, overturning the present State of Affairs, and in a great measure eluding the Hopes conceiv'd, will almost represent to us another Guaira in the Province of Itatina.

Mamalucs
destroy
the Town of S. Joseph.

For the Fathers had not been long settled in their new Towns, before they receiv'd the dismal News that the Mamalucs were broke into the Province. They after destroying the Province of Guaira, being join'd by a numerous Company of the Tupus, took the same way the Fathers had done into the Country of Xres, and joining with some other Robbers, consulted about the means of plundering the new Towns; which that they might do with less Trouble, they sent Messengers to S. Joseph's in the Absence of F. Enartius, fraudulently to insinuate to the People there, that they were not come to Plunder, or do any Mischief, but to revenge the Wrongs done to F. Rancionieri, by the Indians further up the Country, that if they join'd their Forces with them, it would oblige the Society. The chief of the Town innocently giving Credit to the Robbers, order'd his Men to go out arm'd to take Revenge, and led them directly to the Mamalucs Camp; where when they came they were all disarm'd and bound, the Women and Children thus depriv'd of all Defence being after this easily convey'd from off the Town to the Camp. F. Enartius returning, and finding the Town empty with the Tokens of the Enemies Fraud and Cruelty run to the Mamalucs Camp, where instead of any Favour he was threatned with Death, which he slighting, they forced him from among them, giving him abusive Language, tearing his Cloaths, and treating him in an outrageous manner. Another Party of Mamalucs invaded the Colony of the Angels, but found it in a great Measure abandon'd, for F. Martinez being inform'd of their coming, had taken Care that most of the Inhabitants should hide themselves in the Woods, yet many were taken, the Captain of those Thieves having order'd the Father to be bound, if he made any Opposition. They drove those they found to their Camp, whether F. Martinez following them, he was there confin'd three Days, that they might carry no Intelligence, or Advise those in the Woods. At the same time another Company of these Rovers plunder'd the Lands of Nianduabusuvius, where they deluded the People after this manner, in the absence of F. Rancionieri. Having drawn the chief of the Nation to a Conference, they gave out, that they were not come as Enemies, but to gather the Indians, who liv'd scatter'd abroad, into a great Town, for instructing of them in Religion, and if they would lend their helping Hand, they should all live friendly together. The poor People deluded by this Pretence came in Crowds to them, whom the Mamalucs cruelly bound, secur'd Nianduabusuvius, and appear'd as open Enemies; but then, prosecuting their deceitful Villany, they told the principal Men, they had no way to escape being made Slaves, but by delivering up their People; who being produced, were perfidiously secur'd without releasing the Caciques. As F. Rancionieri having heard of the Invasion, was hasting to assist his Convert, he was met by about 500 Indians of Nianduabusuvius his Faction, who were to be deliver'd to the Robbers for him and other Caciques; which the Father understanding, he encourag'd them to stand upon their Defence; but before they could make Head, the Mamalucs fell upon them, and did some Harm. Seventy of them, who were arm'd, having join'd F. Rancionieri in the abandon'd Town, bravely withstood 30 Mamalucs, and 70 Tupus. These Towns being destroy'd, the Fathers flew to all Parts, where they might relieve the Captive, or scatter'd Indians. F. Rancionieri in vain begg'd of the Mamalucs for his Flock; for they fearing lest the Gualachés, Paiaguas, and Spaniards should unite to revenge the Itatinians, driving away about a Thousand Captives, hasted away to join the Plunderers of the other Towns. Before they departed the Province of Itatina, F. Enartius going to them, by many Intreaties obtain'd Liberty for Nianduabusuvius; and following after them, assisted many that made their Escapes; among whom he found the chief of the Town of S. Joseph, and sav'd him from some pursuing Mamalucs. Some

Tcho.

And S. Peter and Paul.

of

Tecob of the Tupus in hatred to the *Mamaluc*s deserted to F. Enartius, but the Itatinians suspecting some Treachery, slew them all. The *Mamaluc*s going off declar'd, they had met with no Nation of Indians so brave as the Itatinians, and magnifying the Dangers and Difficulties of the Ways, protested they would never return thither to Plunder; like Seamen, who in a Storm vow they will never go to Sea, but are always Forsworn. All the Caciques of the Itatinians were drown'd in passing a River, they being all in a Chain, and a sudden Storm arising. The rest of the Prisoners, Provisions failing, were reduced with the *Mamaluc*s to eat Snakes, and other Vermin. After the Departure of the *Mamaluc*s, F. Rancionieri sent F. Martinez to the City of the Assumption to demand Supplies of the Governor of Paraguay, and ask Advice of the Rector of the College. Which done, he travell'd to all parts of the Province, very often in danger of his Life; for the Itatinians grown Jealous, kept in mind the Words of some of the *Mamaluc*s, who had the Impudence to say they had been call'd in to Plunder the Province by the Fathers. This so inrag'd them, that a Company attempted to Murder him, saying he was the forerunner of them, and they had come in the same way he did, yet by great Providence he escap'd. The Indian Villages every where smoak'd, the Inhabitants being hid, or running about like mad Men; and because the *Mamaluc*s had given out, that another Troop of them was gone to destroy the Villages of Paraguay, neither the Fathers, nor the Indians knew which way to turn themselves, yet by degrees these Jealousies vanish'd, and Things were in some measure restor'd. After all the Mischief had been done, the Governor of Paraguay sent two Troops of Spaniards to defend the Country; but they coming late, and the Soldiers being eager to make Slaves of the Indians did more harm than good; for returning to the Town of the Assumption, that they might with more freedom enslave the Indians, they told the Governor, he would do well to give the Charge of the Itatinians to the Clergy, and not to religious Men. The Governour was about embracing this illcontriv'd Advice, had not F. Vasquez, the Povincial Interposer. Hereupon F. Rancionieri, who was come to the City of the Assumption, was sent with two other Fathers, and full Power to take care of his Itatinians. They with great Labour; this Year 1633, gathering those that had been dispers'd for fear of the Robbers, and calling in other Indians, founded two Towns, the First upon the River Tepotio, under the Care of F. Vanjuck, the other an hundred Leagues from the City of the Assumption, not far from the River Paraguay, under the Direction of F. Rancionieri and F. Enartius. To speak of the Hardships they endur'd is needless, being much the same as we have mention'd on other Accounts. All Obstacles to the Conversion of the Indians were remov'd by the Catholick Kings Letters, wherein he declar'd all Converts free from any Service of private Persons, and immediately tributary to himself. It was no small hindrance to the Proceedings of F. Rancionieri that the Paiaguas hapned to report, that the Spaniards of Paraguay were about making War on the Paiaguas and Itatinians. Which made such an Impression on the Indians, under the Fathers, that 400 of them under the leading of Nianduabusuvius the Elder, crossing the River Paraguay, fled away to the Mountains that run out a vast length, and were by this means made pervious to the Excursions of the Fathers, who the following Year brought back many of those People.

The chief Heads of the Province of Paraguay who should have forwarded it, for a while stopp'd the speedy Course of the advancing Gospel. For the Governour imprison'd a Convert Cacique of the Province of Parana and his Followers, only because he had made some Canoes, or Boats of the body of a Tree hollow'd out, less than he was Order'd, adding scurvy Words to his ill Usage, threatening he would go with arm'd Forces to the new Town of Parana, and make all the Converts of that Country Slaves to the Spaniards. This so incens'd those People, as yet not enur'd to Subjection, that it was much to be Fear'd they would have Revolted, had not the Authority of the Fathers prevail'd. But the Bishop provok'd them much more, for he forgetting the Commendations he had given the Society, studying his own private Interest, conceiv'd that his Revenue would be much greater, if the care of the new Towns of Parana was taken from the Jesuits, and bestow'd upon the secular Clergy, over whom his Power was more Absolute. Therefore pretending some Reasons for what he Did, and particularly the Converts under the Fathers not paying the Fourth, and

The Fathers troubled by the Governour and Bishop.

Tithes, he interdicted all the Fathers in the Province of Parana. Both the Governor and Bishop would have proceeded further had not F. Romero superior of those Fathers hastened to the City of the Assumption, an hundred Leagues from where he was, to oppose them. The Governour he soon persuaded not to oppress those People, and force them to revolt before they were well subdu'd; but he had more to do with the Bishop, who stood obstinately to what he had undertaken. To convince him, he produced the Grants of the Catholick Kings, and Briefs of Popes in favour of the Society, by which it appear'd the Bishop had no Power to Interdict them upon that Account. Whilst the Controversy was still depending, F. Vasquez, the Provincial, coming to Town opportunely seconded F. Romero, and put by the Bishop from attempting any Innovation, by shewing him the King's repeated Orders, forbidding any Person whatsoever upon any pretence to molest the Society in the care of their Converts. The Governour who was before reconcil'd now also interpoling, at length the Bishop comply'd, and following F. Romero into Parana, again visited the new Towns and confirm'd the Converts. These Troubles were follow'd by rumours of War, and the Transmigration of two Towns. F. Contreras had been seen by his Superiors up the River Parana, to bring away the remaining People and Goods of the ruin'd Province of Parana. When he was pass'd the famous Precipice, some Mamaluces met him, diligently inquiring about the Towns of Iguazu and Acarai seated on the River Parana, and telling him there were three Troops of Mamaluces with the Booty they brought from the Province of Itatina, not far off. This gave occasion to suspect another Invasion, and therefore F. Contreras returning from whence he came, went himself with all speed to acquaint the Inhabitants of Iguazu and Acarai with the danger, and sent Letters of it to F. Romero, who sending Messengers to all the Towns of Urvaica and Parana, call'd together as many Fathers as he could. Being altogether, they all unanimously agreed to expose their Lives for their Flock, and encourag'd the Converts to take Arms. In the mean while the Acaraians, upon fresh Reports of the approach of the Robbers, abandoning and burning their Town, went away and join'd themselves to the Inhabitants of Urvaica and Corpus Christi, some Days

Journeys distant from them, where they still continue, having laid aside all hopes of returning to their Country. Here upon F. Romero apply'd himself altogether to deliver the Iguazuans from Danger. It was manifest that Town could not be secur'd but by removing it to another Place; for besides that it was thirty Leagues from any other Colony of Converts, there was an easy Descent to it either by Land or Water, out of the Province of Guaira. The Transmigration being resolv'd on, the next debate was to what Place it should be. There was a Plain on the River Urvaica, about half way between the Towns of the Conception and S. Xaverius, fit to build a Town in, but the way was round about, and 50 Leagues in length, and the Fathers were afraid, lest, as a great part of the Transmigrators out of the Province of Guaira had perish'd by the way, the same might happen to the People of Iguazu; but the fear of the Enemy soon took off this Apprehension, Reason pleading it was better a part should suffer than the whole. Besides F. Romero render'd the matter easier, having order'd Provisions to be furnish'd by the other Towns, and gather'd Boats from all Parts, directing the Fathers to attend the Transplantation. Thus 2200 Inhabitants of Iguazu were transplanted without any considerable Damage, and building a Town on the Banks of Urvaica, still retaining the Name of S. Mary Major, they began to be reckon'd among the Urvaicans. Many, as is usual in such Cases, were against this removal, hiding themselves in the Woods, whom the Fathers and faithful Converts at several times brought away. Afterwards the Town was increas'd by the Accession of many Indians, where I resided two Years. The Inhabitants of Iguazu being thus Transplanted, there were ten Towns then built by the Society in the Province of Urvaica.

Yet as great as their Success was there, still the Province of Tape exceeded it, for in the Town of S. Michael 844 were Baptiz'd, and in that of S. Thomas 1500 of all sorts; besides far greater Numbers that were still instructing. About a days Journey from each of these Towns, that is, half way between them, was a woody mountainous Place call'd Itaquatia, whose heathen Inhabitants had left no Stone unturn'd for the obtaining of one of the Society. F. Romero had promis'd to fulfil their desires when the Provincial came from the Ca-

Tecbe
Town of
S. Joseph
built.

pital of Paraguay. They not satisfi'd with this Promise, and understanding that the Provincial was in the Province of Parana, sent the chief of them to him, to desire he would not deny their Request. But the Provincial having been inform'd of their desires, had already sent away F. Cataldinus the first Founder of the towns of Guaira, to lay the Foundations of a Town among them, which took the Name of S. Joseph. The Itaquatians meeting him, were wonderfully pleas'd; and laid aside the design of going to the provincial. F. Cataldinus being come to the Place, and having fitted a Church and House for the Fathers, lay'd the Foundations of a Town so successfully, that at the first he found 300 Families all earnestly desirous to become Christians. They daily flock'd to Church at the ringing of the Bell to be Catechiz'd, as well knowing it was in vain to ask Baptism till they had learnt the Rudiments of Christianity. About the same time were lay'd the Foundations of another Town on the Top of a high Mountain call'd Ararica, which is reported to have hapn'd thus. F. Ximines residing among the Caaroans, and after him F. Romero by some Courtesies had gain'd the affection of Cuniambo Brother to Mboipeo a famous Cacique; who returning into his Country perswaded the People to call in the Fathers. In order to obtain some of them, they of their own accord built a Church and House for them, and sending frequent Messages to the Fathers seem'd rather to demand, than sue for a Teacher of the true Law; and they were so eager as to Consult, whether in Jest or Earnest, about taking a way forcibly one of the two that resided in Town of S. Michael; so hot was their desire to embrace Christianity. The Provincial hearing their Request, sent thither F. Alvarez with Power to found a Town, and dedicate it to the Nativity of the Blessed Virgin. His first Labour was to Baptize 927 Children, the next to Catechize those that were of Age, and the third to search the Woods to increase the other Town; wherein he was so Successful, that the first Year it contain'd 800 Families. All these People among whom I liv'd three Years, they being remov'd to another Place, the Society to this time has Baptiz'd 9800. Nor did the Fathers Zeal stop here; for about the same time they pass'd beyond the River Igai, which divides the Mountains of Tape, at the request of Itapavia, a powerful Cacique

The Nativity of Ararica.

in those Parts, who coming to F. Romero and F. Mendoza, then in the Town of S. Michael, assur'd them if they would go over the River Igai with him, they would find all Things requisite for building a Town. Both of them going thither, found much more than the Cacique had promis'd, for 400 Families forsaking their Villages had flock'd together, shewing as forward a Zeal as could have been expected from People who had been long Instructed. A Cross was set up in solemn manner, Infants Baptis'd, and the Town founded under the Invocation of S. Anne. This Place was committed to F. Martinez, who had gain'd Reputation in the Provinces of Guaira and Itatina, and before the end of the Year gather'd 800 Families.

Whilst these Things were carrying on at the Top of the Mountains of Tape, Two other Towns were founded in the opposite Part of those same Mountains, concerning whose Original, Situation and Progress take this short Account. About the Springs of the River Igai, there are vast Plains, divided at Intervals by great Woods. Among which Woods were particularly those of Ibitiruna, Ibitirabebo and Mondeca, very full of Pines, which Trees, when they come to their full Growth, are said to be 120 Foot high; and they are so very strait, that they seem rather made by Art than Nature. As they grow, they cast out their Boughs at equal distances in the manner of Garlands, which falling off by degrees of themselves, so as only the Signs of them appear, leave Knots behind them, so very hard, that when artificially wrought, they look more like Bones than Wood. The Inhabitants of this Country feed a considerable part of the Year on very large Pine Apples, which differ little in Taste from the Walnuts in Europe. Here is also found the Herb of Paraguay, the delight of the Indians, and a vast number of wild Boars and wild Goats, so that with a little Tillage the Natives have enough at home to maintain them. F. Romero had made an Excursion to these Woods two Years before, in hopes of reducing the People to the Town of S. Charles, two Days Journey from thence; but finding the Natives could not easily be drawn out of their native Soil, which was very fruitful, he thought of founding a Town. To this purpose F. Mola by order of F. Romero the foregoing Year erected a Cross in the Lands of Quarareo a powerful Cacique, which were opposite to those of Ibitizuna; from that time the said Quarareo and Tupaminio, the Cacique of the Forrest of Mondeca, us'd all their Endeavours to obtain one of the Society. F. Ximenes sent thither to lay the Foundation of a Town satisfy'd the Desires of them both. At his coming Quarareo receiv'd him with an elegant Speech, wherein he mention'd all the Parts of his Body, and affirm'd they were all so overwhelm'd with Joy, that he could not express it. The Plan for the Town being mark'd out, abundance of Indians flock'd together with great Alacrity to build the Church and Houses, in so much that the cold frosty Season did not move them to desist from their Work. These People from their Childhood stick long Stones into their Chins instead of Beards, which Custom the Fathers condemning, alledging it was indecent to deform the Bodies God had made by those unbecoming Additions, the young Lads pulling out those Stones cast them all into the Fire, fearing lest that barbarous Custom should be any Obstacle to Christianity. The Women brought in their Children to be Baptiz'd, knowing the Fathers would not forsake those whose spiritual Fathers they were. Having lay'd these Foundations, both the Fathers were oblig'd to return to their Charge of their Towns in Urvaica, whence they came, till this Year 1633. F. Ximenes was sent thither again with Orders to remove the Town to a nearer and more commodious Place, which he soon did, having mark'd out a Place for it in the Lands of Tupaminio, to build which Quarares, tho' very unwilling to leave his native Mountains resorted with his Followers and great Numbers of the neighbouring People. This Town at the Request of the Governor of Rio de la Plata, was call'd S. Teresa, and put under the Care of F. Ximenez, who with the assistance of his Companion F. Salas within the first Year drew 800 Families to it. At the same time F. Romero went away over the Mountains of Tape, to the Town of S. Teresa, to make the way fit for the Provincial who was antient, and coming thither. When he was past the Mountains Carvaio, a powerful Cacique met him with some Followers, acquainting him he was desirous to become a Christian and found a Town, and would find Inhabitants enough in the Neighbourhood, if a Priest were assign'd them. F. Romero embracing him, blessed God, for that he inspir'd those barbarous People, of their own accord to seek Salvation. Having view'd the Place, and seeing the Inclination of the Indians, he could not but grant his Request; for besides his Desire of the Conversion of so many Souls, it was very convenient to secure this Place in the Province. For the better uniting the Town of S. Teresa with the other Colonies planted upon the other Ridge of the Mountains, He erected a Cross, Baptiz'd the Infants, call'd the Town S. Joachim, and till a Priest could be sent for, committed the Care of it to F. Ximenez, who coming thither soon after from the Pine Groves, built a Church for present use with the assistance of a multitude of People flocking in from all Parts. Afterwards F. Suarez built a House and Church fit to contain the Multitude, and gather'd a sufficient number of Indians, to make a reasonable Town. The Provincial having now visited Parana and Urvaica, came to see the new Towns of the Province of Tape, and hurting his Leg in the way to S. Teresa, was forced to be carry'd by Indians. Being past the Mountains, other Indians came to him, desiring to have a Priest to instruct them, and build a Town, he gave them Hopes, appointing S. Cosmus and S. Damianus their Patrons, and went down the River of Snakes to the Ibicuit. Another Parcel of Infidels that came to him upon the same Account, he perswaded to joyn themselves to the Tapevians, as they afterwards did, there not being Fathers enough for so many Places. All the way he went he still gave something to the Indians, insomuch that not one Convert of so many Thousands mis'd of some little Gift. After his Departure out of the Province of Tape the Fathers founded another Town under the Invocation of Jesus and Mary in the furthest corner of the Mountains of Tape. The Place was call'd Ibiticarain, whither so many Inhabitants resorted, that the first there were 4000 reckned under the Care of F. Mola, a Man of an excellent Disposition, and notable for his Art of managing the Indians. Thus in less than two Years there were eight Towns built by the Society in the Province of Tape, and Places appointed for founding of others, which made sufficient amends for the loss of the Province of Guaia. About the latter end of the Year, 1633. F. Vasquez the Provincial receiv'd Letters from Rome, ordering him to resign that Dignity to another, when he had held it five Years with various success, for in his time eleven Towns of Guaia

Techo.

Tecbo. were destroy'd, those of Acarai and Iguazu remov'd; the Converts of Urvaica and Parana swept away by the Plague, the Province of Chagua twice attempted in vain, and the Towns of Itatina almost ruin'd in their first rise. On the contrary he was successful in restoring the Town of the Caaroans, building others among the Caajapaguachans and Caapians, those of the Assumption and S. Xaverius, Eight in the Province of Tape, and Two in that of Itatina, besides opening the way to Preach the Gospel in other Parts. He left to his Successor nine Colleges in the Spanish Cities, and 25 Seats of the Society in the Indian Towns built by them.

Wicked
Practices
of Indians.

We now enter upon the Year, 1634. under the new Provincial F. James Boroa, a Man in great Reputation of Sanctity, for his Austerity of Life; he had formerly been serviceable to the Calchaquies in the Province of Tucuman, and the Guarambareans in that of Paraguay, reduced the Indians on the Parana, and the Iguazians to Towns, and founded the Colony of S. Xaverius on the River Urvaica. To make short, he was receiv'd with general Approbation. His first Action was to send out F. Martinez, and F. Valera out for four Months along the Banks of the Rivers Dulce and Salado, or the Sweet and the Salt, where they were successful, undeceiving many who deny'd the immortality of the Soul, and therefore like Atheists liv'd in all manner of Leudness; others who profanely dedicated the matter of their Debauches to the Devil, and others who had to do with Intubus Spirits, or dealt with Sorcerers. The new Provincial having visited all the Province of Tucuman, being a Journey of 400 Leagues, halted away to the Towns of the Converts in Parana, to be a Witness to the Labours of the Fathers, and order the Expedition to the Chiriguans, a most fierce Nation, concerning whose original take this short Account. After the Indians of Paraguay had cruelly murder'd Alexius Garcia (before the coming of the Spaniards, as was related at the beginning of this Work) in his return from the Borders of Peru, joyning in Confederacy with the Paranians, either for fear of Punishment, or for the liberty of Murther, they forsook their native Soil, and went away to the same Place where they had been with the said Alexius Garcia. Having appointed the time of Transmigration, the Paranians, travelling along the Country adjoining to

Chiriguans their original,
&c.

the River Picolmayo, came to the Mountains about the Spanish Town call'd Tarica. The Paraguarians taking another way, having travers'd a vast Tract of Land, settled in that Place where the Town of S. Laurence is seated, not far from the Banks of the River Guapaio. Then consulting together, and fixing their Villages on the Tops of the Mountains, they plunder'd all about them far and near so incessantly, that it is reported, these Chiriguans, of whose Name I know not the Original or Etimology, in less than a Year, either kill'd or drove away into Captivity an Hundred Thousand Indians. For some time after their Transmigration, it was a solemn Feast among them to eat the Bodies of the Prisoners they took; but having afterwards settled an underhand Trade with the Europeans, they forbore Eating of Man's Flesh, taking Prisoners to sell them as Slaves. Yet they dealt after such manner, as not to forbear doing the Spaniards a Mischief, if occasion offer'd, so that they had several Battles with them, and they carri'd it so far, as publickly, and without any Damage to defy Francis de Toledo, the Viceroy of Peru; and they do not yet cease to infest Tarifa, Pasmaia, Pilaia, Momina, Misca, the Towns of Peru, all the Province of Santa Cruz de la Sierra, or the Holy Cross in the Mountains, and the Borders of Tucuman and Paraguay. So that there is no Nation in the Inland of South America, more terrible to the Spaniards, or more destructive to the Indians, than these Chiriguans, encourag'd by the desire of Gain, and enur'd to constant Robbing. What is most to be admir'd, it is reported that only 4000 of them transplanted themselves at first; but in process of time having brought some Prisoners to follow their Course, and increas'd by Procreation, they spread abroad beyond their Mountains, and scatter'd the Terror of their Name far and near. Hitherto no endeavours had been of any force to bring these People to Christianity, the Bishops of Peru, had in vain try'd all Expedients; F. Ortega, an excellent Man, had in vain attempted thirty Years before this to dispel their Darkness by the Light of the Gospel; in vain had several others labour'd among them, so that they had been quite abandon'd for several Years, as People altogether desperate. Till at this time, F. Diastanius being solliciting the Affairs of the Society with the Kings Council in the Town of Chuguisaca, some of these Chiriguas came to him, declaring their Country People would easily be brought to imbrace the Faith, if there were any Fathers that understood the Guaran Language sent to them. Hereupon F. Dianstanus and another Priest were sent by F. Torres late Provincial of Paraguay, who was in the same Town, and had receiv'd a great Sum of Money of one Guzman, a rich Man, and the Yearly allowance of 500 Pistoles for that Mission; these I say were sent to try the Temper of those People. The consequence of which Expedition was that F. Torres writ to the General, to acquaint him, he thought it would be an advancement to Christianity, if two Fathers, well vers'd in the Mission of Paraguay, were sent into Peru, to labour for the Salvation of the Chiriguas. When the Generals Consent was obtain'd, and the Approbation of F. Durand, Provincial of Peru, as also of the King's Council, F. Boroa the Provincial halted away to Parana, to choose out Fathers fit for that Expedition. F. Alvarez and F. Martinez, Men renowned for their extraordinary Labours, were pitch'd upon; who setting out from the Towns of the Province of Tape, travell'd 600 Leagues, and came that same Year they set out into the Country of the Chiriguas, where for some Years they labour'd much without any great Success, as the Annals of Peru will make appear.

Distances
of Places.

The new Provincial at this time set out from the College of the Assumption, to visit the Towns of the Provinces of Parana, Urvaica, and Tape, whom I design to follow, to shew the distances from Place to Place, which is a Matter of great Consequence, and will at once insert whatever occurs that is memorable. The first Town of Parana is thirty Leagues from the City of the Assumption. Thence he travell'd twenty Leagues to Itapua, and was receiv'd with great demonstrations of Joy by the Converts, many of whom he had formerly brought to the Faith. Fifteen Leagues above Itapua, is the Colony of Corpus Christi, built by himself twelve Years before, and therefore his Reception was accordingly. Between Itapua and the Colony of Corpus Christi, the Provincial with no little Compassion saw the small remains of the Province of Guaia in two Towns. Having visited the Parana, he struck over to the first Town of Urvaica, call'd the Conception, sixteen Leagues distant. Three Leagues from thence the Iguazu lately remov'd thither, entertain'd him with Joy, they having been first Converted by him, and brought to live in a Town, nine Years before. Hence sailing up the River Urvaica to the Town of S. Xaverius, he was Shipwreckt in that short Passage of four Leagues. His Companions being parted from him by the Storm, thought he was lost, because the Stream carry'd him violently away, and therefore said Mass for his Soul; but the next Day they rejoiced at the News of his being safe, especially when they understood he must have perish'd, had not the Iguazuans upon notice of his being wreck'd, with great Danger of their own Lives struggled through the swelling Waves to save him. He found 2000 Inhabitants in the Town of S. Xaverius, which he had founded himself. Thence he held on a whole Days Sail to Alaragua, or the new Colony of the Assumption. From this Colony he travell'd sixteen Leagues to the Town of S. Nicholas in the Province of Piratina, in building of the Church of which Place it was remarkable, that the Mothers not satisfy'd with carrying Earth themselves, made Baskets for the sucking Infants they had in their Arms, that God Almighty might be favourable to them, since they wrought for his Worship. One Days Journey distant was the Town of the Purification in the same Province, where against the coming of the Provincial, F. Dominicus had introduced the Custom of carrying the Blessed Sacrament in Procession, which that it might be done with more decency in that poor Country, the Converts erected 1500 Arches of Boughs and Flowers, and made four Altars of the same sort, in the four Corners of the Market, about which they hung all sorts of wild and tame Creatures, which was much admir'd both by the other Converts and Infidels. Next he went to the Town of the Caaroans, or of the Martyrs of Japan, then to that of the Apostles S. Peter and S. Paul, and then to that of S. Charles, all of them about a Days Journey one from another. From this last he travell'd a Days Journey to the Town of S. Teresa on this side the Mountains. Thence to the Colony of the Visitation of the Blessed Virgin is eight Leagues. The distance from it to S. Joachim I do not find, but that the Place was a craggy Mountain, beset with vast Rocks, among which Rocks, and the thick Woods the Natives dwelt, and were to be drawn thence with great Labour to be brought to a sociable Life, and a very great number was to gain'd.

The

Techas. The manner of burying here was to throw a great Heap of Stones on the Body. The way was very bad from S. Joachim's to the Town of Jesus Mary beyond the Mountains, which F. Arenas took great Pains to mend, falling many Trees, and removing abundance of great Stones. From S. Joachim's the Provincial went two Days Journey over the Mountains of Tape, to the Town of Jesus Mary, built the Year before by the Fathers Alola and Arena. Two Leagues from the Town of Jesus Mary was a Place appointed for building a new Town, whither some hundred Families had resorted, desiring they might be allow'd a Priest. Caraichure, a Heathen, sent by his Country People to request this Favour of the Provincial, came 50 Leagues to meet him, and would not desist till he order'd F. Contreras to go lay the Foundations of a Town accordingly, and to call it S. Christopher, which prosper'd better than any other Colony, for within a Year and a half 4600 Indians resorted to inhabit it. The Colony of S. Anne, beyond the River Igai was in a prosperous Condition, being increas'd to 800 Families. The Provincial passing the River Igai proceeded to Ararica, or the Colony of the Nativity of the Blessed Virgin, less than a Days Journey from S. Anne. The Town of S. Cosmus and Damianus is but a few Miles from Ararica founded this Year by F. Formosus, who gather'd to it out of the neighbouring Woods a thousand Families. Not far from it was the Colony of S. Michael, then at a small distance that of S. Joseph, and lastly that of S. Thomas, the true distances between which Places I do not find. The Provincial having run through his Visitation, sail'd away to the Port of Buenos Ayres, whence he sent F. Diastanius, who had been four Years soliciting the King's Council of Peru in favour of the Indians, into the Province of Tape, to take care of the Town of Jesus Mary against the Mamelucs, for now the Report ran, and not without Reason, that the Mamelucs design'd to invade that Province. F. Romero giving an Account of the Actions of the Fathers under his Jurisdiction, says they Baptis'd 13800 this Year 1634; which was a small number in respect of the many that desir'd it, and could not be dispos'd and instructed for want of Fathers, there being more Harvest than Labourers. For now in these beginnings, every single Man of them was taken up in marking out the Ground for the Inhabitants, in building Churches and Houses for themselves, ordaining their Civil Government, inviting the Infidels to the Towns, receiving those that came, in time of Plague to seek them out in their lurking Places, assisting those that continu'd in the Towns in all their wants, Catechising, administering Sacraments, Comforting the Afflicted, disappointing the Artifices of the Sorcerers, Curing the Sick, letting Blood, preparing Medecines, dressing Sores, tilling the Ground, and dressing their Garden, so that adding to this their Priestly Duty, they had scarce time to Eat or Sleep. Nor was this all, for they labour'd under great want of Bread, Wine, and most Necessaries, were forced to accustom themselves to strange Diet, and bear with the loathsome Customs of those People, living always in miserable Solitude, for it is rather a Pain than any Comfort to converse with barbarous Men. And the Spanish Towns, where Things necessary for their Cloathing were sold, were an hundred and fifty Leagues off, whereby their Sufferings were much the greater.

The two Towns of the Guairanians after their Transmigration were in great want of Cloaths, because the Fields and Woods near the River Parana, were not proper for producing of Cotton, the Damps of the River destroying the Flower before it was Ripe. To supply this defect, F. Ruiz sent F. Spinosa with a choice Company of Converts to the Town of Santa Fe, or S. Faith, an hundred and fifty Leagues distant, to bring Sheep through a vast Desert. They were about half way, when a dismal Accident hapned. A few Days before, some Spaniards travelling that way, had offended the Gnapalaches, a wandering sort of Indians, who being upon revenge, as soon as they perceiv'd a Smoak in the Fields, near the Parana, and the Footsteps of Travellers, thinking they had been the same Spaniards, stole very gently to the Place where F. Spinosa lay, as the Custom is there, in the open Air, and at first onset murder'd Five of his Converts. Next they fell upon the Father himself, then awak'd, and asking what was the matter. As soon as they heard his Voice, the Indians concluding he was one of the Spaniards, they had resolv'd to Kill, stripp'd, and then beat him till they thought he had been Dead; but he coming a little to himself, and calling upon Jesus Mary, brought them on him again, and so they made an end.

A sad Accident.

of him. They tore off one of his Arms, and left the rest of his Body to be devour'd by the Tygers. When it was Day, and they perceiv'd they had kill'd a Priest, they are reported to have repented, it being said they only fought to destroy those Spaniards that had offended them; yet others affirm they knew he was a Priest before they kill'd him. In the Year 1635. the Seminary the Fathers had in the Metropolis of Tucuman was dissolv'd, the Canons of the Church having writ to the King that it was useless, and thereupon the Society quitted it. About the same time the College of the City of Especo was dissolv'd, the Town being left almost desolate by the Plague, and the Goods of the Society perishing for want of Servants to look after them. The General sent Orders that all the Villages of Indians in the Province of Tucuman should be visited at least once a Year, which oblig'd the Fathers of several Colleges to make many Excursions into the Country, not without a considerable gain of Souls. The Provincial himself to give a good Example, travell'd through the Plain by the Port of Buenos Ayres an hundred and twenty Leagues, inviting the Troops of wandring Indians to embrace the Faith and be Civiliz'd, but without any great Success. He held on his Journey with three other Priests, serving all the Indians in the Villages between Cordova and the Metropolis of the Province of Tucuman, whence he went on in the same manner to the Territories of S. Michael, Salta, and Rioja. The Fathers at Salta long exercis'd their Function in a private House, their College having been the last Year, as was then mention'd, destroy'd by a Flood, and another Inundation now carrying away their House, they betook themselves to another out of Town. F. Herrera this Year made an Excursion among the Pul-lares, but to little Advantage, the War diverting them from any Care either of Soul or Body. In the Port of Buenos Ayres, the great Employment of the Society was to instruct and catechize the Blacks brought from Angola. Many Things are here related concerning an Image sweating in the Port of Santa Fe, and other miraculous Matters hapning thereupon, which I omit here, as is done in all other Places.

Some Things remarkable hapned in the Province of Urugaica. Among the rest Chemombem, a wicked Impostor, being call'd by some Sorcerers from the Country near the Sea to the Town of S. Xavierius, gain'd great Authority among the Multitude by his voluble Tongue, and prevail'd so far as to carry on a Conspiracy for Murdering F. Cespedes. Some of the Towns-men had built him a large House without the Town, where the Plot was lay'd for the Murder amidst Drinking and Dancing, and Easter-Eve was pitch'd upon to be the Day, when they had perform'd the Villany, but that a Youth, bred under the Fathers, discover'd the Design; which being known, the faithful Converts, a little before Chemombem came with his Arm'd Followers, convey'd F. Cespedes away into a Den in a Rock. Whilst he in vain searches about for the Prey, which had slipt out of his Hands, the Inhabitants of S. Mary Major having Notice of what was doing, came to the Father's assistance in great Numbers, and having secur'd Chemombem and other Conspirators, sent them away into Banishment. F. Cespedes brought out of his Concealment continu'd in the Town of S. Xavierius, where he reckned above 3000 that had been made Christians since the Colony was founded. The Plague devour'd 500 of the Converts of Acoragua, whose Places were fill'd up by great Numbers of Infidels soon after brought over to Christianity. This Plague extended to the Province of Piratina, where Processions were made, the Converts carrying great Crosses to appease God. Nor was it less destructive among the Caaroans, where it swept away 852 Souls. About 80 Converts of the Town of the Three Kings of Japeiva, going out to gather in the Cattle that stray'd about the Plains, without any certain Master, fell among certain fierce People, and Fighting with them, lost half their Number; and at the same time the Plague carry'd off many more, so that in a short time the third Part of the Inhabitants was missing, yet the Town was recruited by fresh Indians brought in. Having briefly mention'd these Things in the Province of Urugaica, let us now remove to

The Province of Tape, where there is much Matter worth relating. F. Borroa, the Provincial, at his going away into the Province of Tucuman, had order'd Excursions to be made into the Countries of the Heathens towards the Sea, as well to gain Opportunities of founding new Towns, as to invite those Indians to repair to the Towns already built. As also to contract Friendship with those People, to oppose the coming

Temo.

Plague.

Excursion to the River Tebiquar.

several passages.

A Conspiracy destroyed.

ing of the Mamelucs into the Province of Tape; for there were many Tokens of a new Invasion. The first that went from the Colony of S. Teresa, attended by a small but faithful Company of Converts, was F. Ximenes, whose chief Design was to bring as many Indians as he could to the Colony of the Visitation, which was begun to be built, but as yet wanted a Priest. The fifth Day after his setting out he came to the River Caapibaris, and having sail'd on it two Days, came to another call'd Mbocariro, and out of that in two Days more came into the Tebiquar. Searching the Rocks, Woods and Forrests along these Rivers, he found many Men desirous to embrace Christianity, and was every where receiv'd with great Joy, and conducted by the Indians from Village to Village. Sometimes he was met by thirty Canoes at a time, all resounding with Mirth and Jollity, and the Indians desiring him to erect Crosses, and build Towns, where they would readily obey all his Directions, so they were not oblig'd to quit their native Soil. Yet some consented to remove, whereof fifteen hundred went to the Town of the Visitation, and 300 to that of S. Teresa. Having spent 25 Days in this Expedition F. Ximenez return'd Home, having found that some Towns might be built upon the River Tebiquar, if there were Fathers to attend them. When he was at Home, understanding that the Heathens all about were much distress'd for want of Provisions, he sow'd a vast Tract of Land, to the end that Hunger might draw those People to him to receive the Nourishment of the Soul, as well as that of the Body; which succeeded accordingly, for great Numbers came in to him. The Plague raging at the same time swept away above 900 Souls, 1030 of all sorts were Baptiz'd. F. Suarez, travelling into those same Parts, from the Town of S. Joachim, over Rocks and dismal Places, having suffered much by Hunger and Weariness, brought a considerable Number of Infidels to the Town; which he and F. Arenes practising afterwards by turns, they made that Colony of S. Joachim, which was inconsiderable in its beginning almost equal to any other for number of Inhabitants. Amidst these Successes many Things hapned that caus'd Dread and Fear, and the Fathers Apprehensions were all of the Mamelucs, for there were several Reports spread abroad in the Towns of the Converts concerning

Fear of
the Mamelucs.

the Designs of those Robbers. For the better oppoling of whom, F. Romero going away upon Business, appointed F. Mendoza to be Superior over the rest in the Province of Tape, and to be watchful and ready to oppose those bloody Villains. F. Mendoza accordingly provided the best he could for his Defence, as soon as he came to the Town of Jesus Mary. The Mamelucs had us'd for many Years past, to run along the Coasts from the south Parts of Brasil in small Barks, to the Mouth of the great River of the Holy Ghost, which is compos'd of the Rivers of the Province of Tape. Then going some way up this River, they traded with the Indians along the Shores, giving them Iron Tools, Apparel, and other Things for Slaves. The Indians allur'd by these Commodities, sometimes Sold their own Country-men seiz'd by force, or made Irruptions up the Country to take Prisoners to sell. These were generally call'd the Friends and Confederates of the Mamelucs, who about this time, had the boldness to drive away many out of the Villages that were subject to the Town of Jesus Mary. This being made known, who had made their escape out of Captivity, struck a great Terror into the Indians of the Province, and perplex'd the Fathers, as well knowing the Mamelucs would highly resent having their wicked Trade obstructed by the Fathers, and rather choose to break out into open War, than be disappointed of buying Slaves. Thus the Alarm was given for all to stand upon their Guard; but especially the Towns-men of Jesus Mary, who provok'd by the late wrong, took up Arms, and march'd out that way their People were reported to be carry'd off. The Fathers Mendoza and Mola went along with them, and overtaking those Robbers, took them, set the Prisoners at Liberty, and banish'd the Takers to the River of Parana, that they might be out of the way of doing Mischief for the future. This Action was not only the Cause of Converting those Thieves, but gain'd the Hearts of the Infidels all about, seeing the Fathers took care to defend the Indians, and therefore they earnestly desir'd to have Towns founded in their Lands, or to remove themselves to those already built.

The principal Care of the Fathers, was to invite the People towards the Sea to the Faith, lest being deluded by the Mamelucs, they might unite their Forces to ruin the Province of Tape. Yet tho F. Mendoza had taken as much care as could be to sollicite them by Messengers, and oblig'd many of them with Gifts, yet many still persisted in their Obstinacy. Among whom Jaguacaporuus look'd upon as a good Man by the neighbouring People, relying on his Allies, durst talk publickly of murdering the Fathers. The Business therefore not being so well manag'd by Messengers, F. Mendoza, travell'd several Days Journey to the River Tebiquar to draw over the Infidels to his Side, endeavouring to persuade the People not to trust to the Mamalucs. After his return Home he set out towards the Caaguas, because it was fear'd the Enemy might break in through their Lands. Caagua is a populous Country, in the mid way between the Province of Tape, and the Atlantick Sea, as yet not entred by the Europeans, but design'd to be attempted as soon as there were Priests to supply it. To this purpose the Caaguas that came to the Province of Tape, were kindly receiv'd by the Fathers, and handsomly presented. It hapned about this time many of them were come to the Town of Jesus Mary to Trade, with whom F. Mendoza easily prevail'd to take him along with them into their Country. He took along with him a numerous Train of Converts to stand by him in case any Violence were offer'd, and after some Days travel entring the Country of the Ibians where Jaguacaporuus resided, found many seemingly favourable; for they promis'd by that time he return'd from the Caaguas, abundance of their People would be got together to receive the Gospel. With this Hope he proceeded to the Caaguas, where all things succeeded according to his Desires, those People readily harkning to the Account he gave of the Behaviour of the Mamalucs, and to the Affairs of Christianity. But whilst he was there employ'd the Ibians consider'd to kill him, at the Instigation of Tainbanius, a crafty Man, and Enemy to the Christian Religion. He had formerly endeavour'd to exclude the Society of the Province of Tape, and also he still endeavour'd to debauch the new Converts, setting up for a Deity; he was punish'd with one Days Imprisonment by the procurement of F. Mendoza, in the Town of S. Michael. Sometime after flying to the Infidels, he us'd all his Endeavours to oppose Christianity, and now understanding F. Mendoza was gone to the People up the Country, he ga-

Vol. IV.

ther'd the Heads of the Ibians, and with many Words perswaded them to Murder him in his return. They were easily perswaded, and sent to Jaguacaporuus to joyn with them. A Day being appointed, the principal Men, with their Followers in Arms, laid an Ambush in a convenient Place, which the Fathers Company discovering, many of them fled to hide themselves; some few fought, but overpower'd by Numbers. The Father mounting on Horseback, for he had alighted to Dine, rode about to strike a Terror into the Enemy, but endeavouring to Baptize one of his Catechumens that was desperately wounded, as he rode to fetch Water, his Horse stuck in a Bog, where the Enemy hem'd him in, and gave him many Wounds, till he fell off his Horse almost Dead. One of the Indians cut off his Ear to keep as a Monument of his Cruelty; but the Weather being Rainy, they soon betook themselves to the Woods, thinking he had been Dead, deferring the Burning his Body, and Cutting up his Belly till the next Day. When they were gone he crept to another Place, which surpris'd them the next Morning, but they soon found him by the Track, and then exercis'd many Barbarities on him till he dy'd almost cut and mangled in Pieces. This done they Feasted on the Bodies of two Youths that us'd to attend the Father. When the News of his Death was spread abroad in the Towns of the Province of Tape, the Converts were all inflam'd with the desire of Revenge. Those of Jesus Mary would have taken the Field immediately without expecting the assistance of other Towns, had not F. Mola stopp'd them, protesting he would have no revenge; yet soon after 1500 Men of that and other Towns assembling could not be hindred from going to seek the Body. As soon as they entred the Territories of the Ibians, the Enemy met them, forbidding them to proceed any further, shewing a part of F. Mendoza's Garment in Scorn, and behaving themselves so insolently, that they oblig'd the Converts to come to a Battle. At the first Encounter the Converts being encompass'd by their Enemies, receiv'd much harm, till gaining a better Ground, they enclos'd the others, and Killing many of them, obtain'd a glorious Victory. Not one of the Victors was Kill'd, and all the wounded recover'd. Most of those who had a Hand in the Murder of the Father were slain, and among them the Ringleader of them Punishment of the Murderers.

The Ibians murder F. Mendoza.

G g g g g

all;

Tecno all, Tainbacus. At the same time the Inhabitants of the Town of S. Joseph upon the same Provocation pierced through almost impassable ways into the Country of those Murderers, and meeting with a great Body of the Enemy, overthrew them, taking many Prisoners, three hundred whereof afterwards became Converts.

Wicked
Practices of Sorcerers.

After the Death of F. Mendoza, new Troubles ensu'd in the Province of Tape, the first was caus'd by the Cruelty of the Sorcerers devouring many Children that were Baptiz'd, and threatening Ruin to the new Towns. This Mischief proceeded from the Ibian Murderers, who not being sufficiently punish'd, and relying on their Numbers, conceiv'd Hopes of extirpating Christian Religion. The Ringleaders were three Caciques, who being skilful in their old Impostures, held forth to the Multitude in great Houses, Baptizing Infants after a wicked manner, prophaning the Priestly Ceremonies, and commending their antient Practices with great Applause of the People. Seven hundred Indians flock'd together from several Parts, and among them twelve Sorcerers, one declaring himself a God, and threatening the Converts with Darkness when they should Engage; another that he would take the shape of a Tyger to destroy them, and such like Follies. At first they dispers'd about the Villages, eating all they took, without sparing the Heathens, till fearing they should joyn with the Christians to defend themselves, they resolv'd to spare all that would suffer themselves to be Baptiz'd by the Sorcerers. That this might be known they sent out Dancers, whose Business it is to impose upon the People. These having wrought themselves into the Villages subject to the Town of Jesus Mary, so debauch'd many of the Inhabitants, that the Town began to grow thin, the Fathers being still ignorant of the Cause. F. Diastanius sent to supply the Place of F. Mendoza, having got Information of the whole Business, secur'd two notable Sorcerers, and expos'd them to publick Shame, some Converts of Authority gathering their arm'd Followers repairing to the Places where the Dancers were doing all the Mischief. When several of them were taken, News was brought that Chemombeus was drawing near with 700 Men, and many of the Converts of the Town of Jesus Mary were in his Interest. The sudden Floods stop'd the coming of the Enemy till Supplies could be brought from other Towns. When 500 Men were got together, they pass'd the River, and fell upon one part of the Enemy, Killing many, and so pursuing their Success to the other Body, utterly routed them, obtaining a compleat Victory. Seven Sorcerers were Kill'd, three Taken, and two fled, many Prisoners made here afterwards became Christians. Another Trouble was rais'd by the Governour of Paraguay, and Citizens of the Assumption, who being still covetous of enslaving the Indians pretended to bring all those of Parana, and the remains of Guaira under their Danger, but the Fathers of the Society and some of the Franciscans opposed them so vigorously, that all their Designs were disappointed, whereof I will not give more particulars, because it is a Subject has been often mention'd. Some Comfort amidst these Adversities, was the Arrival of F. Terricinus with 20 Fathers of the Society, to recruit those Parts, who were all presently dispers'd as was most for the publick good.

F. Romero, who had been superior of the Provinces of Parana, Urvaica, and Tape, having discharg'd that Office, was appointed to take care of the Town of Jesus Mary, which being much expos'd to the Enemy, the Converts had by appointment of the Governour of Paraguay, begun to throw up a Work about it. Whilst they were thus employ'd, the Mamelucs with 1500 Tupus, and a great Number of Heathens they had got together by force in the way, on a sudden invaded the Place. Four hundred Indians oppos'd them with much Bravery, the rest as the Custom is there, being abroad about Tillage or Hunting, The Fathers appear'd every where, shunning no Danger to assist those that were wounded. An Indian Woman call'd Mary, whom the Author knew, habiting herself like a Man, fought with a Lance, kill'd a forward Tupu, check'd the Enemy and encourag'd her own Party. But the Enemy having the advantage in Numbers and Weapons, and firing the Church where the Women and Children were, at last made themselves Masters of the Town upon certain Conditions. Yet they exercis'd their Rage upon those that had surrendered, without any regard to their Articles, or to Sex or Age, burning the Town and Killing many of the Inhabitants. The Town being taken, the Robbers spreading about the neigh-

Mama,
destro
the T of Jesi
Mary.

ing Villages, drove all they could find into Captivity, so that of such a numerous Colony not the fourth part escap'd by Flight. Of the Enemy fifty five were kill'd in the Fight, besides the Wounded. The Fathers were detain'd four Days, lest they should repair to other Towns to advise the People what to do. Thus the Town of Jesus Mary, where the Fathers had Baptiz'd 5057, besides a greater Number preparing for it, was destroy'd three Years after it was built. The Remains of it remov'd to another Place are a doleful remembrance of that once flourishing Colony, to all that knew it, but especially to me, who had for several Years, and still have the Care of them. Two Leagues from the Colony of Jesus Mary, was that of S. Christopher, very populous, tho' founded but two Years before; whither when the News of the Invasion was brought, F. Contreras, who had charge of the Place, led away all he could to the Town of S. Anne. No sooner were they in safety, than the Mamelucs came into the empty Town, and finding it abandon'd, presently fell to searching all the Country round, plundering the Houses, and driving away all the People they found. In the mean while F. Romero having gather'd 1600 Converts of those that fled from the Town of Jesus Mary, those of S. Anne and S. Christopher, and other Places, he went with them to the Town of S. Christopher, whither four Days after his Arrival, came 120 Mamelucs, the prime of their Gang, with 1500 Tupus, who coming to a Battle, tho' at first they gave way, yet at last by the advantage of their Weapons got the better. Many being thus carry'd away into Slavery F. Ruiz return'd with the remains to the Town of S. Anne. This Place then contain'd above 3000 Souls, and was in a flourishing Condition, but being beyond the River Igai, lay expos'd to the Enemy, and therefore it was propos'd to remove it. As they were consulting F. Ruiz the Superior came, and the general Opinion was that the remains of Jesus Mary and S. Christopher's, and the Inhabitants of S. Anne were all to be remov'd over the River Igai, to the Town of the Nativity, that they might defend themselves with the River and the nearness of the other Towns. This being done with great Confusion, all the Boats were brought together under the defence of a Work cast up like a Castle, that the Converts flying over the River might be secur'd, and the Robbers obstructed. Besides, this Guard was plac'd in several Parts where the River was fordable and Ambuscades were plac'd beyond the River in the neighbouring Woods, whence the Converts sallying out by way of surprise on the stragling Robbers, slew many of them without any loss. By this time those of the Town of Jesus Mary that fled, spread the terror abroad, reporting much more than Truth, saying all the Towns of the Province of Tape were destroy'd, many of the Fathers Murder'd, and the Enemy ready to invade Urvaica. F. Ruiz increas'd the Dread, ordering the Fathers of Urvaica to burn the Towns, and retire to the Parana, which the Caasapaminians immediately perform'd, tho' the Enemy was forty Leagues from them. The Taapians and Caasapaguasans were about doing the same, when Orders came from Boroa, the Provincial, that none should stir, till he came to see what occasion there was for it. He heard the News of the Invasion, as he was travelling from the City of the Assumption to the Parana, and in his way met 1500 Caasapaminians, who refusing to return to the Town they had burnt, were recommended to the *Itapuan*s. A little further he met the Caaroans, whom he sent to the other Colonies of Parana, till safe Places could be appointed to rebuild their Towns. He sent to desire Assistance of the Governor of Paraguay, but the Answer was, that the Mamelucs on another side had invaded the Itatinians and it was not convenient to divide those small Forces he had. The Governor of the Province of Rio de la Plata, his Son who was Commander of the Forces, made other Excuses, and the City of S. John refus'd any assistance. Having lost all hope of Foreign Helps, he hasten'd to the Province of Tape, gather'd the scatter'd Converts, order'd the bravest of all the Indians of several Towns to be call'd out, with whom he ventur'd over the River Igai, that this Show might in some measure curb the Insolency of the Robbers. But they were gone with their Booty, and he found nothing but Ruins and dead Bodies. He bury'd the Dead, and sent a particular Account of all to the King of Spain. Then he sent the People of the Towns destroy'd into the Lands of the Caaroans and Caasapaminians with Priests, there to be kept in the Villages till Things could be better order'd. It is well known, that at this time the echo.

That of
S. Christopher.Converts defeated.S. Anne's Colony abandoned.

Mamelucs carry'd 25000 Indians as well Converts as Heathens into Brazil to be Sold for Slaves, besides all that Dy'd by the way. Thus the Fathers lost all Hopes of doing any Good beyond the River Igai, and began to dread further Losses, which we shall soon have occasion to speak of.

Relief sought against the Mamelucs.

The Year 1637 being now advanced, the Provincial Chapter at Cordova made choice of F. Diafanus for Procurator. The Bishop of Tucuman at the same time writ to the Fathers thus assembled, intreating them to take Charge of the Indians of Tucuman, who wanted all spiritual Assistance, giving the Provincial ample Powers for such as he should appoint. Besides he writ to the King most honourably concerning the Society, desiring forty of them might be sent to supply his Diocess of Tucuman. In this same Chapter F. Ruiz, who had been an Eye Witness of the Mischiefs done by the Mamelucs, was order'd to go into Spain to solicit the King and his Council, whilst the other went to Rome, to relieve the distressed Province of Paraguay against those Robbers. F. Ruiz arriv'd safe in Spain with F. Diafanus, where he found King Philip the 4th very favourable to his Pretensions; for having appointed a Committee of the Councils of Castile and Portugal, to consider of that Affair, it was by his Majesty and them enacted, That those Eruptions of the Mamelucs were contrary to the Laws of God, and of the Kingdom, and a scandal to Christian Religion, and therefore the Punishment of them was committed to the Inquisition, all the Indians by them taken to be set at liberty, and the Mamelucs that took them to be look'd upon as guilty of High Treason, and accordingly to be punish'd with loss of Life and Goods. F. Ruiz further obtain'd that all the Indians reduced by the Industry of the Society in the Provinces of Parana, Guaira, Urvaica and Tape, should be exempt from serving private Persons, and only Tributary to the King, and that the new Converts should not pay any thing till twenty Years after they had been Baptiz'd. At Madrid he Printed a Dictionary, Grammar and Catechise, compos'd by himself in the Guaranick Language, which was very useful. Having finish'd the Business he came about, and being in his way to Lisbon, to set out for America, he receiv'd Letters giving him an Account of another Irruption of the Mamelucs, the Mutiny at Rio de Janeiro, the expulsion of the Fathers, at the Town of S. Paul, and the driving away of our Converts, whereof I shall speak in its Place. Therefore returning to Madrid, he obtain'd more positive Orders to the Governours and Magistrates to defend the Converts, with which he sail'd for Peru. He was detain'd some Years at Lima, to defend the Society of Paraguay against its Enemies.

After the departure of F. Ruiz, F. Alfaro was appointed Superior of the Provinces of Parana, Urvaica and Tape, where many Disasters hapned. The first was the abandoning the Town of S. Joachim in the Province of Tape, which was done with much Difficulty, the Indians abhorring to be thus transplanted, many of them slipping away to other Places than were design'd for them, and some meditating the Death of the Fathers. At length the Houses being fir'd, they all retir'd to other Towns, and new Troubles ensuing could never rebuild a Town, so that it quite ceas'd to be, the third Year after its Foundation. But the Mamelucs invading the Town of S. Teresa, was a much greater Calamity. This Town contain'd above 4000 Inhabitants, was still increasing, and there was hope of founding several other Colonies along the River Tebiquor and others; when 260 Mamelucs with a great Number of Tupus and other Indians, breaking into the Place about the end of this Year 1637, destroy'd all that had been gain'd with so much Labour, and all Hopes of future Improvements. The Towns-men being inferior to the Robbers in Number, Arms and Courage, for the most part deliver'd themselves up. Some few fled, others were bound, and others kept under by dread. Yet these Villains upon Christmas-Day had the Impudence to go to Church in a solemn manner, and scoff at F. Ximenez who reprov'd them. The small remains of this Town were added to the Itapuans, where they still continue much improv'd. The new founded Town of the Visitation, was dissolv'd with only the Dread, and the Inhabitants of the other Colonies of the Province of Tape, fearing the like Fortune, either fled or prepar'd for their defence. The People of the Town of S. Anne, beyond the River Igai, hearing that another Company of Mamelucs was near, without expecting the Advice of the Fathers, dispers'd themselves wheresoever Fear, or love of Liberty dictated. It was now frequent to rail at the Society, saying the Fathers gather'd the People into Towns the better to betray them to the

Col
S trai
plai

S. Teresa
destroy'd

Mamalucs; and this Opinion was confirm'd by those Robbers, who told the Converts they held Intelligence with the Fathers, so that many contriv'd to Murder them. F. Contreras had like to have been Kill'd by a Cacique enrag'd with this Jealousie. The Araricans plunder'd F. Alfaro and fled to the Woods, declaring they would rather deliver themselves to the Mamalucs, than be transplanted to Urvaica. Nor was the Province of Urvaica any quieter. The Caasapaminians, who for fear of the War had remov'd to the River Parana, having no Hopes of returning Home, with the assistance of the *Itapuan*s, built a new Town, three Leagues from Itapua, still retaining the Name of the Purification. The Caaroans, aided by the Inhabitants of Loreto and S. Ignatius, founded another Town on the same River. The *Caasapaguacuan*s and Caapians continuing to behave themselves in a tumultuous manner, many of them being dispers'd, and many taken by the Mamalucs, put the Fathers to much trouble; whose principal care it was to keep together and cherish the remains of the Towns destroy'd the first Irruption, the Indians being much distracted in their Thoughts betwixt the Love of their Native Soil and the fear of Slavery. Tho' they be the Actions of several Years, let us go on with the Mamalucs, that the Account of them may not be too much disunembred.

In January 1638, the dreadful News was brought that great Troops of Mamalucs and Tupus were marching thro' the Lands of Caama and Caagua, and design'd when they had carry'd away the Heathens, to divide and attack the Colonies of Urunica and Tape, and so proceed to destroy all the Province of Parana. The Alarm thus given, F. Alfaro the Superior in those Parts, encourag'd all the Indians to defend themselves, and having List'd Men in every Colony, order'd the Rendezvous at the Town of S. Peter and Paul, whither the Enemy seem'd bent, and where the Men in a pannick Fear, abandoning the Women and Children, were fled to the Woods. This being known, the Troops of the other Converts not confiding in their own Strength, retir'd disorderly. The Enemy in the mean while drawing near, had certainly drove away the Women and Children, but that F. Alfaro getting them over the River in some measure secur'd them. The Robbers disappointed of this Booty, falling upon the Towns of S. Peter and Paul, and S. Charles, and the Villages about them, seiz'd many Caapians and *Caasapaguacuan*s, destroying those two Colonies. In seven Years space the Society had Baptiz'd 4337 Souls in the Town of S. Charles, and 5845 in that of S. Peter and Paul. Scarce the third part of these Numbers was afterwards gather'd to settle in the other Towns. After destroying these Towns, the Robbers bent their Force against the Lands of the Caaroans and Caasapaminians. The Inhabitants of both those Places, had during the former Invasion transplanted themselves into Parana, whose Towns had been in some measure restor'd by the remains of the Colonies of the Province of Tape, to defend whom 1500 arm'd Converts were brought together from several Parts, and stood the Enemy in the Lands of the Caaroans. Coming to a Battle and many being Wounded, and some Kill'd on both Sides; before the Action was over, some Converts in a Consternation, fled as if the Mamalucs had got the Day, and as the Custom is there, set Fire to the Town, to signify they submitted themselves. The Women and Children seeing the Fire, and knowing the Cause of it, appear'd in a most lamentable Condition. The Sight was dismal, yet neither Side got the Victory, each Party after the Fight retiring. The next Day the Women and Children were by the Fathers conducted away to the Colony of the *Caasapaguacuan*s, six Leagues distant, whither our Men retiring, were opportunely recruited by some Hundreds of Converts from Parana, for the Enemy appear'd soon after. The Converts perform'd their Devotions before they Engag'd. Fifteen Hundred of them Engag'd with such Bravery, that they soon drove their Enemies into the Wood, taking some Colours and a rich Booty. The Mamalucs having secur'd themselves there with Palisadoes, put out their Fires at Night, and lay very still, that it might be thought they were gone. The Converts deceiv'd by this false appearance, and thereupon presuming to go plunder their Fort, pay'd for their Rashness, for the Robbers firing on them kill'd one of the principal Men, and wounded others, the rest fled, and being seiz'd with a panick Fear, could not be brought to face the Enemy again. Most of them never stopp'd till they came into the Territory of Piratina, the rest follow'd them by the Advice of F. Alfaro. Of five Towns built in the Province of Urvaica beyond the River

Echo.

Towns built.

Towns of S. Charles, and S. Peter and Paul destroy'd by Mamalucs.

Defeat of Mamalucs.

of

of that Name, only that of Piratina was left standing, out of which F. Alfaro in very good time sent all the Women and Children over the River, for but a few Days after News was brought that the Mamaluks seeking for more Booty, still continu'd between the Territories of the Caasapaminians and the Caaroans. Many of the Converts, after the late Fight, believing the Enemy was gone away into Brasil, return'd to their Towns, whom it was hard to call back; yet about a Thousand Indians drawn together in haste gave the Enemy a Check, till more Forces could be gather'd. The Fight lasted five Hours, with almost equal Damage about 80 being wounded on both Sides, and some few Kill'd. After the Fight the Enemies strew'd the way our Men were to go with Crows Feet, which might have done harm, but that they were discover'd. Then they sent a Woman gaudily dress'd to allure the Chiefs of the Converts, to go over to the Mamaluks, who was turn'd away with Scorn. Before this Chemombeus, that famous Impostor had gone over to the Mamaluks, drawing some Converts with him, and to do them some signal Service, now by their Consent, pretended to Desert, but being taken endeavouring to debauch some Converts, he was put into Irons, and afterwards truly repented. All Frauds failing, the Robbers fell again to open Force, and drawing out their Forces, furiously charg'd the right Wing of the Converts, which was led by Nicholas Nienguirius, a Man no less skill'd in War than Peace. They had been easily repuls'd, but that he who commanded the left Wing, being offended at Nienguirius for having forced him to put away a Concubine, refus'd to second him; so that Nienguirius being inferior to the Robbers, was forced by this Treachery to give way, and leave the Victory to them. The Enemy having taken the Town of S. Nicholas, and not daring to pass the River, drove the Prisoners into the Territory of the Caasapaminians. Thus the Colony of Piratina, remarkable for its stately Church, and the Number of Converts, was drawn back over the River Urvaica, and forced to build new Houses a little below the Town of S. Xavierius.

Mamaluks
defeated.

This done the Chiefs of Parana and Urvaica joining their Forces, drew together the greatest Army that had ever been there in the Field, that they might either recover the Booty, or oppose the Enemy, if they durst attempt to cross the River Urvaica. Having cross'd the River, the first Parties that came to the ruin'd Town of Piratina, found Letters writ by the Mamaluks in the Church, full of virulent Slanders on the Society. But the Converts understanding the Robbers were marching away for Brasil, ceas'd not to pursue till they overtook them. The first Day they Fought with indifferent Success, still with greater loss on the Enemies Side than on ours. Fifteen hundred fresh Men now brought by F. Romero encourag'd our Men, and quite dismay'd the Enemy. These having just rested themselves, fell furiously on the Mamaluks, who were ready to fly, doing much harm, and had utterly routed them, had they not defended themselves within their Palisadoes set up before. The Converts throwing up other Works, drew them out to Battle, in which the Loss was equal on both Sides, but the Confusion greater on ours. But now eleven Spaniards sent two hundred Leagues by the Governor of Buenos Ayres coming up, the Enemy quite desponded, for when they drew up 4500 Converts in military Order, the Robbers were so astonish'd, that despairing of Success, or so much as being able to escape, they humbly su'd to be allow'd to Article. A Conference being granted, F. Alfaro after severely reprimanding and making them Swear they would never return nor send any of their Gang to disturb the Towns of the Converts, sent them away unpunish'd, to the great regret of the Converts. Other Troops of Mamaluks were picking up the dispersion of the ruin'd Towns, and threatened the others, but the Provincial gathering other Regiments of Converts, repulsed them and secur'd the Province of Tape for that time. However those Towns being 60 Leagues from those of Urvaica, it was plain they could not continue there with any Security, and therefore it was resolv'd to transplant them, and the Place appointed for it was between the two Rivers Parana and Urvaica, because they being but fourteen Leagues distant from one another, would serve as vast Trenches to secure the great Multitudes of People in the several Towns, who might draw together the easier to stand upon their own Guard. Ten Towns as has been said had been built in the Province of Tape, whereof Four being destroy'd, there remain'd Six, which could not all be transplanted, abundance of the Inhabitants choosing rather to run the hazard of being made Slaves, than forsake their native pe.

The 7
Tran plant

tive Soil! The Work was begun by some Hundreds of the People of the Town of S. Cosmus and Damianus, who with great difficulty drew them over the Mountains and River Urvaica to the Parana, where they rebuilt their Town under the Invocation of the same Saints, between the Colonies of Loreto and the Purification. The Avaricans, or Town of the Nativity of our Lady had been rebuilt between those of S. Mary Major and S. Xaverius, but many of the Inhabitants had fled to the Woods, whence they could not be drawn, till now become sensible of their Danger they submitted themselves and went where the Provincial order'd them. Of the Towns-men of S. Anne dispers'd for fear of the Mamaluks, F. Contreras gather'd as many as built a Town first on the River Urvaica, but afterwards on the Parana, where they still continue. The People of S. Joseph, were as obstinate as the rest against removing, but being at last wrought upon, had the Woods of Parana, between the Towns of Corpus Christi and S. Charles allotted them. In the mean while the Inhabitants of S. Thomas, setting fire to their Town, went away part by Land, and part upon the Rivers Ibiacit and Urvaica, under the Conduct of F. Ernot and Bertot, and settled 14 Leagues below the Town of the Conception, on the latter of the two last named Rivers, where building their Houses, they prov'd more fortunate than the others; for tho' at their first coming they were not assisted by other Colonies, yet in Process of time they enjoy'd many Conveniences the others wanted, because of the vast Plains about them, fit either for Pasture or Tillage, so that at this time I am writing, after so many Calamities, there are computed in this Colony 4000 Souls. The Colony of S. Michael transmigrated as well as the rest, and in its new Seat took the Name of the Immaculate Conception. Thus above 12000 Souls were brought with little loss through a barren Solitude for 60 or 70 Leagues to the Places where they settled on the Rivers Parana and Urvaica. Woods were cut down to make room for this Multitude to Sow, Seed fetch'd at a great Expence, Cattle bought, Houses and Churches built, and all other Necessaries provided. After they were settled the Fathers passing the Rivers that lay in the way, gather'd many thousands of Converts and Infidels that lay lurking in the Woods, and brought them over to increase the aforesaid Towns. All Things being thus settled the Caciques of Parana and Urvaica su'd to the Provincial, begging he would for the future make some Provision of the safety of so many thousand Souls, as were expos'd to the Fury of the Enemy, unless they would allow them the use of Fire Arms. For how can we, said they, who are naked Fight with those that are in Armour, or have stuff'd Coats? How can we defend our selves with Arrows of Reeds, which scarce do any Execution, when the Enemies attack us with Guns that sling Bullets a vast distance? Let us have equal Arms, and we will shew as much Courage as our Enemies, and make it appear we can as well defend our Wives and Children, as the Mamaluks hunt for Slaves. Thus the Indians pleaded, and the Provincial thought there was reason enough to furnish them with Weapons equal to the Mamaluks, who else would never desist till they had depopulated all South America, and it was much to be fear'd, lest if ever there was a War betwixt Spain and Portugal they might break into Peru. Having therefore receiv'd Letters out of Spain from Men of great Note employ'd by the King, directing him to provide for the safety of those miserable People for the future, he us'd all possible means to get them Fire Arms; and tho' the Governours and Civil Magistrates alledg'd that the use of Fire Arms had never been allow'd any Indians for fear of a Rebellion, yet after weighing all Circumstances, they all agreed with the Provincial, and granted they should be allow'd Fire Arms. Which Resolution the royal Council of Peru, and afterwards the King himself approv'd. Musquets were accordingly bought up and made, and granted to the Converts upon Condition they should make use of them in time of War; but in Peace to avoid Tumults, they should be lock'd up; which I find has been very useful in War, and it is certain the Robbers have not since been so bold as before. Therefore to give every Man his due, there is no doubt that the liberty of the People of Tape and Urvaica is in a great measure owing to F. Boroa, the Provincial, but for whom the Indians would not have consented to be transplanted, nor had there been Fire Arms obtain'd to defend them for the future.

Let us after so many Calamities and Troubles look back into the Province of Tucuman, where the Fathers made Excursions from their Colleges to Convert and instruct the scatter'd Indians, with Success in the Valley of Pasipama, and in the

~
Techo.
~

Fire Arms granted the Indi ans.

Techo.

A barbarous People.

The Ocloias.

the Villages subject to the Jurisdiction of the City of London lately rebuilt, but advancing further to a most barbarous Nation, they made no improvement, for those People being wholly devoted to Drunkenness and Extravagant Superstitions, would give no Ear to better Advice. It is the Custom among them to hire Women to commend their Dead. They do not close but open the Eyes of their Friends departed, lest they should miss their way to the other World, which abounds in Delights. The same Error makes them Place their best Goods and store of Provision about the dead Body, which they dress in its best Apparel, and do not Bury, but lay in an open Grave on some high Ground. They sprinkle the Corn when it first comes up with the Blood of Beasts new kill'd to obtain Fertility. By the persuasion of their Sorcerers, they think they shall dye presently, if they give Ear to our Priests, and therefore having this Horror of them, it is no wonder the Fathers could do no good among them. But F. Oforius in the Year 1638, happily attempted the Nation of the Ocloias. These People lye between the Borders of Pern and Tucuman, within the Precinct of the City of Xuxui. The Franciscan Fathers had formerly Preach'd among them, but for many Years past they had been wholly abandon'd and left to their old Customs. Ochoa a powerful Biscainer, to whom the Ocloias had been given, as is the Custom of the Indies, recommended them to F. Oforius in hopes a way might be made through them to the Province of Xuxa. He taking F. Medina along with him, travell'd over the Mountains till they came to the Ocloias. Inquiring into their disposition, they found they were peaceably given, Enemies to Sorcerers, and continu'd in their native Errors only for want of Christian Priests to undeceive them, and therefore it was plain they would all embrace Christianity if instructed. Many were Baptiz'd in Sicaia, the first Village of them, and so in other Places. F. Oforius going on to the Guisparas, and F. Medina to the Guarcontes, found those Indians well inclin'd towards them, and so return'd through the Lands of the Homogucas. F. Oforius coming again to them with F. Riparius they us'd all their Endeavours to bring those scatter'd People to live together in one Place, that they might be the better instructed in the Faith. As soon as their Design was known the neighbouring Caciques offering to remove, began to lay the Foundations of a Town eleven Leagues from the City of Xuxui, and others resorting to them by degrees from further Parts, having built a Church, they placed their Houses regularly, to the great Satisfaction of the Spaniards. Thus 600 Ocloias were Baptiz'd and given in charge to F. Medina, who being about to proceed, the Franciscans interpos'd, alledging they had first Preach'd the Faith there, and consequently that Province belong'd to them. The Provincial to avoid all Controversy resign'd the new built Town to them. Yet F. Oforius and F. Riparius having in vain attempted to make way through the Province of the Ocloias, into that of Xauxa, took another way through impenetrable Woods. Such Indians as they met they endeavour'd to Catechize, and gain their Affections with some small Gifts, as they did some of those the Spaniards call Palomos, and another sort known by the two Names of Labradillos and Pintadillos. Their Provisions falling short, they sent back Sebastian Alarcon, a Youth born in Paraguay, who desir'd to be admitted into the Society, with some of the Labradillos, to fetch Supplies from the City of Xuxui. They, the second Day after they parted from the Fathers, murder'd Alarcon, and having eaten his Flesh, as was reported, took the Skull along with them, and return'd to the Place where the Fathers pass'd the Night, to repeat their Cruelty. That Night they plunder'd their Baggage, and the next Morning murder'd the Fathers, cutting off their Heads, and carrying them away in Trophy. The Indians that were with them returning to Xuxui gave an Account of their Death.

The Fathers in Parana and Urvaica were now employ'd in rebuilding the Towns destroy'd, and discovering the Designs of the Robbers, and because they could not altogether confide in the Converts, who were easily carry'd away with groundless Fears, F. Alfaro so order'd it, that two Fathers in their Turns passing the River Urvaica, should observe the Motions of the Enemy, and bring to the Towns the wandering Indians they could meet with. The Fathers Palermo and Vivero being out upon this Design, two young Converts that attended them going too far, fell into the Hands of the Mamelucs, by whom being bound they lay among the Prisoners, till they perform'd a notable Exploit, which

The noblest of two Converts

was

was, that at Night, when all the Robbers were asleep, they held their Hands which were ty'd behind them so long to the Fire, till the Cords were burnt asunder, and being thus loos'd, they made their escape flying through by-ways fourteen Leagues till they came to the Fathers, and were very useful in discovering the Designs of the Mamelucs. Not long before, Peter Lugo, Governour of Paraguay, had receiv'd Letters from the Catholick King, signifying it was his Will, that he should employ all his Force in defence of the Indians reduced by the Society, and infested by the Mamelucs, and it fell out opportunely that the said Governor himself was taking a view of the Converts Towns in the Province of Parana. At the Instance therefore of F. Alfaro, he drew together 4000 Indians with his own Spaniards, and march'd with all speed into the Territory of the Caafapaminians, where the Enemy had settled. F. Alfaro, and some others of the Society follow'd him, to encourage the Men, and help those that were in danger of Death, and they were all in Hopes the Robbers might be easily routed, when a dismal Accident hapned. For F. Alfaro, Superior of the other Fathers, having advis'd them not to expose themselves rashly, and encourag'd the Converts in some small Skirmishes to defend themselves Manfully, going out a little way from the Camp to discover the Mamelucs, was shot dead by one of them, who lay in Ambush. His Death being known, the Indians fell furiously upon the Enemy, and totally routed them. Many of the Mamelucs and Tupus were taken in this Action. The Governour having severely rebuk'd the Mamelucs, put them into the Custody of the Converts, till it should be determin'd what Punishment was to be inflicted on them for so many Villanies. The Indian Prisoners were happy in that being deliver'd from Bodily Slavery, they were adopted into the Liberty of the Sons of God, being Baptis'd, and made equal in the new Towns to their Conquerors. The Body of F. Alfaro was carry'd four Days Journey to the Town of the Conception, and there honourably Bury'd. His Death undeceiv'd many Converts, who were still jealous that they were gather'd into Towns, to be the better betray'd to the Mamelucs. The Governour carry'd the Mamelucs taken fourscore Leagues back to the City of the Assumption; and was blam'd for being afterwards too favourable to the worst of Men; for tho' he sent them to the Governour of the River of Plata to be punish'd, yet it came to pass that by Favour those Miscreants were suffered to slip away safe into their own Country.

F. Ruiz succeeded F. Alfaro as Superior of the Jesuits in those Parts. He at the request of the Governour of Rio de la Plata, sent F. Romero with a Band of 400 chosen Converts to the Lake of the Caracaras, about an 100 Leagues distant. The Caracaras, Capasacas and Menepos, a fierce sort of People, being part Heathens and wild, and part bred in the Town of S. Anne, but fled thence and in open Rebellion, dwelt about this Lake, which is 40 Leagues in length; and falling thence upon Travellers, either by Land or on the River, carry'd away their Booty into inaccessible lurking Places, amidst the Reeds and Rushes; and not long since had made an Excursion and burnt the Church of S. Lucy; besides the Murderers of F. Spinosa were retir'd thither. Long Impunity made them bold to attempt any Thing, because it was hard to come at them, the Lake which runs to the Parana having but one Entrance, choak'd up with Mud and Bushes, and the further Part of it being full of floating Islands, like those at S. Omer in the Low-Countries, which were dangerous for Strangers, but a secure retreat for the Natives. But the Converts encourag'd by F. Romero, broke through all Difficulties, and dragging those Barbarians out of their Fastnesses, Killing some, forced the rest to submit. All the Prisoners were deliver'd to John Garay, Commander of the Spaniards, who highly commended the Converts. This Victory caus'd the Town of S. Lucy to be in some measure restor'd, made the Ways safe to Travel, and secur'd the Spanish and Indian Towns. The Provincial having visited the Province of Itatina, cross'd the River Pirapuis, then much swell'd, in a Boat made of Canes, which are thicker than a Man's Leg, and being well knit together, cannot easily be sunk, but these being green when they receiv'd a weight, could scarce bear up above Water, so that he was in great Danger; but much more the next Day crossing another River in a Bull's Hide, only fastned in a hollow Form with Hoops, which there the Indians use to carry Passengers in over Rivers, swimming about and bearing them up, but too many officiously flocking about it he was almost drown'd.

He pass'd the River of Xuxui in a Boat made of the Barks of Trees. Which Things I have here mention'd to shew what sort of Boats are us'd in those Parts.

Favours granted the Procurator.

F. Diastanius sent, as was said before, Procurator into Europe, having finish'd some Business at Madrid, went on to Rome, where he easily obtain'd leave of the General to gather Supplies of Fathers out of the Provinces of Rome, Naples, Milan, Sardinia, the Low Countries and Spain. Pope Urban the 8th granted him a Bull, allowing all the Indians, Blacks, and those of a mixt Race in South America, all the time between Septuagesima and the Octave of Corpus Christi to perform the Duty of receiving the Blessed Sacrament about Easter. And another, by which he Excommunicated all such as upon any Pretence whatsoever should enslave the Indians, whether Christians or Heathens. Many other Favours he bestow'd on F. Diastanius, who returning to Madrid, obtain'd of the King Passage for thirty Fathers at his Majesties Expence. The King also put out an Edict, by Authority of his Council of the Indies, forbidding the Mamaluks to infect the Indians, and ordering those so taken to be restor'd to their Country and Liberty, and the Takers to be punish'd. Then gathering the Spanish Fathers that were to go with him, he went away to Lisbon, where he found Six, long since come thither out of the Low-Countries, and they altogether sail'd on the Eve of the Purification. By the way several of the Fathers fell Sick, and two Dy'd. The Weather proving very Stormy, after being drove away almost as far as the Cape of Good Hope, they were forced to stand for Brasil, and at length arriv'd in the Port of Rio de Janeiro, where they were generously entertain'd by the Governour of the Province, and the Fathers of the Society. After the mutual Ceremonies of the Reception, F. Diastanius being intent upon his Business, undertaking to proclaim the Pope's Bull against the Enslavers of the Indians, tho' he did all Things regularly, brought much Trouble upon himself. For when the Bull was solemnly read in the Church of the Society, the Mamaluks, many of whom live in the Territory of Rio de Janeiro, and their Friends grew so inrag'd, that the Fathers were in danger of their Lives; these Mutineers breaking open the College Gates, and rushing into the Court, giving the new Converts very oppro-

Mutiny at Rio de Janeiro.

brious Language, and resolving to Murder them. Their chief Rage was against F. Diastanius, who had procur'd the Bull, and they had perhaps executed their bloody Design, but that the Governour drawing them Artificially to the Church, put some check to their Fury by the Holiness of the Place. The next Day all the chief Men and religious Persons meeting at the Church of the Carmelites, the Jesuits to lay the Tumult, consented the Mamaluks should appeal to the Pope against his Bull, and thus the Business was put up. Whilst this was doing at Rio de Janeiro, it was much worse at the Town of Santos, where Ferdinand Rodriguez, Vicar of the Place had proclaimed the same Bull in the great Church; no Man presuming to mutter against it, till a turbulent Fellow promoting it, there was a Conspiracy carry'd on against the Vicar. Having lay'd their Design, one of the Conspirators Appeals to the King from the Pope's Bull, and the Vicar excommunicating him, all the rest fell upon him with their drawn Swords, trampling on him, and exercising more barbarity than can be express'd in the very Church, the Vicar still persisting resolute in maintaining the Pope's Authority. But they appealing, and requiring the Vicar to allow of their Appeal, he answer'd, he allowed of it, as far as in him was, and the Laws would allow. When they demand'd the Bull to be deliver'd to them, he sent them to the Superior of the Jesuits. The said Superior to give some check to the Mutiny, put on the Priestly Vestments, and coming out to a Porch with the Blessed Sacrament in his Hands, warn'd them as they drew near, not to be the Cause of their own Ruin, and eternal Infamy; and earnestly requested them to be obedient to the Vicar of the Son of God for his sake. Hereupon some falling on their Knees, and others standing, confusedly cry'd out, that they ador'd God present in the Blessed Sacrament, but could not consent to be wrongfully depriv'd of their Goods by him, who defended the Pope's Decrees. Others in a tumultuous manner requir'd to have the Bull deliver'd to them, and having got it, and in vain requir'd the Vicar to absolve them from all Censures, they went away to other Religious Men, some of whom being ignorant of the matter, declar'd they had not incurr'd the Censures of the Bull, because Pope Urban express'd it should be publish'd, if there were no lawful Impediment, and that the

And at S.
Paul.

the general dislike was sufficient Impediment; but all this was palliating wicked Designs, which nevertheless appear'd too bare Faced. Nothing was more frequent among the Mutineers, than that the Society was to be expell'd the Town, lest by their favouring the Indians they should be reduced to Beggery. The Storm was still more violent against the Fathers in the Town of S. Paul of Piratinga, that being the chief Residence of the Mamaluks; for over and above all the Insolencies mention'd in the Town of Santos, the Fathers here were forced out of their College, and banish'd the Town; some of whom resorting to Rio de Janeiro gave an Account of their Usage. But to give every Man his due, the Governour of Rio de Janeiro deserves to be commended for his Resolution, in causing a Fellow who had behav'd himself insolently before the Blessed Sacrament, to be publicly whip'd, and a Master of a Vessel to be punish'd for giving the News of the Expulsion of the Fathers of S. Paul, in a joyful insulting manner. Many Citizens were also praise-worthy for their Resolution in standing by the Fathers; and those Fathers in asserting the Pope's Bull, but none more commendable than the Pope himself who granted it, and King Philip the IV. and his Council, who sent repeated Orders to the Governours to protect the Indians; and doubtless the Mamaluks had been crush'd, but that the War breaking out between Spain and Portugal, disappointed his Majesty's Designs. About the end of this Year 1640. the Mamaluks contemning the King's Edicts and Pope's Bulls, gather'd their Forces to invade the Converts, which made F. Diasianus haste away from the Port of Rio de Janeiro. The 20th Day after he set sail he arriv'd at the Port of Buenos Ayres, where the Provincial receiv'd him and the new Comers with Musick of the Converts, come 200 Leagues to that purpose. The Fathers that came now were thirty three, all whom F. Acoffa, the Rector at Rio de Janeiro maintain'd seven Months at his own Expence, and being desir'd to give an Account of the Expence, that the Province of Paraguay might refund it, he answer'd there had been 600 Pistoles spent, but that he would not accept of the least return, expecting his Reward from God. But having brought the Fathers to Paraguay, let us return to those Parts to see what was done there.

Peace being restor'd, as was mention'd
Vol. IV.

ed in its place, between the People of the Province of Tucuman, and those of the Valley of Calchaquina, the Spanish Governour prevail'd with the Provincial to send two Fathers thither to continue and improve the good Correspondence. They attempted to pass through the Country of the Diaguitas, but in vain, and were forced to return to the City of S. Michael, whence they took their way over vast Mountains, and being courteously receiv'd by the principal Men, travell'd over all the Valley. This done they return'd to give the Provincial an Account of what they had done, who sent them back with Orders to endeavour to build Towns. At first those People receiv'd them with much Affection, and built them a Chapel for present use; but this Kindness was not lasting, for some of the Spaniards of Rioxa, having fallen upon a Village of the Diaguitas, the Calchaquines their next Neighbours soon took the Alarm, saying, the War was declar'd, and consequently the Fathers ought to be made away. They having obtain'd leave of their Superior, went away to Salta, whence the Provincial caus'd them to go back again, and the former Jealousies being remov'd, they began to rebuild the Town of S. Charles in the same Place where it stood before, with Hopes of its continuance. Yet the Progress of Christianity has not been very considerable, because those People mind nothing but their antient Superstitions. The Boys, who under the Care of the Fathers seem to be Good and Pious, as soon as ever they return among their own People, fall immediately to the Customs of their Parents. The prime Men endeavour to hinder the Fathers learning their Language. Thus little hopes appear'd of gaining many to the Faith; yet these People permitted the Fathers to erect Crosses, build Chapels, and exercise their Function before them; and some of the Caciques have shewn them extraordinary Civility, which is all yet gain'd, and so we must leave them, having no more to add concerning them.

The People call'd Abipones seem'd to afford copious Matter for Conversions, and therefore F. Pastor, Rector of the College of Esseco, with a Companion undertook them this Year 1641. He set out of the Metropolis of the Province of Tucuman, and travell'd through Deserts, till he came into the Territories of the Indians call'd Matarans, about 80 Leagues

Techo.
Valley of Calchaquina pacify'd.

Techo.
Matarans
 their Customs.

Leagues distant from the Place where he set out. The Nation of the Matarans being addicted to Drunkenness, us'd to have daily drinking Bouts, the People inviting one another in their Turns. Besides these Daily Debauchés, they had others more Solemn, which they call'd Funeral Drinkings, being dedicated to the Ghosts of their departed Ancestors, whose Anniversary was celebrated by the Heirs, with Feasting, where the chief Pleasure was Drunkenness. When the Guests were all come together, they presented him that Treated with an Ostrich, carry'd by a handsome young Maid upon her head. If it hapned that the Anniversary of several dead Persons was kept the same Day, they kill'd and presented as many Ostriches. Each Person was oblig'd to make the Master of the Feast some particular Present, upon Condition he was to make a futable Return when they celebrated the Anniversaries of their Ancestors. There were scarce any bloodier Quarrels among them, than what grew upon breach of this Contract; the Duty of performing whereof, did not only extend to those present, but to their Children and Grand-sons, it being Hereditary. Having spent three Days in the Funeral Feast, they forced themselves to Weep for a whole Hour, which was follow'd by Laughing, Dancing and Drinking. But the worst was, that they follow'd those Customs, and pretended to be Christians, alledging they had receiv'd the Faith from the Fathers Barsena and Aguaico, and they had a Curate, who Baptiz'd the Infants, and instructed Children, but as soon as they were grown up they fell again to their ancient ill Customs. They all us'd the Language of Tonocota, in which F. Pastor's Companion was expert, who prevail'd with many of them to confess their Sins, which was look'd upon as almost a Miracle. Having staid a few Days among the Matarans, they continu'd their Journey towards the Abipones, still sixty Leagues distant from them, the Curate of the Matarans, their chief Caciques, and very many Indians attending them; for tho' there were Wars of long standing between them and the Abipones, they hop'd the Fathers by their Authority might produce a Peace. No sooner were they out of the Town but they fell into thick Woods frightful for the many Dens of wild Beasts, the Track of Tygers and other Things of that Nature, every where threatening Death. The prickly Boughs of the Trees sometimes lash'd their Faces, and tore their Garments. The greatest Hardship was want of Water, for tho' they were dry'd up with Heat and Weariness, there was none but Rain Water, which lay stinking in Ditches, and was rather a Plague to the Nose, than any Comfort to the Mouth. About half way, the thickness of the Woods and want of Water was succeeded by Lakes and Marshes, caus'd for five Leagues together by the overflowing of the Red River. The Matarans discourag'd at the Sight of so much Water would certainly have return'd, had not the Fathers encourag'd them to proceed with good Words and Presents. Having pass'd the Lakes, they had a better way through a Plain, till they pitch'd their Tent two Leagues from Abiponia. The Matarans considering here, they were going to put themselves into the Hands of their Enemies, without any Retreat or House of Succour, were by much ado stay'd by F. Pastor, who set out with his Companion, and 2 others to discover the best way to enter Abiponia. When he was a little advanced, a Troop of 200 Abipones on Horseback came out and hemm'd him in. They were naked, and the Horses bare; the Men tall, broad shoulder'd, shewing their Inconstancy by the rowling of their Eyes, and their Fierceness by their long flying Hair. When they levell'd their Arrows at him, he spoke to them in the Language of Tonocota, telling them it was his Love to them brought him, without regard of Life, for their good, and therefore advis'd them not to be guilty of a Crime they might have afterwards Cause to repent. The Indians thus appeas'd, threw down their Arms, after their manner, to be-token Peace, and saluted the Father courteously. Being inform'd that another Father of more Worth was behind, the Commander sent his Son well attended to conduct him. At the first Village he was receiv'd with several sorts of Sports, the Women shouting, and as they did so, often clapping their Mouths with their Hands. After the first Salutation, they spread a Hide on the Ground for a Carpet, in token of Honour, and placed Trunks of Trees for Seats. The Fathers return'd their Kindness, distributing Hooks, Pins, Needles, and Glass-Beeds, which the Abipones valu'd above the richest Metals. Then being invited to eat upon a Table, not unlike their Stools, they had such Meat lay'd before them, as would soon qualify Hunger; yet lest they should be offend'd that their first seen.

Abipones

their Meat was despis'd, the Fathers did eat against Stomach. The next Day they erected a Cross, and the Father Rector telling them he would stay among them, Caliguila the chief Man of the Nation carry'd them to his Village, where they were joyfully receiv'd. Having told the cause of their coming, the same Caliguila promis'd for all the People, that they should not be hindred from Baptizing the Children, and building a Church after the Christian manner, provided the Youth were not oblig'd to come to Church Morning and Evening, which would render them unfit for War; but the Father soon convinced him that it would be no prejudice to the Youth, by the example of the Spaniards, who are never the less brave for resorting to Church and School. Caliguila so satisfy'd, desir'd at least that the Boys might be permitted to go into the Church with their Bows and Arrows, and that they should not be Punish'd, which was readily granted. Then they all desir'd, that if any Caciques should embrace the Christian Faith, it might be lawful to bury their Bodies after the manner of their Ancestors, on the Tops of Mountains near the Tombs dedicated to their Deities; but this could not be allow'd as being Superstitious. When the Assembly broke up, a great Cross was erected, and the Christian Doctrin explain'd, which some of the Indians in a very short time grew so perfect in, that the Curate of the Marrans was for Baptizing some of them underhand; which the Rector perceiving, he sent him back to the Place from whence he came. After his Departure he built a Church with Clay and Straw, began to write a Dictionary of the Language of the Abipones, Instructed the Youths, and there was hopes that a great Multitude might be Converted in a short time to the Faith, when he was forced by the Provincial's Order to quit that Undertaking. Thus the Conversion of those People was put off for want of Fathers, and therefore we will here in a few Words set down the Account F. Pastor gives of their Manners. Generally the Abipones are of a large Stature, well Made, Brawny and looking Big. In Summer they go Naked, in Winter cover'd with Skins. About their Necks hang their Clubs, and Quivers on their Shoulders. They always carry a Bow in the left, and a Spear in the right Hand, staining all their Body with several Colours like Tygers, to be the more Terrible; and look upon those as most Honourable who make most Holes in their Bodies and stick Ostriches Feathers in them; which they wear in their Nostrils, Lips and Ears as if they design'd to fly. A Beard they look upon as dishonourable, and therefore pluck up the Down that grows in their Youth. They make themselves Bald by way of Ornament, and none may let his Hair grow, but he that has kill'd an Enemy in War or in Duel. Manslaughter among them is the Proof of their being Soldiers, and no Man is allow'd Military Ensigns till he has committed it. They have also their Nobility and Heroes, to which Honour they are advanced by degrees of excessive Cruelty; for he that desires to be accounted a Hero, must give Proof of his Bravery by enduring most horrid Tortures, piercing their Legs, Thighs, Arms, Tongues and other parts of their Body not fit to be nam'd, and then tearing off the Skin of all those Parts with a rough Stone. Five of the Elders exercise this Butchery on the Candidate, who if he gives the least token of feeling the Pain but by never so inconsiderable a Motion, is not admitted into the Order of Noblemen. But if he carries himself resolutely in the Torture, rowling himself in his Blood to denote his Satisfaction, then the Ensigns of that Honour are confer'd on him. That they may be the securer of obtaining this Honour, they enure themselves from their Infancy to prick and flea their Limbs after this manner, so that it is frequent to see Boys and Youths run Thorns or Briars through their Tongues, Lips, Nostrils, Ears or other Parts; and forcing a sort of Laughter to conceal all Sense of Pain. Thus much of the Men. The Women Cloath themselves below the Bosom with coarse Nets, the rest of their Bodies they paint or adorn with Stones set in it, particularly their Breasts and Faces; making themselves bald, shaving the hinder part of their Heads with Razors of Flint or Reeds. When their Caciques dye, they all change their Names, and fast a whole Month, howling most dismally Day and Night. The manner of Fasting among them is this, to eat no Fish, but devour as much Flesh and as often as they please. They breed up but two Children, cruelly Murdering the rest; and the reason they give for it is, that being us'd to War and Robbery, whence consequently they have no settled Place of Abode, but live up and down wheresoever they set up their Mats, after the manner of a Town, therefore

Manners
of the Abi-pones.

Techo.

Techo. therefore they keep but two Children, one of which the Father carries, and the other the Mother, that they may not fall into the Hands of their Enemies; but if one or both the Children be grown up to be able to follow them before another is born, then they allow more to live. Many of their old Women are Witches, and have frequent Converse with the Devil. These would sometimes invite the Fathers, using a Motion strange to other Nations, often contracting their Hands turn'd upwards like Claws or Hooks, and distorting their Faces with wrinkled Laughter, ratling something in their Throats, and whistling, for the Abipones understand one another by whistling. Yet little good was hop'd when they call'd, deprav'd Habits being as hard to be remov'd in the Mind as in the Body. One of these Witches being prest when she was dying to be Baptiz'd, as the only remedy against falling into the Power of the Devil for ever, answer'd, She did not fear the Devil, having been long acquainted with him, and so she dy'd. The rest of them cordially Entertain'd the Fathers, and when they were returning to Esseco, bore them Company in great Numbers under the Conduct of Caliguila, for thirty Leagues, furnishing them continually with what they kill'd, and desiring they would not stay long away from them. The Guanamalcas border on the Abipones, and other Nations that know nothing of Christianity.

Converts rais'd against the Mamaluks.

Whilst the Fathers were thus employ'd in Tucuman, the Province of Urvaica was full of Troubles; for News being brought that a great Body of Mamaluks was in motion, no doubt was made but they design'd against the Converts of Urvaica and Parana. All Men were therefore order'd to be in Arms, and it was decreed, the Forces of both Rivers must be join'd whatever it cost, and the Enemy drove out of their Liberties at the common Expence, to put at once an end to that continual War. To this purpose 4000 Indians were chosen out of all the Towns, and Arm'd as the time would permit, some with Slings, others with Bows after their antient manner, and 300 of the Chief had Fire Arms given them. As soon as they had Rendezvous'd at the Town Mbororeo, on the Borders of Urvaica, they were order'd to prepare both Soul and Body, their Scouts bringing an Account that the Enemy was but one Day's Journey from them, and had possess'd themselves of the River Acaraguai which falls into the Urvaica, with 300 Boats; that they were 400 Mamaluks in whom lay the greatest Strength and 2700 Tupus. The Enemy confiding in their Numbers, and encourag'd with assured hope of a mighty Booty, mov'd down the River against our Army, offering Battle, which was as readily accepted. The Fight was begun by the fortunate Firing of a Cannon, which sunk three of the Mamaluks Boats, and then both the Fleets engag'd. The Mamaluks despairing of Success on the River, most of them landed, where our Men fought with no less Success, and had totally Routed the Enemy, but that Night put an end to the Action. Another part of the Army in another Place came off without loss, doing much harm to the Robbers. At Night the Retreat was sounded, as well that the Converts might rest themselves, as to prevent losing the Victory obtain'd, by falling to plunder in the dark. Only three of the Converts were kill'd that Day. The next Morning as soon as the Light appear'd, they were at Arms again, and hemming in the Mamaluks, fell upon them on all sides, and would certainly have made an end of them in a small time, had not they by the favour of a Storm rising suddenly, retir'd into the adjacent Woods. After taking their Camp, our Indians still pursuing, overtook them as they entred a small Wood a little before Night. Being there besieg'd they became rather Desperate than Courageous; yet our Men hunting them out through the Thickets and over the Rocks, overcame their Rage with wonderful Bravery. They Fought every where hand to hand, for the Place would not allow them to do any Execution at a distance. The Enemies flight put an end again to the Battle at two in the Afternoon, the Victors through weariness not being able to follow them. Of ours three were Kill'd, and 40 Wounded; of the Enemies a vast number, particularly of the Tupus, many of whom surviving the Fight came over to us, alledging as a reason for what they did, the Cruelty of the Mamaluks, and their haughty Government. The Robbers being disappointed of their Booty on the River Urvaica, when they had gather'd some Strength after the Fight, altering their Design, divided their Forces to fall upon the Heathens, but this way of Robbing was no more successful than that of open War. For those Indians who were the remains of the Town of defeated.

Mamaluks

Teresa

§. Teresa, about the River Tebiquar, whither they fled during the former depopulations, delivering themselves up to one Company of Mamalucs, unbound themselves in the Night, and falling upon them, made a great Slaughter; which done, they fled, and joyn'd the Converts of Parana. At the same time another Band of the Thieves was utterly destroy'd by the Heathens, and Ten prime Ring-leaders of all Mischief, are reported to have been slaughter'd with their Leader, by stragling Parties. Another parcel of them counterfeiting themselves to be of the Faction of Ignatius Abiacu, Captain of the Mboresans, enslaved many who came in, taking them for Friends. Those that went to take the Caaguas, us'd much the same Artifice; for, pretending there came Fathers of the Society with them to teach the Law of Christ, many Indians deliver'd themselves up; but the greater part defended themselves against Force and Fraud. Many of the Mamalucs were cruelly handled by the Gualaches, the fiercest of all the Indians; for when they fell into their Hands, they tore off their Beards and Hair, and tore off the Flesh from their Arms and Thighs to eat, mangling their Bodies, and fixing their Heads on Poles upon the tops of their Cottages to terrify others; many of the Gupuis far'd no better. It was certainly reported from Brazil, that 120 Mamalucs perished in the fight and flight, and almost all the Gupuis. When our Forces were dismiss'd, it being known that many, both Infidels and Christians were dispersed for fear of the Mamalucs, and might be easily drawn to the Towns, if invited; and that many of those taken before the Fight, had made escapes; the Mboresan Converts making Excursions by Land and Water, for two Years together brought in abundance of them. Among these few Captives the Mamalucs gather'd before the Fight; and were driving to Brazil, a young Maid not above fourteen Years of Age, got into one only Boat there happened to be on the River, and losing it, was drove down by the Stream, the Robbers having no means to fetch her back, shot abundance of Arrows and Bullets at her, but she making no account of them, and receiving no hurt, ran down the River till she fell among some of the Mboresan Indians, who conducted her safe to the Town, where she was Baptiz'd. Another about Nineteen Years of Age having been solicited to consent to the Lust of the Robbers, and not knowing how to resist Violence, knowing they were in great Distress for want of Provisions, pretended she could find excellent Roots in the Woods to supply them, if she were suffered to go, but as soon as she got thither, she hid her self so safe, that they could never find her, till she got safe to the Town of the Mboresans. Two other Sisters, the one of 13, the other of 10 Years of Age, after they had been drove an Hundred Leagues towards Brazil, made their escape with a Youth their Kinsman, and came safe to the same Town above mention'd, where they found their Father and Mother. But we must not instance too many of these Escapes, tho' strange, because the Circumstances may be much alike. A powerful Cacique of Urvaica, who was a great Enemy to Christianity in general, and the Society in particular, had contracted Friendship with the Robber, that he might be able to do Mischief, and was so base as to deliver up many of his own People to those Thieves. The Mamalucs, the more to secure him to their Interest, of their own Authority, which was none at all, gave him the Title of Lord of all Urvaica, and the adjacent Rivers; and he, proud of his new Authority, for some years, did great harm in the Lands of our Converts, to the great benefit of the Mamalucs. At length, displeased at the smallness of the Reward of his Treachery, he renounced their Friendship, and fled with the faithfullest of his Followers, but being taken by the Mamalucs, and accused of being unfaithful to them, he in vain pleaded his Services, and was by them put to death. Another Cacique, who in a boasting manner was used to threaten the Fathers with Death, and the first Christian Woman with his Lust, declaring he would never give over till he had destroy'd all the Towns of Parana, and Urvaica, had his Wife cruelly Murdered by the Mamalucs, and he at the same time broke his Leg in the Woods. Some Converts finding him out by his hideous Cryes, would certainly have made an end of him, had not the Fathers obstructed, saying it was the Duty of Christians to return Good for Evil. Thus he was not only sav'd but carry'd to the Town, where he became a Christian. Here we will conclude with the Mamalucs, whose barbarous Villanies have afforded so much Matter for this History.

Now the War is ended, to come to a more pleasing and peaceable Subject. The

Techo.

Reception of the Provincial.

 Techo. The Provincial coming to make his Visitation along the Parana, was met at the first Town by 200 Boats full of Converts from several Colonies, representing a pleasant Fight, whilst others on the Shore congratulated his coming with Vocal and Instrumental Musick. All the Towns received him with green Arches, and extraordinary demonstrations of Joy. He, on the other side, dismiss'd none without some Gift, distributing among them Glass Beeds, Pins, Needles, Knives, Iron Tools, Garments, and such other things as were acceptable. Being ordered by the General to act as Visitor, as well as Provincial, he regulated the Affairs of 20 new Towns built on the Rivers Parana and Urvaica. Two Fathers resided in each Town, who after the Duties of their Function, were attended by the chief Men of the place, whom they directed how to manage their Country Affairs, what Lands to till, whether they were to Fish, Hunt, or kill some Cattel, and whatever else was to be done; for in these beginnings it was not lawful to go about any thing but what the Founders approv'd of. Every Year the Fathers by the King's Authority, appointed Magistrates, and gave them all honourable Titles, to civilize those People by degrees. But these Convert Governours of Towns, could not do any thing of moment without the Approbation of their Instructors; and yet it is incredible how proud they were of that shadow of Power, and of their Officers Rods. It will not be to our purpose to reckon the many Sufferings of the Fathers to bring things to this posture, and therefore we will pass on to other matters. In the Year 1642, two Fathers were sent out of the College of Cordova to inspect a part of the Seniority of that City, one of whom, when they came to that they call the Fourth River, writ back to one of his Friends concerning those People, in this manner. The Indians, says he, dwelling on the Banks of the fourth River, border upon the Parparos, Guarparos, and Mendicinos. They are obstinate in adhering to the Superstitions of their Forefathers, and rather daub than paint their Faces with strange Colours, especially the Widows and Widowers. Things truly religious they abhor, and run over the Christian Prayers, and ten Commandments like Parrots. Many of them have Contracts with the Devil. They make use of Roots in their Enchantments, to do all sorts of Mischiefs. Every Village is under the care of an Agh-forcerer, whose Duty it is to visit

*Indians of the fourth
River.*

*the sick, out of whose Bodies he counterfeits himself to suck the corrupt Blood, and that he may seem so to do, he before-hand puts some rotten Matter into his Mouth, which when he has sucked the affected parts, he spits out, and so pretends the cause of the Disease is removed. The whole Nation is addicted to Lust. The Men use enchanting Herbs to allure the Women to their wicked Designs. The Women bore their Nostrils and other tender parts of their Bodies with sharp Thorns, as long as a Finger, till they lose abundance of Blood, which they receive into a Dish, and with it paint the extreame parts of the Skin of all the body, as our Women do their Faces, but especially the Maids, and this Tincture is so prevailing, that they scarce ever fail of compassing their lewd Projects. The cruelty of these People is inhuman; the Men often challenge one another, and the Laws of Duel are these. They fasten a Stone-Ball, cut into Angles, to a long Rope, which the Combatants revolve about a long while, then they set Foot to Foot, and both hold down their bare Heads, to receive the Blows in their turns on their Forehead, unless one be knocked down the first stroak. He who strikes first is counted the more fearful and weaker, tho' sometimes at one forcing, the Antagonist is struck down. Thus they stand still a long while, like Dunghill Cocks, before they strike a stroak. The Spectators applaud the Victor with hideous Shouts. If he that is hurt dresses the Wound, he disgraces himself. They have another way of shewing their Courage, which is to run an Arrow through the Skin of their Bellies, and draw it out a great while after, as if it were a Needle. This is the Account that Father gives of those People, of whom many were converted, and forsook all their wicked Customs. Another Excursion was made by the Fathers of Rioja, among the People call'd Planos; of whom there is little to be said in particular, but that they live on Hills cover'd all the Year with Snow; the Way to them is over vast Mountains, and are miserably poor, scarce any of them having Cottages to dwell in but lying out in the open Air, or at best in Caves. Their Spiritual Wants were no less than the Corporeal, for they had seen no Priest in five Years, but now afforded a plentiful Harvest.*

This Year 1642, was very joyful Hundredth throughout this Southern Province of America, made so by celebrating the first Year of the Society Age, or hundredth Year since the Institution of the Society. Rome kept it first by the magnificence of the Barbarynes; Europe the following Year, and the New World

World the next after that, not with the Majesty of Rome, the Expence of Spain, the Wit and Vivacity of France, the Plenty of Germany, or the Ingenuity of the Low-Countries, but no less Devotion and good Will. Cordova the Metropolis of the Province began by keeping it eight Days in most solemn manner. There were publick Processions made, triumphal Arches erected, and curious Altars set up. The Bishop of Tucuman Preach'd in commendation of the Society. A Pillar was set up where four Streets met, on which was S. Ignatius, darting Fire out of a Cane upon a Hydra and a Giant that were at some distance, to signify his Conquest over Heresy and Paganism. Plays were Acted, the Tower was set about with Illuminations, and all manner of Sports perform'd on Horseback. But the most ingenious part was the Orations and Poems made in Honour of the Society. The Port of Buenos Ayres upon this occasion outdid all it had ever done before, and so other Parts, but these were all Europeans, yet the Indians according to their Ability would not be behind them. The Colony of S. Xavierius on the River Uruguay began, and entertain'd the Fathers and principal Men invited thither from other Towns, with variety of Diversion. The Festival commenced by Singing Vespers in Musick, and making Bon-fires at Night. The next Day produced Triumphal Arches, abundance of Altars, variety of Dancing, and several Exercises and Representations. There were Declamations both in Latin and the Indian Language. In the Afternoon the Mboresans, who were Guests there acted a Play, in which the Mamelucs making an Irruption to Rob, were shamefully routed and punish'd. Another Colony among many other extraordinary Things erected Six hundred Triumphal Arches, and hung under them all sorts of Things in token of gratitude, to express they had receiv'd all Goods from the Society. The same was perform'd upon the River Parana, the Converts expressing most singular Affection towards their Instructors. They made a general Review of their Forces, and Danced after a military manner, bearing the Letters of the Name of S. Ignatius on their Shields, compassing ingenious Anagrams. At Night a Fight of Boats upon the River by Torch Light, put an end to the Solemnity. At the Colony of the Incarnation after a Play, there appear'd in publick an old Giant of a vast Size, follow'd by an hundred Boys in several Colours, by their variety representing the Duties of the Society, and singing Praises to the old Giant. At a little distance they were met by an Herd of an hundred Oxen, and so pass'd on through an hundred Triumphal Arches to the Church, on the Porch whereof an hundred Loaves were offer'd; on the high Altar were an hundred Lights, and before them an hundred Praises of the Society. Over the Gates of the Church were three Statues; that in the middle representing the Society; those on the sides Wisdom and Piety, with this Inscription, The Society an hundred Years old Triumphs, under the Conduct of Piety, attended by Wisdom. An excellent Latin Oration gain'd the Applause of all that hear'd it. Then appear'd a vast Triumphal Chariot, on which sat the chief Heroes of the Society, with many other particulars; the whole concluded in a Play, and so ended the Solemnity.

The College of the Fathers at Cordova was now enlarg'd, and such a private Chapel finish'd in it, as may vie with the best in Europe. It is all Painted, the whole cover'd with excellent Representations of Saints, except at certain Intervals where Pillars of Jasper, and several Sorts of Marble are represented to the Life. Under the Pedestals of the Pillars are turn'd Seats; the Roof richly diversify'd with Gold and costly Colours, and a little Arch'd, seems to be supported by Architects, the Art of perspective imposing upon the Eyes. The Altar is very beautiful, and on it a Throne all Gilt, finely Arch'd and Carv'd in the Shape of a Scollop, on which is seated an Image of the Blessed Virgin, made by an excellent Spanish Carver. Under the Image of our Lady lies the Body of S. Epimachus, sent by Pope Urban the 8th in a curious Shrine; below that again in a rich Case is a Crucifix, which S. Ignatius held at the time of his Death, given by the General of the Society F. Vitellesci. Some Fathers making Excursions from this College into the Province of Tucuman, said they met with old Men, who had never been near a Priest since the first coming of the Spaniards, but now hearing of the coming of these Fathers came out of their Caves, with long Beards and Hair, over-run with Vermin, and almost wasted to nothing; yet more hideous for the Corruption of their Souls, being grown old in

~
Techo.
~

A rich
Chapel.

Wickedness, and more like Beasts than Men; yet these confess'd their Sins, and express'd Repentance. Among the rest they found one Man an hundred Years of Age, who for want of Priests had liv'd about 80 Years without Confession, and yet without being guilty of any grievous Sin; for contenting himself with his own Wife, he had never coveted any other Woman, or other Mens Goods. Being as'd by one of the Fathers, whether he knew there was a God, he answered in the Affirmative. The Question being put to him again, whether he us'd any sort of Prayer to God, he reply'd, He knew no other manner of Worship, than putting his Hands together, and holding them out towards Heaven, now and then to cry, God! God! God! and had never us'd or known any other Form of Prayer. Being desir'd to do it as he was wont, he readily clapt his Hands together, and lifting up his Eyes to Heaven, call'd upon God several Times with such a Tenderness, as drew Tears from the Fathers Eyes. F. Medina was sent by the Provincial from the College of the City of S. Michael in Tucuman, to try whether any progress could be made in the Territory of Chagway. The Father being come to Omaguaca, sent one Laurence an Indian, a Man well vers'd in Business, to try the Mataguaias, through whose Lands there was a short way into the Province of Chagway. These Mataguaias Inhabit four Towns subject to as many Caciques, whose Power is almost equal, Laurence having deliver'd some Presents to the Chief of them from F. Medina, and declar'd the Cause of his coming, was the Cause that the other Caciques were call'd together to consult what was to be done; there it was decreed by unanimous Consent, that the Fathers were not only to be permitted, but intreated to come among them, that the shortest way should be found out, and the Road to be mended. That therefore Laurence should return and acquaint the Father that his coming would be most acceptable to them, but they desir'd him only to stay till the Floods were in, for then they would send him Guides and Provisions, and if the Father would bring them some Iron Tools, it would be a great Advantage. The Resolution of the Caciques being known, all the People ran joyfully to express their satisfaction to Laurence. The old Women and Maids petition'd that the Father would obtain some Supplies of Cloths to defend them against the Cold, and make them appear more modestly. All Things seem'd to promise success, and yet the Design was then laid aside for want of Fathers to employ; the Provincial by Advice recalling F. Medina, and putting off this Enterprize till fresh Supplies were sent out of Europe, because at present it was thought fitter to continue the Mission to the Calchaquines, of whom all that can be said has been deliver'd before.

The Year 1644. produced a mighty Controversy about the Consecration of D. Benardin de Cardenas, Bishop of Paraguay. He receiv'd the King's Letters in Peru, acquainting him that his Majesty had conferr'd the said Bishoprick on him, and expected only the Pope's Bull of Confirmation. The Bishop elect, impatient of delay, was unwilling to expect the Pope's Bull of Approbation, wherein because of the small number of Bishops in the Indies, it is usual to allow one only Bishop, contrary to the general Practice to Consecrate another. He therefore for the more speedy attaining his Dignity, put the Question to the College of the Jesuits at Cordova, whether the usual Form might not be dispens'd with, and by reason of the great distance, the Pope's Consent be taken for granted. The College answer'd it was contrary to the Opinions of the Learned, and Decrees of Councils. But he was too hasty to be stop'd, and being Consecrated by one Bishop, without expecting the Pope's Bull, repair'd to his Church of Paraguay, which was the ground of an eager Controversy, which being carry'd high, spread through the World, and was the subject of a doleful History writ by another Hand, and not to be handled by me. Yet I must not omit to mention some Slanders rais'd upon this Occasion, and afterwards clear'd, which I will deliver all at one View. The new Bishop's dislike to the Society being known abroad, their Enemies laid hold of this Opportunity to revive the antient forgotten Calumnies, the chief whereof was a fabulous Story of the Gold of Urvaica, long since exploded, and then again given out through all Christendom. For the better understanding of the whole we will look back to the original of it. Many Years before this time, one Bonaventure an Indian of the meanest sort, having liv'd some time in the Port of Buenos Ayres, went away first among

Techo.

Barbarous old Men.The Matuguaias.A Cont roversy about Consecration of a Bishop.

The Society
fully accu'd of concealing Gold.

among the wandring Infidels, and afterwards to the Colony of the Japevians on the Urvaica; where he ran away with another Man's Wife, and being taken was publickly whip'd for an Example to the other Converts. Being sent again to Buenos Ayres, he there, I know not by whose Instigation, fram'd so plausible a Story about Gold found by the Jesuits, near the River Urvaica, that he impos'd upon Men of good Sense. For he confidently affirm'd he had wrought a long time in Urvaica at Digging of Gold, and that there was such Plenty, that in three Days a Man might fill a half Bushel with pure Gold Dust. He said further that he had been tempted to hide a great Parcel of Gold for his own use, being resolv'd to run away, but that being betray'd by his Fellow, he was by the Fathers whipped and banish'd. When he had told this Story, he describ'd the Place and Nature of the Gold Mines so particularly, and lay'd so artificially, that the whole matter appear'd more than credible, and many affirm'd there was no doubt to be made of the Truth of it. The Society to clear its Reputation, complain'd to the proper Judges, and prevail'd to have the Business examin'd. The Magistrates did their Duty, and after much inquiry Stephen de Avila, Governour of Buenos Ayres, publickly declar'd, and writ to the King's Council at Madrid, that the Report spread abroad concerning the Gold of Urvaica was a meer Fiction of Idle Men, and the Enemies of the Society. Thus that Fable was suppress'd for some time, till some time after the Impostor reviv'd it among some new come Europeans that were greedy of Gold, and had the Impudence to carry it to Hiacinthus de Lara the new Governour of Buenos Ayres. The Governour, tho' he did not altogether give Credit to it, wish'd it were true, and could not resolve what to conclude. As he stood thus doubtful, he receiv'd Letters from Paraguay, in which the Bishop affirm'd, it was certainly made out there were Gold Mines near Urvaica. The Impostor rejoyc'd to see his Lye confirm'd by the Bishop, and the Governour thirsting after Gold made all possible haste to set out in search of it. Accordingly he began his Journey of 200 Leagues up the River Parana, attended by 40 Soldiers, and Martin de Vera, Lord of a Gold Mine in Peru, and a most skilful Man at trying of Metals.

Vol. IV.

Bonaventure the Informer was order'd to follow him, but he knowing he had a bad cause in Hand, slipp'd away in the Journey. The Governour somewhat discourag'd by his Flight, still held on his Journey, being nobly receiv'd in the Towns built by the Society, and tho' to them he conceal'd the cause of his coming, yet privately enquir'd by his Interpreters among the Indians, where the Gold was found.

This being known, F. Diastanius Superior of the Fathers in Parana and Urvaica, Petition'd him that he would publickly Inquire concerning the Gold Mines, and appoint a Day to try that Cause, that the Society might be clear'd from the Scandal. The Governor granted his Request, and at the same time encourag'd the Souldiers with hopes of great Rewards to discover the Mines. They left no Stone unturn'd to find out the Gold, and some of them travell'd several Day's Journey with an Indian who promis'd to discover the Mines, but were only laugh'd at when they return'd, having found nothing but some bright shining Snails. In the mean while Letters were brought the Governor from the City of the Assumption, both from the Governor and Bishop of that Province, both of them owning they could make out nothing certain concerning the Gold of Urvaica. This enrag'd the Governor of Buenos Ayres to see himself impos'd upon, and so honourable an Order abus'd; yet he was perplex'd about the flight of Bonaventure, and the Society wish'd he might be found, and so all doubts taken away. This hapned as they had desir'd, he was taken in the Town of the Japevians, and brought in Irons to the Governor, who asking him in friendly manner to discover the Gold he had so much talk'd of, he deny'd he had ever spoke of any such thing, and stood positively in the Denial. The Governor, to whom he had often told the Story, in a Passion order'd him to be Rack'd, and even there he persisted in his Denial. Nothing being extorted he was Condem'd to Death, but the Fathers interceeding for him he had 200 Lashes given him, and was Banish'd the Province for ever. Not so satisfy'd, the Enemies of the Society sent Letters to the King's Council at Madrid, reviving this Imposture, whereupon one Garabito of the Royal Council of Peru was appointed to examine it again, who having brought the Informers to confess the Forgery, Fin'd some and Banish'd others. Yet Malice

l i i i 2

stop'd

 stop a not here, but the Charge being renew'd in Spain, the King sent D. John de Velasco Governor of Paraguay to examine further into it, with the Title of his Inspector; he repairing to the River Urvaica, and having narrowly sifted the Matter, and Convicted all the Accusers of manifest Forgery, impos'd heavy Fines on them, the Fathers interceding that their Punishment might not be severer. Thus this Slander cast upon the Society was quite expung'd almost 20 Years after it was first cast upon them, and been carry'd so far that all the Fathers who were not Spaniards, had like to have been disgracefully sent out of the Provinces of Parana and Urvaica into Europe; for they had added to the rest of the Fiction, that the Fathers who were not Spaniards, had sent a vast quantity of Gold to the French and Portugueses Enemies to Spain; but the Foundation of the Calumny failing, this superstructure of Course fell to the Ground. Nor did the wicked Practices end here, for the Invention above mention'd failing, the Society was accus'd of dissuading the Converts from paying Tribute to the King, but the same D. John de Velasco clear'd them of this Imputation upon strict inquiry made, and writ honourably to the King in their behalf. The ground of this Accusation, was the Fathers protecting the Indians from being made Slaves to private Persons, the dread whereof was the main thing that obstructed the Conversion of those poor Souls. Besides, the King to encourage those People to imbrace the Faith, had allow'd all that should be Baptiz'd, to be free from paying any Tribute for 20 Years after they were Baptiz'd; and his Majesty well knew that those poor People being continually harass'd by the Mamalucs, and in Arms to defend themselves, could not be expected to pay any Tribute, but ought rather to be supported and Maintain'd. This Reflection was also taken away by the Converts themselves, who when the 20 Years of Grace were expir'd, and they had a little respite from the Mamalucs, freely promis'd to pay the Tribute to the King. Since we have gone so far, we must go through with all the Calumnies rais'd against the Society, and finish this Matter in a few Words. The Enemies of the Society further alledg'd, That the King was at a great Expence in sending Fathers over to Paraguay to no Advantage; which Imputation could not be of any force, where it was visible such a vast Tract of Land had been Converted to the Faith, and reduced under the Dominion of his Catholick Majesty, by their only Labours and Sufferings. This failing it was further whisper'd in the Ears of the Magistrates, that they did not teach the Converts sound Doctrine. To make this out, they urg'd that the Fathers in rendring the Names of God, the Son of God and Mother of God into the Guaranian Language, made use of prophane Words formerly apply'd to their Superstitions. To wipe this off, it was prov'd that the Society made use of the same Words all other Orders had made use of before their coming into those Parts; and that they were the same that had been always us'd in Brasil, between the Language of which Province and the Guaranian, there is great Affinity; and therefore a Synod held at Lima, and approv'd by the Pope, declar'd the Honour of the Society in this Case, as in the others that had been join'd before. The last Accusation, was that the Society disown'd the Consecration of the Bishop of Paraguay, for the reasons mention'd at the beginning of this Section, and therefore not to be repeated in this Place, and this was objected to them as Schismatical, till the Pope declaring, that the Bishop so Consecrated had no Jurisdiction, the Society was clear'd from that Imputation of Shism; but before all these Slanders could be remov'd, the Bishop of Paraguay had great strugglings with the Society, which do not at all belong to this History, and therefore we will proceed to put an end to the little that remains.

Great Disorders were committed this same Year 1644. in the Colony of the Foienfians of the Province of Itatina, the Natives at the Instigation of Nianduabuzuvius, presuming to Mutiny, and openly disobey the Fathers, who offering to reprimand them for their Insolence, were not only abus'd in words, but struck. For Borobebus, Nephew to Nianduabuzuvius, after F. Manno had been ill treated by another, hit him in the Face with a Cudgel; and another wounded F. Arenos on the Head. F. Badia reproving their base Proceedings, Nianduabuzuvius himself gave him very ill Language, declaring, He would transmit those Customs he had receiv'd from his Ancestors to Posterity. Nantabagua another Nephew of Nianduabuzuvius, enrag'd because one of the Fathers had taken away the Rod of his Office as a Punishment for his Offence, interrupted the Sermon in the Church

A Mutiny in the Province of Itatina.

Church, stirring up the People to Revolt, and railing against the Doctrine of the Fathers, as opposite to the Manners and Customs of their Forefathers, prevail'd with all the Audience to forsake the Preacher. From that time the Fathers Commands, the Authority having been thus debas'd, were made no account of; they themselves were scorn'd by all degrees, no honour was given to Religious Things, no Body was left to attend the Fathers even in the Church. The Fathers having in vain try'd fair Words and Threats, finding it necessary to take a harsher Course, artfully drew Niandubuzuvini's Son and two Nephews out of the Town, and had them convey'd to the Town of the Guaporians on the River Orvaica, 200 Leagues distant, that it might not be ealie for them to come back. The Heads being remov'd, the face of Things immediately chang'd. The People flock'd to the Church, and performed all Christian Duties, all Leudness and Barbarous Customs were Bannish'd, and Virtue and Submission succeeded in their place. Many Heathens who were before kept back by Niandubuzuvini's ill Practices, resorted to the Town and embraced the Faith. Many Infidels daily resorted to the Town, which gave hopes of greater Success; but none so much rejoiced the Fathers as some Gentils from the other side of the River Paraguay, where the Fathers had not yet been; who came to acquaint them. That abundance of their Country-men, being expos'd to the continual Incursions of the Guaicureans, were inclin'd to forsake their own Country, and come over into the Lands about that Town. Besides Guairanuna, Nephew to Paraliquin the greatest Man among the Guirapos, coming to the Fathers, and counting to them according to the Custom of the Country, what Nations were on both sides the Paraguay, inflam'd them with a desire of extending the Empire of Christ beyond that River.

Hitherto the Fathers of the Province of Itatina by reason of their small Numbers, the Invasions of the Mamelucs and Troubles among the Converts, had kept themselves within this side the River Paraguay; but having now obtain'd Peace at home, and being increas'd in Numbers, they were desirous to carry the Gospel beyond that River, knowing by Information from many, that the vast Tract which extends an hundred and fifty Leagues between Itatina and Pern, was very full of Indian Villages, where the Christian Faith was not yet profess'd, and where many Towns might be built, if the Society were once admitted. But this was a difficult Province, as being much infested with Sorcerers, and Ayostates, and therefore required a Man of Experience and Resolution. For this Reason F. Laquercius the Provincial, knowing F. Romero to be fit for any such Undertaking, order'd him to the Province of Itatina, and with all speed to pass the River. He being come unto his Province, consulted with the other Fathers and principal Converts, who all resolv'd the attempt ought to be made without delay, and accordingly he set out in the Year 1645, attended by F. Vansurk and some faithful Converts of both Towns; and passing the Paraguay the 22d Day after his setting out, came unto the first Village of the Indians, where he found many, who having before hear'd of the Society, were not ill dispos'd to receive the Faith. He would have gone further in hopes of a more plentiful Harvest, but was held back by his own Company, and the Natives, who affirm'd he would ruin all if he was too hasty. For this Reason he settled with Curapaio, a Cacique of great Fame in the first Villages; and many resorting to him from the neighbouring parts, he marked out the Ground for a Town, built a Chapel under the Invocation of S. Barbara, erected a Cross, and began to declare the first Principles of Religion to the People. Finding the Heathens inclinable to embrace Christianity, he writ to the Provincial, desiring him to send, with all speed, some able Persons to assist him in the Work so happily begun. This done, he sent away all the Converts but six, to their Towns, and F. Vansurk to the City of the Assumption, for necessary Tools to build a Town. It happened at that time, one Guiraguera, a Heathen from some remote part, was come to the same place, on account of Trade, whom F. Romero labour'd to win, and he craftily promised to use his endeavours to reduce his Country People to the New Town; but being a cruel and deceitful Man, he made it his Business when he came thither, to incense them against the Christian Preachers. Many who had fled out of Pern and other parts to live more at liberty, seconded him; and above all, one Aborosenius an Impostor, who being skill'd in Sorcery, assum'd the Title of a Deity:

Teebe.

Attempt of the Fathers beyond Paraguay.

It was easie to perswade one Tucumbains, who was appointed to manage the Design of murdering the Father, and he taking Guiraquera and forty more Assassins with him, set out, as if they were to desire to be baptiz'd. To secure him that he might not escape their Hands, they sent out before to acquaint him with their coming, and that the Design of it was to embrace the Faith. F. Romero was warn'd of the danger, and advised to fly, but he despising that which look'd like Fear, went out to meet them, and having exhorted them to embrace the Opportunity offer'd them of being admitted into the number of the Sons of God, gave them some Presents, and went away to say Mass. Tucumbains thinking no time was to be lost, gave the Signal to the Murderers; one of them gave him three Blows on the Head with his Club, which laid him flat on the Ground. The rest of them murder'd one Fernandez the Father's Companion, as yet only a Novice, and one Gonzalo a Convert; which done, perceiving the Father was still alive, they ript open his Belly, pull'd out his Tongue, cut his Throat, chopt off his Fingers, and thrust them into his Belly, superstitiously believing that would prevent any revenge being taken for the Murder committed. Then they plundered all they found, and whilst they were so imploy'd, the other five Converts fled, and all of them return'd safe home, who gave an Account of what had hapned. When the Murderers were gone, the Natives of the place returning home from their Country Affairs, were extreamly griev'd at this wicked action; and having laid the dead Bodies decently together, Men and Women, as is the Custom of the Country, made dismal Howling in their Turns, like singing in a Choir, and then were silent by fits, which are the funeral Ceremonies; and thus they committed them to the Ground, till seven Months after, those same Heathens put the Bones of the Father, and his Companions into several Coffins, and sent them honourably to the Fathers in the Province of Itatina.

State of the Province:

At this time, that is, the Year 1645, there were in the Province of Paraguay, about 300 Fathers distributed into nine Colleges, and 24 Residences among the Indians. Of an hundred Priests, but few serv'd the Spaniards, being always taken up with the Blacks and Indians, governing the Sodalities of the Spaniards, and teaching in the Schools. Many liv'd altogether among the Indians, and others were at certain times sent out of the Colleges upon Apostolick Missions; for as F. Aquariva the Provincial, foretold, the Province of Paraguay is not conspicuous for many Towns, but that defect is made amends, for by these frequent Excursions to disseminate the Gospel, yet many new Expeditions have been put by and obstructed, by the small number there is of Fathers, and the Invasions of the Mamelucs: This Scarcity of Fathers has been in a great measure caus'd by the false Calumnies before spoken of, cast upon them, which has caused the stopping of many in Europe that were to have been sent over. And to say the truth, there has been great reason in these later times, to hope for a plentiful Spiritual Harvest, were there but Labourers to ply the Work; and the two Provincials F. Lopevicius, and F. Ferrusinus were forward enough to promote it; so that though it has not been possible to build Towns to sociate in, yet has brought many of the scatter'd Indians into the Flock of Christ. The Provinces of Parana and Urvaica now flourish'd under the care of the Fathers; that of Itatina was again pester'd by the Mameluc Robbers; and that of Cachaquina, tho' few Souls were gain'd there, by reason of the Obstinacy of the Natives, was still possess'd by two Residences, in hopes of mollifying those hard Hearts. It would be tedious, and from our purpose to speak the Praises of those many worthy Fathers dispers'd through the Province; yet we cannot but admire the Bounty of the Catholick King, who spares no cost to promote its good, sending over, feeding, maintaining, and defending Preachers to instruct those People, for which the Society in its general Assembly, decreed his Majesty their Thanks, and order'd him to be pray'd for, which is perform'd in a particular manner in Paraguay. And here we will give rest to our Pen, wishing Philip the Great, as a Reward of his Zeal in propagating the Faith, long and happy Reign here, and an everlasting Kingdom hereafter.

This Paragraph was omitted in Page 709, and must be inserted after the first Break in the last Column, which the Reader is desired to take notice of.

Techo.

Francis de Alfaro, the King's Visitor throughout South America, by his Majesty's Order, utterly took away the Abuse of personal Service, setting the Indians at full Liberty, and delivering them from all Oppression. But because many of the Indians of Paraguay had nothing to pay as Tribute, he therefore order'd, that in lieu of it, they shall serve one Month in the Year, but if the Spaniards would make use of them any longer, they should have them as hired Servants, upon their own free will, and paying them their Wages. He enacted other Laws for the common benefit of the Spaniards and Indians, which the King afterwards ratify'd, and continue to this Day in force, saving only that his Majesty allow'd two Months Service instead of the one we said Alfaro had appointed. And to the end the Heathens for the future might not be deterr'd from embracing the Faith, for fear of being seiz'd and put to trouble, the Countries of Parana, the Guaicureans, and Guira, were put under the direction of the Jesuits, upon condition the Indians being brought unto Towns, should not, upon any account, be given to private Men, by way, as they call it, of Encomienda; that is, to be entrusted with, or rather to Lord it over them. The Fathers were order'd to be maintain'd at the King's Cost; and it is remarkable, That Alfaro assigning every one of those that should be so employ'd, the same Allowance that was given to the Curates of the Indians in Pernu, the Provincial F. James Torres oppos'd it, saying the fourth part of that Allowance was enough for religious Men, who were to live sparingly.

God's

God's Power and Providence, Shewed in the Miraculous Preservation and Deliverance
 O F
 EIGHT ENGLISH-MEN, Left by Mischance in GREENLAND,
 A N N O 1630.
 Nine Months and Twelve Days.

With a True Relation of all their Miseries, their Shifts and Hardships they were put to, their Food, &c. Such as neither Heathen nor Christian ever before endured.

With a Description of the chief Places and Rarities of that barren and Cold Country. Faithfully reported by Edward Pellham, one of the Eight Men aforesaid. As also with a Map of Green-Land.

To the Right Worshipful Sir John Merick Knight, Governour of the worshipful Company of Muscovy Merchants: Sir Hugh Hamersly, Knight, and Alderman of the City of London. And to the Worshipful Mr. Alderman Freeman, Captain William Goodler; and to all the rest of the Worshipful Assistants and Adventurers in the said famous Company. Edward Pellham dedicateth both this and his future Labours.

Right Worshipful and most famous Merchants,

THE hard Adventure my poor Self and Fellows underwent in your Worships Service, is a great deal pleasanter for others to Read, than it was for us to Endure. However hard, we have now endured it; and if ever After-ages shall speak of it, (as the World still doth of the Dutch-men's hard Winter in Nova Zembla;) Thus much of the Voyage shall redound to your Honours, that it was done by your Servants. This may also return to our Countrey's good; That if the first inhabiting of a Country by a Prince's Subjects, (which is the King of Spain's best Title to his Indies) doth take possession of it for their Sovereign: Then is Green-land, by a second Right, taken Livery and Seisin of for his Majesty's Use; his Subjects being the first that ever did (and I believe the last that ever will) inhabit there. Many a rich Return may your Worships in general, and the brave Adventurers in particular receive from this and all other places: And may your Servants be ever hereafter warned to take heed by our Harms. God send your Worships long Life, and much Honour, and sufficient Wealth to maintain both. This is the hearty Prayer of your Worships poor Servant,

EDWARD PELLHAM

TO

A Whale is ordinarily about 60 foote longe

When the Whale comes above water & shallop rowes towards him and being within reach of him, the harpiner darts his harping iron at him out, and being fast lance him to death.

stearne of a ship the blubber is cut from the flesh by peeces of 3 or 4 foote long and being raised, is rowed on shore, towards the coppers

They place 2 or 3 coppers on a roe and 1 chopping boat on the one side and the cooking boats on the other to receive 1 syde of 1 copper, the chapt blubber being boyled is taken out of the coppers and put in under barrels or barrowes through which the syde is drawn and water into a cooler in which is full of water but it is con- spired by troughs into buckets or hogsheads

The manner of killing 1 Seamorcow

The manner of killi

TO THE R E A D E R.

Courteous Reader: That God may have the only glory of this our Deliverance, give me leave to look back unto that voyage which the Dutch-men made into Nova Zembla, in the Year 1596 In which time, they having been like our selves, overtaken with the Winter, were there forced to stay it out as we were. Which being an Action so famous all the World over, encouraged me both to publish this of ours, as also now to draw out some Comparisons with them; that so our Deliverance and God's Glory may appear both the more gracious and the greater.

This Nova Zembla stands in the Degree 76. North Latitude: Our wintering place is in 77 Degrees and 45 Minutes, that is, almost two Degrees nearer the North Pole than they were: and so much therefore the colder. The Dutch were furnished with all things necessary both for Life and Health; had no want of any thing: Bread, Beer, and Wine, they had good, and good store. Victuals they had God's plenty; and Apparel both for present wearing, and for shift too: And all this they brought with them in their Ship. We (God knows) wanted all these, Bread, Beer, and Wine we had none. As for Meat, our greatest and chiefest feeding was the Whale Fritters, and those mouldy too; the loathsomest Meat in the World. For our Venison, 'twas hard to find, but a great deal harder to get: And for our third sort of Provision the Bears, 'twas a measuring cist which should be eaten first, We or the Bears, when we first saw one another: And we perceived by them, that they had good hopes to devour us as we to kill them. The Dutch killed Bears, 'tis true: But it was for their Skin, not for their Flesh. The Dutch had a Surgeon in their Company; we none but the great Physician to take care of and cure us. They had the Benefit of Bathing and Purging: We of neither. They had their Ship at hand to besfriend them; we had here perished, had not other Ships fetcht us off. They had Card and Compass, we no direction.

If the Dutch complained therefore of the extremity of the Cold, (as well they might) and that when in Building their House, they (as Carpenters use to do) put the Iron Nail into their Mouths, they there froze, and stuck so fast that they brought off the Skin and forced Blood: How cold, think you were we, that were fain to maintain two Fires to keep our very Mortar from freezing. The Dutch complained, that their Walls were frozen two inches thick on the inside, for all their fire: And if ours were not so, 'twas our pains and industry as first in building. The Dutch-mens Cloaths froze upon their backs, and their Shoes were like Horns upon their feet: But that was their own ignorance; for they had Sea-coals enough with them, if they had known how to use them. If their Drink and Sack were so hard frozen into lumps of Ice, that they were fain to cut it out; how much harder was it for us, that were forced to make hot Irons our best Toasts to warm the Snow withal, for our Mornings Draughts? They used heated Stones and Billers to their Feet and Bodies, to warm them: Which, though an hard shift, yet was it better than we had any.

Lay now all these together, the distance of place, we being many Miles more into the Cold than they: The want both of Meat and Cloaths; and that the House we lived in, we had but three Days respite to build for nine Months to come; and then may the World see, that the Dutch had the better Provisions, and we the abler Bodies. If therefore the Dutch-mens deliverance were worthily accounted a Wonder; ours can amount to little less than a Miracle. The greater therefore our deliverance, the greater must be God's Glory. And that's the Author's purpose in publishing of it. God keep the Readers from the like dangers. So prays he that endured what he here writes of.

EDWARD PELLHAM.

The Names of the Men thus staying in Greenland, for Nine Months and Twelve Days.

Villiam Fakeley, Gunner. Edward Pellham, Gunner's Mate, the Author of this Relation. John Wise, and Robert Goodfellow, Sea-men. Thomas Ayers, Whale-cutter. Henry Bett, Cooper. John Dawes, and Richard Keller, Land-men.

K k k k k

God's

Pellham.

God's Power and Providence in the Preservation of Eight Men in Greenland, Nine Months and Twelve Days.

But we had the Sentence of Death in our selves, that we should not trust in our selves, but in God which raiseth the dead.

Who delivered us from so great a Death, and doth deliver: In whom we trust that he will yet deliver us. 2 Cor. 1. ver. 9, 10.

Greenland is a Country very far Northward, situated in 77 Degrees, and 40 Minutes, that is, within 12 Degrees and 20 Minutes of the very North Pole it self. The Land is wonderful mountainous; the Mountains all the Year long full of Ice and Snow: The Plains in part bare in Summer time. There grows neither Tree nor Herb in it, except Scurvy-grass and Serrat. The Sea is as barren as the Land, affording no Fish but Whales, Sea-horses, Seals, and another small Fish. And besides there is a yearly Fleet of English Ships. We Eight Men therefore being employ'd in the service of the Right Worshipful Company of Muscovy Merchants, in the good Ship called the Salutation of London, were bound for this Greenland afore said, to make a Voyage upon Whales or Sea-horse, for the advantage of the Merchants, and the good of the Common-wealth. We set sayl from London the first Day of May, 1630. and having a faire Gale, we quickly left the fertile Banks of England's pleasant Shoars behind us. After which, setting our comly Sails to this supposed prosperous gale, and ranging through the boisterous Billows of the rugged Seas, by the help and gracious assistance of Almighty God, we safely arrived at our desired Port, in Greenland the Eleventh of June following. Whereupon having moored our Ships, and carried our Carg a-shoar, we, with all expedition, fell to the fitting up of our Shallops, with all things necessary for our intended Voyage. We were in Company three Ships;

Goodler, to stay at the Forland, until the fifteenth of July; with resolution, that if we could not by that time make a Voyage according to our expectation, then, to send one Ship to the Eastward, unto a fishing place some fourscore Leagues from thence; whither at the later end of the Year, the Whales use more frequently to resort. A second of the three Ships was designed for Green-harbor, a place some fifteen Leagues distant to the Southward) there to try her Skill and Fortune, if it were possible there to make a Voyage. The third Ship (which was the same wherein we were) was appointed to stay at the Forland, until the twentieth of August. But the Captain having made a great Voyage at Bell Sownd, dispatches a Shallop towards our Ship, with a Command unto us to come to him at Bell Sownd afore said: His purpose being, both to have us take in some of his Triane-Oyl, as also by joyning our Forces together, to make the Fleet so much the stronger for the defence of the Merchants Goods homeward bound, the Dunkirkers being very strong and rife at Sea in those Days. Upon the eighth day of August (thereupon) leaving the Forland, we directed our Course to the Southward, towards Green-harbor, there to take in twenty of our Men, which had out of our Ship's company been sent into the lesser Ship, for the furtherance of her Voyage.

But the Wind being now contrary, our Ship could no way lye our course. The fifteenth day being calm and clear, and our Ship now in the Offing, some four Leagues from Black-point, and about five from the Maidens-pappi (which is a place famous, both for very good and for great store of of Venison,) our Master sent us Eight Men here named, altogether in a Shallop for the hunting and killing of some Venison for the Ships Provision. We thus leaving the Ship, and having taken a brace of Dogs along with us, and furnish'd our selves with a Snap-hance, two Lances, and a Tinder-box; we directed our course towards the Shoar, where in four Hours we arrived, the Weather being at that time fair and clear, and every way seasonable for the performance of our present Intentions. That Day we laid fourteen tall and nimble Deer along; and being very weary and thoroughly tired, first with rowing, and now with hunting, we fell to eat such Victuals as we had brought along, agreeing to take our rest for that Night, and the next day to make an end of our Hunting, and so fail to return to our Ship again. But the next day, as it pleased God, the Weather falling out something thick, and much Ice in the Offing betwixt the Shoar and the Ship (by reason of a Southerly Wind driving along the Coast) our Ship was forced so far to stand off into the Sea, to be clear of the Ice, that we had quite lost the sight of her: neither could we assure our selves, whether she were inclosed in the drift Ice or not: And the Weather still growing thicker and thicker, we thought it our best course to hunt along the Shoar, and so to go for Green-harbor, there to stay aboard the Ship with the rest of our Men, until our own Ship should come into the Port.

Coasting thus along towards Green-harbor, we kill'd eight Deer more; and so at last having well loaded our Shallop with Venison, we still kept on our course towards Green-harbor: Where arriving upon the seventeenth day, we found (to our great wonderment) that the Ship was departed thence, together with our twenty Men aforesaid. That which increased our admiration was, for that we knew they had not Victuals sufficient aboard, to serve them (by proportion) homewards bound: Which made us again to wonder, what should be the reason of their so sudden departure.

Perceiving our selves thus frustrated of our expectation, and having now but bare three days (according to appointment) to the uttermost expiration of our limited time for our departure out of the Country; we thought it our best course to make all possible speed to get to Bell Sownd, unto our Captain, fearing that a little delay might bring a great deal of danger. For the lightning therefore of our Shallop, that she might make the better way through the Waters, we heaved our Venison over-board, and cast it all into the Sea. Having thus forsaken Green-harbor, with a longing desire to recover Bell Sownd, (from thence distant some sixteen Leagues to the Southward) that Night we were got half way about the point of the Nesse, or point of Land called Low-Nesse: But the darkness or misty fog increasing so fast upon us, that it was impossible for us to get further; even there between two Rocks we coved from the seventeenth day at Night, until the eighteenth day at noon. At which time the weather being somewhat clearer (though very thick still) we left the Nesse behind us, still desirous to recover Bell Sownd: But having never a Compass to direct our course by, nor any of our company that was Pilot sufficient to know the Land when he saw it, we were fain to grabble in the dark (as it were) like a blind Man for his way, and so over-shot Bell point at least ten Leagues to the Southward, towards Horn Sownd.

Some of us in the mean time knowing that it was impossible to be so long a rowing and sailing of eight Leagues (for we did both row and sail) made enquiry, How the Harbor lay in? whereunto there was a ready answer made, That it lay East in. Taking the matter therefore into our better consideration, some of us judged, that it could not possibly be further to the Southward (our reason being, our observation of the Land's rounding away and trending towards the Eastward) and resolved thereupon to row no further on that Course, for the finding of Bell Sownd. And though we were again perswaded by William Fakely our Gunner, (a proper Seaman, though no skilful Mariner, who had been in the Country five or six times before, which none of our Sea-men had been) that it was further to the Southwards: Yet we, trusting better to our own Reasons than unto his Persuasions, again returned towards the Northward, which was our best and directest Course indeed for the finding of Bell Sownd. Steering of which Course, we were now come within two Miles of Bell Point; and the Weather being fair and clear, we presently descryed the tops of the lofty Mountains. William Fakely thereupon looking about him, presently cries out unto us, That we were all this while upon a wrong Course: Upon hearing of which words some of our company (yea the most) were perswaded, to wend about the Boats head the second time, unto the Southward:

ward: Which one action was the main and only cause of our too late repentance, though for mine own part (as it is well known) I never gave consent unto their Counsel.

And thus upon the fatal twentieth day of August, (which was the utmost day of our limited time for staying in the Country) we again returned the quite contrary way, namely to the Southward. Thus utterly uncertain when and where to find the Sownd; a thousand sad imaginations overtook our perplexed Minds, all of us assuredly knowing, that a Million of miseries would of necessity ensue, if we found not the Ships, whereby to save our passage. In this distracted time of our Thoughts, we were now again the second time run as far to the Southward as at the first: and finding by all reason thereupon, how that there was no likelihood at all of finding any such place further to the Southward, we wended the Shallop the second time unto the Northward. William Takely hereupon, being unwilling to condescend unto our Agreement, still perswaded us, that That could not possibly be our Course: But we not trusting any longer unto his unskilful Perswasions, (though all in him was out of good will, and strong conceit of his being in the right) bent our Course to the Northward; and he not consenting to steer any longer, I took the Oar out of his hand to steer the Boat withal. The Weather all this while continued fair and clear, and it pleased God at that very instant of time, to send the Wind Eastwardly: Which advantage we thankfully apprehending, presently set sail. The Wind increased fresh and large, and our Shallop swiftly running, we arrived the one and twentieth day at Bell Point, where we found the Wind right out of the Sownd at East Northeast, so fiercely blowing, that we could not possibly row to Wind-wards; but being forced to take in our Sail, we were fain to betake our selves unto our Oars, by help of which we recovered some two Miles within the Shoar, where we were constrained for that time to Cove, or else to drive to Lee-wards.

Thus finding this to be the very place we had all this while sought for (he now also agreeing thereunto) we forthwith sought out and found an Harbor for our Shallop; and having brought her thereunto, two of our Men were presently dispatched over Land unto the Tent at Bell Sownd, to see if the Ships

we're still there; of which, by reason of the time being expired, and the opportunity of the present fair Wind, we were much afraid. The Tent being distant ten Miles at the least from our Shallop, our Men at their coming thither finding the Ships to be departed out of the Road, and not being certain, whether or not they might be at Bottle Cove, (three Leagues distant on the other side of the Sownd) riding there under the Loom of the Land; again returned unto us with this sad News. The storm of Wind hitherto continuing, about midnight fell stark calm; whereupon we, unwilling to lose our first opportunity, departed towards Bottle Cove, betwixt hope and fear of finding the Ships there; whither coming the two and twentieth, and finding the Ships departed, we having neither Pilot, Plat, nor Compass for our directors to the Eastward, found our selves (God he knoweth) to have little hope of any delivery out of that apparent danger. Our fears increased upon us, even whilst we consulted whether it were safest for us either to go or stay. If go, then thought we upon the dangers in sailing, by reason of much Ice in the way; as also of the difficulty in finding the place, when we should come thereabouts. If we resolved still to remain at Bell Sownd, then we thought that no other thing could be looked for, but a miserable and a pining death, seeing there appeared no possibility of inhabiting there, or to endure so long, so darksome and so bitter a Winter.

And thus were our Thoughts at that time distracted, thus were our Fears increased; nor were they causeless Fears altogether. Well, we knew that neither Christian or Heathen People had ever before inhabited those desolate and untemperate Climates. This also, to increase our Fears, had we certainly heard; how that the Merchants having in former times much desired, and that with proffer of great Rewards for the hazarding of their Lives, and of sufficient Furniture and Provision of all things that might be thought necessary for such an Undertaking, to any that would adventure to winter in those parts; could never yet find any so hardy, as to expose their lives unto so hazardous an undertaking: Yea notwithstanding these proffers had been made both unto Mariners of good experience, and of noble Resolutions, and also unto diverse other bold Spirits; yet had the action of Wintering in those parts, never by any been hitherto hitherto undertaken. This also had we heard, how that the company of Muscovy Merchants, having once procured the Reprieve of some Malefactors, that had here at home been convicted by Law for some heinous Crimes committed; and that both with promise of Pardon for their Faults, and with addition of Rewards also, if so be they would undertake to remain in Green-land but one whole Year, and that every way provided for too, both of Cloaths, Victuals, and all things else, that might any way be needful for their preservation: These poor wretches hearing of this large proffer, and fearing present execution at home, resolved to make tryal of the Adventure. The time of Year being come, and the Ships ready to depart, *these condemned Creatures are imbarcked who after a certain space there arriving, and taking a view of the desolateness of the place; they conceived such a horror and inward fear in their Hearts, as they resolved rather to return for England, to make satisfaction with their lives for their former faults committed, than there to remain, though with assured hope of gaining their pardon: Infomuch as the time of the Year being come, that the Ships were to depart from these barren Shoars, they made known their full intent unto the Captain: who being a pitiful and a merciful Gentleman, would not by force constrain them to stay in that place, which was so contrary to their Minds; but having made his Voyage by the time expired; he again embarked and brought them over with him into England; where, through the intercession and means of the Worshipful Company of Muscovy Merchants, they escaped that death which they had before been condemned unto. The remembrance of these two former stories, as also of a third (more terrible than both the former, for that it was likely to be our own case) more miserably now affrighted us; and that was the lamentable and unmanly ends of nine good and able men, left in the same place heretofore by the self same Master that now left us behind; who all dyed miserably upon the place, being cruelly disfigured after their deaths by the savage Bears and hungry Foxes, which are not only the vilest, but also the only Inhabitants of that comfortless Country: The lamentable ends and miscarriage of which Men, had been enough indeed to have daunted the Spirits of the most noble resolution.*

All these fearful Examples presenting themselves before our Eyes, at this place of Bottle Cove aforesaid, made us, like amazed Men, to stand looking one upon another, all of us, as it were, beholding in the present, the future Calamities both of himself and of his Fellows. And thus, like Men already metamorphosed into the Ice of the Country, and already past both our Senses and Reason; stood we with the Eyes of pity beholding one another.

Nor was it other Mens Examples and Miscarriages and Fears alone, that made us amazed, but it was the consideration of our want of all necessary Provision for the life of Man, that already struck us to the Heart: For we were not only unprovided both of Cloaths to keep us warm, and of Food to prevent the Wrath of cruel Famine: but utterly destitute also we were of a sufficient House, wherein to throwd and shelter our selves from the chilling cold. Thus for a space standing all mute and silent, weighing with our selves the misery we were already fall'n into, and knowing delay in these extremities, to be the Mother of all dangers, we began to conceive Hope even out of the depth of Despair. Rowzing up our benumbed Senses therefore, we now lay our Heads and Counsels together, to bethink our selves of the likeliest course for our preservation in that place; seeing that all hopes of gaining our passage into England, were then quite frustrate. Shaking off therefore all childish and effeminate fears, it pleased God to give us Hearts like Men, to arm our selves with a Resolution to do our best for the resisting of that Monster of Desperation. An Agreement thereupon by a general consent of the whole Company we then entered into, to take the opportunity of the next fair Weather, and go for Green-harbor, to hunt and kill Venison for part of our Winter Provision.

Having thus agreed amongst our selves, the five and twentieth Day of August, the Weather and Wind being both fair, we direct our Course towards Green-harbor, some sixteen Leagues (as I before told you) distant from Bell Sound; and the Wind being fresh and fair, within the space of twelve Hours we there arrived. Upon which place being now landed, the first thing we did, was to make us a Tent with the Sail of our Shallop, pitched up, and spread upon our Oars; a sorry one (God knows) though it were, yet under it we resolved to rest our selves that Night, to refresh our Bodies with such Food as we there had, and the next day to return again unto our hunting. The Weather that Night proving fair and clear, we made our sleep the shorter: (And alas what Men could sleep in such an extremity!) and fitting our selves and Shallop the best we might, to Coles Park we went, a place some two Leagues distant from us, and well known unto Thomas Ayers, that was one of our Company, to be well stored with Venison. Coming a-shoar at which place, though we found not so many Deer as we indeed expected, yet seven we killed the same day, and four Bears to boot; which we also intended to eat.

Pellham.

But the Weather beginning now to overcast, and not likely to continue good for hunting; we that Night returned again unto Green-harbor: where making us a Tent of our Sail and Oars (as is before described) we fell to eat such Meat as God had sent us, and betook our selves to our rest upon it. Having rested our selves a while, and now finding the Weather to clear up, we broke off our sleep for that time, fitting our selves and two Dogs again to go a hunting; leaving William Fakely and John Daves behind us in the Tent at Green-harbor, as our Cooks (for the time) to dress some Meat that we had, for our refreshment at our return.

Departing thus from the Tent, we rowed towards Coles Park; in the way whither, upon the side of a Hill, by the Sea-side, we espied seven Deer feeding, whereupon presently a-shoar we went, and with our Dogs kill'd six of them, after which, the Weather again overcasting, we thought it to little purpose to go any further at that time, but resolved to hunt all along the side of that Hill, and so at Night to return unto our Tent. Going thus along, we killed six Deer more; which we had no sooner done, but it began to blow and rain, and to be very dark; whereupon we hasted towards the Tent, there intending to refresh our selves with Victuals, and with rest for that Night, and the next day to return again unto our Hunting. This purpose of ours was, by the foul Weather the next day hindred; for it fell so Black, so Cold, and so Windy, that we found it no way fitting for our purpose. Lading therefore our own Shallop with Bears and Venison; and another Shallop which we there found haled up, and left the Ships Company, as every Year they use to do: Lading this other Shallop, I say, with the Greaves of the Whales that had been there boiled this present Year, (which we there found in heaps flung upon the ground) we dividing our selves into two equal Companies, that is to say, William Fakely with one Sea-man and two Land-men with him, breaking themselves unto one Shallop; and Edward Pellham with another Sea-man and two Landmen more with him, going into the other Shallop; we all committed our selves unto the Sea, intending with the next fair Weather to go to Bell Sownd unto our Tent; which was the place we set up our Rest upon, to remain at all the Winter.

Towards Bell Sownd therefore we went, with a purpose there to lay up our Store of what Victuals we had already gotten together; and with the next fair Wind to come hither again, to try if it were possible for us there to provide our selves of some more Venison for our Winter Provision.

Having thus laden both our Shallops, appointed our Company, and all ready now for our departure, we were overtaken with the Night, and there forced to stay upon the place. The next day was Sunday, wherefore we thought fit to sanctifie the rest of it, and to stay our selves there until Monday, and to make the best use we could of that good day, taking the best course we could for the serving of God Almighty; although we had not so much as a Book amongst us all, the whole time that we staid in that Country.

The Sabbath day being shut up by the approaching Night, we betook our selves to our Rest: Sleeping until the Sun awakened us by his beginning to shew himself upon the Monday Morning. The day was no sooner peep't, but up we got, fitting our selves and business for our departure. The Weather was fair and clear at the first, but after some four Hours rowing, the Skie began so to overcast, and the Wind to blow so hard, that we could not possibly get to Bell Sownd that Night, but Coved half way, until the next Morning; at which time we recovered Bottle Cove. To which place when we were once come, we found the Wind (then at South-west) to blow so hard, that it was impossible for us to reach Bell Sownd, but were forced to stay at Bottle Cove for that Night. Our Shallops were made fast one to another, with a Rope fastning the head of the one unto the stern of the other; and so casting our Grabnel or Anchor over-board, we left them riding in the Cove.

But

But see now what a mischance, for the tryal of our Patience, and for the making-of us to rely more upon his Providence, than upon any outwards means of our own, God now suffered to befall us: We being now all a-shoar, the South-west Wind blew so hard and right into the Cove, that it made the Sea go high; our Anchor also coming home at the same time, both our Shallops casting along the Shoar, sunk presently in the Sea, wetting by this means our whole Provision, the Weather withal beating some of it out of the Boats, which we found swimming up and down the Shoar. For, coming out of our Tent in the mean time, judge you what a sight this was unto us, to see by mischance, the best part of our Provision (the only hope of our Lives) to be in danger utterly to be lost, or at least spoiled with the Sea-water) for which we had taken such pains, and run such Adventures in the getting. In this our Misery we saw no way but one (and that a very desperate one) namely, to run presently into the high-wrought Sea, getting by that means into our Shallops to save the remainder of our Provisions, ready now to be washt quite away by the Billows. A Halser thereupon we got, which fastning unto our Shallops, we with a Crabb or Capstang, by main force of Hand heaved them out of the Water upon the Shoar. This done, all along the Sea side we go, seeking there and taking up such of our Provisions, as were swum away from our Shallops. Having by this means gleaned up all that could be gotten together, we resolved from thenceforth to let our Boats lie upon the Shoar, till such time as the Weather should prove fair and better; and then to go over unto Bell Sound.

The third of September the Weather proving fair and good, we forthwith launched our Shallops into the Water, and in them we that day got into Bell Sound. Thither so soon as we were come, our first Business was, to take our Provision out of our Shallops into the Tent; our next, to take a particular view of the place, and of the great Tent especially; as being the place of our Habitation for the ensuing Winter. This which we call the Tent, was a kind of House (indeed) built of Timber and Boards very substantially, and covered with Flemish Tyles: By the Men of which Nation it had in the time of their trading thither, been builded. Four score foot long it is, and in breadth fifty. The use of it was for the Coopers, employed for the service of the Company, to work, lodge, and live in, all the while they make Casks for the putting up of the Traue Oyl. Our view being taken, we found the Weather beginning to alter so strangely, and the Nights and Frosts so to grow upon us, that we durst not adventure upon another Hunting Voyage unto Green Harbor; fearing the Sound would be so frozen, that we should never be able to get back to our Tent again. By Land it was (we knew) in vain for us to think of returning: For the Land is so mountainous, that there is no travelling that way.

Things being at this pass with us, we bethought our selves of building another smaller Tent with all expedition: The place must of necessity be within the greater Tent. With our best Wits therefore taking a view of the place, we resolved upon the South side. Taking down another lesser Tent therefore, (built for the Land-men hard by the other, wherein in time of Year they lay whilst they made their Oil) from thence we fetched our Materials. That Tent furnished us with 150 Deal-boards, besides Posts or Stanchcons, and Rafter. From three Chymneys of the Furnacts wherein they used to boyl their Oyls, we brought a thousand Bricks: There also found we three Hogsh-heads of very fine Lime, of which stuff we also fetcht another Hoghead from Bottle Cove, on the other side of the Sound, some three Leagues distant. Mingling this Lime with the Sand of the Sea Shoar, we made very excellent good Morter for the laying of our Bricks: Falling to work whereupon, the Weather was so extream cold, as that we were fain to make two Fires to keep our Morter from freezing. William Fakely and my self undertaking the Masonry, began to raise a Wall of one Brick thickness, against the inner Planks of the side of the Tent. Whilst we were laying of these Bricks, the rest of our Company were otherwise employed every one of them, some in taking them down, others in making of them clean, and in bringing them in Baskets into the Tent: Some in making Morter, and hewing of Boards to build the other side withal; and two others all the while, in flaying of our Venison. And thus having built the two uttermost sides of the Tent with Bricks and Morter, and our Bricks now almost spent, we were enforced to build the other two sides with Boards; and that in this manner. First, we nailed our Deal Boards on one side of the Post or Stanchcon, to the thickness of one foot; and on the other side in like manner; and so Pellham. filling up the hollow place between with Sand, it became so tight and warm, as not the least breath of Air could possibly annoy us: Our Chimney's vent was into the greater Tent, being the breadth of one Deal-board, and four foot long. The length of this our Tent was twenty foot, and the breadth sixteen; the height ten, our Ceiling being Deal Boards five or six times double, the middle of one joining so close to the shut of the other, that no Wind could possibly get between. As for our Door, besides our making it so close as possibly it could shut, we lined it moreover with a Bed that we found lying there, which came over both the opening and the shutting of it. As for Windows, we made none at all, so that our Light we brought in through the greater Tent, by removing two or three Tyles in the Eaves, which Light came to us through the vent of our Chimney. Our next work was, to set up four Cabbins, billeting our selves two and two in a Cabin. Our Beds were the Deers Skins dried, which we found to be extraordinary warm, and a very comfortable kind of Lodging to us in our distress. Our next care then was for firing to dress our Meat withal, and for keeping away the Cold. Examining therefore all the Shallops that had been left a-shoar there by the Ships, we found seven of them very crazy, and not serviceable for the next Year. Those we made hold withal, brake them up and carried them into our House, stowing them over the Beams in manner of a Floor, intending also to stow the rest of our firing over them, so to make the outer Tent the warmer, and to keep withal the Snow from driving through the Tiles into the Tent: Which Snow would otherwise have covered every thing, and have hindered us in coming at what we wanted. When the Weather was now grown cold, and the days short, (or rather no days at all) we made bold to stave some empty Casks that were there left the Year before, to the quantity of one hundred Tun at least. We also made use of some Planks, and of two old Coolers (wherein they cool'd their Oil) and of whatsoever might well be spared, without damnifying of the Voyage the next Year. Thus having got together all the firing that we could possibly make, except we would make spoil of the Shallops and Coolers that were there, which might easily have Overthrown the next Years Voyage, to the great hindrance of the Worshipful Company, whose Servants we being, were every way careful of their Profit. Comparing therefore the small quantity of our Wood, together with the coldness of the Weather, and the length of time that there we were likely to abide; we set about to husband our Stock as thriftily as we could, deviling to try a new conclusion: Our tryal was this. When we rak't up our fire at Night, with a good quantity of Ashes and of Embers, we put into the midst of it a piece of Elm Wood: Where after it had lain sixteen Hours, we at our opening of it found great store of fire upon it, whereupon we made a common practice of it ever after. It never went out in eight Months together or thereabouts.

Having thus provided both our House and Firing; upon the twelfth of September a small quantity of drift Ice, came driving to and fro in the Sound. Early in the Morning therefore we arose, and looking every where abroad, we at last espied two Sea-Horses lying asleep upon a piece of Ice; presently thereupon taking up an old Harping Iron that there lay in the Tent, and fastning a Grapnel Rope unto it, out launch we our Boat to row towards them. Coming something near them, we perceived them to be fast asleep, which my self then steering the Boat, first perceiving, spake to the Rowers to hold still their Oars, for fear of awaking them with the crashing of the Ice, and I skulling the Boat easily along, came so near at length unto them, that the Shallops even toucht one of them. At which instant, William Fakely being ready with his Harping Iron, heav'd it so strongly into the Old one, that he quite disturbed her of her rest: After which she receiving five or six thrusts with our Lances, fell into a sounder sleep of death. Thus having dispatched the Old one, the younger being loath to leave her Dam, continued swimming so long about our Boat, that without our Lances we kill'd her also. Haling them both after this into the Boat, we rowed a-shoar, flayed our Sea-horses, cut them in pieces to roast and eat them. The nineteenth of the same Month we saw other Sea-horses sleeping also in like manner upon several pieces of Ice, but the Weather being cold, they desired not to sleep so much as before, and therefore could we kill but one of them, of which we being right glad, we returned again into our Tent.

The Nights at this time, and the cold Weather increasing so fast upon us, that we were out of all hopes of getting any more Food before the next Spring; our only only hopes were, to kill a Bear now and then, that might by chance wander that way. The next day therefore taking an exact survey of all our Victuals, and finding our proportion too small by half for our time and Company, we agreed among our selves to come to Allowance, that is, to stint our selves to one reasonable Meal a day, and to keep Wednesdays and Fridays Fasting days; excepting from the Frittars or Graves of the Whale (a very boathorn meat) of which we allowed our selves sufficient to suffice our present hunger; and at this Diet we continued some three Months or thereabouts.

Having by this time finished whatever we possibly could invent, for our preservation in that desolate Desert; our Cloath and Shoes also were so worn and torn (all to pieces almost) that we must of necessity invent some new Device for their reparations. Of Roap-yarn therefore we made us Thread, and of Whale-bones Needles to sew our Cloaths withal. The Nights were waxt very long, and by the tenth of October the cold so violent, that the Sea was frozen over; which had been enough to have daunted the most assured Resolutions. At which time our business being over, and nothing now to exercise our Minds upon; our Heads began then to be troubled with a thousand sorts of Imaginations. Then had we leisure (more than enough) to complain our selves of our present and most miserable conditions. Then had we time to bewail our Wives and Children at home; and to imagin what News our unfortunate Mis-carriages must needs be unto them. Then thought we of our Parents also, and what a cutting Corative it would be to them, to hear of the untimely deaths of their Children. Otherwhiles again, we reviv'd our selves with some comfort, that our Friends might take, in hoping that it might please God to preserve us (even in this poor estate) until the next Year. Sometimes did we vary our Grievs, complaining one while of the cruelty of our Master, that would offer to leave us to these distresses; and then presently again fell we, not only to excuse him, but to lament both him and his Company, fearing they had been overtaken by the Ice, and miserably that way perished.

Thus tormented in Mind with our doubts, our Fears and our Grievs; and in our Bodies with Hunger, Colds, and Wants; that hideous Monster of Desperation, began now to present his ugliest shape unto us; he now pursued us, he now laboured to seize upon us. Thus finding our selves in Labyrinth, as it were, of a perpetual Misery, we thought it not best to give too much way unto our Grievs; fearing, they also would most of all have wrought upon our weakness. Our Prayers we now redoubled unto the Almighty, for strength and patience in these our Miseries; and the Lord graciously listned unto us, and granted these our Petitions. By his assistance therefore, we shook off these Thoughts, and cheer'd up our selves again, to use the best means for our preservation.

Now therefore began we to think upon our Venison, and the preserving of that; and how to order our firing in this cold Weather. For fear therefore our firing should fail us at the end of the Year, we thought best to roast every day half a Deer, and to stow it in Hogf-heads. Which we putting now in practice, we forthwith filled three Hogf-heads and an half, leaving so much raw, as would serve to roast every Sabbath day a Quarter; and so for Christmas-day and the like.

This Conclusion being made amongst us; then fell we again to bethink us of our Miseries, both passed and to come; and how, (though if it pleased God to give us Life,) yet should we live as banished Men, not only from our Friends, but from all other Company. Then thought we of the pinching Cold, and of the pining Hunger; these were our Thoughts, this our Discourse to pass away the time withal. But as if all this Misery had been too little, we presently found another encrease of it: For, examining our Provisions once more, we found that all our Frittars of the Whale were almost spoiled with the wet that they had taken; after which by lying so close together, they are now grown mouldy. And our Bear and Venison we perceived again not to mount to such a quantity, as to allow us five Meals a-week; whereupon we were fain to shorten our Stomacks of one Meal more; so that for the space of three Months after that, we for four days in the Week sed upon the unsavory and mouldy Frittars, and the other three we feasted it with Bear and Venison. But as if it were not enough for us to want Meat, we now began to want Light also; all our Meals proved Suppers now, for little Light could we see, even the glorious Sun (as if unwilling to behold our Miseries) masking his lovely Face from us, under the sable Veil of Cole-black Night. Thus from the fourteenth of October till the third of February, we never saw the Sun; nor did he all the time, ever so much as peep above the Horizon. But the Moon we saw at all times, Day and Night (when the Clouds obscured her not) shining as bright as she doth in England. The Skie, 'tis true, is very much troubled with thick and black Weather all the Winter time: So that then, we could not see the Moon, nor could discern what point of the Compass she bore upon us. A kind of Day-light we had indeed, which glimmered some eight Hours a day unto us, in October time I mean: For from thence unto the first of December, even that Light was shortened ten or twelve Minutes a Day constantly; so that from the first of December till the twentieth, there appeared no Light at all; but all was one continued Night. All that we could perceive was, that in a clear Season now and then, there appeared a little glare of white, like some show of day towards the South: But no light at all. And this continued till the first of January, by which time we might perceive the Day a little to increase. All this darksome time, no certainty could we have when it should be Day, or when Night; only my self out of mine own little judgment, kept the Observation of it thus. First bearing in Mind the number of the Epoch, I made my addition by a day supposed, (though not absolutely to be known by reason of the Darknes) by which I judged of the Age of the Moon; and this gave me my rule of the passing of the Time; so that at the coming of the Ships into the Port, I told them the very day of the Month, as directly as they themselves could tell me.

W
Pellham.

At the beginning of this darksome, irksome time, we sought some means of preserving Light amongst us; finding therefore a piece of Sheet-Lead over a Seam of one of the Coolers, that we ript off, and made three Lamps of it, which maintaining with Oil that we found in the Coopers Tent, and Roap-yarn serving us instead of Candle-wicks, we kept them continually burning. And this was a great comfort to us in our extremity. Thus did we our best to preserve our selves, but all this could not secure us: For we in our own Thoughts, accounted our selves but dead Men, and that our Tent was then our darksome Dungeon, and we did but wait our Day of tryal by our Judge, to know whether we should live or die. Our Extremities being so many, made us sometimes in impatient Speeches to break forth against the Causers of our Miseries: But then again, our Consciences telling us of our own evil deservings; we took it either for a Punishment upon us for our former wicked Lives, or else for an Example of God's Mercy in our wonderful Deliverance. Humbling our selves therefore under the mighty Hand of God, we cast down our selves before him in Prayer, two or three times a Day, which course we constantly held all the time of our Misery.

The New Year now begun, as the Days began to lengthen, so the Cold began to strengthen: Which Cold came at last to that extremity, that it would raise Blisters in our flesh, as if we had been burnt with fire: And if we toucht Iron at any time, it would stick to our Fingers like Birdlime. Sometimes if we went but out a-doors, to fetch in a little Water, the Cold would nip us in such sort, that it made us as sore as if we had been beaten in some cruel manner. All the first part of the Winter, we found Water under the Ice, that lay upon the Bache on the Sea-shore. Which Water issued out of an high Bay or Cliff of Ice, and ran into the hollow of the Bache, there remaining with a thick Ice over it: Which Ice, we at one certain place daily digging through with Pick-axes, took so much Water as served for our drinking.

This continued with us until the tenth of January; and then we were fain to make shift with Snow-water, which we melted by putting hot Irons into it. And this was our Drink until the twentieth of May following.

By the last of January, were the Days grown to some seven or eight Hours long; and then we again took another view of our Victuals; which we now found to grow so short, that it could no way last us above six Weeks longer. And this bred a further fear of Famine amongst us. But our recourse was in this, as in other our extremities, unto Almighty God, who had helps we knew, though we saw no hopes. And thus we spent our time until the Third of February. This proved a marvellous cold day, yet a fair and clear one: About the middle whereof, all Clouds now quite dispersed, and Night's sable Curtain drawn; Aurora with her golden Face, smiled once again upon us, at her rising out of her Bed: For now the glorious Sun with his glittering Beams, began to guild the highest Tops of the lofty Mountains. The brightness of the Sun, and the Whiteness of the Snow, both together was such, as that it was able to have revived even a dying Spirit. But to make a new Addition to our new Joy, we might perceive two Bears, (a the one with her Cubb) now coming towards our Tent, whereupon we straight arming ourselves with our Lances, issued out of the Tent to await her coming. She soon cast her greedy Eyes upon us; and with full hope of devouring us, she made the more haste unto us; but with our hearty Lances we gave her such a welcome, as that she fell down upon the Ground, tumbling up and down, and biting the very Snow for anger. Her Cubb seeing this, by light escaped us. The Weather now was so cold, that longer we were not able to stay abroad: retiring therefore into our Tent, we first warmed our selves; and then out again to draw the dead Bear in unto us. We flayed her, cut her into pieces of a Stone weight or thereabouts, which served us for our Dinners. And upon this Bear we fed some twenty Days, for she was very good flesh, and better than our Venison. This only mischance we had with her, that upon the eating of her Liver, our very Skins peeled off: For my own part, I being sick before, by eating of that Liver, though I lost my Skin, yet recovered I my health upon it. She being spent, either we must seek some other Meat, or else fall aboard with our roast Venison in the Cask, which we were very loath to do for fear of famishing, if so be that should be thus spent before the Fleet came out of England. Amidst these our Fears, it pleased God to send diverse Bears into our Tent, some forty at least as we accounted. Of which number we killed seven: That is to say, the second of March one; the fourth another; and the tenth a wonderful great Bear, six Foot high at least. All which we flayed and roasted upon Wooden Spitts, (having no better Kitchen-furniture than that, and a Fry-pan, which we found in the Tent.) They were as good savoury Meat as any Beef could be. Having thus gotten good store of such Food, we kept not our selves now to such straight Allowance as before, but eat frequently two or three Meals a-day, which began to increase strength and ability of Body in us.

By this, the chearful Days so fast increased, that the several sorts of Fowls, which had all the Winter-time avoided those Quarters, began now again to resort thither, unto their Summer-abiding. The sixteenth of March, one of our two Mastive Dogs went out of the Tent from us in the Morning; but from that day to this he never more returned to us, nor could we ever hear what was become of him. The Fowls that I before spake of, constantly use every Spring time to resort unto that Coast, being used to breed there most abundantly. Their Food is a certain kind of small Fishes. Yearly upon the abundant coming of these Fowls, the Foxes which had all this Winter kept their Burrows under the Rocks, began now to come abroad, and seek for their livings. For them we set up three Traps like Rat-trap, and baited them with the Skins of these Fowls, which we had found upon the Snow, they falling there in their flight from the Hill whereupon they bred, towards the Sea. For this Fowl being about the bigness of a Duck, hath her Legs placed so close unto her Rump, as that when they alight once upon the Land, they are very hardly, (if ever) able to get up again, by reason of the misplacing of their Legs, and the weight of their Bodies; but being in the Water, they raise themselves with their Pinions well enough. After we had made these Traps, and set them apart one from another in the Snow, we caught sixty Foxes in them: all which we roasted, and found very good meat of them. Then took we a Bears Skin, and laying the fleshy side upward, we made Springs of Whalebone, wherewith we caught about 60 of those Fowls, about the bigness of a Pigeon.

Thus continued we until the first of May, and the Weather then growing warm, we were now pretty able to go abroad to seek for more Provision. Every day therefore abroad we went; but nothing could we encounter withal, until the 24th of May; when espying a Buck, we thought to have kill'd him with our Dogs, but he was grown so fat and lazy, that he could not put down the Deer. Seeking further off therefore, we found abundance of Willocks Eggs, (which is a Fowl about the bigness

Pellham: nefs of a Duck) of which Eggs, though there were great store, yet we being but two of us together, brought but thirty of them to the Tent that day; thinking the next day to fetch a Thousand more of them; but the day proved so cold, with so much Easterly wind, that we could not stir out of our Tent.

Staying at home therefore upon the 25th of May, we for that day omitted our ordinary custom. Our order of late (since the fair Weather) was every day, or every second day, to go up to the top of a Mountain, to spy if we could discern the Water in the Sea, which until the day before we had not seen. At which time a storm of Wind coming out of the Sea, brake the main Ice within the Somnd: After which the Wind coming Easterly, carried all the Ice into the Sea, and cleared the Somnd a great way, although not near the Shoar at first, seeing the clear Water came not near our Tent by three Miles at least.

This 25th of May therefore, we all day staying in the Tent, there came two Ships of Hull into the Somnd, who knowing that there had been Men left there the year before; the Master (full of desire to know whether we were alive or dead) man'd out a Shallop from the Ship, with order to row as far up the Somnd as they could, and then to hale up their Shallop, and travel over Land upon the Snow unto the Tent. These Men at their coming ashore, found the Shallop which we had haled from our Tent into the Water, with a purpose to go seek some Sea-horses the next fair Weather: The Shallop being then already fitted with all necessaries for that Enterprize. This Sight brought them into a quandary; and though this Encounter made them hope, yet their Admiration made them doubt, that it was not possible for us still to remain alive. Taking therefore our Lances out of the Boat, toward the Tent they come, we never so much as perceiving of them; for we were all gathered together, now about to go to Prayers in the inner Tent, only Thomas Ayers was not yet come in to us out of the greater Tent. The Hull Men now coming near our Tent, haled ye with the usual word of the Sea, crying Hey, he answered again with Ho, which sudden answer almost amazed them all, causing them to stand still, half afraid at the matter. But we, within hearing of them, joyfully came out of the Tent, all black as we were with the Smoak, and with our Cloaths all tatter'd with wearing. This uncouth sight made them further amazed at us; but perceiving us to be the very Men left there all the Year, with joyful Hearts embracing us, and we them again, they came with us into our Tent. Coming thus in to us, we shewed them the courtesie of the House, and gave them such Victuals as we had, which was Venison roasted four Months before, and a Cup of cold Water, which for novelty sake they kindly accepted of us.

Then fell we to ask them what News? And of the state of the Land at home? And when the London Fleet would come? To all which they returned us the best Answers they could. Agreeing then to leave the Tent, with them we went to their Shallop, and so aboard the Ship, where we were welcomed after the heartiest and kindest English manner; and there we stayed our selves until the coming of the London Fleet, which we much longed for, hoping by them to hear from our Friends in England. We were told that they would be there the next day, but it was full three days ere they came, which seemed to us as tedious a three days as any we had yet endured, so much we now desired to hear from our Friends, our Wives and Children.

The 28th of May the London Fleet came into the Port to our great comfort. Aboard the Admiral we went, unto the right noble Captain, Captain William Goodler, who is worthy to be honoured by all Sea-men for his Courtesy and Bounty. This is the Gentleman that is every Year Chief Commander of this Fleet; and right worthy he is so to be, being a very Wise-man, and an expert Mariner as most be in England, none dispraised. Unto this Gentleman right welcome we were, and joyfully by him received; he giving order, That we should have any thing that was in the Ship, that might do us good and increase our strength; of his own charges giving us Apparel also, to the value of twenty Pounds worth.

Thus, after fourteen days of Refreshment, we grew perfectly well all of us; whereupon the noble Captain sent William Fakely, and John Wise, (Mason's own Apprentice) and Thomas Ayers the Whale-cutter, with Robert Goodfellow, unto Master Mason's Ship, according as themselves desired. But thinking there to be as kindly welcomed, as the lost Prodigal; these poor Men after their enduring of so much misery, which through his means partly they had undergone: No sooner came they aboard his Ship, but he most unkindly call'd them Runaways, with other harsh and unchristian Terms, far enough from the civility of an honest Man. Noble Captain Goodler understanding all these passages, was right sorry for them, resolving to send for them again, but that the Weather proved so bad and uncertain. I for mine own part, remained with the Captain still at Bottle Cove, according to mine own desire: as for the rest of us that staid with him, he prefer'd the Land-men to row in the Shallops for the killing of the Whales; freeing them thereby from their toylsome labour ~~and~~ bettering their Means besides. And all these Favours did this worthy Gentleman for us.
to

Thus were we well contented now to stay there till the twentieth of August, hoping then to return into our native Country; which day of departure being come, and we embarked, with joyful Hearts we set sail through the foaming Ocean; and tho' cross'd sometimes with contrary Winds homeward bound, yet our ~~proper~~ Ships came at last safely to an Anchor in the River of Thames, to our great Joy and Comfort, and the Merchants Benefit. And thus, by the Blessing of God, came we all eight of us well home, safe and sound: Where the Worshipful Company our Masters, the Muscovy Merchants, have since dealt wonderfully well by us. For all which most merciful Preservation, and most wonderfully powerful Deliverance, all Honour, Praise, and Glory be unto the great God, the sole Author of it. He grant us to make the right use of it. Amen.

Pelljam.

A Journey of John Baptist Merin Phil. & Med. Doct. to the Mines of Hungary; with an Account of his Observations made there, in relation to them, and subterraneous Passages in general.

Merin.

Pres-burgh the Capital City of Hungary.

AN extraordinary desire of Learning, and a Curiosity of seeing Things never known to me before, having made me to undertake a Journey into Flanders, Germany, Bohemia, and Austria, in the Year 1615. I staid a few days at Vienna, having the opportunity of conversing with several Learned Men in those parts; they told me such miraculous things of the Mines of Hungary and Transylvania, (the most famous in Europe) that I was seized with a most ardent desire of taking a full view of them, maugre all the Dangers that were represented to me, in so troublesome a Journey; because I continually reflected upon the Words of Paracelsus, That Mines are the best Schools of Philosophers. With this Resolution I took Passage in a Boat that was carrying some Troops to Polineum: (Presburgh) the chief City of Hungary, left to the Christians upon the Danube, about Ten Leagues distant from Vienna, and as many from the Turkish Territories. It is to be observed, that it is very dangerous travelling in Hungary, especially for Strangers, who being easily distinguish'd from the Hungarians by their Habits, are but little beloved by them; by reason they are in the Turkish Wars frequently afflicted with Foreign Soldiers, which makes the Natives, for the most part, live in Wooden Hutts, or Cottages of Straw, with Household-stuff in proportion; most of the Cities of Hungary have no other Houses, the Inhabitants leading a most miserable Life: Yet the Nobility of Hungary are great Admirers of Strangers, especially the French, by reason of their Bravery, they having given frequent Proofs of it against the Turks, with good Success. But above all, it is most dangerous travelling into the Mountains, (or Upper-Hungary) which contain the Gold, Silver and Copper Mines, about 30 Leagues distant from Presburgh. For all the Summer long, whilst the Trees are covered with Leaves, and consequently afford shelter for Robbers, without being obliged to make any Fires (as they must in the Winter) these Vermin haunt the Woods in whole Troops, in hopes of lighting upon some of the Gold and Silver that is carried from the Mines to the Imperial Mint at Cremnitz, when they are sure to kill all they meet with, upon such an occasion.

After a stay of Four Days at Presburgh, I bought my self a Horse, in order to go along with 4 Waggon bound for the Upper Mines at Newhensel, leaving the greatest part of my ready Money with Mr. Paul Lenich, a Physician at Presburgh, to serve me upon any emergency, in case I should be robbed by the way, and escape with Life.

Thus prepared, I came safely to Newhensel, seated upon the River Gran, where having delivered my Letters of recommendation from Dr. Mussinger, one of the Emperor's Privy Counsellors, to the most Noble Matthias Bloenstein, the only Roman Catholick in those parts, and Overseer of the Mines; I was very kindly received by that honourable Person, which made me tarry there for some Weeks; during which time, I took a full view of the Copper Mines (the largest and richest in all Hungary) and all their subterraneous Passages: I was told here, that Paracelsus dwelt in this Place for a considerable time; built a Laboratory here, wherein he made several Experiments upon Vitriol, Antimony, Cinnabar, Copper, Silver and Gold; and being just upon his Departure

Paracelsus lived near the Mines in Hungary

ture for Transylvania, presented his Host (who was a Goldsmith) with a piece of Copper trans-muted into Silver; whence 'tis that an Original Picture of Paracelsus is shew'd to Strangers to this Day, in the same House.

Having provided himself here with an Interpreter, a Learned and Honest Chymist, we travelled more Northward to Voistau; by the way we saw divers Rivulets which carried some Gold-dust along with their Currents; my Interpreter also shew'd me several Hills, whither, as he said, many Strangers, but especially Italians and Poles, come every Year privately to gather Rubies, and Granate-stones, which done, they stop up secretly the Entrance of the Mine, and make the best shift they can to get off, to avoid the danger of being surpriz'd by the way, by divers Troops of Straglers, who come that way upon the same Errand, and commonly kill one another without mercy.

After two days Journey, we came safely to Voistau, where I lodged at the House of a certain Noble Hungarian, who was the Proprietor of these Mines; the Gold whereof is valued to the fineness of 22 Carats; and containing not the least mixture of any other Metal, it is esteemed the richest and purest Gold Mine in all Hungary. After some stay there, which I spent for the most part, in viewing the Mines; being forewarned by an honest Inhabitant, that a company of Rogues intended to way-lay me on the top of a certain Hill, called the Devil's Wedding, I returned immediately towards Newbenfel; where being provided with a Convoy of Ten Soldiers (for fear of the Robbers) we continued our Journey to the City of Schemnitz, partly to view the Mines there, and to pay a Visit to Dr. John Ruland, Phylician in ordinary of that City, and Son to the famous Martin Ruland. Where I met with a most generous reception from the most Noble Hudalric Reitter, Governour of these Mines, who gave orders to shew me these Mines, which in 1612, had been visited by my old Friend Dr. John Beguin: This is a rich Silver Mine, mixt with some small quantity of Gold, but contains no other Metal.

At my departure, being provided with recommendatory Letters from the Governour of the Mines, and a Guard of Soldiers, I pursued my Journey to Cremnitz, a City famous for the adjacent Gold Mines, and its enjoying the Prerogative of the Imperial Mint; where a vast quantity of the Hungarian Gold and Silver is coin'd yearly: I was most kindly entertain'd here for whole five Months, by the Noble George Fleish of Lerchenbergh, Governour of these Mines, and his beloved Spouse Ann of Rettingerin; and also by their special care conducted into all the Descents of the Mines, where I had sufficient leisure to take a full view, and make exact Observations of all the Engines both within and without the Mines; Water-Channels, and Offices, where they prepare and separate the Metals.

The first Day of December, (at the beginning of a severe Winter, which continued for three Months after) I left Cremnitz, in order to my return into France; sorely against the Will of my generous Benefactors, whose Names I could not pass by in silence without Ingratitude, notwithstanding the difference of Religion. I return'd to Paris in March 1616. After a very difficult and tedious Journey, being forced to travel a great way about through Switzerland, and thence by the way of Lyons, by reason of the Armies that were then in motion in Lorrain.

Thus much of our Journey, we will now proceed to give you a short Account of the Mines and other subterraneous places.

Those that resolve to enter the Mines, ought to pull off their own Cloaths, and instead thereof, make use of the Miners' Habits, made of some very coarse stuff. Thus prepar'd, (like Hercules) they shew you two Ways or Passages, one shorter and easier, the other more difficult and much longer; the first, (called by them the Well) is form'd like a Chimney, of about 6 Foot long, and two broad, dug with incredible pains and patience to the bottom of the Mine, and supported with square large Fir-trees, closely joy-ned to one another, which grow hereabouts in vast plenty.

Through this passage it is they draw up the Oar; and in some Mines where they are troubled with much Water, they bring it up in vast quantities of Water by the help of Ropes and Wheels, managed either by Horses or Water-Mills. This Water is drawn up in Baggs made of Oxes Hides, because any other Substance would not be able to endure or resist the corrosive Exhalations of the Mines. Through the same Passage the Miners, (3 or 4 in Company) are often let down with their Merin!

Two different ways into the Mines.

The first Passage.

lighted

Merin. lighted Lamps, sitting with their Buttocks in a Leather Seat, fastened with an Iron Hook to the top: A surprizing Spectacle, considering that this Passage is always fill'd with hot and stinking Vapours, without intermission, which are often so strong, that they suffocate: The Light of the Lamps, tho' the Cotton is generally twisted together an Inch thick; the greatest danger is then, perhaps part of the Leather-Seat, and of the Rope or the Hook that holds it together, being corroded by the sharp Vapours, and press'd by the weight, sometimes tumbles these wretched Lutherans (like Corah, Dathan and Ahiram, about 300 or 400 Fathoms deep) into an infernal Pit, and so puts an end to their miserable days.

Most of the Inhabitants near the Mines, and the Miners are Lutherans.

The second Passage.

As to this, that as they descend, there rises at the same time, a Bag full of Oar upwards, which if it happen to fall by some accident or other (as it often does) they are crush'd to pieces by their weight. The second Passage is made under Ground like a Mine, and therefore both longer and more difficult; cut like an Alley out of the Rocks, through which you must pass sometimes by Steps, sometimes by Ladders, sometimes in an upright posture, sometimes almost crawling upon all four, with a great deal of pain, till you come to the bottom of the Mine. I remember I spent near three or four Hours in thus visiting the Mines of Newhensel. This way, besides that it is very troublesome, and not without some danger; it often happening, that either the under Supporters placed betwixt the Rocks or the Steps, being putrify'd by the corroding Vapours, happen to give way, the Persons within the Passage are buried under the Earth.

The Exhalations putrify the Wood in the Mines.

Hence it is, that the Overseers or Governours of the Imperial Mines, are obliged to visit in person 3 or 4 times a Year, all the Passages in these Mines to take a view of the Veins, Water-courses, the Passages and their Supporters, with all other things thereunto belonging, and to take effectual care of them. These Overseers always descend through this last Passage, and so do most of the Miners; thus I have seen above 150 of them descend every 4th Hour, with their Lamps in the Upper Mines of Newhensel.

Besides this, both these Passages have some other use, viz. the free inspiration and expiration of the Air, without which, the Miners must needs be choak'd in a little time.

The Air is convey'd through the last into the several places where the are at work, by the help of several wooden Funnels and Windows, to be shut or opened as occasion requires; which passing from thence forcibly through many Holes into the first Passage, is forced up like as through a Chimney into the open Air; these venomous Exhalations (more rarity'd than the Air) consequently cause there both a continual ventilation and swift exhalation of the noxious Vapours; thence it is, that at the entrance of this Passage, the Air is excessive hot by its mixture with the ascending Vapours, tho' just before it has passed through the coldest Region of the Mines.

The Air forces the Exhalations out of the Mine

This they have been taught by necessity and experience, founded upon very good reason, viz. To force out of the Air, the venomous Antimonial, Mercurial, Saline and Arsenical Spirits, mixed with the Vapours, so pernicious to the Brains, Heart and Lungs: Hence it is, that the Miners, after having penetrated into the first Region of the Earth, are sensible of the cool Air, (for they always work naked) and breath freely enough.

However notwithstanding all these Contrivances, they are not absolutely delivered of the ill effects of these Exhalations, tho' the same are in some measure mitigated, it being a great rarity to see one of these Miners come to the age of fifty, most of them either dying very young, or soon after they come to a manly age; and commonly by a Consumption, their Lungs being by degrees corroded by the acrimonious Particles of these Exhalations. This is the reason why they cannot stay above four Hours at a time in the Mines, but must be ventilated by the fresh Air to recover themselves; it being certain, that were the free passage of the fresh Air stopped for one quarter of an Hour in the deep Mines, not one of the Workmen would escape with Life; which I speak upon the credit of the head Managers of the Mines, who, by their frequent Experience, are the surest Judges in the case. Hence it is, that these Miners marry their Children at fifteen years of Age, to furnish a constant supply of Work-men; and it is almost incredible, to believe how these young People multiply, of which I made a particular Observation in the Copper Mines of Newhensel, where I saw above 50 such young Husbands.

Dangerous Vapours in the Mines.

The external Air necessary for the preservation of the Miners.

The Miners short liv'd.

It being left to my choice, which of the two ways I would chuse; I did not care to pitch upon the first, both by reason of its vast perpendicular descent, and because there was nothing to be seen in that Passage from the top to the bottom but Fir-trees that supported it; but chusing the last, went in the Company of 4 or 5 Miners, provided with Lamps, Torches, and a good Bottle of strong Liquor, through the second Passage to the bottom of the Mines.

But not to detain you with a long Narration of all the particular Mines I had occasion to see; I will content myself to give you an account only of the Gold Mines of Cremnitz, (being deeper than the rest) into which I descended in July, in the hottest and driest Season: And tho' most of the deep Mines are of the same contrivance, or very near the same, yet will I not pass by in silence, that ever I met with anything worth taking notice of in the other Mines.

At the first entrance into the last of the two Passages, you find it not hot, (as you do in the first) but rather cold, of which we were sufficiently sensible, notwithstanding we passed through divers streight Passages; having no other Cloaths but such as the Miners usually wear, about us, we were the more sensible of the Cold, as we came to enter into a moist and clayish place, impregnated with a vitriolate Spring, which the Miners recommended to me as very salubrious, especially in Agues, a thing likely enough to be true, considering it belongs to a Gold Oar; I found the Water very cool upon the Tongue, and somewhat astringent: The Spring does not rise up to the surface of the Earth. Thence we came into the Concavities, where the Miners were at work, where they shew'd us how the Vein of Oar did grow betwixt two Tables, as they call it. Descending still till we came to 80 Fathoms deep, we found it pretty warm, and the Heat increasing still as we went lower and lower; the first time I went down into the Mines, I was both surprized and rejoiced at this alteration of Cold into Heat, which made me ask the head Miner, whence this Heat proceeded? He replied, from the inferior Regions, which are always hot: I ask'd him further, whether it was the same in all Mines? he answer'd, it was so, at least in all the Mines of a considerable depth; where, after you have passed through the cold Region, you come to the hot one at a certain depth; and which way soever you dig after that, you are never sensible more of the least cold, but only of heat; this putting me in mind of the Central heat, sometimes mentioned by the Chymical Authors. I ask'd him further, whether the nearer they came to the Center of the Earth, they found the more heat? he answer'd, That they had never observed any thing like it, but only when now and then they happened to light upon a Vein of some very hot Mineral. He added, That at certain Seasons of the Year, as in Winter and Summer, they found the heat increase, but that did not depend on their depth, since the same was observable in all Mines; and all the head Miners that ever I asked upon this account, agreeing in the same Answer, this gave me sufficient occasion to meditate upon the matter, before I could find out the true reason of this heat, which the Miners themselves, according to their own Confession, were ignorant of.

Vol. IV.

But to proceed further: As we went deeper and deeper, finding the heat still encrease, beyond whatever I had observed in any other Mine before; I asked the head Miner the reason, who told me, that a vitriolate Vein underneath us, was the occasion of this sudden encrease of heat; and to make good his Words, he carried us somewhat lower, into a large Concavity, surrounded on all sides with a green Vitriol, where the heat was so intense, and the Vapours so sharp, that I was ready to faint with sweating, and my Tongue and Mouth seem'd to be all blistered; which made me wonder how it was possible for the Miners to work here. If you ask me whether this Vitriol is the best? I answer yes, for tho' the Hungarian Mines produce also a Blew Vitriol, which is likewise very good, yet the Green found in the Gold Mines, exceeds the other; and it is great pity that neither of them no more than the most excellent Hungarian Antimony, found in these Gold Mines, is transported into Foreign parts.

Passing forward we found on the sides of the Passage beyond this Concavity a certain Olerous substance, whereof I scraped off about half a Pound with my Fingers, and found it, as I came to the first Region in my return, to grow hard and dry in the Cold; and as it was not transparent, I judge it both by its Colour and Substance to be rather

Merin.

the comes the extraordinary be-the Mines

Two sorts of Vitriol Green and Blew.

The Hungarian An-timony the best.

M m m m m

Merin. ther a Sulphur than a Vitriol. Such like Veins of Vitriol are sometimes to be met with in the first Region of the Mountains, as well as those of Sulphur, and even there always produce a certain degree of heat.

Having afterwards taken a good draught out of our Mines of Plate, we pass'd through several Passages and Concavities, which had afforded a considerable quantity of Gold-Oar for many Ages past; the head Miner told us, That where-ever it happens that a rich Vein of Gold or Silver is stop't (as it often is) by certain hard Rocks (whether they are only interrupted or quite lost they distinguish by certain Signs) they make use of a certain Mathematical Instrument; by which means, and the consulting of certain Tables of Inclinations they judge unto what side of the Mine the Vein runs, and consequently which way they must trace it; an Art not to be despised by the Curious: I afterwards got sight of such an Instrument, made of Brass, divided into certain Circles, with divers Needles touch'd by the Magnet, like those in the Sea Compass.

A particular Instrument of the Miners.

Advancing still deeper and deeper, we heard the Miners at Work with their Hammers and Pickaxes, and coming soon after to them, we could not without a great deal of Compassion look upon the Misery of these poor Subterraneous Wretches, almost naked, working without intermission among the hard Rocks, which they are sometimes forc'd to render tolerably pliable by strong Fires, though the Fire in these Subterraneous Places never breaks out into a Flame, as it does upon the Surface of the Earth. We ask'd the poor Labourers how they did in a place so much infected with the Mineral Spirits and Exhalations; they answer'd, They did pretty well at present, but that when instead of a serene Air, the Weather was going to change into cloudy and tempestuous Weather, they were much afflicted with more and grosser Exhalations, arising from the inferior parts, which mixing with the Air, did very much affect their Lungs, and stilled the light of their Lamps. Nay, would oftentimes quite extinguish them; so that they were certainly the first and truest Prophets of the imminent change of the Weather. A thing well worth Observation, which seems to agree with what has been asserted by us in another place, viz. That the Vapours which produce the thick Clouds, and smart showers of Rains, are not generated in the Superiour Region of the Earth; but arise much deeper. And as these Vapours do not ascend in such quantities, nor at all times, but only at certain intervals; it is reasonable to conjecture, that these extraordinary productions of the Vapours, descend in the various Positions and Aspects of the Stars; and that therefore, the Antients were not in the wrong, when they left to us certain Rules to judge of the alterations of the Weather by the influence of the Planets.

The Mines the best Prophets of Weather.

Some reason for Astrology.

I ask'd them further, whether, whilst they are at work in these subterraneous solitary places, they did not now and then see some Apparitions of Spirits or Demons: One of the Miners answered, that he had seen sometimes such like Demons in the shape of little Negro Boys, but that, besides the first fright and a little prattling to the Miners, they never did them the least harm, tho' sometimes they would extinguish their Lamps.

Subterraneous Demons.

I ask'd them at last, what it was they most fear'd in the Mines? They reply'd an Earthquake; for, said they, Tho' the Mines, by reason of their openings upwards, are not easily subject to these convulsive Motions, yet in case the neighbouring Earth be shaken by an Earthquake, and the same be in the least communicated to the Mines, they must of necessity totally overthrow them, by reason of their many Concavities, and bring all that is in it under the Ruins.

This Mine is, of all the deep Mines that ever I saw, the freest from Waters, for some of them are much pestred with them; as for Instance those of Schemnitz, which being full of Springs in the first Region, the Water from thence distills to the inferiour Parts, and there gathering into Pools, is not without great Labour and Expence carry'd from thence, partly by means of Bags made of the Hides of Oxen, and partly by long Wooden Pipes of Fir-trees, a great number of Men and Horses being employed Day and Night, without Light, in drawing of it up: These poor Wretches are so hardly put to it with continual drawing, that in case the head Miner finds them, by the increase of the Waters, to have been negligent in their Duty, they are miserably beaten, till they redouble their Labour, Subterraneous Waters very troublesome to Mines.

Labour, to make an amends for what they have lost before.

Among these poor Wretches I found two young Polanders of very good extraction working stark naked; seeing these unfortunate Creatures in so much want in the midst of Gold and Silver Mines, and fit Objects of our Charity, I gave them something at their Request; For, tho' they are obliged every four Hours either to ascend from, or descend into the Mines, they have no more than thirty or forty Hungarians, i. e. twelve or fifteen French Sous allowance per Week; a poor Salary indeed; and if they are discovered to embezzel the least thing belonging to the Mines, they are sure to meet most severe Punishment.

Among other things, I ask'd the head Miner of the Schemnitz Work, whether in digging in the Mines they did not sometimes meet with some Rivulets, Pools or Collections of Waters? He told me, that hitherto they had met with none in the Hungarian Veins, but that he believed they were now and then to be seen in other Mines. He added that the Springs arising so frequently on the surface of the Mountains, were evident demonstrations of their having their Sources in the subterraneous Passages, to be like, in my opinion, the same Rivulets we see above Ground, as are to be met with in the great Concavities of the high Mountains; to wit, abundance of small Rivulets and Springs, gathered by the continual droppings of Water, that break out into several places, and meeting in the Subterraneous Channels, made by Nature itself from the beginning, or opened by the force of the Waters, produce those Sources of Rivers we see above Ground: Or perhaps these Waters being percolated thro' the porous parts of the Earth, at last by the gathering of many small Channels, turn into a considerable River.

It is by this means, I suppose, that the large and deep Subterraneous River, which furnishes the famous Well of the Castle of Charleville with Water, after it has run for a considerable time with a swift Current very deep underneath the hollow secrets towards the West, turns at last into a considerable River, tho' it is unknown to this Day where these Waters discharge themselves at last: Perhaps these Waters, as well as those of the Sea and some Rivers, may be swallowed up again by certain Subterraneous Passages.

Vol. IV.

I ask'd further, whether they had not observed any peculiar Vertues in the Waters thus distilling from the Gold and Silver Oar? I was answered, that the Miners were very afraid of drinking them, but whether they had any peculiar Vertues, they were not able to tell; but for my part, I can scarce persuade myself, that these Subterraneous Waters should not attract and retain some of these Metals and other places they meet with in their Passage, just as the Chymical Liquors partake of the Vertue of the Medicines that are past into them by way of Infusion. Hence it is that the Vertues of some Springs are known to us, whereas the true Qualities of others remain hitherto undecided, by reason of the great variety of the Metals, Minerals and Precious Stones, the Spirits whereof are communicated and mixed with these Waters.

Upon this occasion I can't forbear to relate to you what hapned to me. A certain Hungarian Nobleman, who was Proprietor of the Gold Mine of Woffam, having presented me with some Stones out of that Mine, I took one of them, of about a pound weight, reduced into a small Powder, and putting it into a Glass Alembick distilled it out of the Ashes: It produced about two Ounces of a Mineral Water, of a most odoriferous Scent, and extremely Cordial, the like I never met with before: The Dregs I put into a Crucible, which by a violent Calcination, produced about the value of half a Ducat of Gold, of twenty two Carats; besides a certain quantity of yellow Flowers, not unlike a Sulphur. When I considered the quantity of Water produced out of a Stone, and its Odoriferous Scent, I began to bewail the want of Men of Ingenuity in or near these Mines, with whose assistance the Vertues which lie questionless hidden in these Waters, impregnated with the Spirituous substance of these Metals and Minerals, might be brought to light, for the benefit of Mankind.

It also frequently happens that the Subterraneous Waters carry along with them the Colour or Tincture of the Minerals through which they pass. Thus in the Mines at Neuenfel you see a Rivulet issuing out at the Foot of the Mountain as green as the Vitriol itself, contained in these Copper Mines, which being conveyed from one Receptacle to another, they separate out of these Merin.

The Subterraneous Waters not without Vertue.

Singular Vertues of the Mineral Waters.

Rivulets
under Ground.

How they are produced.

The Castle
of Charleville.

M m m m m

Merin.
The Origin
of Verdigre.

these Waters, by this Way of filtration, a considerable quantity of Verdegreefe; but of these subterraneous Waters I shall have occasion to treat more at large in a peculiar Treatise of the secrets of Generation; there, among other things, I intend to treat of the rise of these Waters to the tops of the Mountains.

But to return to the poor Miners, in the Cremnitz Mine: After we had taken a view of all the various Turns and Veins of Gold, we came to the very bottom of the first Passage, where they fill the Leather Bags with the Oar, to be drawn up to the surface of the Mountains: The head Miner would have perswaded me to return back through this Passage, but I excusing the matter, he went that way alone, leaving me to the management of his Men, who conducted me through the same Passage I came in. I asked him the Reason why he would not go along with me; he told me that being much tired, and in a Sweat, he durst not venture the sudden alteration out of the Hot into the Cold Region of that Passage, which I found true by Experience; it being scarce to be imagined what effect this sudden change has upon a Body covered only with a slight Miner's Habit, during the passage through the cold Region of the Mine; from whence we were no sooner got out, but we were welcom'd by 10 or 12 Miners, whose Civilities we recompensed by a piece of Money to drink our Healths. Thus, with Faces more like dead than living Men, being conducted into the head Miner's House, and well rubb'd with Cloths before a good Fire, we chang'd our Cloaths, and being invited by the Governour, to partake of a Dinner, he prepared a Comer for such Strangers as came to visit the Mines, we took our leave both of the Mines, and the Jolly Company.

An Account of the Cape of Good Hope and the Hottentotes, the Natives of that Country, by William Ten Rhyne, Native of Deventry, Physician in Ordinary, and a Member of the Council of Justice, to the Dutch East-Indie Company; with some Animadversions upon the same, by Henry Secreta a Zeyvorzit. Translated from the Latin Original, printed at Scaffhausen in Switzerland.

THE ninth of October 1673. we sail'd with S. S. W. Wind, steering our Course S. E. we discovered Land at thirty two Degrees, it being a very serene Day at Sea, but foggy (as usually it is) as we approach'd the Shoar;
and sounding the depth we found 120 Fathoms Water. But whilst we were flattering our selves with hopes of coming to the so long expected Shoar, the Wind turning against us, tost us up and down, in the Sea, till the thirteenth of the same Month; then sailing with a S. E. Wind, we came to an Anchor in a sandy bottom, in the Bay of Saldanha, extending it self in form of a Half-moon, and of a quite different Position than that it is represented in the Maps, either by the carelessness of the Engraver, or Ignorance of the Author, having no other congruity with their Description, except that the Bay had a pointed kind of a Promontory at both ends; but the Islands are neither so numerous nor of the same Situation (differing four Points in the Compass) as they represent them, and appear under various Colours. Being very desirous to refresh our selves after so long a fatigue, the Captain and I and the Factor, went a-shoar on this Point of Africa, accompany'd only by some few Seamen that managed our Boat; casting about my Eyes with a great deal of eagerness in this Country, unknown to us before, I saw a vast ridge of Mountains, which encloses the Bay with many hanging Rocks, which being well storcd with divers sorts of Plants, seem'd to imitate the Hanging Gardens, or Semiramis, or Alcinoe, and appeared to me like the Elysian Fields, tho' in a Desert: I gathered a good quantity of these Plants, in order to present them to our Herbalists. I was surpriz'd to see in this Desert such a vast quantity of Aloes, which, I believe, could amount to no less than some thousand Pounds weight. Night made us return to our crazy Ship, and as we were returning from the Land, we observed the Sea near the rocky Shoar almosty covered with Hadocks; being extreamly satisfied we had elcaped this without the least danger, as having in full remembrance what happen'd to eight Dutch-men sometime before, who being imploy'd in the pursuit of some Sea-horses, were cut to pieces by the Natives.

Being got safe a-board, we set Sail
the next Morning again, with a fair
N. W. Wind, and passing by the Das-sen Island, defended only by a small Garison; it has got its name from the great number of Sea-Rabbets taken there, and produces some Pasture for Sheep.

The fourteenth of October towards Evening, we came to an Anchor, with a moderate Gale from the South to West, and twenty three Fathoms Water; the next Day, viz. the fifteenth, the Wind at N. W. we repass'd in sight of the Rabbit-Isle about eight Leagues distant from our Fort on the Cape of Good Hope, eight from the Dassen-Isle, and about fifteen from the Bay of Saldanha, according to the mensuration of the Maps, having a high Rock to be seen at a great distance; there several exil'd Prisoners were employ'd in burning of Muscle-shells, to make Lime for the Island.
This Isle produces abundance of Chame-leons, lesser than those of the Indies, also all sorts of Insects, Serpents, and Spiders as big as a Man's Fist.

About four a Clock in the Afternoon we discovered the Table Bay, having lost abundance of Men in this Voyage;
and being invired the next Day to Dine with the Governour, as we were row-

Ten Rhyne.

The Das-
sen Isle.

The Rabbet Isle.

These are described by Mr.
Rochford
in his History of the American Islands

their arrival at the Bay of Saldanha.

Bay of Saldanha.

ing towards the sandy African Shoar we were entangled among a vast quantity of Sea A'kaner, commonly called Brembastin, (a Plant of that bigness that one single one would have fill'd our Boat) a certain mark to those who approach the African Coast near the Cape of Good Hope, as are likewise a certain kind of small whitish Sea-Gulls. Besides the many other reasons we had to be extremely delighted with the sight of Land, after so tedious a Voyage, the novelty of a Place so little known among the Ancients, did not a little raise our Curiosity to make the best inquiry we could of this Country. All what they say material upon this Head tends only to this; That a certain Emperor coming from the Mountains of the Moon to the Cape of Good Hope, erected an Empire here; which being after-

See Hornius us Gibis Politus D.
The Ancients had but a very obscure knowledge of Africa, called by them Ly-bia.

wards divided into four Kingdoms were known by the name of Meaopatu.

I will not pretend to trace the whole Foundation of their History, having confined my self to the narrow limits of a Journal; whether these Nations owe their Original to Cham the Son of Noah, or to certain Arabians (the Posterity of Shem) that pass'd into Africk, or whether some of the Natives of Arick, grown numerous by degrees, and not able to subsist in such numbers in a barren Soil, sent certain Colonies to this uttermost point of Africk; to trace, I say, these Matters, being beyond our scope, we will content our selves with giving you an account of their manner of Living and Commerce, after we have told you something of its Situation and Constitution.

CHAP. I.

Of the Situation of the Cape of Good Hope.

THE Promontory, known by the name of the Cape of Good Hope, is situated at the Southernmost Point of Africk. Its Longitude, in respect of the Straights of Gibraltar, is 39 Degrees 25 Minutes; and its Latitude, in respect to the Hesperian Promontory, or Gourdain, (known by the name of Cape Verde) 34 Deg. 30 Min.

It was first discover'd by Vasco de Gama, 1498. (by the encouragement of Joh. de Portugal) who met there nothing but craggy Mountains, as high as Olympus it self, scarce producing any thing for the sustenance of humane Life: Those unfortunate Wretches, who are oblig'd to inhabit here, having scarce any thing to feed upon but what is produc'd with a great deal of pains, in a barren Soil and very ill Climate; affording scarce any thing but Brambles and Briars, wherewith the Mountains are cover'd on all sides. As there are few Plains, so there grows but little Corn; the only Plains of note are, that known by the name of Baculey Plain, (or the Field of Battel) being about three Leagues in compass, and the other call'd, by the Dutch, Bufflers Plain, seated upon the ascent of a high mountain; whether beyond that the Country be Plain or Mountainous is not known hitherto.

And is a corrupt Malayan
Word.

The Mountain that lies close by our part is call'd the Table Mount, from its flatness on the top, and serves for a Guide to the Mountaineers in those parts. Its height is reckon'd to be about five Leagues. Certain it is, (as I found by my own Experience) that its ascent is very steep, for it cost me a hearty sweat before we came to the top of it; being obliged to pass in my way up vast multitudes of various Shrubs and Plants, and among the rest saw a whole Forest of the Laky Jalmitre (the Roots whereof grew crosswise, like a Net-work) extending its self in two Branches to the foot of the Mountain; stor'd with prodigious numbers of Baboons. In our return (towards Evening) we were sadly pester'd, or rather frighted, with a kind of fiery Meteor, which seem'd to move in the Air like large sparks of fire; I endeavour'd to catch them with my Hands, but finding them not palpable, I was convinc'd that they were Sulphurous Meteors engender'd in the Fens, not unlike the Sulphurous Excrement we see in the Night-time pass thro' the Air.

The Table
Mount.

The next adjacent Mountain is call'd the Lyons Mount, from the shape which it resembles that Beast, not from the roaring of the Winds, (like a Lyon) as Mercator would have it, who affirms, That

The Lyons
Mountain.

This Cape is subject to such frequent and terrible Tempests, that no body, unless in case of the highest necessity, dares to cast Anchor here, whereas it is now sufficiently known, That this Cape serves the European Ships for a constant place of refreshment, and a safe Port; tho' it must be own'd, That this Coast is much infested by Storms.

Their Rivers. Divers Rivers are, as it were, the Product of these Mountains. The First is called the Butter River. The (2d) Kaffernals River. (3.) The Mountain River. (4) The Endless River, it rises in the Mountains, but its extent is unknown hitherto. (5) The Broad River, extremely pleasant, by reason of the many delightful Trees that stand upon its Banks, but very shallow. (6.) The Funny River; all which have very clear, sweet and wholesome Waters, their Springs being purify'd by the heat of the Climate.

The East-India Company's Garden. The 1st of November we took a view of the Company's Garden, which furnishes the Ships that come to anchor here, with all sorts of Refreshments, where we saw whole Walks and Orchards of Lemons, Citrons, and Orange Trees; parted by Rosemary and Laurel Hedges, not inferior in height to most of our European Trees. A pleasant Brook having its rise at the foot of the adjacent Mountain, waters this Garden, and slides its Current among the Green Hedges.

From hence casting my Eyes towards the adjacent Mountains, I could plainly discern (tho' at a considerable distance) the Original cause of the South-East Wind, which put me in mind of the Mountains, where Aolus is said to have his Seat, and detain the Winds in Prison. For it is observable, That whenever thick Clouds appear on, and about the tops of the adjacent high Mountains, they are the infallible fore-runners of severe Storms, which are more or less strong, according to the extent, thickness, or position of the Clouds; of this I have taken frequent notice in the Clouds, that used to arise upon the Table-Mount, which were always followed by heavy and long Tempests.

Thus, it is certain, That tho' the Stars never vary in their Course, they don't communicate the same quality to the Air; it having been observ'd, that at the same time there blows quite another Wind ashore, as there does at Sea; nay, what is more, two or three different Winds blow at once in different parts of the Bay, all which must be attributed to the different position of the Mountains, in respect to the several parts of the Bay. Nothing is more common here, than to find a certain Mountain near the Table-Mountain, (called from thence the Devil's Mount) to be all over stormy, whilst the circumjacent Country is blest with fair and calm Weather.

Thence it is that I am verily persuaded, that in case our Saylor's would make more exact Observations for the future, of the different effects of the various situations of places, our Navigation might be founded upon more certain Rules than now it is; which makes them have recourse to unknown Causes, and the instability of the Tides in certain places. For what other Reasons can be alledged for these constant Winds (called Monsoons) but the high Mountains which are constantly cover'd with Snow, it being certain, that these Winds continue to blow whilst the Snows are melting; there being no other cause to be alledged in these places where the Wind blows always from one Corner, or changes but once a Year, than the distinction of the Mountains, or the Annual Concurrence of the Sun. It must however be confess'd, that such spacious Fens, the receptacles of Vapours may not a little contribute towards these Winds.

Therefore our Seamen would do well to observe the different Constitutions and Situations of Places, with the same care as they do commonly the Tides, or return and reflux of the Sea, which vary according to the situations of the Bays, Havens, or Capes; of this variation I had sufficient experience in our passage through the Channel, betwixt the Port of St. Malo, on the French Shoar; and the Isle of Wight, occasioned by a ridge of Rocks near Cape La Hague, on the Coast of Normandy. But the discussion of this spinous Question concerning these Monsoons, or certain variations of the Winds, may not only depend (as well near home as in far distinct places) from the Sun's approach to, or removal from these parts, but also from the different Seasons of the Year.

But it is a much greater Secret to know the true Origin of the continual South-East Winds, which blowing almost without intermission in divers parts of the World, and especially on the Cape of Good Hope, we may address our selves to Oedipus himself, to find out the different situations of the Mountains in reference to the Plains, which occasions these Winds.

Ten Rhyne.
The Devil's Mount.

Ten Rhyne.
(a) Print. Philos. Part. 4. Sect. 49. And Isaac Vossius de motu Mathematicum.

If Descartes, (a) when he set up for a Reformer of Philosophy, had been convinc'd of these Experiments, he would not have been put to the trouble to have his whole recourse to the Moon; for, as the effects of Nature don't depend on general Causes, so it is with the Tides, or flux and reflux of the Seas, which cannot be truly explain'd in all its Circumstances, by the Hypothesis of Descartes; there being a vast difference betwixt these Tides on the Coast of Genoa, and on the Coast of Tuscany; in the Baltick Sea, they are very different from both; and are most violent in the Gulph of Jaqueta, in the Channel near Nova Francia, or New France, and in the Streights of Bahama in the Bay of Mexico. The same might be said of his Hypothesis of the Magnetick Virtue, were it not that our purpose is confined to the description of the Rivers, Mountains, and other things worth our Observation in this part of Africk.

About five Leagues beyond our Fort, is the Salt-Py, having got its Name from the vast quantity of Salt that is digg'd near it, and therefore may rather be reckon'd of the kind of Stone-Salt than of Sea-Salt; it does not always keep the same figure; and though it be cut out of the Ground in vast pieces, yet is it easily reduced to Powder; it is generally white in the Oar, tho' sometimes it proves blackish, but is soon whiten'd by the heat of the Sun in the Summer-Season; it is somewhat more pungent than our common Salt, but nevertheless as proper for Use. Perhaps the Experiment try'd in Aristotle's time, might take place here with good success; viz. That if you dig near the Sea Shore, to meet at first with Fresh Water, and if you dig deeper, with Salt Water.

Probl. Sec. 23. Probl. 21.

CHAP. II.

Of the four Legg'd Beasts.

(b) I have seen some of these Creatures are of a prodigious bigness says Plin. l. 8. c. 25. and 26.

THESE Mountainous Desarts being more adapted for wild ravenous Beasts than Men, abundance of Lyons, Elephants, Rhinocerots, Tygers, or rather Panthers, Wolves, Elks, Sea-Horses, (b) Wild Horses, Boufiers, Wild Boars, Wild Dogs, Baboons, Porcupines, Hedge-hogs, Lynxes, Stags, Badgers, Otters, Hares, and wild Asses of a delicious Colour, with white Streaks all over their Bodies; Goats, Wild Goats, Evecks, some finely spotted, some of an Ash Colour; Buck Goats which leap from Rock to Rock; wild Dogs and wild Cats like Tygers; a certain kind of Foxes, commonly call'd Jackalls; and a few of these Creatures call'd by them Tamandua Graca, and by the Dutch, Pismire-eaters; (c) but are not so big as those of Brazil. That a prodigious number of these Creatures harbour in these Mountains, may be gather'd from thence, that a few Hunters belonging to the Governour of the Fort, do take sometimes many thousand weight of them, (especially of Sea-Horses and Elks) at once; a convincing Argument how much Aristotle was mistaken, (d) when he says, That Africk produces no wild Boars, no Stags nor wild Goats.

(c) See Margrav. Hist. quadrup. l. 6. c. 4.

(d) Hist. Anim. l. 8. c. 28.

CHAP. III.

Of their Birds.

(e) See Rocheford lib. 1. c. 122.

OF Birds, they have also vast numbers, and of diverse Colours, viz. Ostriches, Peacocks, Cranes, Black Storks, Herns, Geese, Bittourns, Ducks, Guinea Cocks and Hens, Teals, Felfaris, Cormorants, Didappers, Fen-Ducks, Pochards, Penguick, Partridges red and grey; Pheasant, Lapwings, Nightingales, Sripes, but these very small; Owls, and Millions of

Sea-Gulls, (f) Martinets, and Swallows of various Colours, Colybrides, Birds that suck a certain knotted Plant, not unlike a Pelican, (describ'd by me elsewhere, as likewise by Mr. Rocheford, and Mr. Marcgrave.) The French call it Flammant, and the Dutch Flaniteen, after the Portuguese; with various Feathers standing up an end.

(f) Pliny describes these Birds erroneously without Leggs.

CHAP. IV. Of their Fishes.

Ten.
Rhyne.

THE Sea and Rivers of this Cape, afford also various kinds of Fishes, viz. Sea-Lions, Sea-Rabbits, a certain Fish called Guapervus by the Brazilians, Whales of a peculiar kind, call'd Vraccapars, or Finfishes by the Dutch, Lampreys, Trouts, Salmons, Thornback, Mulletts, Mussels, Giltheads, Eels, and two different sorts of Carps; the first kind is commonly known by the Name of Hottentots-fish, because the Natives extreamly delight in it, they being of an Excellent Taste, and covered all over with thick Scales; the other kind is also a very delicious Fish, call'd Stone-Brocksem. They have also a kind of Fish like Dogs, (a) call'd Tassaron by the Portuguezes, Bri-

sters, Lobsters, Crabbfishes, Cramp-fish, Mussels, Vrincles, Cuttles, and among the rest, a certain Fish call'd the Swimmerly Parepus, and Slautilus, by Pliny: But my design of keeping my self within the Limits of an Epitome, will not permit me to give you a particular Account of all; I will only add, That one Day as I was walking along upon the very Brink of the Sea-shoar, to examin the several products of the Sea, I did light upon some small Creatures sticking to the Rocks very close, with their Feet, representing by the excretion of their Fibres, our Roses, whence they are call'd by the Dutch, Klipperjen or Roeckroses.

CHAP. V.

Of the Insects or venomous Animals.

THESE are numberless on the Cape of good Hope; the most noted are Spanish Flies, Butter-flies, Glow-worms and Locusts of divers kinds; Cornworms of diverse Colours, and Spiders with many Leggs of the bigness of a Man's Fist; Ants or Pismires that bury themselves under the Food they have gather'd; I saw whole Millions of them in heaps on the Mountains.

Their Serpents here differ in Bigness, Shape, and Venom; the Vipers are as large again here as in France; Salamanders, Scorpions, long Ear-wigs, Lizards, and Toads: Discoursing one day with the Governour of the Fort, about these Toads, and how surprized I was to observe them three times bigger than ours, with two long Feet trailing behind, like the Otters; he shew'd me a certain Sea-Fish full of Prickles, not unlike a Toad, with long Feet join'd to the out-side of the Belly; he told me that these did bring forth the Toads, which I was sufficiently convinc'd of afterwards by my own Experience: I remember, that when I dissected one of these Creatures, in the presence of the Governour, I found its Lungs very large, but the other like those of ordinary Toads and Frogs.

The rest of these kind of Creatures either did not come to my sight, or if they did, it was superficially, that in that short time I stay'd there, I could not take exact notice of them. To conclude, I am inclined to Aristotle's Opinion, viz. That Asia produces the fiercest Beasts, Europe the strongest, and Africk the most different kinds; which questionless has given Birth to the Proverb, That Africk always affords some new thing or another. For the want of fresh Water in this hot Climate, draws in the wild Beasts in great numbers to the Banks of the River; they copulate promiscuously, and so engender several new kinds. But this must be understood of the Desarts of Africk, which otherwise is watered by many great Rivers.

(b) L. 2.
de gen. animal. c. 7.

CHAP. VI. Of their Plants.

BUT as my Genius did lead me more to the Knowledge of Plants,
Vol. IV.

than any other thing to be met with here, I was very curious in examining such of them
N n n n

them, as this (tho' otherwise barren Country) produces in great plenty. Near the Sea-shoar I met with abundance of the Kali, (a Herb so highly esteem'd both among the Ancients and modern Authors) as I found in the Vallies great store and variety of secret Broom-beath, of divers sorts, of Sea-green, Dog-Onion and Daffidil, with heads of the bigness of an ordinary Man's Head; some whereof I have sent long ago into Holland; in the Night they have a smell like the Geranium or Stork-bill.

Among the Mountains you find a certain Tree here (more fragrant than all the rest) the Wood whereof is so hard, that the Dutch have given it the name of Iron-wood, but is used only for Fuel. These Mountains also produce whole Woods of Shrubs, abundance of Aloes, and very good Scammony; in the Gardens they have your Indian Nightshade, and a most delicious kind of Melons (call'd erroneously Water-Lemons by the Dutch) affording the best refreshment in the World, to the Ships that touch here in their Passage to or from the Indies.

It is observable, that the Lower Palm-tree, (call'd Viram by the Malayans, and Armifas by the Arabians) as well as the Coco-tree, never bear Blossom without, but only within the two Tropicks; and that (if those who speak by experience may be credited) in those Countries that are nearest to the Equinoctial, they thrive best, and their Fruits prove either lesser or bigger, according as they are nearer or more remote from the said Equinoctial Line, and decrease both in Quantity and Quality accordingly. Thus you find but few of these Palm-trees, and those without Fruits, on the Cape of Good Hope; and in Bengale, without the Tropicks, the same Pears and Apples as we have in Holland, but no Coco or Palm-trees; but at Mesquetti (a place in the Kingdom of Bengale) and in Persia (near the Tropicks) these Trees grow, but bear no Fruit except what is very insipid and dry, whereas, near the Equinoctial, they prove larger and very juicy.

CH A P. VII.

Of the different Seasons of the Year.

THE Cold does not exert its rigour here: Hails are very rare, nor are the Rivers congeal'd with Ice: The greatest extremity of the Winter scarce ever raising here beyond a white Frost.

For you must know, that we have not Four, but only Two Seasons of the Year, (as well as all over the Indies.) The Winter is one continued rainy Season, as the Summer is one unintermittent Drought, but both accompanied with violent Storms: For at the same time we enjoy the pleasantness of the Summer heat in Holland, they are continually afflicted with Rains here; and whilst the Sun there approaches to the Equinoctial Line, it recedes from thence, on this Cape, by a continual Course.

As for Instance, if you pitch upon a certain place in Holland, as Amsterdam, the Cape of Good Hope is 17 Deg. 51 M. beyond it in its Latitude, but 11 Deg. 30 Min. beyond it, in respect of its Longitude. For in October (the beginning of the Summer here) when the Trees cast their Leaves in Holland, the Fields and Gardens begin to be cover'd with Grass and Herbs.

CH A P. VIII.

Of the Hottentotes, the Native Inhabitants of this Country.

THIS Name belongs to different Nations. The first are call'd Essequaas, who claim the first Rank, as well in respect of their Number as of their Stature (being like Demi-Savants) and strength, which is the reason that they will not mix with the Namaquas, their Neighbours, upon the least occasion. They inhabit the inland Country for 150 Leagues, as far as it is known to us; they don't care to engage with us for fear of our Fire-locks: For the rest, they live after the same manner as the other Inhabitants on the Cape of Good Hope.

Good Hope. Our Governour of the Fort sends yearly certain Persons among them, with some Tobacco and some Brass Toys, which they exchange with them for Cattle.

• The second are the Namaequaes, who have this particular to themselves, that, whereas the other Inhabitants cover their Privities with Fox or Goat-skins, these make use of Baskets, made of Elephants Teeth, for the same purpose. Their Bucklers are proof against the strongest Arrows. The third are the Souwas, living most after the same manner as the Hottentotes under our Jurisdiction. The fourth, the Sonquas, who having been (for just occasions) despoiled of their Cartel, by our Country-men, have ever since dwell'd in the Woods, and lived by hunting. Fifth, Next to these dwell the Gregoriques, and next to them, Sixth, The Honnimas, with whom we are always at enmity, by reason of divers murders committed by them upon our Country-men. Their Chieftain, named Honnimas, was then very aged and lame, but a stout Fellow. Seventh, Those who inhabit next to the Tent, and are conversant there, we make use of as Auxiliaries against the other Barbarians; their Chieftains Name is called Claes, and his Lieutenant Capt. Cuyper, both bold and brave Soldiers. I have often seen them with their ragged Crew at their Heels; and they scarce ever appear without an Attendance of six or seven Servants, yet would the last never refuse a piece of Tobacco when offer'd him, which I us'd to do now and then, and to discourse with him in French.

Ten
Rhyne.

CH A P. IX.

Of their Neighbours.

IT'S unknown hitherto, what sort of People borders upon the Country of the Hottentotes; for what some have related of the Negroes (commonly called Cassers) is founded only upon hearsay. Thus I remember, that one of our Corporals being sent out with six Soldiers to view the utmost borders of the Hottentotes, told us that some of these Hottentotes (whose Names were not heard of as yet among us) had informed him, that betwixt them and the said Negroes was a very broad River, which they us'd to pass in small Canoes, or Boats, made out of the Trunks of large Trees hollow'd out, for the exchange of their Commodities. But the Hottentotes have no settled Limits amongst one another.

Just. 1 2. says the same of the Scythia.

CH A P. X.

Of the shape and make of their Bodies.

AS all Mankind has a certain Instinct or Inclination (besides the Disposition depending on his native Country) so it is next to a Miracle, that during so many Ages, each Nation has retained certain Lineaments or Features, which, as they are infallible signs of their Dispositions, so they shew a vast difference betwixt several Nations.

The Hottentotes being very much Sunburn't, have generally a tawny Skin, tho' some of them have a tolerable white Skin; but Blackness is the greatest beauty among them; for the rest they either strew a certain Earth, of various colours, upon their Heads, or mix the same with Suet, and so be-

Vol. IV.

smear their Hair and Faces, which they look upon as a singular Ornament; for there is a certain Mountain here, which furnishes them with Materials for divers Colours, which, if rightly manag'd, would turn to a good account.

As many as I ever had opportunity to see, appear'd to me slender and tall, shap'd with strong knotted Joints, and well set, with flat Noses (such as most Africans and Asiatics have) and bended Fore-heads; large thick Lips, curl'd Hair, woolly and cut or shav'd in different Figures. They appear for the most part naked, having only a piece of Leather, like an Apron, hanging down before from their Breasts.

N n n n t 2

The

The Voyage of William Ten Rhyne

Ten
Rhyne.

baucheries. They are so bloody in their Inclinations as to exercise their Cruelties even upon their vanquish'd Enemies, after their death, by striking their Arrows and Weapons, into their dead Carcasses; they are so much addicted to Theft, that one Neighbour does not stick to enrich himself by stealing the Cattle of another; and as in reference to their Chastity they have quite abandon'd the Foot-steps of their Ancestors, in the time of Scipio the African; their Lasciviousness is always accompanied by the most unaccountable Slothfulness; for they neither Sow nor Reap, neither trouble themselves about what they shall eat or drink the next day, but wallowing almost in their own Dirt; therefore if you have occasion to employ any of them, you must take them when they are hungry, and be sure to perform your Promise. Their inordinate way of living and Lust, makes them grow old before their time, and makes their Bodies crazy and weak; and as they keep no regular account of their Age, so nothing certain is to be determined of the length of their Lives; for what their disorderly way of living takes from them on one side, their forc'd Sobriety (for want of necessaries) makes amends for on the other hand, living for the most part upon Herbs; however it is, the general Opinion is, that scarce ever any of them live above 100 Years.

They are so greedy of Tobacco, from their Cradles, that Children before they come to the age of Eight Months (as I have often seen my self) smoak it; and most of them, (tho' otherwise tame enough) will work a whole Day for a piece of this Weed.

As they look upon the Women as despicable Creatures, so they are not allow'd to eat any Beef or fresh Milk, but only Mutton, and that very sparingly; they are, nevertheless, nice in their Pallate, and remember a great while what has pleas'd them or not; for the rest, they live without care, contented with their own, whether they be rich or poor in Cattle.

Among all these Vices they retain one good Quality, that is, if one of their own Neighbours has, by mischance lost his own Cattle, they will stock him again, perhaps with a Calf and a Sheep. They are not easily removed from their own Opinion; Gold and Silver they don't value at the same rate as other Men do; for where there is no use there is no greediness after Money; and ignorance of Vice is more prevailing than all the Precepts of Virtue; an instance, that a mild Climate often produces very rugged Spirits, tho' they are very Crafty with all their Ignorance.

Whilst I tarried here, I had the opportunity to talk sometimes with three Women of the Hottentotes; one named Eve was a civil Person, and would discourse very rationally; as she was well versed in the Dutch and Portuguese Languages, so I learned from her divers secrets relating to this Nation; the second, named Cornelia, being turn'd Christian, and married to a Dutch Surgeon, did lead a very scandalous Life, and therefore was several times banish'd the Fort; the third, named Sarah, was the same I told you before to have been dissected by our Surgeon, having hanged her self, because a cursed Dutchman had debauch'd her, under pretence of Marriage, but left her afterwards.

CHAP. XV.

Of their Manners.

As these barbarous Pagans live without Laws, so they only follow their Instinct without controul. Their manner of sitting is just like the posture of a Child in the Womb, raising their Heads betwixt both Knees, which they embrace with their Arms. They despise the Female Sex; Mourn three Days for their deceased Friends, which both Sex spend in terrible howlings and Lamentations, about the Huts of the deceased. They bury their dead in a Hole under Ground, and cover it with a Stone. In Copulation they choose to perform it from behind, the Woman lying upon one side, something higher than the Men, scarce differing in this point from the Bruits.

C H A P. XVI.

Their way of Living.

A Nature prompts them to Luxury, so their Poverty forces them to Temperance; hence it is, that they have no Varieties at their Tables; but instead of Bread, make use of the Sword-grass, (a) which the Women dig out of the Fenns, for the Women take all the pains here, they provide Food, they look after the House or Hutt, and after the Cattle, &c. Upon any extraordinary occasion, of a Wedding, Lying-in of a Woman, or such like, they will, perhaps kill an Ox, a Sheep, (if they can't light upon such Venison) for to entertain their Friends; (b) the Leaves of the Sea-green of different kinds, are also much in use among them; for the rest they feed upon Cows and Sheeps Milk, which the Women gather early in the Morning, and make very good Butter of it. They flea a Bird with Feathers and all, then turning the Skin with the Feathers upward, they tie it to a Stick or Cane, and therewith stir the Milk, till the serous part of the Milk is separated from the oleagenous substance; the Butter-milk they eat, and sometimes wash their Hands with.

Cheese they neither love, nor know how to make; their ordinary Liquors for ordinary drinking, are Milk and Water; they feed upon no Fishes but what have Scales, and consequently no Eels, nor any of the testaceous kind, such as Oysters, &c. The Fish they most delight in, is a certain sweet kind of Bream (c) with very thick Scales; they are all without distinction of Age or Sex, such admirers of Tobacco, that, tho' they are at variance with one another, they will hand about the Tobacco-pipe without Exceptions.

This Country produces a certain kind of African Arua Root (or Lake Stobbin) of so venomous and corroding quality, that it not only bites upon, but also blisters the Tongue. These Hottentots have a way of separating the pernicious Sulphur by the Fire, which binds the Volatil Corroding Salt; and thus to render it fit for Food: The Hedg-hogs (which are strangely shaped here) mightily delight in this Root; they not only feed upon the dry'd and powder'd Skins of Beasts, (after they have used them a considerable time instead of Shoes) but also upon Excrements mixed with some other things; this they do without the least distinction of Civility, not excepting even their King, the Head of a Crew of miserable Beggarly Wretches, as almost all the Negroes are.

(c) Call'd the Hot-tentots
Fish by the Dutch.

C H A P. XVII.

Their manner of making War.

Nothing is more barbarous than this Country, where the rugged Climate, and rocky Mountains seem to have produced Men of their own kind, who applying all their Thoughts to Mischief and Fraud, are of a far different Temper from the Europeans, being very prone to quarrel, or to beguile a Man upon very frivolous occasions. Their Arms (besides the Leather Jacket which serves instead of a Shield) are Bows and Arrows; these are of two sorts, for these call'd by them Affagayes, are a kind of Dart which they know how to manage with such dexterity, that at Forty Paces distance, they will exactly hit the Mark: The other is a kind of a Javelin, which throwing twice or thrice round their Heads, they strike with vast strength into their Enemies. They have a way of poisoning these Weapons in the following manner: They take a Viper or some other venomous Serpent; which being enraged, they put the point of the Weapon into its Mouth, and tie it for fear of falling out; this done, they, to encrease the virulency of the Poison, cut off the Head of the Viper, under whose Jaws the Bladders, which are the reservoirs of the Poison, lie conceal'd; this Poison may be taken without danger, but if communicated by the Sting of the Creature, is mortal, as many of our People have found to their cost. The best Remedy against it is, to beat the affected place with a small stick, and afterwards to suck it.

Their chief strength lies in a surprise, having

(a) Of this there are several sorts describ'd
in another Article.

(b) Call'd Figs
by the Dutch.

The Voyage of William Ten Rhyne

Ten
Rhyne.

having been taught by the Lyons (which are very numerous here) that it is safest to appear without their lurking Holes in bad Weather; when our Fire-Arms are generally out of order, they follow their Foot-steps, and lurking among the Woods, send their Darts from thence among our People; but if they happen to meet them in clear Weather, and in the open Fields, they set up a huge Cry, and immediately retreat to the Woods, or thorny Hills, from whence they may fight at a distance, by the help of their Bows and Arrows.

If they happen to be much superior in number, they fall on with terrible cries, like Mad-men; but notwithstanding the inequality of their Number, they seldom care to come in reach of our Fire-Arms, whereas if they engage with their own Country-men, they will press very hard upon one another: I think it may justly be apply'd to the Hottentots what Florus says of the Gauls, viz. That their Souls are as fierce as the wild Beasts, and their Bodies beyond the bulk of Men; but that it had been found by experience, that as at the first onset they fall on with a more than Man-like Courage, so if once repulsed, they retreat like Women. It seems, as if their Bodies, bred among the cloudy

(a) L. 2.
c. 4. de Bello Gal-
lico. & l. 3.
c. 4.

Mountains, had retained some resemblance to the Snow, which melts with the least heat; as their fierce and barbarous Inclination seem to have a relation to the Rocks and Woods they inhabit.

Their Leaders or Chieftains, they call Captains, being not distinguished from the rest by their Arms, except that his Staff has two knobbs, and his Vest is somewhat cleaner than the common Soldiers; but he never appears abroad without five or six old Fellows, who are supposed to be his Advisers upon all occasions, as the Romans committed the management of Arms to the Younger sort, but chose the Senate out of the Elders.

We were at that time engaged in a War with one of their Captains, named Honomai, because our Forces had, not long before our Arrival, taken from them above 2000 Oxen and Cows, besides Sheep; and we were at that time bringing our Auxiliaries into the Field, under Captain Claes and Cuyper, to attempt a second Irruption. Their Wives they employ upon Messages, and if any of them are taken Prisoners, they are dismiss'd without a Ransom.

C H A P. XVIII.

Their way of Trafficking.

AS all their Riches and Substance consist in their Cattle, this is the only Commodity they exchange with our People. Commonly the Governour of the Fort, sends a Doctor or two accompany'd by some Soldiers, and provided with good store of Virginia Tobacco, or rather of the Black and worser sort, (which they esteem most) with some Beads of Coral, Glass, or Copper, and some quantity of Aquavite, (whereof they are great lovers) which they purchase for their Oxen, Cows, Sheep, and sometimes for several Panther Skins. Their way of Exchange is thus: Our Merchants, offer a piece of Tobacco, of about two spans in length for an Ox, or a Sheep, always adding a piece by little and little; (a Custom always observ'd among them, without which, they think themselves not obliged to the Bargain :) At last, they will ask for a certain quantity of Aquavite, the value whereof must be deducted from the quantity of Tobacco, which they value less by a fourth part at least; But at the first meeting, our Factors always present them with a piece of this Weed, which they seek to retaliate by a Present of a Sheep; by this means they exchange sometimes 100 or 200 Oxen, (besides Sheep) at one time. Our Governor sends his Factors no more than once a Year to the Essequas, to make them the more eager after the Tobacco; they commonly present our Factors with the best Mutton at their meeting. But care must be taken not to let these Barbarians see your whole Stock, for fear of being kill'd by them, upon that account; as was likely to have happen'd to some of our People, who were in great danger of being all slain by the Brother of the King of the Essequas, had they not been forewarn'd of the danger, by the Old King himself, whose Son now reigns, and lives in a good Correspondence with us. But they never exchange exchange a White Ox or Cow (following perhaps in this point, their Ancestors the Egyptians, who worshipped Isis under the shape of a Cow) which being among them like our Well-weather; it is thus constantly wish'd, That the Great Captain (meaning God) may bless them with a White Ox.

The ordinary meeting places of these Merchants are. (1.) Near the Horse-Guard, placed upon our utmost Borders. (2.) At the Pitts near the River, the Boundary of the Hottentots Country under the Dutch Jurisdiction on that side. (3.) On the other side of the Mountain, in the same part of the Country. (4.) Near the Hafferhuts River. (5.) Near the Leak-Huts. (6.) Near the Butter River. (7.) At the Endless River. (8.) Near Jacob Ragen's Tree. (9.) Near the Geese-Huts. (10.) Near the Broad River. (11.) At the Paradise, a place so call'd from its pleasant situation, but wants good Springs, because the Water is tainted thereabouts with a white clayish mixture. The (12th) and Last, is near the Hudshel-Bay, about 136 Leagues from the Fort.

Ten
Rhyne.

CHAP. XIX.

Their manner of Dancing.

THEY delight so much in Dancing, or rather Skipping, that their chief Religious Ceremonies seem to consist in the activity of their Bodies; for, when they see the Moon rising, they meet together; and whilst the Men strike all at once, their Feet against the Ground, by turns, with a very grave Air, the Women clap their Hands, and sing certain Tunes to them. If they happen to look into a Looking-glass in one of our Houses, they are so delighted with their own shape, (Narcissus like) that they fall a dancing, and seldom leave off till they drop down (quite tired) upon the Floor; as I have often observed in a certain Hottentot, who was a Servant in our Lodgings.

CHAP. XX.

Of their Religion.

AS Brutish and barbarous as this Nation is, yet are there among them some few Foot-steps of the Knowledge of a Supream Being; for whenever they see the Heavens Covered with Black Clouds, when it Thunders or Lightens, you shall hear them say, The Great Captain is angry; and if they have kill'd any of our People, and dread our Revenge, they will say in broken Dutch, What shall we do? The Dutch-men (say they) will kill us: But if they kill me, I will go directly to our Great Captain, who will make me a Present of White Oxen. Thus when it is a very serene Day, they say, Our Great Captain will present us with White Oxen. For the rest they seem to agree with the Ancient Egyptians, and other Pagans in this Point, That they look upon the Sun and Moon as Gods; (a) for they adore the Sun by gazing upon it stedfastly at Rising and Setting; sometimes they will sit down near the River side, and throw abundance of little Balls of Clay into the Water, which, they say, they do in Honour of the Sun: The Moon they worship with Dancing, as we told you before.

(a) See Plato in Cratylus, and Pliny,
l. 5. c. 8.

CHAP. XXI.

Of their Magistrates

THERE is not a Village, or Plantation of Huts so inconsiderable, but that has its own Prefect to acknowledge the Captains for their Superiors,
Vol. IV.

who are the Supream Governours of their respective Nations; the Esseques being the only People that are ruled by a King. All things are govern'd according to their O o o o o

their pleasure, none of their Subjects ever daring to attempt the least thing against the Commands of their Captains. When they are to change their Habitations, the Presets give the signal, but in case of a Marriage, they must obtain leave of their Captain.

CHAP. XXII.

Of their peculiar Laws and Customs.

THO' these Barbarians are not restrain'd either by any written Law or fear of God, they by a blind instinct follow the Customs of their Ancestors: Thus, if a Woman happens to bring forth Twins, a Male and Female, they immediately kill the last, differing in this from the Scythes, who kill'd all the Males among the Amazons; and from the Ancient Carthaginians, who used to Sacrifice Male Children alive to Saturn.

They cut out one of the Testicles to all their Male Children, immediately after they are born, to make them run with the more swiftness. The Women they cut off as many Joints off their Fingers, as they have had Husbands, beginning with the first Joint of the little Finger: They allow of Polygamy, like the Mahometans: Their Industry (such as it is) is founded only upon their Inclinations, without any Legal Compulsion. They know no other punishment of Murder, but the Revenge of the Friends of the deceased, who never cease to pursue the Murderer, till they have found him out, and then beat him with their Clubs, and at last kill him with their Javelins, nay, frequently exercise their Cruelties upon their dead Bodies. Other Crimes, as Adultery, Theft, and such like, are made good by way of retaliation. They have one peculiar Custom, if a young Lad happens to fall sick, they kill a fat Ox, which they feast upon, but the Paunch and other Entrails they hang about the Patient's Neck, till being Putrify'd, and falling off of course, they must be devoured by some Old Man or other. Their Successions are limited by the ordinary Law of Inheritance, especially among the Essequas.

CHAP. XXIII.

Of their Marriages.

SUCH as have an Intention to marry together, having obtained their Parents Consent, apply themselves to their Captain, who giving his Consent, they marry at pleasure, tho sometimes all their Subsistence consists only in a Club, an Ox to carry their Hut upon, a Milch Cow, and perhaps Ten or Twelve Sheep, some whereof certainly are kill'd for the Wedding Feast. The richer sort marry as many Wives as they think fit, and in case of dislike, divorce themselves. These commonly kill two or three Oxen, and a many Sheep for the Feast; the Flesh after it is parted from the Skin, they expose a little in the Air, and then boil it in its own Fat in their Earthen Pots, the Guts being roasted in the Ashes; they treat their Friends with these Dainties, and spend the Day merrily, according to their own way.

C H A P. XXIV.

Of the Education of their Children.

WHEN their Child-bearing Women have an easie Labour, they manage all the natural Ligaments with sufficient Skill, and without much Difficulty; but in case they are afflicted with a hard Labour, they make use of a certain Herb, endow'd with the virtue of expelling the Fruit; the true name or knowledge of which I could never learn from them, neither by entreaties nor promises, they alledging that they were strictly forbidden to discover it. Their time of Lying-in is soon over, and they bring up their Babes after a very ugly manner; for after they have kept them about two or three Weeks at home, without any swathing Clouts, they tie them to their Backs; and at four Months of age they begin to smooke Tobacco, and in four Months more they put them upon their Feet; then they have a Jacket given them (as I have been informed by some who lived five Years there.) At the Age of eight or nine Years, they begin to be accustom'd to the use of Arms; their Parents generally affix a piece of Meat to a Post, which they must hit with their Arrows before they are permitted to eat the least Victuals.

C H A P. XXV.

Of their Handicraft Trades.

YOU may as well look for Jewels in a Hogs-stie as Artisans among this barbarous Generation; however, they have a kind of Taylors among them, who sew their Skins (their ordinary Apparel) with Needles of Iron (for as I am inform'd, they have very good Mines of that Metal) or Ivory, their Thread being nothing but the twisted Nerves of Beasts. And considering that they shave their Heads in divers figures, it is manifest, that besides Taylors and Barbers, they are also Artisans in Iron work; these are the main things they glory in with so much Self-conceit, that when I once shew'd one of their Captains a very well-wrought Watch, and shew'd him the use thereof, he told me, That questionless the Hottentotes could make such another. They have also a certain Musical Instrument, of the same shape and use as our Pipes. Some of them pretend also to Magick, and would make us believe, that they can draw the Fish to the Bait with the sound of their Pipes.

C H A P. XXVI.

Of their Physick.

IF we are oblig'd to the Brutes for the discovery of several wholesome Remedies; as to the Dogs for Emetics, to the Egyptian Bird Ibis for Clysters, for Phlebotomy to the Sea-horse, for the use of Ditany or Garden Ginger to the Goats, of the Swallow-wort to the Swallows, of Fennel to the Snake, of the narrow small row leav'd Plantain to the Toad, of the Rue to the Weasel, of the Origannum to the Stork, of the Groun'-Ivy to the wild Boar, and of the use of the Artichock to the Stag, what wonder is it, if these Hottentotes, tho' never so brutish, have their own way of curing Distempers? I don't say all Distempers, but like Podalinus and Machaon, in the Trojan War, who were chiefly employ'd about Surgery, if we may believe Celsus. Suction and Unction are two chief, if not the only Remedies used among the Hottentotes; their main dread being from the Poison of Arrows or venomous Beasts: If they are wounded by them, they beat the afflicted part with a small stick, till it be deprived of all sense; then they scarifie and suck it till the Blood follows. This way of curing, (which Severinus in his Chirurgery recom-

See Homer
b. in Probl.

Ten
Rhyne.

recommends as efficacious) is different, according to the different Natures of the Poison, and according to the different continuance of the beating and suction, it being certain that the Scorpions, who are not so venomous here as in Spain, Italy and France, don't sting so deep as the Creature they call the Thousand-Foot. If you squeeze his Tail just above the Sting, it emits a bright drop out of his crooked Sting, unless he has stung somebody not long before, which is not much more hurtful than the Sting of our Bees; his Sting is not very soon replenish'd with the poisonous matter, and when he stings it is as if you were touched by a Stone; but the Thousand-Foot being very corrosive, communicate very sharp Poison: Of the Vipers we have had occasion to speak before. If the Wound proves malignant, or there be the least suspicion of a Gangreen, they cut it out with the sharp points of their Arrows; and if it has infected a Member they cut it off immediately. All Contusions they cure by Unctions (with Beef or Mutton Suet, for want of any other Ointment) afterwards scarifie the part and suck it till they draw the Blood thro' the Skin. The Rhumatism they cure in the same manner, except that they expose the part (after it is well anointed with the Suet) before the Fire, that the Particles thereof may force out the morbid Matter, by their being attenuated before the Fire; and then they go to sucking. Among the Vegetables they are acquainted with very few Physick Plants but those of the best, which as I told you before, I cannot learn from them at any rate. This makes me admire how some can boast of I know not what Secrets they have attained to among so treacherous a Generation as the Hottentotes. They have a way of curing the Cholick by a certain Aromatick Root, almost in an instant. They also stamp a kind of Date (as I suppose) called by them Dacha, which they afterwards make into a Paste, and being dry'd in the Sun use it like most of the Mahomedans do the Ausion or Opium, and has the same effect upon them. They never cut the Navel-strings of new born Children, but only tie it close till it falls off itself. This is all I was able to learn of a certain Woman of the Hottentotes, the rest being so cunning as not to discover any thing of this Nature.

C H A P. XXVII.

Of their Language.

IF you should hear them Speak, or rather Chatter, in their own Dialect, you would certainly believe, that you were gone back to the Pythagorean Age, when the Birds used to converse together, by way of Discourse; it being certain, that their speaking is only an inarticulate noise, and no real Voice, every Word ending with a kind of whistle, by the Tongues clapping so close to the Palate; whence some have judg'd, that by this shrill noise, occasioned by the touching of the Palate, they did express their Vowels, whereas they pronounced the Consonants much lower in the Throat, and fram'd them together by drawing together their Lips in an orbicular figure. Certainly is, That they can't converse with any other Nation in their own Language; for all the time that the Dutch have been settled here, there was never yet one European who could attain to any perfection in their Language, tho' many of the Hottentotes that dwell near the Fort, have learn'd a kind of broken Dutch, differing from ours chiefly in the termination of Words, which commonly end in Kom, as Tabagkom, Tobacco, Kortom a Shore or Portion, Horom to hear. As they are but barren in Roots, or Original Words, so they abound in Epithites: Thus they call all sorts of Birds Courcour, with the addition of a proper Epithite, as for instance; Camma Courcour, a Water-fowl, whether it be a Duck, a Cormorant, or Sea-Gull; Sickom (a Belgicism, such as they frequently use among them) Courcour, a young Bird; Grotom Courcour, a large Bird, by which, however, in a strict sense, they understand the Ostrich. They have also learn'd some Words by their former Correspondence with other Nations; as for Instance, from the English the Word Doggues signifying a Dog.

The

coat; Krallen, a Hutt or Cabin; and many more of the same kind.

Ten
Rhyne.

The Original Hottentot VWords which occur at present to my Memory, are

Of their Numbers.

Onkay, a Dutch-man, Gamma, a Lion,
Acqua, a Horse, Ouka, a Wolf, Nabba, a Rhinoceros, Goedi, a Sheep, Boeba, an Ox or Cow; Debitia, Heifers; Siri- goes, Tortoises; Dacha, the name of an hypnotick Plant; Dini, Honey; Chou, Air; Ecy, Fire; Kou, Thunder; Dou-
don, the Road; Ey, Glafs Beads; Equa, Wood; Kiny, a Club; Sou, a Pot;
Bouchon, the Ashes of Plants.

Cui, One; Tem, Two; Nona, Three;
Acka, Four; Corro, Five; Guichi,
Six, &c.

These they multiply by the addition of others, by joining them with other Words, which if they should be heard by any Foreigner, he will be ready to confess, as well as I,
that they are so odd as not to be describ'd in Writing.

Some corrupt Dutch VWords, are,

William Ten Rhyne.

Bocmakem goet, Gun Powder; Boe- baisibier, Milk; Karos, a Vest or Waist-

A Draught

A Draught of the Streights of Gibraltar.

WITH

Some Observations upon the Currents thereunto belonging.

By Captain Richard Bolland.

July 24. 1675.

Bolland.

WE weigh'd Anchor, out of Tangier Bay, near eight in the Morning, the Wind at S.S. West off the Shoar, very moderate; before Ten, the Tide of Ebb then setting to the Westward, had drove us down the length of Jems River, which having observ'd, that I might something more improve my judgment on the Tides and Currents in these parts, I then produc'd this Draught of the Streights Mouth of Gibraltar, which I had drawn sometime before; having often cross'd over from the one Shoar to the other, as also anchor'd several Boats, half a League distant from one another, that they have reach'd one third of the Channel over; having on Board of each of them, Watches for Time, Logs to inform the turning of the Tide, and several other Conveniences proper for those Observations; by which means, I gain'd some experience how the Tides set, their time and distance from the Shoar; as also where the Current, which has its constant Indraught into the Streights, if extremes of Wind occasion no alteration, does commence from the Tides. Having thus gather'd these Collections, I drew this Draught, as it is here demonstrated at large, and Calculated the Tables thereupon plac'd, which are for every Day in the Moon's age, that is, from Full to Change, and from the Change to the Full; so that looking upon these Tables, you are inform'd at all times, when the Tides flow to the Eastward, and Ebb to the Westward, upon both Shoars. Our Ship having thus drove contrary to our Course, that Day being the twelfth of the Moon's age, I consulted the Table for the Offing upon the African Shoar, that the Tide began to flow to the Eastward at Ten a Clock, and 21 Min. By this time the Wind sprang up fresh Easterly, and increased so furiously, that we were forc'd to Reef our Top-sails, having now the advantage of the Tide; here the Current in the middle, as also the Tide upon the Spanish Shoar, which began that Day to flow to the Eastward, at 11 of the Clock and 16 Minutes. Thus happen'd the time so opportunely, that standing the nearer both the Shoars was the greater advantage, making no more than three Boards we weather'd the Easternmost Point of Gibraltar above two Leagues. Thus did we make a clear Experiment of the truth of these Tables and Draught. The same advantage may be made in turning out of the Streights with a Westerly Wind, only stopping the Tide of Flood, if Weather will permit. For want of Experience in the Tides and Currents here, this Age has produc'd but too many Examples of the loss both of Men of War, and of Merchant-men. I remember in the Year 1663, Sir John Lawson, in the Resolution, having been in the Levant, coming near to Gibraltar in the Night, the Current having set us over close on board the Spanish Shoar, we made the Highland of Gibraltar, for Apos-Hill upon the Barbary Shore, which had like to have prov'd of very dangerous consequence, our Course being right over the Low-land, which General Blake had intentions of cutting through, to have made an Island. Having heard many Disputes concerning Tydes and Currents, will here, in few words, give my Opinion of them. And first of Tydes, which as is observ'd, have a dependency upon the Motion, Increase, and Decrease of the Moon.

It flows in the Bay of Tangier, and so upon the Barbary Shoar, as far as Apes-Hill, South-west and by South, one quarter after two a Clock, Full and Change of the Moon, high Water. The Moors and Spaniards, upon each of their Navy-Shores, in the Streights Mouth of Gibraltar, thus account the Tydes. When the Moon appears in their Horizon upon her rising, the Tyde sets away to the Westward, and continues till her coming to the Meridian; which having passed, the Tyde begins to flow to the Eastward. I cannot be so positive in my Opinion as some are, that the Moon has an absolute Influence upon the Government of Tydes, and therefore shall lay down my Reasons with submission to better Judgments. If the Moon's attraction be so powerful upon the Waters, why do they not follow her motion round the World? At Prince Rupert's Bay, within three Leagues of Apes-Hill, in the Streights Mouth of Gibraltar, the Tyde rises perpendicular upon the Springs Nine Foot. At Buccama, upon the Barbary Shore, 20 Leagues to the Eastward, there's scarce any knowledge of a Tyde. So that in so short a distance, the Moon's influence upon the Water ceases. At Cape Spartel, which is the Westermost part of the African Shoar, it flows South, South-west a very strong Tyde. Five or six Leagues West, South-West into the Sea, there is no appearance of either Ebbing or Flowing. So that here to the Westward into the Ocean, as also to the Eastward mentioned before, in the Mediterranean; the Waters have no dependance upon the Moon. These Demonstrations, with many others which might be laid down, induce me to the Opinion, That the Moon's Change, Full, and Quarter, as also her Motion, are particular Signs to inform our Judgments, rather than of any Power she has on the Waters, or their dependance on her. The great Master of Philosophy drowned himself, because he could not apprehend the Cause of Tydes; but his Example cannot be so prevalent with all, as to put a Period to other Mens Inquiries into this Subject. I hope it will be allow'd that a Sailor, by his Experience in this Age, may better know the shifting of Tydes in several Parts than Aristotle, tho' not the Cause; which since no Man has attain'd to, but only conjectural Notions, I hope mine will be the more excusable. The Holy Writ mentions a Chaos, or first Matter, which was a confusion or disorder'd Mass of all the Elements, wherein God Almighty divided the Earth from the Water, which Division naturally put the Waters in motion by a Reverse, or Retreat from their first Position. After that, the Earth was made dry Land, the Waters return'd to seek their former Place, and to claim their Dominion over the more solid and consistent Bodies; by which ambition they rais'd themselves up to the High-water-mark, where they were restrained and bound by the Heavenly Power; so that being able to advance no higher, they return'd to the Ebbing; and ever since it might be God Almighty's Providential Will, for the convenience of Man, to continue the same motion of the Water. I have no other Reason or Apology to make for this my Opinion, than that in most parts of the known World, the Waters have the strength of their Motion near to the Shoars, and at Sea scarce any thing at all but what is occasion'd by Winds. Which brings me to the Course of Currents, that have no dependency upon the Moon, having observe principally three sorts of Currents or Streams, occasioned by a Trade Wind the indraught of Bays, as that of Biscay and the Gulph of Lions; a forceable Stream betwixt two High Lands coming from the Ocean, as the Current proceeding from the Streights Mouth of Gibraltar, where in the middle part (demonstrated upon the Draught between the two Lines MM) The Current has its continual passage into the Mediterranean, if not alter'd by some extream of Weather. And altho' I know some are of a contrary Opinion, yet there is nothing that resembles Truth more, than Demonstration upon Matter of Fact. In Nine Years that I have liv'd and sail'd from Tangier, I did never see any Ships in the middle of the Streights, happening then to be calm, or little Wind, but was infallibly driven in, if she could not reach the side of Ebb upon neither Shoar. This, I suppose may be sufficient to demonstrate that there is a vast Sluce of Water hurry'd into the Streights. At Constantinople out of the Black-Sea, it runs into the Mediterranean a forcible Stream, and many large Rivers fall into the same Seas. The Question is, what becomes of all this Water? The Tydes flow Six Hours, and Ebb the same space, so that probably they return what they bring in; the Earth no doubt, on all Shoars, does drink in and is moisten'd by the Sea; the Sun has its attractive influence on the Waters; I have often

Bolland

Bolland. served at Sea, where the strength of the Exhalation has happen'd (tho there was not one breath of Wind,) that it was dangerous to come near that part with a Boat; and on the contrary, when the Clouds have been over-charg'd or loaden, they have broken out, and fallen violently down; which we commonly call Spouts. But all these cannot near reach the Water that sets unto the Mediterranean, so that there must necessarily be some Evacuation; and it seems most reasonable, that as the Streights Mouth of Gibraltar has its continual Indraught aloft, so the superficial part thereof may have its recourse back again below. To know the certainty of this, it were but stopping with a Stream-Anchor in the middle of the Streights; possibly it may require 300 or 400 Fathom Warp: Your Ship being brought up, the Current running strongly to the Eastward, brings it to Wind-head to the Westward.

The Description of the Sounding-Boat for Currents.

THEN having the Lead, which I have made, as the Draught here demonstrates with Springs in the inward part, a Bladder hook'd upon the outside, which has a dependency upon those Springs, so that the Lead striking the Ground, off flies the Bladder from the Lead, and all the way in its rising to the Superficies of the Water, it is drove which way soever the Current does set, your Ship being stopp'd by her Anchor, if the Current set out of the Streights below, then will the Bladder rise a-head of the Ship, contrary to the Current aloft. Now where your Ship is Anchor'd in 300 Fathom water, I will suppose it flows into the Streights 100 Fathom deep, from the Surface, and from that 200 Fathom to the bottom, it runs out to the Westward. To know the certainty of this, or what depth it sets contrary, I have here drawn the Draught of a Square Dragg-Sail at the Boats Bow, with Weights of Lead, at the lower part, to depress the Sail downward; so turning the Boat loose you lower the Sail unto the Water, and which way soever the Stream runs, it will draw along the Boat. If it returns out of the Mediterranean at 100 Fathoms deep, the Sail being lower'd to that, then it will not fail of Dragging your Boat contrary to the Current aloft. Thus might the Experiment be made to the satisfaction of the curious.

The sounding Boat for Currents in the Draught No. 2, there is the form of a Sail mark'd G, which has two Yards, one aloft, the other below; by which means, if my Judgment fails me not, it will stand so fair, as to keep full within less than three Points of the Compass. In the Hold of the same Boat mark'd F, I have form'd a sort of work, which gives a true Account of the Boats way by her Motion, hoping it may prove of general use, more in particular unto Draughts-men, whose care ought to be in laying down Capes, and Head-lands, exactly to the distance.

THE INDEX

TO

The Fourth Volume.

|          |                                                                                                                                            |                          |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |            |
|----------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------|
| A | BAFEDE Mountain.                                                                                                                    | Page 19           | Their Holy Oils, Marriages, and Funerals.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 146 |
|          | Abipones, People of Paraguay, first seen.                                                                                           |                          | Arsenal at Constantinople.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 81  |
|          | p. 796. Their Manners.                                                                                                              | 797               | Astold City.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 20  |
|          | Abrutish City.                                                                                                                      | 20                | Astul City.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 19  |
|          | Abrupt end of the Discovery of the Isles of Salomon.                                                                                | 679               | Assampta Fruit.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 272 |
|          | Acamapitche, first King of Mexico.                                                                                                  | 511               | Assumption Fort up the River of Plate.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 687 |
|          | Account of a Pagod in China.                                                                                                        | 299               | Assumption Town in Orissa.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 765 |
|          | Account of the Mines in Hungary.                                                                                                    | 323               | Ata Tree.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 223 |
|          | Ackem City in Sumatra.                                                                                                              | 269               | Aimaib Dulet, the prime Minister of Persia.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 165 |
|          | Achmet, the 1st and the 2d Emperours of the Turks.                                                                                  | 98                | Armedan, formerly the Hippodrome at Constantinople.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 76  |
|          | Achmin City.                                                                                                                        | 20                | Atole, a Liquor in New Spain.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 528 |
|          | Adam spoken of in India.                                                                                                            | 259               | Attempts of the Jesuits beyond Paraguay.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 805 |
|          | Adrianople City.                                                                                                                    | 59                | Attendance of a Chinese Vicar of two Provinces.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 409 |
|          | Advertisement concerning the Fragment of the Discovery of the Isles of Salomon.                                                     | 665               | Attendance of a mean Bride in China.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 410 |
|          | Aga of the Familiaries.                                                                                                             | 70                | Audience given by the King of Persia.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 150 |
|          | Agigueringo Village in New Spain.                                                                                                   | 506               | Augusta, a City in Sicily, destroy'd.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 4   |
|          | Akutzotl the 8th King of Mexico.                                                                                                    | 513               | Aurence Zebe, his Artifices. p. 237. He comes to Agra, and imprisons his Father. p. 238. Seizes his Brother, Morad Backsee, and imprisons his Eldest Son. p. 239. Kills Morad Backsee. p. 240. Is enthron'd. p. 241. His penance. He is reprov'd by the King of Persia. p. 242. His Conquests, Employments, and change of Life. p. 244. His Continency, he works for his Bread; his Children. p. 245. His Secretaries, distribution of Business, and absolute Power. p. 247. His Revenues. | 248 |
|          | Air of Egypt.                                                                                                                       | 44                | Authority of the Portuguese at Bander Congo.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 188 |
|          | Albergo, a noble Structure near Genoa.                                                                                              | 594               | Axayacac the 7th King of Mexico.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | 513 |
|          | Alexandria in Egypt.                                                                                                                | 9                 |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |            |
|          | All-Saints Town.                                                                                                                    | 748               | B                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |            |
|          | Alpugbia Village in New Spain.                                                                                                      | 506               | Abrias, a Tribe of Indians.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 258 |
|          | Alvar Nunez arrives at the River of Plate with recruits.                                                                            | 690               | Babuyanes, one of the Philippine Islands.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 437 |
|          | Amacufac Village in New Spain.                                                                                                      | 506               | Bacciam Fruit.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 272 |
|          | Amaduat City.                                                                                                                       | 200               | Bad travelling in India.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 232 |
|          | Amalfi City in Italy.                                                                                                               | 2                 | Babi Lake.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 425 |
|          | Amcale Tree.                                                                                                                        | 224               | Babi, a Province in Manila.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 435 |
|          | Amu at the 2d, 3d, and 4th Emperours of the Turks.                                                                                  | 98                | Bajazeth's Mosch.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 78  |
|          | Anana Plant.                                                                                                                        | 225               | Bajazeth the first. 97. The 2d.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 92  |
|          | Andemson Island.                                                                                                                    | 269               | Bairam, Turkish Feast.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 93  |
|          | Angon Island.                                                                                                                       | 189               | Balanca Fish.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 272 |
|          | Annas's House, a Church now.                                                                                                        | 32                | Balayan, a Province in Manila.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 433 |
|          | Anona Tree.                                                                                                                         | 223               | Ballas River in New Spain.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 506 |
|          | Antient ruin'd Town in Persia.                                                                                                      | 185               | Baltagi, what they are.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 69  |
|          | Anti-kagac, a ruin'd City in Persia.                                                                                                | 110               | Baluco, a Nation of Pyrates.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 190 |
|          | Antimony of Hungary the best.                                                                                                       | 825               | Bandarines, a Tribe of Indians.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 258 |
|          | Antinopoli, a City in Egypt.                                                                                                        | 19                | Bande Congo, a Port in Persia. p. 181. Its Inhabitants.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 182 |
|          | Ao, a fierce and Amphibious Creature.                                                                                               | 770               | Bangalis, a Tribe of Indians.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 258 |
|          | Aqueduct at Constantinople.                                                                                                         | 79                | Baniins, the third Tribe of Indians.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 257 |
|          | Arabian Fable.                                                                                                                      | 25                | Their Tree and Pagods in India.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 200 |
|          | Arabs eat Fire. Others beat themselves for an Alms.                                                                                 | 184               | Baniin Island.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 442 |
|          | Ararat Mount.                                                                                                                       | 110, 112, and 114 | Baptism of the Blacks.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 729 |
|          | Araucans of Chile, their Valour. Number, Manners, and Obstacles to their Conversion.                                                | 706               | Barbarity of Indian Gentiles to Children.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 210 |
|          | Araxes, River.                                                                                                                      | 11                | Barbarous Murder.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 210 |
|          | Aradius and Honorius's Pillar.                                                                                                      | 79                |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |            |
|          | Areca Tree.                                                                                                                         | 222               |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |            |
|          | Armar, a City in Thebaida.                                                                                                          | 23                |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |            |
|          | Armenian Ma's. p. 41, and 144. Their Communion, Lent, Easter, principal Feasts, Priests, Archbishops, Fasting, and Baptism. p. 145. |                          |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |            |

The Index to the Fourth Volume.

|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |          |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------|
| Barbarous Sayings of a Chinese Mandarin . page 350                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | Page 575 |
| Barbarous People. 792                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |          |
| Barbarous Old Men. 802                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |          |
| Barocke, a City in India , famous for Calicoes. 200                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |          |
| Bass of the Sea. 70                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |          |
| Bassora, a City in the Persian Gulph . 220                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |          |
| Batalas, a Tribe of Indians . 257                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |          |
| Batangas Bay in Manila . 433                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |          |
| Bazaim, a City in India describ'd. A Monster there; and the Habit of the People. p. 202                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |          |
| The Jesuits, Dominicans, Franciscans, and Hospitals there. 203                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |          |
| Bazar, or Market at Tauris . 121                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |          |
| Bears kill'd and eaten by the Men left in Greenland . 818                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |          |
| Beasts of India . p. 198. Of New Spain . p. 548                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |          |
| Of Paraguay . p. 660. Of Bonden in Persia . 162                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |          |
| Baglerbegg, what they are. 70                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |          |
| Beiburt, a City in Turkey . 103                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |          |
| Beligon, a City in India . 264                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |          |
| Benzoid City. 20                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |          |
| Bengala Kingdom. 269                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |          |
| Bethania. 35                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |          |
| Betkesda Pool. 33                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |          |
| Betlehem. 37                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |          |
| Beziers, a City in France . 588                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |          |
| Beyoor Stone. 281, and 704                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |          |
| Bickier, in Egypt . 8                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |          |
| Filimbim Tree. p. 224. The Fruit: 457                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |          |
| Birds in India p. 199. In New Spain . p. 547. In Greenland . p. 819. At the Cape of Good Hope . 832                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |          |
| Bisayas and Pintadas, Inhabitants of the Philippine Islands. 430                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |          |
| Biscitash, a Village near Constantinople . 74                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |          |
| Bisisten, a sort of Exchange of Shops at Adrianople p. 61. The same at Constantinople . 77                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |          |
| Bisnaga, a Pagod in India . 261                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |          |
| Blacks, Mulattoes, &c. in Mexico . 521                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |          |
| Blasphemy punish'd. 274                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |          |
| Bobol Island. 441                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |          |
| Boldness of two Soldiers. 696                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |          |
| Bolland of the Mediterranean . 846                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |          |
| Bologna, a City in Italy . 600                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |          |
| Bombaim Island in India . 209                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |          |
| Borneo Island, p. 275. Mission thither. p. 276                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |          |
| Account of the Island, its Government, Port, Product, Birds and Beasts. p. 280. Manners, Religion, Habits, the Moors there, Houses, a Factory destroy'd. p. 281. Dutch Factory there destroy'd. 282                                                                                                                                                     |          |
| Bostangis and their Bassa. 68                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |          |
| Brachmans, the first Tribe of Ten Indian Sects. p. 256. Whom they may marry, and whom not. p. 257. How expell'd their Tribe. 259                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |          |
| How receiv'd again. 260                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |          |
| Brave action. 749                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |          |
| Brave Women. 732                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |          |
| Bravery of a Chinese General. 387                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |          |
| Brazil in America . 220                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |          |
| Bridges of Canes. 421                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |          |
| Buenos Ayres built. p. 686. and 693. Described. p. 636, 647, and 704. Increase of Cattle there. p. 704. Manners of the Indians . 705                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |          |
| Bulacan, a Province in Manila . 435                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |          |
| Burial of the Holy Innocents. 37                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |          |
| Burias, one of the Philippine Islands. 436                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |          |
| Burning Island among those of Salomon . 669                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |          |
| Bursa, a City in Asiatica . 87                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |          |
| Its Forts and Bay. 575                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |          |
| Cagayan, or new Sagovia , a Province in Manila . 433                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |          |
| Caïmacan, what he is. 70                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |          |
| Caïphas's House, now a Church. 32                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |          |
| Cajus Tree. 2: 3                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |          |
| Calanians Island. 432                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |          |
| Calcedon City, no remains of it. 82                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |          |
| Calchaquina Valley. p. 720. Jesuits go to reside there, Customs of the People. p. 721. Their Funerals, gross Errors, Garments, Women Peace-Makers. p. 722. Their Rebellion. p. 723                                                                                                                                                                             |          |
| Pacify'd. 795                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |          |
| California, whether it be an Island. 421                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |          |
| Calm at Sea. 417                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |          |
| Calvary Mount. 31, and 40                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |          |
| Cambraya City, Metropolis of the Kingdom of that Name. 200                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |          |
| Camboya. 283                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |          |
| Cam-hi proclaim'd Emperor of China p. 391. His dexterity, love of Musick, Justice, Love to Strangers, to his Subjects. p. 393. His Modesty, Habit, Hunting, Learning. p. 394. His Temperance as to Women, sedateness: His boundless Power. p. 395. His boundless Power. p. 395. His Revenue, Silver, Rice, and Coin, another Account of his Wealth. 396 |          |
| Camotes Island. 442                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |          |
| Canchenfu, a City in China . 302                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |          |
| Cansars, two Tribes of Indians . 257                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |          |
| Canton, a City in China . p. 295. Its Government and Description. p. 296. State of Christianity and floating City. 297                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |          |
| Cape of Good Hope . 830                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |          |
| Capi Aga, what Officer he is. 68                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |          |
| Capigiu, what they are. 69                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |          |
| Capua City. 604                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |          |
| Capul, one of the Philippine Islands. 436                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |          |
| Caracaras, a fierce People. 793                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |          |
| Caragi Bassi, who he is. 70                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |          |
| Carambola Tribe. 223                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |          |
| Caranda Tree. 224                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |          |
| Caravanferas in Persia . 123, and 124                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |          |
| At Ispahan . 138                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |          |
| Carcassone Town in France . 588                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |          |
| Carmon Fruit. 457                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |          |
| Casbian, a City in Persia . p. 129. The King's Palace there. 130                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |          |
| Casma, in the Account of the Islands of Salomon . 672                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |          |
| Castle of Cairo . 16                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |          |
| At the Port of Smyrna . 53                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |          |
| At the Dardanel s. 91                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |          |
| At Ispahan . 138                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |          |
| Castillo a Jesuit murdered. 750                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |          |
| Casuares Birds. 272                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |          |
| Catanduanes, an Island by Manila . 435                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |          |
| Catania, a City in Sicily destroy'd. 4                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |          |
| Cavach Seraglio. 91                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |          |
| Cave of our Lady. 38                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |          |
| Cavite Port at Manila . 432                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |          |
| Carones, a Mountain in New Spain . 506                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |          |
| Cayagua. 764, & 785                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |          |
| Ceremony of receiving a Commission, and Vest from the Mogol . 223                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |          |
| Of Chinese s to their Emperor. 294                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |          |
| To the Emperor of China on certain days. 322                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |          |
| Of the New Year in China . 406                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |          |
| Of killing Men to eat. 737                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |          |
| Ceylon, an Island in India . 220, 269                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |          |
| Chak, a City in Thebaida , 22                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |          |
| Cham of Tartary . 65                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |          |
| Champa. 283                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |          |
| Champultepe in New Spain . 526                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |          |
| Chaquia Province. p. 746. First settlement of Spaniards there. 747                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |          |
| Charramas, a Tribe of Indians . 258                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |          |
| Chaul, a City in India . 212                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |          |
| Cheap                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |          |
| Caarons. p. 747. They are punish'd. 754                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |          |
| Caena, or Bericon in Thebaida . 21                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |          |
| Caesarscher, who he is. 71                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |          |
| Caesarscher, what they are. ibid.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |          |
| Caia, a City and Port in Spain describ'd. 574                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |          |

The Index to the Fourth Volume.

|                                                                               |          |                                                                         |       |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------|
| Cheap travelling in Persia .                                           | page 127 | ties, Duty to Parents, Superstitions, page. 325                         |       |
| In China .                                                             | 312      | Industry, Fishing, Firding, Their Hair and                              |       |
| Champion Flowers.                                                      | 225      | Caps, p. 476. Their Shirts, Breeches, Stock                             |       |
| Changaiatu , a Village in China .                               | 300      | ings, Upper-garment, Buskins, Womens Ap                                 |       |
| China , who they are.                                                  | 70       | parel; their Features, Women, Weapons, 377                              |       |
| Chibimecas Indians.                                                    | 546      | Their Soldiery, Gold, Silver, and Coin, Pro                             |       |
| Tbilis , its Conquerors and Cities, as Santiago , Im     |          | vision they make for their Funeral, p. 378. Their                       |       |
| perial, Valdivia , Coquimbo , or Sorena , Osono , |          | Conffins, Places of Burial, Cercomnies just af                          |       |
| and Mendoza . p. 694. Description of the King                          |          | ter Death, the Friends Ceremonies, p. 379                               |       |
| dom, its Beauty, Fertility, and Wealth. 695                                   |          | Their funeral Procession, Mourning, Honours                             |       |
| Revolt there, the Governour kill'd, several                                   |          | after the Funeral, p. 380 Their Temples to                              |       |
| Spanish Towns destroy'd. p. 700. A new Go                                     |          | the Dead, Sacrifices, p. 381. Their Bribery,                            |       |
| vernour there. p. 701. General Pardon. A Je                                   |          | p. 382.                                                                 |       |
| suit undertakes to make peace. Indians recon                           |          | Chiquitos .                                                      | 752   |
| cil'd. State of the Kingdom. p. 705. A Col                                    |          | Chiriguans .                                                     | 780   |
| lege there.                                                                   | 714      | Cholula Village, in New Spain .                           | 553   |
| Chiloe Island.                                                         | 707      | Chofcir Port on the Red Sea.                                     | 21    |
| Chilpancingo Village in New Spain .                             | 506      | Christianity, when first in China .                              | 331   |
| Chimalpopoca , 3d King of Mexico .                              | 512      | Restor'd and lost again.                                                | Ibid. |
| China , its Length, Breadth, Confines and Divi                         |          | Christians excluded Japan and attempt to be                      |       |
| sion. p. 340. Islands, Wall'd places, Travel                                  |          | restor'd.                                                               | 291   |
| ling. p. 341. Military posts. p. 342. Forces,                                 |          | In China .                                                       | 336   |
| number of people. p. 343. Famous Men, and                                     |          | Chumans of Chile .                                        | 725   |
| Women, Mausoleums, Temples, and Bonzes,                                       |          | Their Food, Drink.                                                      | Ibid. |
| other Temples, Statues, Pictures, Monuments,                                  |          | Church of St. John in Malta .                             | 6     |
| Libraries, Rivers, Fountains, Mountains, Schools,                             |          | Of the Apostles, made a Mosque.                                         | 32    |
| Scholars, Palaces, Bridges. p. 344. Courts                                    |          | In a Rock.                                                              | 205   |
| of Justice, six of them Civil. p. 347. First, 2d,                             |          | Of several Nations.                                                     | 33    |
| and 3d Courts. p. 349. Fourth and 5th pun                                     |          | In Paraguay .                                                    | 658   |
| ishment of Criminals. p. 348. Sixth Court,                                    |          | Cinnamon -Tree.                                                  | 224   |
| Judges, and Officers of the Courts. Five Mar                                  |          | Cinnamon .                                                       | 464   |
| tial Courts. p. 349. Court of Visitors. p. 351                                |          | City of the Angels in New Spain , describ'd, its          |       |
| Courts of Batchelors, of Inspectors, of Emba                                  |          | Cathedral. p. 552. Its other Churches.                                  | 553   |
| sadors, of doubtful cases. p. 352. Associate                                  |          | Cities of the 2d Rank in China . p. 355. Inferior                |       |
| Court, another, Court of Horfes, of Mathema                                   |          | Cities.                                                                 | 356   |
| tick, College of Physicians, Masters of Cere                                  |          | Civility of a Chinese .                                          | 312   |
| monies, Gardiners, Chancery, Guards, Custom                                   |          | Clemeggy Basci , who he is.                                      | 70    |
| ers, Court for Malefactors. p. 353. Govern                                    |          | Cleopatra's Pyramids.                                            | 10    |
| nours Court. Courts under them, Court of the                                  |          | Climate of Persia .                                              | 163   |
| Royal Family, Court of the female Line, So                                    |          | Coaches drawn by Oxen.                                                  | 198   |
| vereign Court of each Province. p. 354. Courts                                |          | Cochinchina . p. 285. Its description and Fruit.                 | 286   |
| of Cities. p. 355. Plenty of Gold and Silver,                                 |          | Cochinille .                                                     | 542   |
| and Silk, Mines, p. 382. Wax, Wool, Furs,                                     |          | Coco-Tree describ'd.                                                    | 222   |
| Provision. p. 383. Tea, or Chia, Rubarb,                                      |          | Coco-Nuts.                                                              | 271   |
| Herbs, Flowers. p. 384. Wild Fowl, deliciou                                   |          | Coining at Mexico . p. 537. Several sorts.                       | 538   |
| ness of the Country, wholesome Air.                                           | 385      | Coins of Persia .                                                | 162   |
| Chinese Ladies visiting the Empress.                                   | 321      | At Goa .                                                         | 266   |
| Chinese Wall.                                                          | 323      | In China .                                                       | 303   |
| Chinese Imperial Family extirpated.                                    | 390      | Cold River over Minerals.                                               | 426   |
| Chinese Year.                                                          | 405      | Colonies abandon'd to build the Town of Assump                   |       |
| Chinese Ceremonies, Names and Titles, Modesty,                         |          | tion up the River of Plate. p. 689. Others in                           |       |
| Cloaths, Breeding common salute. p. 367. Vi                                   |          | Paraguay , destroy'd.                                            | 768   |
| sits, Presents. p. 368. Treats, p. 369. Nice                                  |          | Colour and Weapons of Indians near the Islands of                |       |
| ties in Discourse, Women, their Beauty and re                                 |          | Salomon .                                                        | 669   |
| tir'd Life, Marriages. p. 370. Widows, mi                                     |          | Colossus of Rhodes .                                      | 48    |
| serable condition of Women. Marriage when                                     |          | Columbines , a Tribe of Indians .                         | 257   |
| valid. Procreation enforc'd. p. 371. Cheats. 372                              |          | Columbus . p. 556. Discovers the West-Indies .            | 557   |
| Chineses , their Religion. p. 326. Their 2d Sect.                      |          | Comets seen in Corea .                                           | 619   |
| p. 327. Their 3d Sect. p. 328. Their Pilgri                                   |          | Comical Story.                                                          | 156   |
| mage. p. 330. Their ignorance in Cosmogra                                     |          | Commodities sold in some Markets at Ispahan .                    | 138   |
| phy, and other Affairs. p. 339. Their Cha                                     |          | Conception Town in Paraguay . 693, 753, and 699           |       |
| racters, two sorts of them; their Language.                                   |          | Condemn'd Malefactors chuse Death rather than                           |       |
| p. 357. Their Wit and Learning. p. 358. Their                                 |          | be left in Greenland .                                           | 812   |
| Antiquity, Books, Physick, p. 359. Books in                                   |          | Confucius and his Family.                                        | 366   |
| esteem, p. 360. Epitome of them. Mechanicks,                                  |          | Conspiracy of Indians of the River of Plate de                   |       |
| p. 361. Architecture, Structures, and Musick,                                 |          | tested, and punish'd.                                                   | 690   |
| p. 362. Navigation, Writing, Printing, Indu                                   |          | Another.                                                                | 783   |
| stry, p. 363. Their Division of the Night, and                                |          | Constantinople describ'd. p. 72. Its compass.                    | 80    |
| Navigation, p. 364. Several sorts of Boats, and                               |          | Controversie about Consecration of a Bishop.                            | 802   |
| Floats. p. 365. Their Presence, Peaceable Be                                  |          | Conversions at Esseco in Paraguay . p. 686. At Cor |       |
| haviour, Hardiness, their Pots, Glasses, castir                               |          | dopa in Tucuman .                                                | 695   |
| Accounts, Games, p. 373. Their trick to rob,                                  |          | Convert Indians defeated.                                        | 787   |
| their Earing and Drinking; rare Dishes, Edu                                   |          | Converts rais'd against the Mamelucks .                          | 798   |
| cation of Children, p. 374. Their Chairs, Fans,                               |          | Captus , a City in Thebaida .                             | 21    |
| Umbrelloes, Names, Surnames, Food, Antiqui                                    |          | Cordova , a City in Tucuman built. p. 701. A Col          |       |
|                                                                               |          | lege there. p. 714.                                                     |       |

The Index to the Fourth Volume.

|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |  |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--|
| Grecia Kingdom describ'd. Its situation, Division, Coasts, Bounds, Fishery, Cold, Product. 623                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |  |
| Absolute Monarchy, material Government. p. 624. Council, Revenue, Justice. p. 625                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |  |
| Religion. p. 627. Houses, Marriages, Education, p. ibid. Parents, Children, Mourning, Funerals, p. 629. Tobacco, Trade, Weights, Measures, Writing, Printing, Arithmetick, Manner of the King's going abroad. 631                                                                                                                   |  |
| Corefians charitable, p. 618. Their disposition, 630                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |  |
| Cornavaca , a City and Province in New Spain , 507                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |  |
| Corpus Christi Fort, on the River of Plate , built, 687                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |  |
| Corpus Christi Town, 730                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |  |
| Corrientes Town, on the Conflux of the Rivers Paraguay and Parana . 693                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |  |
| Cortes , his first Conquest, he advances to Tlascala , goes to Mexico , p. 558. Is drove out, comes again to Tlascala , is reinforc'd and returns to Mexico , p. 561. Is forsaken by the Indians , who return to him. Takes part of the City, and then the New King and all the City, 562 |  |
| His other Conquests. He is made a Marquess, 563                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |  |
| Cosibibir , or Kno City in Thebaida , 22                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |  |
| Cotorreras and Guacamajias Birds, 568                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |  |
| Country Houses of Bazaim , 203                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |  |
| Courts and Councils of Portugueses in India . 221                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |  |
| Cremnitz , the place where the Hungarian Gold and Silver are coin'd, 823                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |  |
| Cuio , or Chimiro Province, 708                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |  |
| Of the People of this Province, 738                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |  |
| Cupping an odd way, 177                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |  |
| Curious Garden, 186                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |  |
| Curious Stones in the Province of Guaira , 709                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |  |
| Currents in the Mediterranean , 846                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |  |
| Customs of the Egyptians , 45                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |  |
| Cuyo Island. 438                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |  |

D

|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |  |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--|
| D ABUL, a City in India , page 213                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |  |
| Damam City describ'd, p. 19. Its Air, Fortification, Government, Monasteries, the Old Town, 197                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |  |
| Damiata , a City in Egypt , 28                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |  |
| Dandara City, 21                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |  |
| Danger of Robbers, 108                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |  |
| Dangers on the Road in Persia , 124                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |  |
| Dara , Brother to Auraype Zebe , routed, 238                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |  |
| Defeated again, p. 239. Betray'd, his Son secur'd, 240                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |  |
| Darius's Palace describ'd, 170                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |  |
| Dassen Island, 829                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |  |
| Days length in January in Greenland , 818                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |  |
| Decree in favour of Christianity in China , 334                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |  |
| Delicious Island in the River Paraguay , 161                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |  |
| Democrat , a City in Thebaida , 23                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |  |
| Demons seen in Mines, 826                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |  |
| Deplorable condition of the Men left in Greenland , 817                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |  |
| Devices, 64                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |  |
| Devil's Mountain, 831                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |  |
| Diaguitas in Tucuman , their Superstitions and Conversion, 701                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |  |
| Diamants in Borneo , 254                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |  |
| Difference among the Armenians , 139                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |  |
| Difficulty in obstructing the Conversion of the Paraguarians , 772                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |  |
| Dinner given by the Kings of Persia , 148                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |  |
| Discoverers of the Isles of Salomon in distress, put into Cape Spiritu Santo , in the Philippin Island, p. 674. Put to Sea again for Manila , 775                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |  |
| Get an Indian Pilot, and are in great distress in sight of Manila , being kept out by contrary                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |  |
| Winds, p. 676. They get into the Harbour, 677                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |  |
| One of them returns to Peru , his Reasons for proceeding on the Discovery, 678                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |  |
| Discoveries of Tucuman , and Builders of Cities there, 696                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |  |
| Discovery of India , 248                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |  |
| Diseases in India , 499                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |  |
| Disne Town, 721                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |  |
| Distances of places in Paraguay , 781                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |  |
| Disturbance in Iguazu , 755                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |  |
| Divalies , or Festivals in India , 772                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |  |
| Diu Fort, 192                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |  |
| Division of Provinces in China , 355                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |  |
| Dobla , a Tribe of Indians , 258                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |  |
| Dogangi Bassi , and others, 68                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |  |
| Doleful Festival, 152                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |  |
| Dominions of Persia , 163                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |  |
| Dos Caminos , a Village in New Spain , 505                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |  |
| Dotoyan Fruit, 457                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |  |
| Durion Fruit, 271, and 464                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |  |
| Dutch Factory in Japan , 292                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |  |
| Dutch Ship departs Holland , meets with Storms, p. 609. Cast away on the Island Quelpaert , 610                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |  |
| Thirty six Men get a-shoar. The Natives surround them, p. ibid. They attempt to get away, but are punish'd, p. 613. Are convey'd to Court, p. 614. Arrive at the Court of Corea , p. 615. Two of them implore a Tartar Embassadors assistance. All of them banished the Court, p. 616. Their Employment. They Beg, p. 617. They are parted. p. 618. Hardly us'd. They contrive their Escape, p. 620 |  |
| Their Departure. Get to the Island Firando of Japan . p. 621. Arrive at Nangasaki , 622                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |  |
| Dying Men how us'd in India , 260                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |  |

|                                                                                             |  |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--|
| E Arthquakes, page 84, and 445                                                       |  |
| Earthquakes dangerous to the Mines, 326                                                     |  |
| Easiness of the Persians , 123                                                       |  |
| East India Company's Gardens at the Cape of Good Hope, 831                           |  |
| Escapi , a notable Tree, 771                                                         |  |
| Edoar , a City in India , 233                                                 |  |
| Eleven great Courts in China , 346                                                   |  |
| Elleiani Town, 21                                                                    |  |
| Embalming, the manner of it, 27                                                             |  |
| Emirabur Bassi , what he is, 70                                                      |  |
| Emperor of China describ'd, 321                                                      |  |
| His Country House, and manner of going abroad, 324                                          |  |
| Emperor of China's Pedigree, 383                                                     |  |
| Emperor of China hangs himself, 387                                                  |  |
| Emperor of China mad in Love, 390                                                    |  |
| His Death, 391                                                                              |  |
| Empire of the Mogol , 243                                                            |  |
| Employment, and civility of the Moors . 189                                          |  |
| Engbiamiasen Church, a Monastery in Persia , 112                              |  |
| English and Dutch lighted, and French honoured, 84                     |  |
| English well rewarded for a base Action, 181                                         |  |
| Erivan City describ'd, 113                                                           |  |
| Its Mint, Bridge, River, Suburb. Ibid.                                                      |  |
| Error of the Antients, 183                                                                  |  |
| Erzerum City describ'd, 104                                                          |  |
| Escapusalco , in New Spain , 542                                              |  |
| Eschigiami Mosque, 61                                                                |  |
| Escurial , its Church and Pantheon, 582                                              |  |
| Espiritu santo Fort in Paraguay , built, 683                                  |  |
| Indians conspire to destroy it, and slaughter of Spaniards there, 684                |  |
| Esquiodalar , the Old quarter of the Fanizaries at Constantinople , 77 |  |
| Esqui-ferra , a Seraglio at Constantinople , 80                        |  |
| Estero                                                                               |  |

|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |          |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------|
| They were in Chile                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | page 703 |
| Thirty seven of them arrive at Buenos Ayres,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | P. 714   |
| Jesuits murder'd, their dead Bodies recover'd.                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 749      |
| Jesuits describ'd by the Spanish Governour and Bishop. p. 775. Falsely accus'd of concealing Gold                                                                                                                                                                            | 803.     |
| What they did in Brazil.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 761      |
| Jesus-Maria Town in Paraguay. p. 756. Rebuilt.                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 763      |
| Juchin Village in China.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 303      |
| Ignis fatuus.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 704      |
| Iguazu River.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 740      |
| Iron Coast.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 274      |
| Illice, a Province in Manila.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 434      |
| Imans, what they are.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 71       |
| Imperfect begining of the Relation of the Islands of Salomon.                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 665      |
| Imperial Families in China.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 338      |
| Imperial Palace in China burnt.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 392      |
| Incarnation Town.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 736      |
| India, its Heat and Seasons, clear Air, and Product. p. 253. Flowers, Herbs, Metals, Diamond Mines, and how they are found; Gazels, other Beasts and Elephants.                                                                                                              | 254      |
| Musk-Goat and Coin.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 255      |
| Indian Apples.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 225      |
| Indian Women burnt with their Husbands.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 230      |
| Indians describ'd, their Disposition, Language, and Learning. p. 251. Their Habit, Women, Marriages, barbarous Liberty, Punishment, Burials. 252. Their Mourning.                                                                                                            | 253      |
| Indians of the Philippine Islands, their Writing, Languages, Customs, making Obeisance, Civility. p. 446. Their Person, Habit, Liquors. p. 447. Musick, Dancing, Bathing, Cures, Religion.                                                                                   | 448      |
| Indians of the Plains.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 746      |
| Indians of the fourth River of Paraguay.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 800      |
| Ings ador'd in Peru.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 520      |
| Inhama boni, Fruit.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 206      |
| Inhuman Blacks.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 216      |
| Inns between Acapulco and Mexico.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 505      |
| Inquisition in India.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 221      |
| Insects and venomous Creatures at the Cape of Good Hope.                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 833      |
| Instances of crafty Treachery in the Indians.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 688      |
| Introduction to the History of Paraguay and Tucuman.                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 682      |
| Joguis, Indian Penitents.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 258      |
| John Oyola crosses by Land from the River of Plate to Peru. p. 687. Slaughter of him and his Men.                                                                                                                                                                            | 688      |
| Joseph's Granaries in Egypt.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 14       |
| His Well at Grand Cairo.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 16       |
| Jpanensians in South America subdu'd.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 691      |
| Jrala, Governour of the River of Plate. 688, and 692                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |          |
| Islands of Salomon, four of them describ'd.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 665      |
| Colour of the Indians. Their strength. The Discoverers Land in one of the Islands, fall at variance with the Natives, and are reconcil'd. p. 666. Their Boat. p. 667. Their sorts of Fruit. The Discoverers sail from them, and find four more. p. 668. They land again. 669 |          |
| Indians come on board, one of them changes his Name with the Spanish Commander.                                                                                                                                                                                              | 670      |
| The Natives fall out with the Spaniards, who burn and make Spoil, and then are reconcil'd.                                                                                                                                                                                   | 671      |
| Ismael Sophy, King of Persia.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 163      |
| Ismael the II.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 163      |
| Japan City describ'd. p. 131. Its Compass, Gates, Streets, Houses, Furniture. p. 132. Its Populousness, the Manarkale Tower, Dutch Company's House, Sackbach Street, or Highway. p. 133. Another Street or High-Way, the King's Garden, the Park.                            |          |

|                                            |     |
|--------------------------------------------|-----|
| Iapua describ'd.                           | 716 |
| Iatina Province.                           | 273 |
| Judgment upon Murder.                      | 692 |
| Junfu Village in China.                    | 303 |
| Jus Bassi, a Commander in Persia. His pay. | 127 |

K

|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |              |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------|
| KARS City describ'd.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 109          |
| Kescimi Island.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 189          |
| Kisharr Church at Errian.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 113          |
| Kignanfu, a City in China.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 303          |
| Killing of Elephants and Lions.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 215          |
| Kinchioer Town in China.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 204          |
| King of Persia's Sickness and Charity. He dies Why he chang'd his Name. p. 140. His cruelty, Lasciviousness, Drunkenness and Stupidity. 141. His Fraud and Funeral. p. 141. The new King's Inauguration He forbids drinking Wine. His Generosity. p. 148. His Stables and Horses, Mint and Garden, p. 149. His Retirement. | 152          |
| King's Mosch in Persia.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 137, and 147 |
| King's of Spain, their care of the Indians.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 698          |
| Kischuixien, a Town in China.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 303          |
| Kislaragah, what Officer he is.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 67           |
| Knavery of a Guard.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 108          |
| Kno. Vid. Cosbobir.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |              |
| Kom a City in Persia.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 128          |
| Kurds, a People in Persia.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 110          |

L

|                                                                                |     |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Labyriath in Egypt.                                                            | 27  |
| Ladronas Islands.                                                              | 672 |
| Lake very deep.                                                                | 425 |
| Lama, great Priest of the Tartars.                                             | 325 |
| His Temple and Habit of his inferior Lamas.                                    | 326 |
| Lar, a City in Persia.                                                         | 179 |
| Last Chinese Imperial Family.                                                  | 387 |
| Leander's Tower.                                                               | 79  |
| Leyte Island.                                                                  | 441 |
| Liberty for Christian Religion restor'd in China.                              | 335 |
| Libya City.                                                                    | 20  |
| Licosa Point in Italy.                                                         | 2   |
| Lions Mountain.                                                                | 830 |
| Lodi City in Italy.                                                            | 598 |
| London, a City in Tucuman. Other Towns there, and Antiquity of those Province. | 697 |
| Long Bridge.                                                                   | 59  |
| Loreto and S. Ignatius, Towns in the Province of Guaira.                       | 710 |
| Lubat, a City in the lesser Asia.                                              | 87  |
| Lubon, one of the Philippine Islands.                                          | 437 |
| Luckerem, a City in Thebaida.                                                  | 22  |
| Lumbon-Tree.                                                                   | 458 |
| Lumboy - Fruit.                                                                | 457 |

M

|                                                                                                              |     |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Macaguas, Birds in the Province of Guaira.                                                                   | 710 |
| Macao City. p. 289 Its Fort, Subjection to China, pays great Impositions, the Government and decay of Trade. | 290 |
| Madrid describ'd. The Placa Mayor, p. 581. The Mercenaries, the Hospital.                                    | 582 |
| Makompt the 1st, 2d, and 3d, and 4th Emperors of the Turks.                                                  | 98  |
| Mahomet Codabembe, King of Persia.                                                                           | 163 |
| Mahomet's Mosch.                                                                                             | 79  |
| Mahometan Ceremony.                                                                                          | 64  |
| Majors and Men married young in Paraguay.                                                                    | 657 |
| Majordom.                                                                                                    | 226 |
| Majm.                                                                                                        |     |

|                                                              |          |
|--------------------------------------------------------------|----------|
| Mai City in India.                                    | page 202 |
| Malabars.                                             | 213      |
| Malacca City, its Fort. p. 271. Its Port and Na-      | 272      |
| tives.                                                |          |
| Malackabe, an Indian Goddeſs.                         | 259      |
| Malayes and Tagalians, Inhabitants of the Philip-     |          |
| pine Iſlands.                                         | 430      |
| Malaga City.                                          | 59       |
| Malis, a Tribe of Indians.                            | 257      |
| Malta Iſland, the Port, and City.                     | 5        |
| Mamtlucks, their Invaſion of Paraguay.                | 754      |
| Their Original and Manners.                                  | 757      |
| They deſtroy the Town of St. Antony.                  | 759      |
| Plunder thoſe of St. Michael , and Jeſu Maria. | 760      |
| Deſtroy the Town of St. Joſeph , the Angels ,  |          |
| and St. Peter and Paul.                        | 775      |
| Dread of them.                                               | 785      |
| Deſtroy St. Chriſtophers.                             | 787      |
| Relief fought againſt them.                                  | 788      |
| They deſtroy the Towns of St. Charles , and           |          |
| St. Peter , are defeated.                             | 789      |
| Again. p. 790. Routed.                                       | 793      |
| Manaſia, a large City.                                | 86       |
| Mandarines in China, their ſeveral Degrees.           | 345      |
| Their Preferments, Number, Rules for them.                   | 356      |
| Mangalar the Iſls.                                    | 193      |
| Mangkians, People of the Philippine Iſlands.          | 431      |
| Mango-Tree.                                           | 223      |
| Manguiſtan Fruit.                                     | 272      |
| Man of a wonderful Age.                               | 192      |
| Manila City, its ſituation, ſtrength, Building, In-   |          |
| habitants, Habit, Suburbs, Chineſe Quarter.           |          |
| p. 420. Other Suburbs or Hamlets, Monastery                  |          |
| of St. Clare , Chappel Royal, Orphans, Hoſpi-         |          |
| tal. p. 421. The Auguſtinians , the Caſtle, Je-       |          |
| ſuits College, Cathedral, Barefoot Auguſtini-         |          |
| ans , Dominicans. p. 422. The Royal Hoſpital.  |          |
| p. 423. The Franciſcans , another Hoſpital,           |          |
| S. Lazarus , Powder-Houſe, Cock-fighting, Court       |          |
| of judicature, Governours Palace, Rocolets.                  |          |
| p. 424. The Archbishops and Biſhops, Govern-                 |          |
| our and Court. p. 426. Greatneſs of the Gov-                 |          |
| ernment, ſevere Tryal of the Governours.                     |          |
| 427. The Iſland deſcribed. p. 432. Its Pro-                  |          |
| duct.                                                        | 435      |
| Manner of taking Degrees in China.                    | 350      |
| Of going in Pilgrimage in India.                      | 262      |
| Manſeldars, Gentlemen in India.                       | 249      |
| Many Iſlands.                                         | 273      |
| Marinduque, one of the Philippine Iſlands.            | 436      |
| Marmora, and five other Iſlands.                      | 83       |
| Marriage contract in Paraguay.                        | 658      |
| Marroſalick City in Egypt.                            | 19       |
| Marſelles, City and Port.                             | 590      |
| Masbate one of the Philippine Iſlands.                | 436      |
| Mafcate Town in Arabia.                               | 220      |
| At war with Portugal.                                 | 187      |
| Maſtick Trees.                                        | 52       |
| Mataraxians of Paraguay.                              | 699      |
| Mathematical Inſtrument of Miners.                    | 826      |
| Maviguaym.                                            | 802      |
| Meidan, or Royal Palace of Perſia.                    | 136      |
| Mellam, a City in Egypt.                              | 27       |
| Melons of Perſia.                                     | 161      |
| Merida, a City in Spain.                              | 580      |
| Merin's Journey to the Mines of Hungary.              | 822      |
| Meffengers in Perſia.                                 | 127      |
| Meffina, a City in Sicily.                            | 3        |
| Metellin, or Mytlene Iſland.                          | 55       |
| Mexican Age.                                          | 515      |
| Mexican Years, Months, Days and Weeks.                | 517      |
| Mexican Leap-Year.                                    | 519      |
| Sacrifices.                                                  | 519      |
| Souldiers.                                                   | 520      |
| Mexicans, their Vices.                                | 521      |

|                                                                     |            |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------|------------|
| Mexico City deſcribed. Its Monafteries.                      | page 408   |
| dral, Climate.                                                      |            |
| Fable of its Original.                                              | 409        |
| Its firſt Government.                                               | 411        |
| Puniſhment of Malefactors, Proceſſion, Con-                  |            |
| lites,                                                       | 412        |
| Nuns of the Conception , Dominicans , Auguſti- |            |
| ans , Incarnation , Nuns, Exchequer,           | 414        |
| Proceſſion, a fine Tabernacle.                                      | 427        |
| The City ſubject to Inundation. A great Ca-                         |            |
| nal to carry away the Water.                                        | 430        |
| The Royal Palace, multitude of Thieves, Tri-                 |            |
| nity Hoſpital, Corpus Chriſti , Proceſſion, Our       |            |
| his Tomb, College of Orphans,                                       | 443        |
| Solemnity there del Pendon , or of the Standard.             |            |
| A rich Image.                                                       | 445        |
| Milan deſcrib'd.                                             | 596        |
| Mindanao Iſland. p. 463. Its product.                        | 464        |
| Mindoro, one of the Philippine Iſlands,                      | 436        |
| Miners ſhort liv'd.                                          | 824        |
| Mines in Turkey,                                             | 102        |
| In Perſia,                                                   | 162        |
| Of Pachuca in New Spain,                              | 533        |
| The Ore broken and pounded, how run, re-                            |            |
| fining, making coarſe Ore,                                          | 535        |
| Waſhing,                                                            | 536        |
| The Mines free to all Men. How divided, how                         |            |
| drained, the King's due.                                            | 537        |
| Mines ſhew the change of Weather,                            | 826        |
| Minieleben Echarſin, a City in Egypt,                        | 19         |
| Mirza Talers, a Palace at Tauris,                            | 121        |
| Miſſioners Habit in Paraguay,                                | 662        |
| Their Employment,                                                   | 663        |
| Modena, a City in Italy.                                     | 599        |
| Mogol's Camp, his own Quarters,                              | 233        |
| His Service, Horſes, Elephants, Son, and more                       |            |
| of his Quarters,                                                    | 234        |
| His giving Audience, and review of Elephants,                       |            |
| p. 235. His Birth-day.                                              | 250        |
| Mogols, their Weapons, Arms, deſenſive Soldi-                |            |
| ers, how paid. p. 249. Their Foot, Cannon,                   |            |
| Country Troops, Forces duly paid,                            | 250        |
| Mogorine Plant,                                              | 225        |
| Monaco, a City in Italy,                                     | 592        |
| Monafteries in Perſia,                                       | 112        |
| Monkeys, how taken,                                          | 231        |
| Monſter in America,                                          | 692        |
| Montagna Town,                                               | 89         |
| Montezuma, the 4th King of Mexico,                           | 512        |
| Montezuma, laſt King of Mexico,                              | 513        |
| His Offspring,                                                      | 544        |
| Account of him,                                                     | 558        |
| He is ſecur'd,                                                      | 559        |
| Is killed,                                                          | 560        |
| Montpelier a City in France,                                 | 588        |
| Mofch in Perſia much honour'd,                               | 128        |
| Mountain of Baſam,                                           | 178        |
| Mozambique in Africk,                                        | 219        |
| Muezins, what they are,                                      | 71         |
| Mullahs,                                                     | 71         |
| Mummies in Egypt,                                            | 27         |
| Muphti,                                                      | 66, and 70 |
| Muradio, a Monastery of Turkiſh Monks,                       | 64         |
| Muſcovite Embaſſadors in China,                              | 337        |
| Muſick in Paraguay,                                          | 658        |
| Muſtaſpha, the Grand Seigneur,                               | 99         |
| Mutiny at Rio de Janeiro , and Town of Santos ,       |            |
| and at S. Paul , p. 795. In the Province of Ita-      |            |
| rina.                                                        | 804        |
| N                                                                   |            |
| Nauade, a City in Thebaida,                                  | 22         |
| Nab-Ciran, a City deſcribed,                                 | 115        |
| Naipu, what they are,                                        | 71         |
| Naires, Sorcerers in India. Their Women are in               |            |
| common,                                                             | 260        |
| Nalappin City,                                               | 20         |
| Names                                                               |            |

|                                                          |          |
|----------------------------------------------------------|----------|
| Esteco Town,                                      | page 714 |
| Ethiopian Facbir,                                 | 186      |
| Eunuchs in the Ottoman Court,                     | 67       |
| Euphrates, River,                                 | 105      |
| Exact Justice of a Mahometan,                     | 241      |
| Excessive Heat,                                   | 182      |
| Exortion to the River Tebiquar,                   | 783      |
| Exhalations of the Mines,                         | 824      |
| Experiment made upon a Stone taken out of a Mine, | 827      |
| Exortion of the Turks,                            | 105      |
| Of the Custom-House-Officers at Macao.            | 416      |

F

|                                                                                                                               |              |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------|
| Fachires, or Indian Penitents,                                                                                         | 201          |
| Faithful couple murder'd,                                                                                              | 684          |
| False Accounts of China                                                                                                | 397          |
| Fallhood of the Account of the Dutch Embassy to Peking,                                                                | 414          |
| Falseness of the Greeks,                                                                                               | 14           |
| Famine in Corea,                                                                                                       | 618          |
| In Paraguay,                                                                                                           | 746          |
| Famous Sorcerer,                                                                                                       | 739          |
| Farasis, a Tribe of Indians,                                                                                           | 258          |
| Fazil's Tomb,                                                                                                          | 129          |
| Fau City,                                                                                                              | 20           |
| Favours granted the Procurator of the Jesuits,                                                                         | 794          |
| Fernoso River,                                                                                                         | 273          |
| Festival of Lanthorns in China,                                                                                        | 407          |
| Fierce Indians in Paraguay,                                                                                            | 699          |
| Fig-Tree,                                                                                                              | 222          |
| Firando Island, one of those of Japan,                                                                                 | 621          |
| Fire-Arms granted the Indians,                                                                                         | 791          |
| Fisher-men a religious Tribe in India,                                                                                 | 258          |
| Fishes at the Cape of Good Hope,                                                                                       | 832          |
| Fishing in China,                                                                                                      | 303          |
| Floats,                                                                                                                | 505          |
| Florence City describ'd. St. Laurence's Church there,                                                                  | 600          |
| The Cathedral St. John's Church, Great Duke's Galley,                                                                  | 601          |
| The Palace, S. Michael's Church,                                                                                       | 602          |
| Florida Indians,                                                                                                       | 568          |
| Flowers in Persia,                                                                                                     | 161          |
| Flying Fish and Dory,                                                                                                  | 191          |
| Focia, a Town in the lesser Asia,                                                                                      | 84           |
| Forduch, a Village near Constantinople,                                                                                | 74           |
| Fox's signatus,                                                                                                        | 38           |
| Foolish piece of Knavery,                                                                                              | 201          |
| Fort of the City Rhodes,                                                                                               | 48           |
| Fort entring the Dardanel.                                                                                             | 56           |
| Forty Spaniards erect a Fort on the Coast of Brazil. Take a French Ship, rout the Portuguese, and retire to an Island, | 685          |
| Founders of the Chinese Monarchy,                                                                                      | 338          |
| Of Cities in New Spain,                                                                                                | 510          |
| Four great Eunuchs.                                                                                                    | 68           |
| Four legg'd Beasts at the Cape of Good Hope,                                                                           | 832          |
| Fowls in Persia,                                                                                                       | 162          |
| Foxes taken and eaten by the Men left in Greenland,                                                                    | 819          |
| Fransicans at Nankins,                                                                                                 | 308          |
| Fresh Water in the Sea,                                                                                                | 184          |
| Frontones of Paraguay, their Manners,                                                                                  | 699          |
| Fruit in Egypt,                                                                                                        | 44           |
| In Persia,                                                                                                             | 161          |
| In India,                                                                                                              | 198          |
| In New Spain,                                                                                                          | 549, and 550 |
| Fucheu, or Xueheu, a Town in China,                                                                                    | 305          |
| Fuel, how provided by the Men left in Greenland,                                                                       | 816          |
| Funeral in China,                                                                                                      | 410          |
| Of a Lady descended from Montezuma, at Mexico,                                                                         | 544          |
| Fusian City in China,                                                                                                  | 298          |

G

|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |     |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| G Abot takes possession of the River of Plate for the King of Spain,                                                                                                                                                                                         | 683 |
| Galasa, a Town near Constantinople,                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 74  |
| Gallipoli, City,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 58  |
| Gantias, a Tribe of Indians,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 258 |
| Gaulis, a Tribe of Indians,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 257 |
| Gearon, a City in Persia,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 178 |
| Gemelli's Reasons for travelling,                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 1   |
| Embarks and sails for Malta and Alexandria, ib. Return: to Alexandria,                                                                                                                                                                                       | 42  |
| His Journey to Constantinople,                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 71  |
| His Voyage to Smirna,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 82  |
| His Journey to Bursa,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 86  |
| His Voyage to Trabezond,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 99  |
| His Journey to Erzerum,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 102 |
| Is order'd back with the Jesuits to Trabezond,                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 105 |
| Obtains leave to go to Persia,                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 106 |
| His Journey to Kars,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 107 |
| Thence to Erivan,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 111 |
| Thence to Tauris,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 114 |
| Thence to Isphahan,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 129 |
| Thence to Seiras,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 167 |
| His Voyage to Damam,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 189 |
| Thence to Bazaim,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 201 |
| To Goa,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 211 |
| His Journey to Galgala in India,                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 227 |
| His return to Goa,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | 264 |
| His Voyage to Malaca,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 268 |
| To the Coast of Cochinchina,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 282 |
| To Macao,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 287 |
| To Canton in China,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 294 |
| His Journey to Nanyangsu,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 298 |
| To Nankin,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 304 |
| To Peking,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 314 |
| Returns to Nanchyangsu,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 397 |
| To Canton,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 402 |
| To Macao,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 411 |
| His Voyage from Macao to the Philippine Islands,                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 417 |
| Thence to Acapulco in New Spain,                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 478 |
| His Journey to Mexico,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 505 |
| To the City of Angels,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 550 |
| To Vera Cruz,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 553 |
| His Voyage to Havana,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 566 |
| Thence to Cadiz,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 570 |
| His Journey to Madrid,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 579 |
| To Thoulouse,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 582 |
| To Merjeilles,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 588 |
| To Genoa,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 591 |
| To Milan,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 595 |
| To Bologna,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 598 |
| To Florence,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 600 |
| To Rome,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 602 |
| Thence to Naples, concluding his Voyage round the World,                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 603 |
| Genoa City describ'd. p. 592 The Doge's Palace, Prince Doria's Palace The Jesuits, S. Laurence. Palace of Durazzo, Barefoot Carmelites, Theatins, p. 593. Hospital, Senate, Pharos, 594 S. Francis, the Assumption, St. George's Hill, Doria's Palace again, | 595 |
| Genoese Ship at Buenos Ayres,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 689 |
| General Hunting,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 728 |
| General Confection,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 750 |
| Gentle actions of blacks,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 215 |
| Gentils at Bazaim,                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | 263 |
| Gentils of India will not eat with others. Foolish Opinion of theirs,                                                                                                                                                                                        | 260 |
| Georgin gives an Account of his Life.                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 123 |
| Giabell-Hare Mountain.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 20  |
| Goa, a City in India. p. 213. Its Inhabitants and Capabilities there. p. 214. Blacksthere.                                                                                                                                                                   | 215 |

|                                                                                                                                                                                                        |                   |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------|
| Its Port. p. 216. The Cathedral, Recolets, Great Wall, Dominicans, Augustinians, Theatines, Franciscans, Sagu Root. p. 27. The Augustinian Nuns, a Miraculous Cross, other Dominicans and Franciscans. | 218               |
| Gold and Copper Mines in Persia.                                                                                                                                                                       | 122               |
| Gold and Silver Centers in India.                                                                                                                                                                      | 248               |
| Gold Mines in Hungary.                                                                                                                                                                                 | 823               |
| Goris, a People in Persia, their Village, Temple, Fire, Marriages, Religion, Funerals, and Habit.                                                                                                      | 143               |
| Gormandel Village.                                                                                                                                                                                     | 204               |
| Gotto Island, one of those of Japan.                                                                                                                                                                   | 622               |
| Government of Egypt.                                                                                                                                                                                   | 44                |
| Of the Portuguese in India.                                                                                                                                                                            | 221               |
| Governour of the River of Plate, sent Prisoner into Spain.                                                                                                                                             | 692               |
| Granadillo Flower.                                                                                                                                                                                     | 710               |
| Grand Cairo in Egypt. p. 13. Its bigness.                                                                                                                                                              | 15                |
| Grand Seignior his Attendance. 61, and 66. His Person                                                                                                                                                  | 62                |
| Grand Vizier, how created, and how attended, p. 66. His Office.                                                                                                                                        | 70                |
| Grapes of Persia.                                                                                                                                                                                      | 161               |
| Graves of Whales Fat eaten by the Men left in Greenland.                                                                                                                                               | 817               |
| Great Master of Malta. p. 6. His Palace. Ibid.                                                                                                                                                         |                   |
| Great Pyrate.                                                                                                                                                                                          | 389               |
| Great Rebellion.                                                                                                                                                                                       | 386               |
| Great Charity.                                                                                                                                                                                         | 541               |
| Great Fort in the Kingdom of Corea.                                                                                                                                                                    | 615               |
| Great Colony sent to the River of Plate.                                                                                                                                                               | 685               |
| Greek Sanctum Sanctorum.                                                                                                                                                                               | 41                |
| Greek Nuns.                                                                                                                                                                                            | 52                |
| Greek Church at Constantinople.                                                                                                                                                                        | 81                |
| Greenland described. p. 810. Nine Men left there die miserably.                                                                                                                                        | 813               |
| Grege City.                                                                                                                                                                                            | 20                |
| Gregni-Tenimares Mosch.                                                                                                                                                                                | 63                |
| Guadalupe, in New Spain.                                                                                                                                                                               | 528               |
| Guicureans live dispersed. Their way of War. First introducing of Christianity among them. p. 713. Their Obsequies. p. 728. They are Instructed. Their Customs and madness.                            | 732               |
| Guaira Province. p. 709. The occasion of its desolation. p. 759. Troubles there.                                                                                                                       | 761               |
| Guairapo, a strange Bird.                                                                                                                                                                              | 771               |
| Guairaver, a Cazique solicited to embrace the Faith.                                                                                                                                                   | 752               |
| Gualaches.                                                                                                                                                                                             | ibid.             |
| Guam, one of the Islands Iadrones.                                                                                                                                                                     | 673               |
| Guanganxien, a City in China.                                                                                                                                                                          | 303               |
| Guarianas, their Houses. p. 717. Their Women, Hospitality, Witchcraft, Superstitions. Their Childrens Names, Errors of theirs. Their Marriages.                                                        | 718719771 |
| Guembe Fruit.                                                                                                                                                                                          | 70                |
| Guichilac, a Village in New Spain.                                                                                                                                                                     | 507               |
| Gulara, a Fruit in India.                                                                                                                                                                              | 232               |

H

|                                                                                               |       |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------|
| Haber, a City in Persia.                                                                      | 125   |
| Habit of Egyptians. p. 44. Of India.                                                          | 199   |
| Of the Kings and Princes of Mexico. p. 520. Of the Indians of Mexico now.                     | 520   |
| Hall, where the King of Persia gives audience.                                                | 148   |
| Havagis, what they are.                                                                       | 69    |
| Hamet, Emperor of the Turks.                                                                  | 99    |
| Hamet's Sepulcher.                                                                            | 77    |
| Hassan's Festival in Persia.                                                                  | 153   |
| Hastaler Agasi, what he is.                                                                   | 69    |
| Havana City and Port, and Cuba Island described. p. 567. Its Port, Fruits, Birds, and Beasts. | 570   |
| The Castle del Morro.                                                                         | ibid. |

|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |               |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------------|
| Hawkins in Persia.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | page 162      |
| Heat in deep Mines.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 805           |
| Heathen Temples in Persia.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 121           |
| Herbs of Persia.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 162           |
| Hermitage of Bare-foot Carmelites described.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 240           |
| The House, its vast inclosure, strange Crows there, Mountain of Idols, the Founder.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 58            |
| Herod's Palace.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 34            |
| High Mountain.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 124           |
| Hogias, what they are.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 71            |
| Holy Cross.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | 39            |
| Holy Sepulcher.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 29            |
| Honesty of Chineses.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 312           |
| Honour of the yellow Girdle in China.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 398           |
| Horse Tails carry'd in the Turkish Army.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 69            |
| Hospital of Malta.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 7             |
| For Birds and Beasts in India.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 201           |
| Hot Waters.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | 425, and 433. |
| Hotentots, their Country.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 834           |
| Their Neighbours Shape and make of their Bodies, p. 835. Their Garment. p. 836. Their Dwellings, Household-stuff, Genius and Temper. 837. Their Manners. p. 838. Their way of living, and manner of making War. p. 839. Their way of Trafficking. p. 840. Their manner of Dancing, Religion, and Magistrates. 841. Their Laws and Customs. Their Marriages. p. 840. Education of their Children, their Handicrafts, and Physick. 843. Their Language. | 844           |
| House where the Blessed Virgin Mary dyed.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 32            |
| House built by the Men left in Greenland.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 815           |
| Huillans, a People near the Streights of Magellan, their Houses.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 726           |
| Huitzlaubili the 2d King of Mexico.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 512           |
| Hundredth Year of the Society of Jesus celebrated.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 800           |
| Hungarians no Friends to Strangers.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 822           |
| Hunting in Greenland.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 814           |
| Hurricanes.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | 287, and 291  |

I

|                                                                                     |              |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------|
| I A F F A, or Toppe, a City and Port on the Coast of the Holy Land.                 | 29           |
| Iapnapua Town Built.                                                                | 719          |
| Jambo-Tree.                                                                         | 224          |
| Jamboa Fruit.                                                                       | 272, and 458 |
| Janbolon-Tree.                                                                      | 223          |
| Jangoma-Tree.                                                                       | 224          |
| Janisfarchi, a place of Drugsters and Linnen Drapers Shops in Constantinople.       | 77           |
| Japegu, one of the 26 converted Cantons of Paraguay.                                | 659          |
| Japoneses, their Submission, their Courtesy                                         | 292          |
| Jaqua-Tree.                                                                         | ibid.        |
| Ibapirius subdu'd.                                                                  | 765          |
| Abians murder a Jesuit. Their punishment.                                           | 785ibid. |
| Ibicuit, or Purification Town.                                                      | 745          |
| Ibitirambetans.                                                                     | 732          |
| Ibitiraquans, their Courage.                                                        | 750          |
| Ibrahim, Emperor of the Turks.                                                      | 98           |
| Ibrahim's Palace at Constantinople.                                                 | 79           |
| Idol Protector of Cities in China.                                                  | 330          |
| Idol of the Soldiers.                                                               | 330          |
| Idolaters washing.                                                                  | 186          |
| Idolatrous Festival.                                                                | 184          |
| Idolatrous Ceremony.                                                                | 191          |
| Idolatrous Provision.                                                               | 315          |
| Jenkiesu, a City in China.                                                          | ibid.        |
| Jesuits, their first entrance into China. In Tucuman. p. 698. At Salta, and Esteco. | 331ibid. |
| They repair to Santiago.                                                            | ibid.        |
| They                                                                                | 17           |

Names of China, p. 300. Name of contempe given it. 340

|                                                   |             |
|---------------------------------------------------|-------------|
| Nanchien Town in China.                           | 302         |
| Nanchienfu, a City in China.                      | 293         |
| Nanchienfu, a City in China. Its great Canal.     | 301         |
| Nanchienfu Mountain,                              | 403         |
| Nanchienfu Port in Japan,                         | 293         |
| Nanchienfu, the 2d Metropolis of China describ'd. |             |
| Its vast number of inhabitants, p. 307. The       |             |
| Palace there, excellency of the City, Silk-       |             |
| worke, Government, p. 308. A vast Bell            |             |
| there, Structure on Arches, Place of Mathe-       |             |
| matical Observations, a Pagod, a Temple of        |             |
| Bonzes, p. 309. The Suburb, a wonderful           |             |
| Tower, p. 310. Emperor's Tomb, human              |             |
| Dung fold,                                        | 311         |
| Nanchienfu City in China,                         | 305         |
| Narvaez sent against Cortes,                      | 559         |
| Is Routed,                                        | 560         |
| Nativity Town built,                              | 738         |
| Nativity of Arica Town                            | 778         |
| Navarrens Fort in the low Navarre                 | 585         |
| Nazar a great Persian Officer,                    | 165         |
| Negapatan in the Kingdom of Madure in India,      | 290         |
| Negrillos Natives of the Philippine-Islands,      | 431         |
| Negros Island                                     | 442         |
| New Governour of Quelpaert uses the Dutch ill,    | 613         |
| New Morica,                                       | 525         |
| Nicobar Island                                    | 269         |
| Niequvius purtula in value,                       | 755         |
| Nile River,                                       | 12          |
| Nobility in China,                                | 366         |
| Nobility of the Spanish Planters of Paraguay      | 692         |
| Noble Baths                                       | 88          |
| Noble Bridge in China,                            | 399         |
| Noble Tomb in China                               | ibid.       |
| Noble Lanthorns there,                            | 408         |
| Notable Passage,                                  | 51          |
| Notable Well,                                     | 19          |
| Notable Story of a Persian,                       | 118         |
| Notable gathering of Water,                       | 130         |
| Notable Charity,                                  | 544         |
| Notable Accident,                                 | 674 and 702 |
| Notable escape of two Converts,                   | 792         |
| Noted Idols in Mexico,                            | 520         |
| Noto City in Sicily                               | 4           |
| Nuns, the first in Tucuman,                       | 719         |

|                                             |       |
|---------------------------------------------|-------|
| Anson City in China,                        | 294   |
| Ocloias Indians,                            | 792   |
| Odd Structure,                              | 409   |
| Officers of Note in the Persian Court, 165, | 166   |
| Officers of the Mat in Mexico, and value of |       |
| their Places,                               | 538   |
| Old Cairo in Egypt                          | 13    |
| Olivet Mount,                               | 35    |
| Omlam Tree,                                 | 225   |
| Omrabs, p. 233 degrees of them, their Num-  |       |
| ber and Duty                                | 249   |
| Onses or Ounses in Persia,                  | 162   |
| Opinions of the Indians concerning one God, | 259   |
| Orcanes Emper of the Turks,                 | 97    |
| Original of the Kings of Visapor,           | 263   |
| Of the Kings of Golconda,                   | ibid. |
| Ormaiz Island,                              | 189   |
| Ormaiz Otomah,                              | 97    |
| Ormaiz the 2d                               | 98    |
| Ormaiz in Tauris,                           | 119   |
| Ormaiz the Cape at Goa,                     | 266   |
| Ormaiz de los Remedios in New Spain,        | 529   |

P.

|                                                    |                 |
|----------------------------------------------------|-----------------|
| Arbas-flower,                                      | 226             |
| Padalin plant,                                     | ibid.           |
| Pagan Kings in India,                              | 262             |
| Pagod near Bander-Congo, and Ceremonies us'd       |                 |
| at it,                                             | 186             |
| Pagod of Sallet or Canarin very wonderful,         | 205             |
| Pagod in India,                                    | 228             |
| Pagod in China,                                    | 399, 405        |
| Palace in the City Rhodes,                         | 47              |
| Palaces at Grand Cairo,                            | 17              |
| Palankines and Andoras,                            | 198             |
| Palinuro Town in Italy,                            | 2               |
| Palm-Tree,                                         | 45, 81, and 222 |
| Pampanga Province in Manila,                       | 434             |
| Pamplona City in Spain,                            | 584             |
| Panay-Island,                                      | 438             |
| Pangasinan Province in Manila,                     | 434             |
| Pannick fear,                                      | 230             |
| Panungulan Fruit,                                  | 457             |
| Paola City in Italy,                               | 2               |
| Papagayo Hill in New Spain,                        | 505             |
| Papaya Tree,                                       | 224             |
| Paracelsus resided some time near the Mines in     |                 |
| Hungary,                                           | 822             |
| Paraguay Island,                                   | 437             |
| Paraguay the account of that Country, p. 636       |                 |
| Of the Canton of Gapegu in it, p. 652. Of          |                 |
| the Language of the Country, p. 653. De-           |                 |
| scription of the other Cantons Inhabited by        |                 |
| Converted Indians, p. 657. The Natives ex-         |                 |
| cellent at imitating any Work, p. 661. Fruit-      |                 |
| fulness of the Country, p. 662. Punishment         |                 |
| inflicted on the Natives, ibid.                    |                 |
| Paraguay Province describ'd again,                 | 693             |
| Paraguay River describ'd, why so call'd, falls in- |                 |
| to the Parana, p. 689. Discovery made up-          |                 |
| on it, p. 691. Why so muddy,                       | 77              |
| Paraguay Herb,                                     | 637             |
| Parana Province, its People, p. 711. War among     |                 |
| the Indians there, ibid. The Country, 715.         |                 |
| Parrots there worship'd as Gods, Bears and         |                 |
| Ants, p. 715. Fierceness of the People, 716.       |                 |
| Paranapan River in the Province of Guaira, p.      |                 |
|                                                    | 710             |
| Paraquarians oppose a Jesuit,                      | 773             |
| Then receive him with Joy,                         | 774             |
| Paraquillas Village in New Spain,                  | 506             |
| Parababa River,                                    | 758             |
| Paravous two Tribes of Indians,                    | 257             |
| Paradis Town,                                      | 21              |
| Parma City in Italy,                               | 599             |
| Parrots,                                           | 272             |
| Particulars relating to our Saviours Passion,      | 34              |
| Passages into the Mines,                           | 823, 824        |
| Patanes Govern'd by a Woman,                       | 274             |
| Pavia City in Italy,                               | 596             |
| Paxos Fruit                                        | 458             |
| Peace concluded by the Jesuits between the Mus-    |                 |
| covites and Chinese,                               | 336             |
| Peace settled in China                             | 392             |
| Peaches of Persia                                  | 161             |
| Pearls in Persia                                   | 178             |
| In the Gulph of Persia, and way of buying          |                 |
| them,                                              | 181             |
| Pearl fishery at Bander Congo,                     | 183             |
| Pearl Tree                                         | 224             |
| Pecanrum a Town in China,                          | 303             |
| Peking Metropolis of China describ'd. Its Street,  |                 |
| p. 316. Houses, Multitude of People, the           |                 |
| Emperor's Palace, p. 317. Manner of the            |                 |
| Houses, Imperial Apartments, p. 318. Em-           |                 |
| peror's Concubines, p. 319. Apartments of          |                 |
| the Palace, the Emperor's Throne, how he           |                 |

REPER

late

